A very hearty reception has been accorded this hymnary by the churches of our conference. Over 17,000 copies of the Mennonite Hymnary have been sold to date. A fourth edition is now coming from the press. It has the thin paper and the convenient weight and thickness of the first two editions. The price of the new edition is the same as that of the preceding editions, namely, $1.15 per copy when purchased in quantities of one dozen or more, plus transportation charges. Single copies, or any number below one dozen, will be $1.40 each postpaid. Canadian prices will be twenty cents higher per copy. The books will be available in both the blue and baroon binding as heretofore. Orders may be placed either with the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana, or with the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas.

And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him. Col. 3:17.

—Brother H. A. Toevs, former missionary to Africa and for the past year a student at Bethel College, plans to go back to Africa some time this summer. He and his wife will go out as missionaries of our conference but will work under the direction of the Congo Inland Mission Board, with which our conference has certain arrangements. Brother Toevs comes from the Bethel Church, Inman, Kansas.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Alberta Community Mennonite Church

Dear Brethren:

"Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless His holy name." Ps. 103:1.

It is with joy filled hearts that we make this report, for the Lord has blessed us abundantly. The Sunday worship services, both morning and evening, have increased in attendance. The messages have for the most part been doctrinal, and the interest has been most commendable. Wednesday evening has been devoted to Bible study and Prayer.

The Sunday School has a very fine enrollment, to the extent that the last available space has been taken for class rooms. The contributions are increasing in proportion, which gives prospects for additional mission projects in the future.

The Ladies' Missionary Society celebrated its anniversary March 2. A potluck supper was served, and a splendid message on Jewish Missions was delivered by Rev. Meyer Tan-Ditter, director of the Jewish Mission in Portland.

Since the first of the year the war production plants have not operated on Sunday which makes it possible for all the members to attend church services. The young people's services are greatly disrupted, at present, by the absence of the young men who have been called into the service of our country. But we rejoice, nevertheless, that the work has been carried on. We hope to see a great revival among young and old before our blessed Lord returns.

We plan to make the Easter season as impressive of its real meaning as we possibly can. The Sunday school plans to present a program which will bring out the meaning for the children, and the church anticipates the observance of the holy communion. In this connection we are reminded of the Apostle's words in I Cor. 15:17 "And if Christ be not raised, your faith is in vain; ye are yet in your sins."

Being conscious of the responsibility imposed upon us as good stewards of the manifold grace of God, we covet your prayer of intercession on our behalf that the work of the Lord may prosper, to the end that souls may be saved and the saints built up in the faith.

Fraternally yours,
Herman D. Wiebe
5215 N.E. 23rd Ave., Portland, Oregon

BEWARE OF JUDGING

Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doe rof the law, but a judge. There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgeest another? James 4:11, 12.

Bethel Church, Winton

Greetings—another year has slipped by so fast that we hardly can believe it. Yet we can say with Samuel. I Sam. 7:12—"Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

It is now about three years since our church here was organized and joined the Pacific District Conference. We have a membership of 49. It includes about 22 families. The Sunday School enrollment is about 60. Our Sunday School attendance has increased from an average of about 35 to an average of 45 in the last three months.

Just a few days ago from March 12-16, Rev. J. H. Langenwalter of Reedley was with us giving Bible expositions on Acts chapters 1 to 6. Most of these meetings were well attended.

Others who were with us were Rev. J. R. Barkman of the Grace Children's Home of Henderson, Nebr., the Gideons etc.

A daily vacation Bible school was also conducted with two other Mennonite churches and one Presbyterian with an enrollment of 89.

Last year one old Mother Mrs. Anna Koehn, age 82, was laid to rest.

Four of our parent's sons are in the army. Harlen Siemens is still in the U. S. Frank Ratzlaff has been in Guadalcanal and other places for two years. Joe Glanzer, our son, has been in New Guinea and Australia for over a year. Harrold Yost has been in C.P.S. camps and is now in a mental hospital in Wisconsin. Five young men have been deferred because of farm labor.

One person was baptised. Three times we observed the Lord's Supper with a good attendance.

Our Christian Endeavor meets every two weeks old and young with a good attendance, an average of 35. The other Sunday evening is singspiration eve, which seems to be a real blessing. During this evening a Scripture passage is read with some comments by the Pastor, the rest is singing.

We intend to have an Easter program. About 16 of our people read the Quiet Hour and a number the Mennonite. Our average Sunday School offering is $5. Church offering $7. Pray for us and the work here.

Mennonite Migration

By J. Winfield Fretz

One of the characteristics of Mennonites is their frequent migration from country to country and community to community. Whenever their religious freedom has been threatened or completely destroyed, rather than comprising with the demands of the State, Mennonites have chosen to migrate. In no country, however, where their religious freedom was threatened did all the Mennonites migrate, but usually a significant number migrated to carry to new communities the Christian ideals and religious principles of the early church fathers. Those who remained behind often did so at the expense of compromise of religious principles, and there is abundant evidence that this compromise frequently resulted in the complete loss of the distinctive Christian ideals originally held by the Mennonites.

Causes

There are causes other than threat of religious freedom for which Mennonites have migrated. A second larger cause was that of a search for better economic conditions. This was often related to the previous cause. Mennonites were frequently discriminated against and thus had to endure great hardships in order to make a living. They were sometimes driven to areas of poor soil, forbidden to purchase farms, were heavily taxed, and were thus unable to gain economic stability. For this reason they often migrated in the hope of finding better living conditions.

A third reason for migrating was the desire of adventure and new experience. Mennonites in this sense are no different from other human beings who seek adventure. Still other reasons are crowded conditions in the home communities which resulted in high land prices and in the inability of poor people to become established in farming. Sometimes ambitious people desired to become leaders in new communities and for this reason promoted new migration projects. Internal dissentions and community quarrels sometimes were factors causing migrations of small groups. Also, occasionally unfavorable climatic conditions caused Mennonites to move to new areas. Migrations from country to country, however, were chiefly due to loss of religious freedom and the desire for economic improvement. The other causes of migration were more largely confined to movements within a single country.

Types of Migrations

In brief there are two general types of migration, one type pertaining to mass movements of people, that is, movement involving a large number of people; and a second type pertains to small group movements or fragmentary migration. In times past mass migration has been more characteristic of movements within a single country. Mass movements are much more dramatic and cause attention to themselves, but in the total history of the Mennonite Church the smaller migrations have perhaps been equally significant or even more significant in terms of growth and expansion of the total church. The history of the Mennonite Church in America bears out this point. If one studies the dates of organization and the size of the original churches he discovers that hardly a year passed since 1900 that some new group of people did not move into a new area or establish a new church. This is especially impressive in the Middle West and far Western States. Many of these migrations resulted in unsuccessful colonization efforts.

Future Needs

No one can tell when Mennonites again may be compelled to migrate or desire to migrate for various reasons, but whatever future circumstances may be encountered, Mennonites could well afford to give more thought to systematic migration and organized movements of their people. Few realize how tragic has been the lot of hundreds of Mennonite families who have migrated to new areas and have been unsuccessful in establishing themselves there. Many of these families were completely impoverished, some having to flee to the cities to become manual laborers, recipients of relief, or in some cases becoming completely landless and thus thrown into the class of migrant laborers. The tragedy is that such people have lost not only the church but often their total faith in Jesus Christ and a God of Love. With careful planning and prayerful consideration for the needs of Mennonite people in every group it would be possible for colonization committees or mission boards to give supervision to groups desiring to migrate. This might include spiritual counsel, the furnishing of the factual information relative to opportunities in new areas, and in some cases limited financial assistance in order to encourage the sound establishment of family life on farms and other means of earning a living. Colonization and migration are the natural growing edges of thriving Christian communities and expanding churches. It is well for church people to give consideration for the growth to the kingdom on the home front in addition to the kingdom on the foreign fields.

SENTENCE EDITORIALS

There are still people who take the attitude of "God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are . . ."

Men still court temptation by pitching their tents towards Sodom.

It the separation of Church and State accomplished by putting the flags of both into the house of worship?

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Wilbur B. Nussbaum, Berne, Indiana

JUNE 11—"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." John 1:12. While His people, the Jews, as a whole rejected Him, He was and still is received by individuals who "believe on his name." To believe "on" means to trust in, to commit to, to receive, and to act upon what is thus believed. From the very first recorded instance, the new birth came to those who thus believed on Him. " . . . Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house". Acts 16:31.

JUNE 12—"Then they that gladly received his word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." Acts 2:41. We are told concerning the Lord Jesus Christ that "of his own will begat he us with the word of truth" (Jas. 1:18;) That Word makes the sinner conscious of guilt and brings conviction of sin. This is the result wherever the Word is preached in its fullness. And for those who will receive it, it brings conversion from death unto life by faith in Christ. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." John 5:24.

JUNE 13—"In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him." I John 4:9. The love of God must be manifested. Love cannot be hidden or withheld; it must, by its own nature, be revealed. And God's love is revealed in the sending of His Son to give the sinner life, and to be the propitiation for his sin. "And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for our's only, but also for the sins of the whole world." I John 2:2.

JUNE 14—"Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." I John 4:10. We should note that it is "not that we loved God" (the principle of law), but that "he loved us" (the principle of grace) that is prominently set forth here. It was "when we were yet without strength . . . while we were yet sinners . . . enemies" of God, that He sent His Son. (Rom. 5:6, 8). It was because of the "great love wherewith he loved us" that the Son came to earth. (Eph. 2:4).

JUNE 15—"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." I John 1:9. If a believer does transgress, he does not lose salvation, but he does lose the joy of that salvation. For him, the pathway to restored fellowship is in quick confession to God of this wrongdoing. And, because of Calvary and its efficiency for every believer, God's own faithfulness and righteousness require Him to forgive and cleanse the contrite believer, restoring him to fellowship "in the light."

JUNE 16—"My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." I John 2:1. It is a blessed truth that the believer has an Advocate with the Father, and that Advocate is the Righteous One who is the propitiation for sin, who "bare our sins in his own body on the tree." (I Pet. 2:24). He "ever liveth to make intercession" for all who "come unto God by him" (Heb. 7:25). And His advocacy is entirely sufficient: He is "able also to save them to the uttermost."

JUNE 17—"Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." Eph. 5:20. The believer is to give thanks "always." He is to count upon it that his Father knows his need, of whatever sort it may be, that He knows how to meet that need, and, moreover, that He will meet the need in His own infinitely wise and loving way. The full understanding of this fact will enable the Lord's follower to give thanks continually; he will include "all things" in his thanksgiving. Only the one who knows that "all things work together for good" (Rom. 8:28) can fulfill the exhortation of this passage.

Concerning Civilian Bonds

During the coming Fifth War Loan Drive, June 12-July 8, civilian bonds will again be available for conscientious objectors. The plan remains the same as in other drives. Bonds may be secured by subscribing directly to the Provident Trust Company of Philadelphia. Subscription blanks and folders describing the plan may be secured from a local pastor or deacon, or by ordering from the Peace Section, Akron, Pa. Savings stamps and albums in various denominations are also available for school children and others.

Civilian Bonds are series F and G bonds registered through the Provident Trust Company. While the same series may be secured through local channels, Provident Trust Company is the only fiscal agent authorized to register them as "conscience money." Civilian bond subscriptions are officially reported to county chairmen and there should be no difficulty to buy them in lieu of war bonds.

The provision for civilian bonds is based on the fact that the U. S. Government has an annual budget of over six billion dollars to maintain civilian services. Civilian bonds enter the U.S. Treasury as do other bonds but differ in that they are registered as investments from conscientious objectors to war.

The civilian bond plan is not entirely satisfactory and negotiations are under way to secure a more satisfactory plan. Until a better arrangement is secured the plan will remain as before. To members who feel that they cannot buy civilian bonds, relief certificates and stamps are recommended. Relief certificates and stamps are, however, donations and not investments.

TICKETS, PASSPORTS, VISAS and PICTURES

When we first tried to get tickets for this trip, aveling was said to be difficult. Travel agents told s that Latin America did not want Protestants down ıere now, and that our Government would probably ot issue a passport. That even if a passport were sued, travel conditions are of such a nature beyond lexico City that one cannot get to Panama or beond. That recently a great number of 'missionaries' ere stalled in Mexico—unable to proceed. That even transportation were available—the consuls of the arious Latin American countries would not, or probbly would not, issue visas—since Protestants were ot wanted. That it is very unwise to undertake a ip of this nature at this time.

Wih this background, we left the "Travel Agents" nd went out on our own—and "On God." We aplied for our passports—and received them in due me. The Passport No. 781443 was good for Central nd South America from August 16 to February 16, 944..

We immediately began visiting consulates—and reeived visas without difficulty. Some of our visas were rocured in Los Angeles, but more of them in Mexico ity. The latter place was a betted place to procure hem for here lived not only consuls, but consul enerals.

Our tickets were obtained in Los Angeles. The ckets cost $917 plus extra side trips, and were isued for "Brownsville, Tex., to Santiago, Chile, to rgentina, and back up to Miami." We obtained reervations out of Mexico City for September 30.

Pictures? We needed about 40 of them.

A Slow Train

We took the train for Cuauhtemoc (the pronunciaon of which is still baffling, but sounds like Kwowemoc) at 7:30 a.m. and it was a humdinger. We aveled 110 miles in 5 hours. The train would stop or anything or anybody any place. We went first ass. We got to the Estocion too late to buy a ticket had to stop at two stations enroute to try to buy ne. This train goes on further into the Mountains we are 9000 feet up now) and almost every day one f its cars falls off the tracks!

The Mennonites of Mexico

The Mennonites here number about 10,000 and wn a whole valley—250,000 acres. They live in ttle colonies of a 1000 or 2 each. Most of them re very conservative and old time. With these we ave had practically nothing to do. We are staying ith David Redekop, a man who practically owns this town of about 7000. He and his sons are very fine people of Russian background. In spite of the wealth, they live very simply and most unostentatiously. They are evangelical in thought and practice. They all speak German and un pocito Spanish. I have learned this evening how very little German I really know—their conversation was almost entirely over my head. I'm glad Voth can talk to them. If they'd only talk Swiss, I could understand. Their German is mixed with Spanish. They have an immense cheese factory, also butter factory. They feed us meats, butter, and what not.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—The Intermediate C.E. Society of the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, recently gave a program that included a book review of "In His Steps," a recounting of C.P.S. camps experiences, and a discussion of "How to Study the Sunday School Lesson" by the pastor, Walter H. Dyck. All were asked to bring Bibles and quarterlies. The Lincoln C.P.S. unit gave a program to this church on June 4. Young people attending a recent meeting of the Beatrice Fellowship group saw some new pictures on "Smoke-Jumping."

—Elma Esau, who has been working with Mrs. M. C. Lehman at the Ephrata Clothing Depot for the past seven months will have charge of processing relief clothing at the new M.C.C. depot begun at Kitchener, Ontario, Canada. She is to return when the Canadian work gets under way and Canadian workers are found to carry it on. Elma comes from Whitewater, Kansas.

—Fort Collins, Colorado, C.P.S. camp has religious emphasis week. On May 28 Brother H. P. Fast, pastor of the Saron Mennonite Church, Orienta, Oklahoma, began a series of messages on the theme of "Daily Christian Living." The series was to continue for one week.

"THREE YEARS IN C.P.S."

A report of M.C.C.—C.P.S. for the past three years has been prepared in the form of a twelve-page pamphlet, titled, "Three Years in C.P.S." The pamphlet will appear in the churches in the early part of June and will be distributed on the basis of one for each family. Besides containing a survey of the work C.P.S. men are doing, it contains a map showing the location of M.C.C. —C.P.S. camps and units.

Need of a Christ Centered-Sunday School Program

By William Tiahrt

I Cor. 15:57,58 "But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ: Therefore my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

A well balanced Sunday School program consists of song service, prayer, and lesson material. A word should be said regarding the songs for children, because we believe that the children should early come to know that the hymn book is their book. The church cannot afford to neglect the children. Some of the numbers are for small children, and alert teachers and leaders will examine the text carefully before making selections for any particular age group. Children should be encouraged to sing with a light, flute-like tone of voice and not permitted to shout. In most cases they will sing in a more lively tempo than adults. A further very necessary word is in order; children should learn many of the standard hymns. It is a mistake to confine their singing to simple hymns written for them. There are very few hymn tunes that children will not easily learn and enjoy singing if given an opportunity to do so. The meaning of the words will unfold as they grow in experience, which is true of adults as well.

As to lesson material which must be Christ centered: Very often the remark is made that our Sunday Schools are not interesting. It is not enough to arouse an interest in a Sunday School class. The teacher might do that by standing on his head or by opening up a jack-in-the-box. Whether an interest is worth while depends on what it leads up to. If it is a trivial interest or if it results in nothing permanently valuable, it is useless so far as the Sunday School teaching is concerned. The interest to be aroused must be an interest in Christ and the gospel, in the Bible, the church, and the Christian life. The main purpose of the Sunday School is not to teach the history of the Hebrew nation, though some teachers seem to think it is. Nor is the chief object to reveal the beauties and powers of the Bible as literature. Nor is the central aim of the Sunday School to keep the pupils in good order and cultivate their manners and morals. All of this, of course, is good and is to be kept in mind as parts of the Sunday School program. But the main object of all Sunday School teaching should be to save the souls of the pupils committed to our care. In this the parents and the pastor are to be associated with us, all working together. The Sunday School is established primarily to lead its members to the foot of the cross.

Another fact might be mentioned. Why the need of a Christ centered program is so extremely important, is that of the passing of the teaching parent. We do not want to under-rate the home as a field of Christian education. The home is the world's greatest university, and the most important study in its curriculum is the Bible, but the tragedy in America is the passing of the home. Our American home was once an industrial center. Today much of this work is done in factories. Thus, the family must seek occupation elsewhere, generally the city, and for that reason the home has lost a great deal of interest. The home often becomes a place to bathe, eat, sleep, and read the newspaper. Amusement places all bid for their share of participation and an evening spent at home becomes a rarity. But the greatest loss the home has yet sustained, due largely to irregular hours, is the passing of the family altar. A serious failure of parents to provide the all important elementary instruction in the Bible and direct their family to Christ, is one of the weaknesses of the modern home. Once the home inspired by the church was the center of the spiritual and religious life of the family. This greatest and most sacred of privileges has been delegated to others, one agency being the Sunday School. Some people, however, who would hold the home responsible for the alarming child delinquency of today, and the home certainly is responsible, must remember that the parents of today were the children of a former generation. Therefore, in thinking of the difficulties confronting our Sunday School, we must realize that it is much easier to shape the destiny of a child than to change the nature of a parent.

We observe that one of the problems of the Sunday School is the passing of the Bible from the public schools. There was a time when the school teacher was a religious instructor. It is almost unbelievable that our public school system owes its origin to the religious Puritans of colonial days. They came not only for religious freedom; they had that in Holland. They came to America for political reasons such as would enable them to establish their own schools, not only where religion would be taught, but where the end of all secular instruction would be religious growth. The first text book was the Bible, and large portions were considered "profitable for instruction." Since those days, however, there has been a quiet influence at work, passive if not active, against the Bible in public schools. Even though constitutional action permitted the reading of the Bible, but the effort to compromise with the various sects represented, practically nullified its teaching values. Bible stories have left the school readers; Bible memory games, religious hymns, and daily prayer have gone with the Bible. We find our schools are practically secularized, and anything of a religious nature is rarely found in its curriculum. The blame for the public school's lack of Christian education must be borne by us who have built them. furnished them, planned them, planned the curriculum, appointed the teachers, and instructed them in the things which they were to teach. We have permitted the Bible, the most important subject of all, to slip out of our public schools. The very success of our own educational system is in danger of becoming a menace, for it is a dangerous thing to train a generation mentally and neglect its moral and spiritual culture. But very few people ever realize iat the mind without education is a fertile field for l kinds of superstition and wrong ideas and fear. he mind without real education or with wrong eduition is an easy prey for all sorts of propaganda and rong faith. The mind without real education is as seased as the sick body or the unregenerate soul.

What then is real education? It is receiving in our ind the mind of Christ, the mind that thinks God's ioughts after Him; the mind that knows His maker ecause it obeys His laws. (I John 2:3) It is the ind that uses God's handiwork for the good of all eople not selfishly; the mind that is intent upon elping that His will be done on earth as it is in eaven. It will thus be quickly seen that few people e these ends in education. Often this real education is been obtained outside of the classroom. Often assroom education has been as bad and dangerous as ie worst, primitive idol worship, or as the worst witch-doctor's craft. Jesus gave us the challenge, "Learn of Me." In I Chron. 29:5, we read, "Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?" A call that comes to every Christian! Service to the Lord should be our occupation to keep every part of our being busy. If we accept the call, we must serve him only, serve without restriction, and serve by the strength of grace derived from God. We must do it in all humility and sincerity. Paul speaks of serving "Not with eye service, as men pleasers; but as the servants of Christ, doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men." Thus, it is the Sunday School that will give our youth their Christian education, and because many a person will have no more than offered here, we must put special emphasis as to what our purpose of maintaining a Sunday School must be. That purpose is to follow a Christ centered program, and then only will the Sunday School be Victorious through Christ.

The Aims of Teaching

By Russell L. Mast

It is one of the many naive assumptions which we ake in Christian work to say that we know what e are doing when we teach. As a matter of fact any times we do not know. What aims we do have e so vague that it makes them practically impotent. 'e need constantly to state and restate our aims in aching. For otherwise we could not evaluate our ork, to see wherein we have failed or succeeded.

What are the aims of teaching? In a previous ticle it was stated that in teaching we seek to make ie pupils aware of truth so that it will make changes ithin their lives. But what changes are desirable? general, the aim of Christian education is to lead ipils to engage in Christian discipleship and in livg the abundant life. This statement has as its basis 'o verses from the New Testament: Matthew 28:19, 'o ye therefore, and make disciples of all the naons . . ." (R.V.) and John 10:10 "I am come that ey might have life, and that they might have it more undantly." In the light of these statements teachers ould look for the following results:

1. A personal experience of God. Is it not true that e are in danger of knowing facts about God withit knowing God? After Job had suffered the appallg misfortunes of his life, he declared, "I have heard thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye eth thee." (Job 42:5) That experience should be king place in every Sunday School class, men and omen, boys and girls finding God in a personal exrience!

2. A conscious acceptance of Christ as Savior. sus comes to us with the offer of his transforming iendship. He can do for us what we cannot do for irselves. But we must respond to that offer. This sponse to Christ should also take place in our Suny Schools classes, if they would fulfill their purse.

3. Growth in Christlike character. A teacher of ine, said, "No one is ever saved by Christ who does t become more and more like him." If teaching is to fulfill its aim, God should become more real, our love for Christ more complete, and our characters more Christlike.

4. A realistic understanding of the Bible. By this we mean not only a knowledge of Bible facts but an understanding of their meaning in terms of our own spiritual needs. What does God say to us through the Bible? To discover this we must beware of reading into the Bible our own particular theories. Let the Bible speak for itself.

5. Sharing in the building of a more Christian world. As Christians who have accepted the transforming friendship of Jesus Christ, it is our duty to see that the whole of life is brought under the influence of his spirit. This task must take place along two fronts. First, others must constantly be won to the life abundant in Christ. Second, those who have that new life must judge the policies of the community, the nation, and the world along the lines of Christian teaching.

Briefly stated then, these are some of the aims of the Christian teacher. Are these objectives being fulfilled in our Sunday Schools? Here are the criteria of success or failure, not the statistics which we so proudly display at the front of the church! One does not measure spiritual realities by numbers—only by life and personality.

WHAT IS AS POWERFUL AS LOVE?

Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away." I Cor. 13:8.

WHO LOVES CHRIST?

He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him. John 14:21.

Mary Becker to Go to South America

Miss Mary Becker, missionary candidate, is to go to South America soon after the session of the General Conference. So states Brother P. H. Richert, Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board. Miss Becker has been under appointment for several years to go to India. However, the British government refuses to give her permission to go to India at this time. So the board is sending her to the new field to be opened in Colombia. There she is to serve as teacher in the station to be opened. She is to go along with Brother and Sister Gerald Stucky.

Miss Becker is a graduate of Bethel College, where she was an outstanding student. She assisted Dr. Thierstein in editing The Mennonite, and after his death she edited the paper for some time. The past few years she has taught in Goessel High School, which is situated in a large Mennonite community.

"They Were in One Accord"

By Paul R. Shelly

A short time ago we celebrated Pentecost, the birthday of the Christian Church. As I thought about Pentecost this year I was particularly impressed with the first verse of the second chapter of Acts: "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place."

The thought came to me that these disciples had not always been in one accord. There was a time when two of them sought the chief seats. There were other times when as the gospel records reveal, there were differences of opinion and jealousies among the disciples.

It is significant that Pentecost came after these disciples had been together in one place in prayer waiting for God to visit them with His Holy Spirit. This was the promise! After the disciples carried out this command, this promise was fulfilled and all the people gathered in Jerusalem heard the disciples "speak the wonderful works of God."

It seems to me that we as Mennonites as well as members to the Church Universal need to take this thought to heart. The fact is obvious to all of us that we need a new outpouring of the Holy Spirit in the world today.

It is also evident from the reports of recent gatherings of some of the larger denominations that Christians have not gathered in one place in one accord. Instead there have been differences of opinion which seem to thwart the outpouring of the Holy Spirit in these meetings.

We in the Mennonite church are also looking for a new outpouring of the Holy Spirit in our lives and through us in the lives of those with whom we come in contact. This message from the first Pentecost should come to us with real meaning. We have a testimony to give to the world in this day. If we can gather together in one accord in prayer the people will through us also see the "wonderful works of God." Pentecost can come in no other way.

The Foundations of Our Faith

By J. C. Kaufman

II. How was the ascension accomplished?

God the Father Almighty is responsible and with God all things are possible.

Jesus had committed all things to the Father. In death he had committed unto Him his spirit, and the Father never failed him. He looks to the Father for the answer of every one of his prayers. Before Jesus suffered we hear him pray, Father I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am that they may behold my glory . . . . Now he waits for the Father's answer and I believe when the Father lifted him up from Olive's brow it was the Father's glorious answer. The earth could hold him no longer, gravity was powerless to stay him.

But those who came to welcome him home left a message which we are to consider in our next study. Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.

III. What are the advantages accruing the ascension?

Christ came into this world to show us the Father and to identify himself with the human race; he stooped down to our level that he might lift us to his own.

He assumed our debt of sin and paid it with his precious blood. For without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin. He knows all about us. He was tempted in all points as we yet without sin. Therefore he knows all the temptations that come to mankind. And since he committed no sin he was worthy to return to the Father. His life was holy. His death all-sufficient, therefore he was worthy to take up his present work as our advocate; there is now in heaven a man who intercedes for us.

Furthermore there is the assurance of victory for the child of God. With Jesus Christ our head in heaven we his children are sure to be triumphant. There is for us now a Saviour to preach to the world.

Then again we have the assurance of the Holy Spirit as our present indweller and guide. John 14:17 "For he dwelleth with you and shall be in you. John 16:13 "He will guide you into all truth."

We have stood in wonder at His birth with sorrow at His death, in adoration at His resurrection and let us look at him in worship as he ascends into heaven until his coming again.

From whence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

There is no fact more established than the fact of the first coming of Christ, but we well know that not all prophecies concerning his coming were literally fulfilled in His first coming; therefore there must be a time coming when the rest of the prophecies are to be fulfilled. We believe that is a well known fact that prophecy is history written in advance and therefore cannot be spiritualized, wherever this is done it only causes confusion and failure to rightly divide the ord of Truth. We find in the Word of God many mistakable proofs of the second coming of Christ d the necessity of His coming. Pages could be itten on this subject but we want to be as brief as ssible.

I. The work of Christ as prophet, priest and king is t completed without his coming again. (a) As ophet he came into this world and revealed the ther and the Father's will. (b) As priest he brought e supreme sacrifice and ascended into the heavenly nctuary with his own blood as our advocate with e Father and as the supreme shepherd of his flock. e mediatorial and shepherding work of Christ is in ogress now. (c) As king he is to return in glory. We ve therefore this threefold work of Christ, past, esent, and future.

The three great institutions of God make this clear.

I. The Altar. This institution points back to the l of man and forward to the coming Redeemer. erefore we find in the minds of the people in the d Testament the question "Where is the Lamb," as pressed by Isaac on the way to Mt. Moriah with s father Abraham to be sacrificed. But God pro- ded a substitute.

II. The table of holy communion. This great insti- tion of God points back to the cross and forward to e throne. The altar is set aside; it has finished its rpose and the table of holy communion has taken place. Holy communion implies that Christ is re and answers the Old Testament question, "Where the Lamb?" in the words of John the Baptist as stands on Jordan's brink. "Behold the Lamb of od." The gospel therefore answers this age long estion "Where is the Lamb?" with the answer the mb is here. During the presence of the Lamb the ble of communion was established.

But this Lamb was not accepted here; there was place found for him on earth; so he was hanged tween heaven and earth and after his death and surrection he ascended into heaven.

This institution points forward to His coming again. Cor. 11:26 "For as often as ye eat this bread, and ink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he me." When he comes the table of communion will ve finished its purpose and will be set aside like e altar is now, and the throne will take its place. erefore the Acts, the Epistles and Revelation speak His coming again.

Again the redemption of man necessitates the se- nd coming, redemption must be completed. The deemed man is now a redeemed soul in an unre- emed body but when Christ comes again we shall redeemed souls in redeemed bodies. I John 3:2 eloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth t yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, en he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we all see him as he is. To see Christ we must be e him not only figurative but actual.

The first coming was for the salvation of the soul, e second coming will be for the salvation of the dy.

Three great doctrines of the Word of God necessitate s coming again. 1. In his first coming he was our stifier on the cross; after his ascension he became our sanctifier at the throne of grace; in his coming again he will be our glorifier. None will be glorified until the coming again of Christ. I Thess. 4:15-17. We could go on and quote many passages as to the second coming. Suffice it to say that the apostle Paul speaks of the Lord's return fifty times. So does Christ himself, the angels, Peter, Jude and John in the epistles. It may be of interest to the readers that there are twenty times as many references in the Old Testament that speak of His second coming as there are of His first coming.

II. In what manner shall Christ come again?

I believe the message of the men in white raiment makes that clear. It is noteworthy to consider what Luke has to say on this. In Luke 24:51, we read, "And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven." In connection with this verse let us read Acts 1:11, also recorded by Luke. "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Mark how specific the men in white raiment are as to His coming again. Luke tells us in his gospel that he ascended into heaven his hands outstretched in blessing. The men in white raiment say that he shall so come in like manner as he went into heaven. We know that he went into heaven visible only to his own and he will come again visible only to his own, his hands outstretched in blessing. Do we wonder that Paul speaks of this coming as "The Blessed Hope"? Titus 2:13.

The ascension and the coming again of Christ in this manner was also prefigured throughout the dispensation of the law. In the day of Vom Kippur, the day of the great atonement once a year, the high priest stretched out his hands in blessing as he was to enter into the most holy place with the blood to make atonement, in other words, to change the judgment bar of God into a mercy seat, and after this was accomplished he returned again to the people, his hands outstretched in blessing. What a figure, Christ ascended into the heavenly sanctuary to change the judgment bar of God into a mercy seat and in due time he will come again in like manner as he ascended into heaven.

Now then, when the high priest entered into the most holy place, he entered visible only to the chosen people, and when he returned he was visible only to the chosen people. So Christ entered the heavenly sanctuary seen only by his own and when he shall return his hands outstretched in blessing he will be seen only by his own people, this is the plain teaching of God's Word.

Someone may say however what do you do with all the passages that deal with Christ's coming in glory and visible to all. We must be able to again rightly divide the Word of Truth. When Christ himself speaks of his coming as a thief in the night and his coming in glory we can clearly see that the thief comes unnoticed to take the best and leave the rest, and the appearing in glory, even if sudden, as it shall be, will be witnessed by all. Out of many passages let me just quote one. Jude 14, "And Enoch also the seventh from Adam, prophecied of these, saying, 'Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints.' " Let us take notice Enoch does not say angels but saints.

Therefore, based on God's word we say that Acts 1:11 and many other passages deal with his coming for His saints and Jude 14 with many other passages deal with His coming with his saints.

May God bless this meditation to the hearts of every reader, so that Christ may be magnified and God be glorified.

(The End)

Terror in Jagdeeshpore (India)

By John Thiessen

It was about three o'clock on Friday morning, July 2, when something bit our young brother, Daud (David) Pateram in his right hand. He thought that it was some poisonous insect. It pains him and the hand swells. He goes to Dr. Dester. The doctor asks, "Was it a snake?" Daud answers, "No, it was not a snake." Yet he had not actually seen what it was, because it was dark. He receives treatment and goes back to bed. Before long he gets dizzy and his throat swells. Dawn has come. He is taken to the hospital. He is too dizzy to walk. He can not talk any more.

The hospital staff did what they could, but in a short time our nineteen-year-old brother, student in our Normal Department, passed on to the eternal home. Young and old stood and wept for Daud, but his body was lifeless. The doctor pronounced it snake bite, judging from the way the poison acted in his body.

Confusion and fear spread, especially among our boarding children. But calmness soon prevailed again. It was looked upon as an accident. All seemed to be in order again. Then on August 2, just one month later, again at about 3 a.m., something bites little Sontosh (a seven-year-old boy) in the ear. It does not pain him much, and nothing is found in the room when the other boys hunt with a lantern. It is not that serious.

At dawn little Sontosh also began to feel dizzy. He was quickly rushed to the hospital, but too late. Nothing could be done for him. In a few hours he too had departed. What had happened? Another snake bite? The Police came to examine the dead body. Evening came before the burial could take place. It was pitch dark and a drizzling rain fell when little Sontosh was carried from the hospital past the boarding home, to the graveyard. As we passed the boarding, we heard voices cry, "A snake! a snake!" (A few brave boys attacked it and killed it and brought it out to where we were with the poisoned corpse.) Swift judgment had come upon the murderer, but two victims had succumbed to the vicious venom.

All our 107 boarding boys were sent to sleep in the school house. The boarding seemed too insecure, but I felt very uneasy. I knew this was not the end of the disturbance. We have learned something of what fear and superstition can do in the Orient. The next day was a dismal rainy day. Late in the afternoon I stood near the boarding well to watch a man fish a fallen bucket out of the well. All of a sudden I was surrounded by a hundred boys. I saw at once that the trouble was on. Their faces looked weird and ghastly, having an ashy appearance. I nearly shuddered. No one said a word for a few minutes. All of a sudden one said quietly, "We are going home." Then another said it a little louder. In a minute there was a whole chorus of "We are going home." I said nothing. In fact, I did not know at that moment what to say. Then the supper bell rang. No boy moved. Then I said, "Go eat." No boy moved. They seemed to be paralyzed. Then I turned and walked into the boarding home. They followed and I thought they would now take their plate and go for food, but again no move was made. So I stepped close to a few of the more brave boys and whispered, "Get your plates." They did, and when they came to have their plates filled with food the spell seemed to break, and the rest got their plates too and had them filled. When all were ready for grace before meal, I told them that we still trusted God, and that we were still Christians, and that we still loved Jesus, and we still knew He loved us, and that perfect love casts out all fear. Then I prayed with them, and after the prayer one could see a remarkable calmness on the children's faces. They all ate and went to sleep in confidence and trust. I praised God for the victory; yet I felt so exhausted that I could hardly eat my own supper. The panic had been so close, and had been averted only through our Heavenly Father's special and quick imtervention.

Though the main victory had been won, I knew that when the parents of those boys who have parents would hear about this another storm would start. I wrote letters and explained the situation before wild rumours could get a chance. Yet some parents came and meant to take their children away, but when they themselves saw how calm and confident the boys were no one took his child. Whereas we had good reason to fear an exodus out of our boarding home, not one child has left. We indeed are grateful for our Lord's marvelous leading through these dark days. One asks why such tragedy had to come. For nearly twenty years Mrs. Thiessen and I have had charge of boarding homes, and not one child has been killed by snake bites. Now two in one month. But He in whose hands we all are knows. We trust Him.

A PRAYER PETITION

That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, May be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God.—Apostle Paul

God's Three Great Gifts

For our salvation God gave us three great indis- nsible gifts.

The first is His Holy Word, "All Scripture is given inspiration of God." II Timothy 3:16.

The second is His Son, "For God so loved the rld that He gave His only begotten Son." John 16.

The third is His Spirit, "The Holy Spirit whom d hath given to them that obey Him." Acts 5:32.

These three gifts are inseparably linked together. them God offers a free and full salvation to every ner. We cannot choose between them and have vation. God bids us read, believe and accept. God rests the matter with each of us. We are e to read or refuse, to read or hear, free to believe disbelieve, to receive or reject God's gracious offer His gifts. God, the Father, is dealing with us rsonally.—"Receive with meekness the ingrafted ord, which is able to make us wise unto Salvation." elieve on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be ved." "Receive ye the Holy Spirit, by whom ye e sealed to the day of redemption."

hen One Heart Touches Another

It it gratifying beyond measure to see the many voted members who support the church with their eans, talents, and lives. But the membership re- als there are members who seldom attend the Sun- y service. Apparently they have talent, time, per- nality and many of those things that are fine and od, and their lies could be a power for good, if they uld only line up on the right side of it, but they em to be lacking in interest concerning the work of e church and kingdom. Seemingly they enjoy rking their business, take some interest in com- unity and recreational affairs, but the church is concern of theirs.

A pastor sat one day with one of his parishioners, o was none too faithful in his church attendance, front of a fireplace, watching the fire burn, enjoy- g its warmth and cheer. Presently the pastor took e tongs and lifted a live coal out of the fire and aced it on the hearthstone and they watched it adually change from a bright to a dark red, then to hen deadness; then he placed the dead ember back to the fire and soon it glowed with new life again. This man got the point and said, "I'll be back to urch next Sunday." Too many are like this man, ing to live their lives away from the warmth and ht of the Christian fellowship, and their lives are owing dark and cold. It is when one heart touches other heart that a fire is kindled and all glows th warmth and love. —Rev. Earl Salzman

For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; ly use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but love serve one another. For all the law is ful- led in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love y neighbour as thyself. But if ye bite and devour e another, take heed that ye be not consumed one another. Gal. 5:13-15.

Announcement and Invitation

The Lord willing, two new missionaries, Brother and Sister George B. Neufeld of the Bethel Church, Inman, are to be ordained as missionaries to Africa on Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m., June 18, 1944, in their home church.

All mission friends are requested to participate in praying for the Lord's blessing upon them and the whole mission work. They are to be sent together with Brother and Sister Elmer J. Dick of Munich, South Dakota, who will very likely be ordained on the same day in their home church by Brother A. P. Waltner, member of our Board. He will make more definite announcements about this.

These four will be our first missionaries to Africa under the new plan of cooperation with the Congo Inland Mission, which is another Mennonite Mission. The following is the program:

1. General Singing
2. Opening address by the local pastor, P. T. Neufeld
3. Song
4. Ordination sermon by missionary, W. C. Voth
5. Song
6. Ordination, P. P. Wedel
7. Song
8. Brief addresses by Brother and Sister Neufeld
9. Song
10. Closing remarks and prayer, P. H. Richert

(The local church is requested to provide the four special numbers of music.)

In the name of the F. M. Board, P. H. Richert

CORRESPONDENCE

Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas

We are very thankful to our Lord for the daily vacation Bible school which we are being permitted to conduct these two weeks. We feel that it is a definite answer to prayer. We, as a church, have received blessings from it.

We have thirty-seven students enrolled representing six different churches, ours included, to study Christ's gospel. The following are rendering their services in teaching: Miss Lila Koehn, the intermediate group; Miss Ella Wedel, upper grades; and Miss Marie Wedel, the primary grades and supervisor.

We had a program June 1, consisting of Bible memory work, exercises, group singing and choruses.

It is our prayer that by God's grace the seed which has been sown will take root and grow, all for the upbuilding of Christ's Kingdom. —Corr., Marie Wedel

Bruderthal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas

Our four-week vacation Bible school, which was held in our church basement, ended last week with a much appreciated program. Esther and Elsie Harder from the Emmaus church near Whitewater, Kansas, were the teachers. Combined with this program Rev. P. A. Penner from Newton gave us a very interesting report on his leper mission which grew into his heart during those forty years in India.

This also being our all-day children's day, a big dinner was served cafetria style.

In the afternoon the younger generation amused themselves while the senior sewing society held its final meeting for the year. Here Mrs. P. A. Penner told us of her experiences in India. She put much emphasis on prayer for the work so near to her, especially for our missionaries, which are so few in India now.

JOTTINGS

—F. J. Isaac Directs Relief in India. Word has come that Rev. and Mrs. F. J. Isaac and Alida Schrag have arrived safely in India. Brother Isaac will administer the M.C.C. relief project in famine-stricken Bengal. Brother Isaac was to assume his duties soon after arriving. Evidently supplies are not obtained very easily, for the telegram stated "Few weeks milk supplied us."

—C.P.S. for the Mennonite Church began its fourth year on May 23, 1944. A program was held at one of the eastern Mennonite C.P.S. camps to commemorate the third anniversary of C.P.S. Albert Gaeddert, Director of Camps, spoke to the men.

—The First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, is original. The Sunday School of this church has planned for a visit to the Kauffman Museum at North Newton, Kansas, on June 11, the day of its Sunday School picnic.

—A message commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Y.M.C.A. was given to the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, on June 4 by Brother C. F. Mueller who has been very active in "Y" work.

—Mrs. H. J. Krehbiel, wife of the late Rev. H. J. Krehbiel, is being cared for at the home of her daughter in Los Angeles. Mrs. Krehbiel regularly gets the bulletins of the Reedley church, and her attendant says, "Mrs. Krehbiel wants everything read to her..."

—First Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas: The pastor puts helpful notices into the bulletin to show the members just how their church stands in giving for C.P.S. On June 4, Rev. P. R. Voth, a former pastor of the church, baptized ten young people. On May 28 these young people had given a public testimony concerning their relationship to Christ as Saviour.

—Missionary H. J. Brown recently left for an extended tour through Mennonite churches in Manitoba, Canada.

—P. H. Richert, Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, states in connection with the recent arrival of Eva Pauls, Martha Burkhalter and Elinor Thiessen, that Miss Helen Nickel had also been expected but that evidently she had to remain on the field for some reason that the board does not know.

—Argentina, on December 31, 1943, issued a decree, "making the teaching of the Roman Catholic religion compulsory in all primary and secondary schools. Children of other faiths may be excused if their parents request it."

—Erosion in the U.S. carries away three billion tons of soil every year. Every year it costs the farmers not less than $400,000,000. God has given us good soil, but it needs stewardship. A soil conservation district is being formed in the county in which the village of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, is located.

—Bible lecturer for Bluffton College this coming year will be Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer. For many years he was a missionary in Arabia; he is an authority on the Mohammedan religion, was a pioneer in the Student Volunteer movement, and is the author of many books. He is now teaching in Biblical Seminary in New York. The lectures are to be given during the week of November 12.

—Churches with highest giving in the first quarter of 1944: Western District, Emmaus Mennonite, Whitewater, Kansas, $13.23 per member; Eastern District, Deep Run Mennonite Church, Bedminister, Pa., $3.80; Pacific District, Menno Mennonite, Lind, Washington, $22.28; Middle District, First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, $4.23; Northern District, Salem Mennonite, Wisner, Nebraska, $8.91. This includes amounts received by the following treasuries of the General Conference: Foreign Mission, Peace, Relief, Home Mission, Publication, Education.

—"You can't trust a Japanese" is a statement made far too glibly by some people. "Contrary to a widely-held belief, there has not been one proved case of sabotage or espionage by a Japanese-American, either in this country or Hawaii, since the beginning of the war," Carey McWilliams, former Commissioner of Immigration of the State of California, points out in a 32-page pamphlet study, What About Our Japanese-Americans?

—Bulletin, West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The Board of Deacons has agreed to invite a representative of the Bethel Deaconess Hospital to come to our church in the near future to inform us about the needs of the hospital. The representative will also be given the privilege to canvass the church members for contributions. They are in need of a new X-ray machines and of more room.

—Brother Elbert E. Koontz was ordained and installed as Elder of the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, on June 4. Rev. Koontz has been attending Bonebrake Seminary for the past few years. Before that he attended Bethel College. This is his first pastorate.

—In a recent prayer meeting and Bible study announcement, Rev. Donovan E. Smucker asked, "Are you doing something more important than Bible study and prayer??" "Sunday evening, May 28, the Wadsworth Church was filled to capacity to greet and listen to Brother M. C. The Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana

The Mennonite Book Store as organized under the Gen- al Conference in the year 384, first under the name of Christian Central Publishing ouse" and later, as the Mennonite Book Concern." he store, which has always en located in Berne, Indi- a, was first managed by Jo- Welty, who was succeeded y J. F. Lehman in 1896.

Brother Lehman served as anager for thirty-four years. nder his leadership, the store ew and became well known roughout the General Con- rence as the best place to y religious books, Bibles, d church and Sunday hool supplies. It will also remembered by many that rother Lehman was a Pub- cation Board member of the eneral Conference for thirty-nine years, and it was through his leadership that the Conference periodicals, the Mennonite, Der Bundesbote, Kinderbote, and others, continued to grow, even though these publications were hard pressed at times.

This is the office of Fred Von Gunten, manager of the Mennonite Book Concern. Here he gives prompt attention to the orders that you send in.

In 1930, F. G. Wiens took charge of the business, and upon his resignation in 1937, the present manager, Fred Von Gunten, was appointed. As the business continued to grow, it was decided by the Publication Board to divide the activities of the Mennonite Book Concern. Consequently, we now have the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, which handles the business of all the Conference periodicals and Sunday School orders, while the Mennonite Book Concern, of Berne, Indiana, continues to supply our constituency with books, Bibles, and religious supplies.

In the summer of 1942, the store building was completely remodeled with all new shelving, counters, and light fixtures, making the store the most modern store in Berne.

The Mennonite Book Concern is operated for the benefit of the members of our General Conference churches. It is the purpose of the concern to supply any book or item of religious nature for our people, if such is at all available. Any order sent to the Mennonite Book Concern, helps not only you, but also the Conference, since all profits are turned into the Conference treasury.

Remember that any book or publication on the market can be ordered through the Mennonite Book Concern. Let us serve you.

HEALING WOUNDS

Mennonite men and women who are working in mental hospitals are helping to bind up wounds in a very real way. Very many of the inmates of mental institutions are human beings with very deep wounds. It is serious to be wounded physically, but to be wounded in mind and spirit is in many respects even more serious. These wounds of the mind and the spirit are not easily healed. Science has not advanced as far in the healing of the mind as in the healing of the body. The care for those mentally ill in our land is not equal to that given to those physically ill. Even in more normal times the help situation in our mental hospitals was deplorable. Now due to the war there is a shortage of labor in mental hospitals that has in many cases caused the level of treatment to sink very low. And yet over half of the hospital beds in the United States are filled with mental patients, and these patients are God-created human beings, who are just as precious in His sight as we are.

There is a tremendous need for help in our mental hospitals. There are terrible wounds to be healed—wounds that need the most intelligent and loving care that can be given by human beings, for the wounds of the mind and spirit are very distressing and not easily healed.

Therefore those men in C.P.S.—and the wives of many—who faithfully work in mental hospitals are carrying on a work of mercy that is great in God's sight even though it may be overlooked by millions of human beings that have the blessing of being able to think clearly. What a blessing it is to have conscientious men and women work with mentally and spiritually wounded!

If Mennonite young men and women want to participate in a work of mercy, if they want to bind wounds that are extremely difficult to bind, if they want to carry on a spiritual ministry that is desperately needed by men and women for whom life has been too much, then they might well seek employment in a mental hospital.

Congratulations to you young men and women who bind the wounds of the mind and spirit under conditions that are often far from adventurous, that are often very difficult, that do not bring to you the acclaim of a war-minded public, and that fail to swell your pocketbook.

"Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: . . . I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me."—rw.

A Greater Love

The long-awaited invasion of Europe has come. Soldiers are engaged in terrible battle. Throughout the world there are millions of parents, brothers, and sisters with a tremendous concern for those soldiers. Their love is great. But there is a love that is greater. God's love. His love for every individual soldier is greater than the love of father or mother or brother and sister.—rw.

A BETTER POST WAR WORLD. HOW?

by Erwin C. Goering

Much is being said and written today about prospective post-war conditions. Many there are wh offer plans, blueprints, and methods of national an international organization which are to guarante what is desired once this colossal warfare shall cease International planning, say some, is what we need that is their only hope. Along with that is expresse the idea of control. Some say that an internationa police force is necessary to police the economic an political interests of all nations. Others say that w need only to dominate the economics of the majo nations to keep them under control. Control, the agree, there must be. When methods of control com under consideration the inevitable and age-old questio is raised as to who shall control. One asks the question at this point: which nation or group of nation has the moral right to dominate other nations? Ha any people the right to dominate other people?

The Christian Home Is Fundamental

I believe that the answer to the problems is not t be found in any of the above suggestions, nor an political panacea, for that matter. Worthwhile an honest citizenship springs forth from good homes Good communities can never be realized when th homes which make up the community are unstable Churches and schools always reflect home condition of the child.

Need Christian Home To Salt Nation

Our homes compose the school district; scho districts make up the larger communities; many communities comprise a state; states combined form nation; a fellowship of nations compose the larg world fellowship. Why cannot people of differen nations live on an understanding basis? Are certain races devoid of the brotherly virtues whic we claim for ourselves? The answer to this las question is an obvious and emphatic no. Brutality and wickedness know no race lines. Selfishness and greed are vices which one can find existin across all color lines. But brotherliness and helpfulness are found where Godliness abounds, an Godliness is not limited to people of one color onl Jesus said "I came that ye may have life, and th ye may have it more abundantly." 'Ye' refers any and all who believe His gospel and live by Jesus alone is the hope of the world. For "Oth foundation can no man lay than that is laid, whic is Christ Jesus." Are all of the so-called Christia today building on that foundation and finding th abundant life? When our church begins to give on an untarnished Christ-centered testimony, our w ness will be acceptable to those outside who real seek for THE WAY.

GOOD SPEECH

Let your speech be alway with grace, season with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answ every man. Col. 4:6.

Evangelism in Practice or How the Church Grows

By J. R. Duerksen

(This paper was read at the Chattisgarh Missionary Association)

How did the Church grow in the beginning when st the Holy Spirit took charge?

To begin with, we are profoundly impressed by the dership of the Church of that time. Men and men were called and equipped. Who were they? dinary men. To the spiritually dead people in the rld they seemed extraordinary only in the wrong y. Some suspicioned that they were drunk when ey began to speak. Others considered them very ngerous to their conventional system of piety and only for the prison cell. They were thought of utterly unfit even to live near the stronghold of nventional religion just as that kind of men would considered unfit to enter some of the most elaborate urches of today. Their education was not recognized en though it was the highest wisdom man can ever pe to attain. They were men and women of tre- ndous influence.

What did the Holy Spirit give them to do? He nply asked them to tell what they knew. And nat did they know positively? "That Christ died our sins according to the Scriptures; and that He s buried, and that He rose again the third day cording to the Scriptures." They were witnesses of se things. When they were persecuted they fell ck on Him who had sent them. Thus they became urageous and mighty men of prayer. Their fellow- p with the Omnipotent One was increasingly estab- hed until His power was visibly confirmed in them. dicule, persecution, physical infirmities, racial dif- ences, differences in speech, prisons, and death all se could not stop them. Not only the apostles re such but all who were scattered abroad through- the regions of Judea and Samaria who went every- ere preaching the Word. The church grew. Will grow under different conditions today? No, the ential characteristics of a growing church remain same.

Having this as an introduction I now wish to pre- nt four points: First, efficient leaders; second, free- n of growth for individual believers; third, church cipline; and fourth, dependence upon the work of Holy Spirit.

Efficient Leaders

First then about leaders in the Church and in evan- ism. Fifty years ago in the English Baptist mission Orissa some of the leaders became deeply concerned ut the absence of conversions in connection with ir work. They spent several days in fasting and yer. The Lord unmistakably pointed toward a certain depressed caste near Balangir and in Patna state. They were at first unwilling to go to these outcastes, the Ganras, but finally they yielded to the leading of the Spirit with the result that within a comparatively short time thousands became Christians. Last year at the 50th anniversary of the Balangir work we had the privilege of hearing a powerful sermon by the son of one of those leaders who prayed. This young man is now one of the highest government officials in the Educational Department in Orissa.

Two preachers from Balangir came to a village named Girola in the Phuljhar Zemmindari. Here they met a man with a huge beard and a "Tulsi" kanti around his neck, a weaver by trade, practiced in native medicines, well read in the Hindu Shastra and a non-worshiper of idols. He was Rasanand Das, known and honored by all as the "Bawaji." Drugacharan, one of the preachers, had been a Hindu too and could speak from experience and so for eight days he and his companion kept on presenting the Gospel in Girola. Rasanand threw away his "kanti" but he was not ready for baptism. He wanted to test it longer. After three months a missionary came to Girola, but Rasanand was not ready. Then for some months preachers were sent regularly to teach. At last, in the hot season, two missionaries and an Indian preacher, who was the leader of the original prayer group, arrived in Girola and five people took baptism, namely Rasanand and his wife and his brother-in-law, and another man and his wife. For three years all their caste people ostracized them. They would not drink water from their hand nor would they give them cots to sit on. But Rasanand Das quietly comforted his little group of fellow Christians with these words: "If Jesus, whom we serve, is the true God then these others will also come to Him." Rasanand's daughter, Padma, had been given in marriage to a home in Dengania, a village, ten miles away. For some time Padma's in-laws refused to let her parents come to see her, because they had become Christians, but after a while when they became more lenient Rasanand went to them and witnessed. Soon five leading men of that village were ready and asked for baptism. When the persecutors in Girola heard that these men in Dengania had taken baptism they gave up their opposition of this new religion and many became Christians.

It happened that during this time a non-Christian village owner of a neighboring village desired to move to an undeveloped jungle place named Sukhri more than twenty miles distant from his own village. He needed help and therefore persuaded two Christian families to go with him. As recompense he gave them some land at the new settlement. Not long after that one of these brethren met a missionary from the "General Conference Mennonite Mission" at one of the bazaars and he urgently invited him to come and teach them. The invitation was accepted and this has proved to be the beginning of the work of the Mennonite Mission in this area. To these two families soon more were added who accepted Christ. Their children, after much patient persuasion from the missionary, were sent to school in Mauhadih. This added new strength to the development of the church in the whole of this area. Today the grandson of one of those Sukhri families is a fully ordained Indian pastor. There are now one thousand seven hundred adult baptized Christians in this area where less than forty years ago there were none. There should be many more but this number too is ample reason for thanksgiving and praise. Now we ask how has this been done? It really is very simple and has come about in a perfectly natural way. Leaders, called by the Lord, were equipped by the use of regular Bible courses and in Bible schools a more complete training. They knew the Scriptures, they had a firm conviction as to the truth of their message, they were firmly convinced that the central truth of the Christian religion is the atoning death and the resurrection of Christ, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Those who lead the church must know how to lead men to Christ.

Growing in Christ

Our second consideration is the individual believer. Growth in grace and in knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ must be evident and continuous in all believers. This, I think, is the strongest evangelistic agency. "And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all." "Then the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

One day, near my desk on the open veranda, sat an elderly man, a Christian, illiterate, not faultless but with unusual ability to observe. Before us were a number of trees of different variety; tall and straight and strong just as they had grown naturally in the forest long before our mission station was built here. At our feet stood earthenware pots with small shrubs planted in them. Suddenly my visitor remarked, "Those trees are like Baptists and Mennonites; these shrubs are like Roman Catholics." These three denominations happened to be the only ones he had a chance to know otherwise he might have used the names of other denominations as well. Not all Roman Catholics are the same, neither are all Protestants alike, consequently a fear came over me lest we also were having some Christians artificially planted and hedged about by rules and regulations according to our own tastes which limit their growth and rob them of the opportunity to grow in a natural, God-given spiritual atmosphere.

Each individual believer should have an opportunity to respond to the truths of the Gospel in his own natural way provided he has really received a new nature. That is what made it possible for Philip, a deacon, to go to Samaria and preach Christ there bringing great joy to that city. That is what makes it possible for a believer today, who with a small book of the Gospel in his hand, goes and gathers seventy-five believers from among his own people before the rest of the Christians know what he is doing. In the Mauhadih area of our mission a large number of Christians from a number of different castes have been added to the church last year because, as I see it, ordinary believers were encouraged to lead others to Christ in their own way. While they were bringing others to the Saviour they gained for themselves a more abundant life and growth in grace.

Church Discipline

Freedom, however, does not mean lack of churc discipline and this brings us to our third point. B church discipline I do not mean merely going abou and settling disputes and quarrels and punishing th guilty and excommunicating those who have fallen Church discipline includes far more than this. I fact, these things are often merely evidences that th true church discipline has been lacking. Real disci pline is the most delicate and the most difficult jo in the church. In the words of our Lord, which ar included in His great commission, it is, "Teachin them to observe all things whatsoever I have com manded you." As long as the church is in the worl there will be men overtaken in a fault who need be restored in the spirit of meekness; "considerin thyself, lest thou also be tempted." There will a ways be those who oppose themselves who need be corrected; "if God peradventure will give the repentance to the acknowledging of the truth; an that they may recover themselves out of the snare the Devil, who are taken captive by him at his will
It will always be necessary to make "straight pat for your feet lest that which is lame be turned out the way; but let it rather be healed." Church disc pline is nothing less than to teach believers to gi up their own will and to walk in the will of Chris He who pulls a fisherman's net must leave that others the moment Christ calls him for other work, who sits at the seat of custom must get up and foll if the Lord says so, he who says glibly, "Master will follow Thee wherever Thou goest" must be taug to count the cost, "for the Son of man hath n his own, he who would compromise with former lationships or practices and desires to linger long take a firm grip on the plow and move forward.

this, I think, belongs to Church discipline.

Depending Upon the Holy Spirit

When is evangelism really practical and when d the church really grow? Only when we, who ha been called to serve, recognize Him who came earth after the Ascension, to direct the affairs the church. The Holy Spirit is here with us order to glorify Him "Who was delivered for offences and was raised again for our justificatio
Do we feel our dependence on Him or are we try

Thoughts on the Parables

By Willard Claassen

The Kingdom

It would be too pretentious to attempt to look at the parables in the short series of articles which ll follow in these columns. Neither would it be se to deal with them helter-skelter, that is choose e here and one there. The parables found in the irteenth chapter of Matthew have some practical ints to command their consideration. There are not many parables to tire the average reader and still ey form a connected whole. They form a picture thin a picture, the king's view of his own kingdom, kind of a general survey. They have been called, ingdom parables," though that is true the term perhaps too restrictive since many of the other rables of Jesus contain valuable teaching about the ngdom.

Jesus and the Kingdom

A study of the parables is obligatory upon anyone ho wishes to understand Jesus' teaching about the ngdom. Much of Jesus' teaching revolved around e phrase, "the kingdom of heaven," or "the kingdom God." The commencement of the ministry of sus is described in the words: "And Jesus went bout in all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and reaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all anner of sickness among the people," (Matt. 4:23). hen the twelve were sent forth by themselves, the urpose of their mission was described by Luke (9:2) the words, "And he sent them forth to preach e kingdom of God." In Matthew 13:11 the parables hich formed so large a part of his teaching are ferred to collectively as, "the mysteries of the kingom of heaven." It will be remembered how many f the parables begin with this familiar phrase, "the ingdom of heaven is like."

The Kingdom Defined

It seems to the writer that the terms "the kingdom f heaven" and "the kingdom of God" are used interhangeably. All through the New Testament these xpressions about the kingdom are used. What do e understand by the kingdom? The church is nohere presented as "the kingdom of heaven" or "the ingdom of God" or "the kingdom of righteousness." he church is within the kingdom; the kingdom is r bigger than the church. It is spoken of as "the ody" and "the bride" of Christ. The kingdom is his world with Jesus as its King. It is now in the rocess of formation; it is now gathering up its subects. In that sense the kingdom is here now. The resent kingdom in our Lord's teaching is one in esence with the final kingdom. According to the eaching of John eternal life is realized here. Jesus imself identifies membership in the kingdom with ternal life. The Rich Young Ruler asked how he ight win eternal life and when he went way sorrowully Jesus answered, "How hardly shall they that ave riches enter into the kingdom of God," (Matt. 9:23). "The kingdom of God is within you," said esus on another occasion, (Luke 17:21). Then again we are asked to pray, "thy kingdom come," (Luke 11:2).

What is it? It is a lovely, compelling conception of a kingdom here yet to come, within and yet without us, ultimately realizable in this world yet belonging to another, open to all yet possessed only by those with spiritual insight.

The Kingdom Goes Deep

One is alarmed at the way many leaders are going at the problems caused by this Second World War. Many of their social and political theories have been blown to pieces by this war. But what are they doing? They are sitting around the debris of their wrecked theories and are rearranging the bricks and trying a new design! Christ's idea of the kingdom is far deeper than any improvement of outward conditions. Leslie D. Weatherhead, a noted London preacher and psychologist in a new book just off the press In Quest of a Kingdom emphasizes this fact. With keen spiritual insight, sharpened through direct contact with the war and through the crucible of suffering and disillusionment, he says, "The world will not be put right as Christ means "right" merely by social reform, though some measure of the latter is a by-product of Christianity. There is no basis in the New Testament for putting social reform first . . . No one can convict Jesus of callousness in regard to poverty, but the unbiased reader of the New Testament is forced, I think, to realize that in the perspective of Jesus there is something more important than wealth or poverty, namely belonging to the kingdom of heaven. No one must misunderstand that word or make it an excuse for selfish, unthinking luxury, but a Christian must try to share Christ's perspective. The apostles did. They did not preach better wages, better housing, more food, and more security. They spoke of being reconciled to God, of loving the brethren, of being filled with the Spirit, of a world of new relationships, of all that the death and resurrection of Christ had done to open the kingdom to all believers'." What Dr. Weatherhead is trying to say, and what has not been said as it ought to have been said by Christian leaders is this, membership in the kingdom fundamentally involves a relationship—a relationship to Jesus Christ. You cannot successfully impose Christian ideas on a pagan people, you cannot take Christian ideas away from their Christian dynamic and source of power, impose them by legislation upon a de-Christianized people, seek to make them work by the use of pagan machinery, and expect as a result the kingdom of God on earth among men who lack good will. Mr. Weatherhead concludes the matter with sure insight, "Nothing would so woefully fail as the attempt of a largely pagan state to impose through legislation the ideas of the Sermon on the Mount upon a largely pagan society. The "Sermon on the Mount" reveals the kind of blessedness that is reached when men, already Christians, (subjects of the kingdom) express their Christianity as a society. And I suggest to you that every reform, the work of all the excellent committees now working out a blueprint of the new age, will come to nothing unless there be a linking up with the power of God which alone can sustain them. For only the power of God can change a man's nature; and unless a man's nature is changed, every new plan comes to grief of the rock of man's inherent selfishness, and every new discovery is wrested to a destructive end." (To be continued)

At the Closing Program of a Bible Course in India

Every year, after our leaders—evangelists, teachers, and medical workers have studied several books of the Bible during four to six weeks, they go and instruct the weaker or illiterate brothers and sisters. Here right near the Jagdeeshpore mission station about two hundred were in these classes. There were nine classes. When the course is finished all gather in church and give a public program. Each class has a contribution to make. Some tell appreciatively about lessons learned. Others tell about actual spiritual experiences gained. Others recite verses learned by heart. Others sing a song, etc. Very often matters become very interesting; and from a sedate school or church point of view, ridiculous. The brothers and sisters are so spontaneous and present their contributions in such an original way that the most sober often cannot help but smile. This year a class of nine brethren, all about fifty or more years old, had decided to sing a song as their contribution. They are all nine illiterate. They went to the front and started out in a great gusto, each carrying his own tune. One tall, wide brother noticed that something went wrong, so he quickly appointed himself leader, placed himself directly in front of several shorter brethren, and then he bellowed forth with all that his lungs could produce. But his melody was a jumble too, and none of the other brethren saw fit to accept his lead. So they kept on, nine tunes seesawing back and forth. Their teacher wanted to stop them after the second verse but the brethren were so engrossed in their presentation and did not see anything amiss about their singing, so they blazed along through eight verses. The dignity of the audience utterly disappeared, but the singers were as serious as could be. They sang our Lord's praises and could not comprehend why the audience should have so much trouble keeping their faces serious.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Olin A. Krehbiel, pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., was formerly President of the Young People's Union of our conference.

J. R. Duerksen has served as missionary in India since 1926. His home church is the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church, Goessel, Kansas.

Willard Claassen, pastor of the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, is Secretary of the Committee on Doctrine and Conduct of our conference.

Benjamin Ewert has been active in Canadian conference work for a long time. From 1921 to 1938 he was itinerant minister for the General Conference in Canada. In 1938 he took over the work in the city mission of Winnipeg. This he gave up recently.

John T. Neufeld, who serves the Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago, comes from the Bethel Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas. The parents of Mrs. Neufeld began the mission that is today the Mennonite Bible Mission.

Other contributors have been introduced previously.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Bethel Mission in Winnipeg

This mission was started by the undersigned six id one-half years ago. It was at first supported by e Home Mission Board of the Canadian Mennonite onference and later by the Home Mission Board the General Conference of the Mennonite Church North America. Since August 1, 1943, the same in charge of Rev. Isaac I. Friesen. But the undergned is still interested in the welfare of the same id takes part in the services of the same as often time permits.

I can gladly report that the work under the leaderip and service of Brother Friesen goes on with od success. The attendance at the various religious eetings has increased a good deal, especially on ınday evenings. Many young people attend the me. Every second Sunday evening a good program rendered. And every other Sunday evening, in ldition to a short sermon, a so-called "Study Group" scusses various religious questions or topics. For me time Rev. Friesen has been conducting a Cateism class, which is attended by fifteen or sixteen oung people. Sunday School and choir practice also kes place, and occasionally also special meetings a festive or entertaining nature. There is also a ıdies Aid Society, which does work similar to that of her Ladies Aid Societies. Recently the same had special program and a public sale of the articles hich they had made during the course of the year. he proceeds of the same amounted to $22.00. This ım has been divided and designated for home and reign mission, general and private relief, special eeds for the church, and a good portion for the ginning of a church-building fund.

It is praiseworthy that a small mission like this, hich itself is dependent on outside or conference ipport, can do and is doing much good in the interest the Kingdom of God. May the Lord bless also in ie future the Bethel Mission in Winnipeg.

ear Mission friends:

"Ye are not your own" says Paul to the Corinthiıs. Have we worked for ourselves or has it been r our Lord and Master. May the Lord forgive where e have failed to come up to the above ideal.

In the years history of the work that is known as ie foolishness of preaching had a prominent part. 'e still have services Sunday morning and evening. Prayer had an important part. Prayer meetings e held weekly on Wednesday evening. Now during ie first part of the year we also have a prayer meeting once a week in one of the homes. Here many a heart is lifted up. There are many private prayers with people who have burdens and trials.

One sister, Mrs. Anderson, who had not walked for ten years went home with the Lord. Several who were very sick were restored thru prayer. Among those were Mrs. Bant and Mrs. Sommers. Three members were added to the church thru letter. At present there are twelve in Catechism class.

A class of eight teachers took a Leadership Training course and received certificates from the Educational committee of the Middle Conference. Two couples were married. One of these the Government has already separated (drafted). What God has joined together let not man tear asunder.

Cottage prayer meetings are held now, every week in a different home. These prove a great blessing and people receive new strength for their labors.

Last Saturday we attended the Annual meeting of the American Mission to Lepers. At this meeting it was announced that the Mission goal of five thousand dollars for the Leper hospital at Champa India had been reached. This campaign for funds was sponsered by the Chicago office of the American Mission to Lepers and a good share of this money comes from Chicago and vicinity. What good can come out of Nazareth?

A Christian sister who with her family was going thru severe trials came to the Mission here for prayer and spiritual help. Her gratefulness and blessing are expressed in a poem that she wrote. We hope it will find a place with this report.

May the Lord reward all who have supported the work here in prayer and gifts.

John T. and Catherine Neufeld

COMRADESHIP

Oh, who will come with me
Beneath the open skies
To drink the wine of morning's dawn
Or feel the stars arise?

Oh, who will fare with me
Along the mountain ways
To breathe the cleaner winds which blow
Above earth's murk and haze?

Oh, who will wait with me
Beside the upper springs
To keep the speechless fellowship
Which only silence brings?

Oh, who will climb with me
The peaks of farthest song
To learn the minstrelsies of Heaven
Where choirs of angels throng?

Oh, who walk with me
The heights the saints have trod
To share their deep communion cup
Brimmed with the love of God?

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Wilbur Nussbaum, Berne, Indiana

JUNE 18—"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." Col. 3:1. The word "if" does not imply doubt, but is an affirmation. It means "since" or "seeing that" and the exhortations that follow are based upon the fact that the Christian is "risen with Christ" just as he is first "dead with Christ," (cf. Col. 2:20). It means complete identification with Christ. This is the starting point of all true spiritual growth. Because it is the risen Christ who is the life, the Christian seeks the things where Christ is, "on the right hand of God."

JUNE 19—"When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. 3:4. In the first part of this verse, we see that "Christ, who is our life" is going to appear. In the latter part of the verse we are reminded that we shall appear "with Him in glory." In I Thes. 4:16-17 we read that Christ comes for His Church, but here He comes with His Church to establish the kingdom.

JUNE 20—"In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." I Cor. 15:52. There will be, of necessity, one generation of believers that will not pass through death. All the bodies of all the saints will be changed, even though some of them will not die. That change will take place in "a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." If they belong to Christ at all, they all will be changed at "the last trump." This is the trump of jubilee, celebrating the final victory over the results of sin.

JUNE 21—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Rom. 12:1. There must be a definite surrender: "present your bodies." Meaning a voluntary giving. The surrender will be all-inclusive—"your bodies"—involving the entire being: spirit, soul, and body. It will be continuous, "a living sacrifice" by which the offerer releases al claim to ownership or management; "holy," entirely separated unto God.

JUNE 22—"And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; Even the Spirit of truth; . . ." John 14:16-17. The Holy Spirit who is our Comforter is a Person, being one of the Godhead. He has come to live within us as an answer to the prayer of the Lord Jesus Christ, Himself. The Holy Spirit now indwells every believer upon accepting the Lord Jesus Christ. ". . . Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. 8:9.

JUNE 23—"Therefore being justified by faith, w have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Rom. 5:1. We should note the difference between forgiveness and justification. Forgiveness is negative and does not change the act, the record of the act, or the one who performs the act. Justification is positive and cancels the act, clears the record, an clothes the person with the perfect righteousness o Christ. Thus the one who accepts Christ as persona Saviour stands in God's sight in the righteousness o Another, even the Lord Jesus Christ, as blameless a though he never had done anything contrary t God's holy and perfect will. Hence he is at peac with God and God with him.

JUNE 24—"But the fruit of the Spirit is love, jo peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Ga 5:22-23. It is the fruit of the Spirit which is borne—fruit which is the result of growth and the manifestation of life. This fruit is far from the result o efforts or works on the part of the Christian. cannot be put on as one would don a costume. Th Holy Spirit produces His fruit in the surrendere Christian, who yields his life daily to the Spirit power.

S. F. Pannabecker to Go to China As M.C.C. Relief Director

S. F. Pannabecker, who has been appointed to take charge of M.C.C. war sufferer's relief in China, is proceeding with arrangements to leave this country in the very near future. According to present plans he will fly into China to take up the work where Brothers Goering and Graber left off. Brother Pannabecker has served as a Mennonite missionary in North China for two terms of service and is familiar with the present relief situation in China.

He began his missionary work in China in 1923. Since 1935 he has served as Chairman of the China Mission of the General Conference. Brother Pannabecker is highly proficient in the Chinese language and very much concerned about the Christian witness for China.

Several years ago when the unrest in China became very pronounced and the American Consulate in China requested American missionaries return home, the families of Brother S. F. Pann becker, Brother C. L. Pannabecker, and Augu Ewert returned to the United States. The m stayed on the field for a while longer and then t came to the United States.

Since then Brother S. F. Pannabecker has taught Bluffton College and has completed his Docto thesis on the theme of "Environmental Factors I fluencing Mennonites."

Brother Pannabecker's wife is the former Lyd Tschantz of Dalton, Ohio. They have three childre Richard, the oldest son, is in the C.P.S. unit at t Alexian Brothers Hospital, Chicago, and Robert i in the Hill City, South Dakota, C.P.S. camp. Ali Ruth is a high school student.

The Written Word Points to the Living Word

by Olin A. Krehbiel

In reading the Bible one runs across the terms, "the word," "the Word," "the word of the Lord," "the word of God," "the Word of God," and "thy word." In order to understand the meaning it is necessary to distinguish between the spoken or written word of God which composes the Scriptures and the Living Word who is Christ the Son of God. To illustrate let us take a few of the many passages that refer to the scriptures: Psalm 119:9, "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word." The whole Psalm deals with the testimonies and precepts of the Lord, as is shown by the context. Jeremiah 36:27, "Then the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah." II Timothy 2:15, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Mark 7:13, "Making the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered:" Next let us take a few passages that refer to Christ as the Word: John 1:1, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." Also verse 14, "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." Revelation 19:13b, "and his name is called The Word of God." These passages are sufficient to demonstrate that the Bible speaks of a written word and a living Word.

What relationship is there between "the word" (the Bible) and "The Word" (the Son of God)? Some people would divorce Christ and the Bible. They speak of a wonderful Jesus but make light of the scriptures. Yet Jesus said that the scriptures are they which testify concerning him. John 5:39, "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me." It is foolish to try to understand Christ while rejecting the evidence concerning Him. The purpose of the written word is to point men to the living Word. The Bible is not to be worshipped, nor ridiculed, but respected and followed. How thankful we can be that God moved men to write the record concerning Christ and that we have it preserved for our day. The Spirit inspired Holy Scriptures from the only reliable source material on the Son of God. It is this word of God and not the words of men that exercises power in the lives of people turning them to the Savior and transforming them. Isaiah 55:10-11, "For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Also I Thessalonians 2:13, "For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe."

It was through a study of the Scriptures that Menno Simons came to know the real Christ and his life was changed. Here is what he writes concerning his conversion: "I prayed to God with sighs and tears, that he would give to me, a troubled sinner, the gift of his grace, and create a clean heart within me; that through the merits of the crimson blood of Christ, He would graciously forgive my unclean walk and unprofitable life, and bestow upon me, wisdom, Spirit, candor and fortitude, that I might preach his exalted and adorable name and holy word unperverted, and make manifest his truth to his praise." He obtained knowledge of the truth, "through the illumination of the Holy Ghost, through much reading of the scriptures, and meditating upon them, and through the gracious favor and gift of God." There have been many others who down through the centuries have found Christ the living Word by searching the scriptures. If you want to know Jesus or desire to be drawn closer to him, then go to the Bible and apply that which you learn to your heart.

A C.E. PROGRAM THAT WAS TRIED AND FOUND HELPFUL

(Ruth C. Hofstetter, President of the Young People's C.E. Society of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna, Missouri, sent in the following C.E. program with the comment that they had found it very helpful. The topic discussions are presented just as they were given on the program. We are happy to present this program for the use of other societies.—rw.)

General Topic: "THE POSSESSING CHRISTIAN"

Note: Part of the program outline and discussion material was taken from the book, The Girl of the Listening Heart by Bertha Moore.

I. Scripture Readings: "Oughts for Christians

1. Love, I John 4:11; John 13:35
2. Forgiving, II Cor. 2:7; Matt. 6:15
3. Prayer, Luke 18:1; Eph. 6:18
4. Obedience, Acts 5:29; Matt. 7:21
5. Patience, Rom. 15:1; Rom. 5:3,4
6. Sacrifice, John 3:16; Rom. 12:1
7. Giving, Acts 20:35
8. Service, John 13:14; Matt. 20:26-28
9. Pure religion, James 1:19-27

III. Song: "What a Friend We Have In Jesus"

IV. Leaders Discussion:

For our topic this evening we have chosen "The Possessing Christian." Many are professing Christians, but all to few possessing Christians. The characteristics of a possessing Christian are love, prayer, obedience, patience, sacrifice, giving, forgiving, and service. These are the "oughts" of each true Christian. Can we measure up to that standard? Then as possessing Christians, we are told by our Lord, we are the "Salt of the earth," "Light of the world," "Branches of the vine," "Witnesses," "Temple of God," and "Sons of the living God." (What the Lord meant in referring to the Christians, as mentioned above, will be explained in the following lesson discussion.)

V. Lesson Discussion:

I. "YE ARE THE SALT OF THE EARTH," Matthew 5:13

As salt will preserve and keep different things, so the Christian is to keep the earth. Sometimes salt is mixed with something else and loses its savor. Likewise, when the child of God becomes mixed with the world, he loses his savor. When the heart is full of the things of the world, there is no room for Christ. We cannot let our lights shine for Christ and at the same time have our hearts full of love for worldly things.

2. "YE ARE THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD" Matthew 5:14

Since Christians are the "Light of the world," they should be flashing rays of God's love to the uttermost part of the world, beginning from the place where each one lives, and that means in his own home among the own people and kin, in the places where Christians work, study, or stay most of the time. Christians receive their light from God and radiate that light to others by words, deeds, thoughts, manner of expression, in living a Christ-like life! The closer we live to Christ the more of His light and love we radiate. The depth of God's love and light have never been exhausted or explored to the utmost. The light of Christ can be used in all modes of life from the cradle to the grave. The spirit in which man works reveals the light he has obtained from the master." In Him was life; and the life was the light of men," John 1:4. "Ye are the light of the world"—may we carry this challenge courageously and conscientiously!

3. "I AM THE VINE, YE ARE THE BRANCHES." John 15:5

This is one of the most beautiful and clearest of the parables or analogies of Jesus. It is one which we, as well as the people of that time and place, can grasp. Several things can be observed. Biologically speaking, the chief end of any plant or animal is self-perpetuation or propagation. Every part of the unit, in the case of the vine from the tiniest rootlet to the top leaf, contribute to this activity. So perpetuation of the body of believers of Christ is the first concern of the church of Christ. We speak of this as the missionary spirit, or evangelism, or child instruction. It must be the concern and activity of all parts of the institution.

There are parts of the "fruit" other than "seed." The grape seed is surrounded by a pulp which birds as well as animals relish and so carry the seed to new locations. We live by that in excess of what is required for self-perpetuation; excess of wheat and corn seed, animals above seed stock, milk above what is required for the life of the young. There are "excesses" in the body of believers above that required for self-perpetuation. Excesses such as brotherly fellowship, unbounded happiness, concern for a suffering humanity, and the world is enriched by such excesses.

"If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch." Let us think of this not as an injunction to judge and cast out those in the church we think are unfruitful but rather as a warning to ourselves that any "branch" may become unfruitful and be pruned from the vine.

Finally, the branch is of the same variety and character of the vine. The bark, the cambium layer, the cell structures of all the smaller branches is the same as that in the trunk of the vine. Paul wrote "From henceforth let no man trouble me; for I bear in my body the MARKS of the Lord Jesus."

4. "YE ARE MY WITNESSES" Isaiah 44:8

"Reading you, yes, reading you,
Knowing whatever you say or do,
Morning and evening and night-time too,
Somebody surely is reading you."

So what is the gospel according to you? Are you being God's witness? This is His only plan of winning the lost world. The message was first given to His disciples. They were His witnesses. Some down through the ages have been faithful for we have been told the good news of salvation. Yet we are also told to go and tell still others. Oh, how much we tell! Is it all to the glory of God? As others read you every moment, do they become more deeply in love with your Saviour? I want to be such a witness, to be able to face my Lord.

We can witness for Christ both in word and deed only when we know Him as Saviour. The early apostles were eye witnesses for Christ, having seen Him here on earth. They were witnesses to His crucifixion, burial, and resurrection. We do not see Him with the natural eye, but we accept Him by faith. In Acts 14 we read that God left witness for Himself. As God left witness for Himself by the things that He does for man, so we can be a witness for Him in the kind of lives we live and by the good we do for all, especially in doing good to those who hate us. The world loves its own, but it takes a real Christian, who has the spirit of Christ, to love his enemies.

5. "YE ARE THE TEMPLES OF GOD." I Corinthians 3:16-17

These words were written by Paul to the church at Corinth. The Corinthians were not living and growing as Paul desired. Listen to the words he wrote to them at the beginning of this same chapter, verses 1-3. "And I, brethren could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal." Still later Paul rebuked them for their immorality, saying, "It is reported commonly that there is fornication among you." He then rebukes them even more severely because of their indifference to the great sin. Such were the people to whom Paul was speaking, from a heart filled with love for them, as "beloved sons" saying "Ye are the temple of God." .... "if any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy." Surely these words were spoken in all seriousness, as an admonition to clean living.

Unfortunately, we have the same conditions existing in some of the members of our churches today. What a change there would be if every professing Christian who defiles his body by immoral living could be made to see the seriousness of these words; if those who call themselves Christians and yet fill their bodies with alcohol would have these words printed in their hearts; if professing Christians who deliberately and continually indulge in harmful reading, movies, and other questionable amusements, would accept this challenge for clean living, what a difference this would make in the church! What an influence the church would be in the world!

We excuse ourselves all too often by pointing out a seemingly good person who indulges in those things, but it is not man's word that we need . . . not even a good man's word, if it is contrary to Gods' word. If our body is the temple of God, then God is the one who should have control. We should ask Him if it is be acceptable to His spirit to dwell in a temple that smells of defiling habits and is not quite clean. Someone has rightly said, "God does not demand a beautiful vessel for His work, but He does demand a clean one."

We are to take care of our bodies because they are the temple of God and the Holy Spirit is dwelling in the hearts of all believers. Even as we try to keep our churches and all places of worship in beautiful condition, we should endeavor still more to keep our living temple in perfect health, in perfect purity, in perfect cleanliness of habit, deed, and thought. What a lot Christians have to think about! It certainly would mean something if every possessing Christian lived up to all that a Christian should live up to.

6. "YE ARE THE SONS OF THE LIVING GOD" Hosea 1:10

"And if children, then heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." As children of God, the king of Kings. We are princes and princesses! Children of God, members of God's great family, loved of Him, watched over by Him, pitied by Him like as a father pitieth his children. "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him."

If In a Hurry—Don't Take the Train

Since Wednesday we've been in the "interior"—and a jolly rough trip it was. We took the local train (passenger and freight combined) to the end of its route—about a twelve hour ride. Twelve hours is somewhat deceiving though, for often it went no faster than one can run. In fact some did run along side just for fun. One doesn't take these trains if he is in a hurry. The story is told of a train passenger who wanted a friend of his to travel with him to a certain destination. He told his friend to tie up his donkey and come by train. The friend thanked him for the invitation, but declined saying that he was in a hurry to get to the destination. Not a single thing went wrong on the whole trip—even though the train has the reputation of going off the track and what not.

Three Identical Meals

Creel was our last train stop. The populace was having a fiesta because of the Mexican "Fourth of July." We found lodging at a Chinaman's Inn—stayed there three days (i.e. three nights) and ate our meal there—'Tis the first place I've been where we had the identical menu three meals a day— potatoes, steak, beans, tea, cake-bread. We were four of us—our total bill for all of us was $3.50 pesos—less than one dollar American!

The Trip to the Barranca

We hired a truck at Creel for seventy pesos and went to see the "Barranca" which is the "Grand Canyon" of Mexico's Rockies. The purpose of the trip was to investigate a possible "mission sight" for the 25,000 Indians of the Tarhumara Tribe which live thereabouts. These Indians have been shoved back into the undesirable mountainous country here just the same as in United States. A large number live in these barranca—in places almost inaccessible. They live in small huts, caves, lean-to's, etc. They are exceedingly poor and are much in need of help. Because of their scattered condition, helping them is difficult. No attempts have thus far been made to help them. The men wear no trousers—only a shirt and a diper; (some do wear trousers). Randall tells of one woman whom he helped give birth to a child (i.e., he helped in the delivery!). She was on her way to town. In about two hours after the birth of the child, she was on the way to town carrying the child! Some women! The barranca is a beauty spot of the first order. We were on top of the canyon looking down. On the bottom of the canyon are tropics where orange trees, etc., grow. The climate down there is unhealthy because of malaria. On the canyon sides live the Indians.

An Indian Hut in Mexico

We visited an Indian hut on Thursday! The senora did not want to let us in for she thought it was too poor, but Mr. Indian thought it would be alright (esp. in consideration of a bride!). The one room shack was barren of furniture save a stool or two—quite dirty, mud floor, fire in one corner. It was about 7 x 7 and all lived inside, father, mother, sonny, pigs and chickens. After we walked away, Mr. Indian ran after us and wanted to sell us a small chicken for a peso—for he had no coffee, sugar, etc. to eat. I bought the chicken for a peso and we (Randall) told him to keep it for us until we returned then we'd all have chicken soup! So, I've got a chicken farmed out here!

At Tamazunchale, we visited the work of John Dale and his father. John Dale was one of the five men who had gone with Rycroft on their trip to South America on their survey tour—and he had just returned. We certainly had a nice visit with him. I like the work they are doing. In eleven years they have accomplished much for the Lord—there are about 100 congregations now. They (Dales) do not go into the village much themselves, but train Indian evangelists who go out into the tribes, sell Bibles, tracts are given out, meetings held, and then the workers come back to headquarters once every month for a "pep" meeting. They have a medical work, Bible school, and do a lot of good to those whom they reach. I think they have the right idea in work of this kind. Natives always reach their own people best.

—Mexico D. F., Sept. 25.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—The Saskatchewan Youth Society of the General Conference of Mennonites will hold its fourth annual retreat on the recently purchased Experimental Farm at Rosthern. We expect the following visiting speakers: Missionary H. J. Brown, Rev. J. J. Esau, Prof. Walter H. Hohmann, and Rev. Walter H. Dyck. A number of local ministers and young people's workers will also take part. A special dedicatory service is planned for the last day. A song festival will be the crowning feature of the retreat. The dates are July 6-9. Rev. J. C. Schmidt is the president of the youth organization, Rev. Isaac Epp is the secretary-treasurer, and H. W. Friesen is the third member of the executive committee. —Isaac Epp, Sec.

—Congratulations to Brother Epp for sending in the above jotting. It gives interesting facts and it announces the event far ahead of time. May other retreat

Observations on Recent Mennonite Colonization in Canada

By J. Winfield Fretz

A commission from the Mennonite Central Committee to study Mennonite colonization efforts gave the writer an opportunity to observe some of the new Canadian Mennonite communities. Chief attention was paid to communities that were established by immigrants from Russia between the years of 1923 to 1934. Of the 20,201 immigrants who came to Canada and were assisted by the Canadian Mennonite Colonization Board, 6,176 paid their transportation in cash, 675 paid part of their transportation and 11,349 came to Canada on credit. Those able to pay all or part of their passage often had very little cash left with which to buy equipment for households and farms.

Why Significant

In the course of this study a great variety of Mennonite groups were contacted, although not all of them were carefully observed. In some communities one found Mennonite Brethren, Evangelical Mennonite Brethren, General Conference Mennonites, Sommerfelder, Bergtaler, Old Colony, the Church of God in Christ Mennonite, Rudenweidener, and Hutterites. These groups are sometimes settled in intermingled fashion, not exclusive of each other except for the Hutterite Brethren. The study of colonization is significant for modern Mennonites because such a large portion of Mennonite history has been determined by colonization efforts. The four areas from which observations for this article are most heavily drawn are in the area of Vineland and Virgil, Ontario, in what is known as the Niagara Peninsula; in the east and west reserve in the Red River Valley of Southern Manitoba; in Coaldale, Alberta; and in the Fraser Valley of British Columbia.

Church and Community

One of the impressive facts in the recent Canadian colonization is the very important part religion plays in the life of the people. This is emphasized by the presence of one or two churches in every community and the central part the church plays in the life of the people in the community. The churches serve much more than places of public worship. They are dominant institutions in the community, serving as cultural, educational and social centers as well as places of worship. In these newly established colonies strong emphasis is placed on Biblical teaching and the German language. Many of the communities have their own week-day parochial schools to promote these interests. Such matters as health, medical care, burial societies, and fire and storm insurance societies are organized around the church. The importance of religion during the years of pioneering hardships and privations can hardly be overestimated. It served as a veritable foundation of inspiration and a tower of strength in moments of despair and gloom.

Mutual Aid

One is exceedingly impressed with the various types of cooperation and mutual aid in the various communities. One might almost say that the economic prosperity and strength of a community was in direct proportion to the extent which mutual aid was practiced. This sharing one with another is expressed in both a formal and in an informal way, that is, by means of systematic organization and by means of spontaneous sharing in times of need. Almost everyone of the communities observed had a mutual health insurance plan whereby each family paid a nominal annual sum of money in return for general medical care. In several of the communities Mennonite hospitals have been established and Mennonite doctors imported to serve the community. Burial societies are common and are organized on the same mutual plan, each family paying twenty-five to fifty cents upon the death of a member and thus providing a maximum sum of fifty dollars for the family of the deceased.

This mutual aid is expressed also in formal lines in the field of business. Cooperative creameries, cheese factories, canneries, grocery stores and berry preserving plants are organized in these communities. In this way the burdens and the benefits are share by all those who participate and the Mennonite peopl provide the capital and determine the managemen policies. In this field there is much to be learned by older Mennonite communities who have forgotten o neglected this aspect of Christian brotherhood.

Other Observations

One is impressed by the fact that the larger shar of financial credit necessary to establish these communities came from non-Mennonite sources such a railroads, land companies, lumber, and cattle dealers It is significant that fellow Mennonites did not provide the capital for these recent Mennonite colonization efforts. Wherever such capital was provided i was through agencies other than the church and a times not through a systematic program officially endorsed by the church.

A further impressive fact is the industriousnes which characterizes these Mennonite settlers. Th respect for the dignity of labor by the people in th areas under consideration was indeed inspiring. N task was too menial and no job too difficult for thes people to tackle. In some cases entire families walke four and five miles to and from hop fields in Britis Columbia in order to earn fifteen cents an hour. I this way funds were gradually accumulated to mak down payments on small parcels of land and lumb with which to build crude shacks which first serve as houses. As time continued and economic condition improved so did the standard of living. These peopl vividly demonstrated in repeated cases the truth the Biblical promise that "with God all things ar possible." It was their industriousness and depen ability which won the respect and confidence of loc land owners and merchants who on that basis extended them liberal credit.

—A Junior C.E. has been organized by the Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna, Missouri. The twenty-four members receive opportunity for Bible memory work and devotional expression.

—Stanley Stauffer is the wide-awake President of the Young People's C.E. of the West Swamp Church, Quakertown, Pa. Stanley believes that there should be distinct evidence of spiritual life in a church. Once he did not belong to the West Swamp Church, but he joined it because of the spiritual activity in it. Stanley's work of dairy testing takes him into about two dozen homes. He makes this round again and again. As he enters into the various homes he has a good opportunity to observe family life. That he learns a lot from this experience was suggested when he related to the editor (who visited in his home recently) that he occasionally read in the Gospel Herald, the organ of the Old Mennonites, which he finds in some of the homes he visits. Young people who take an active part in church work and who are interested in church papers give evidence that religion is not just a side-issue with them.

—At what point is a man in the Army? This question has troubled many C.O.'s who have for various reasons not been granted their desired classification by the local board. The U.S. Supreme Court answered this question finally in an 8 to 1 decision. The court ruled that a C.O. could not be considered in the Army if he refused to take the oath and be finger printed.

This will be valuable information for those who are called for final-type physical examinations, and who scarcely know whether to report for such examinations or not. "The Supreme Court held that examination of men at induction centers and their acceptance or rejection are only parts of the continuous process of selection; that acceptance of the oath is the end of the process and that "prior to that time a selectee is still subject to the act and not yet a soldier."

In case, however, he refuses to take the oath the Court held that he violates the Selective Service Act "as clearly as one who refuses to report." The difference, of course, lies in the fact that he remains under the jurisdiction of the civil law and the process of civil courts instead of being subject to court-martial and miilitary penal procedures. —The Evangelical Visitor —Conscientious objectors have been sent to all four types of federal prisons, but most of them are in "moderate custody" correctional institutions such as Danbury (Conn.), or in prison farms or camps. They get along well with their fellow-convicts and frequently assume positions of leadership in the recreational, educational and religious programs of the institutions. Many C.O.'s are making good use of the prison library and educational classes, and some are taking correspondence courses from schools or colleges outside. Some prisons have prayer groups, Quaker meetings and F.O.R. cell meetings.

In one prison a minister who had refused to register was elected by the inmates to lead the annual Christmas service in preference to the regular chaplains. —The Gospel Messenger —First Mennonite Church, Butterfield, Minnesota: In our monthly Young People's Fellowship meeting we are studying the book of Joshua. We have work-books which we fill out. Rev. Victor Sawatzky, the pastor of the church, is the instructor.

The Young People's Fellowship has as one of its projects the purchase of books for the church library. Some of the new books added to the library are several Christian fiction books, several biographies of Christian heroes, a copy of Pilgrim's Progress, and the one volume Bible Commentary compiled by Drs. Jamison, Fausset and Brown. A new library cabinet is being built to match the bulletin board which is designed with a plate glass sliding front.

—Mrs. Victor Buller, who has been working in the state mental hospital at Ypsilanti, Michigan, is now taking some courses in the Bethel College summer school. Together with her husband Mrs. Buller took part in the relief training school at Goshen, Indiana, last summer. She states that this was a very profitable experience and that it was then a great satisfaction to go into a mental hospital and put one's ideals into practice in the work there. Mrs. Buller would rather work with people than with things. So she has found many challenges in the hospital work, to which she will return shortly. Mrs. Buller, who was formerly Myrtle Molzen, says that she's not an "oldster" among Mennonites. However, she undoubtedly knows more about the Mennonites and has more of the Mennonite spirit than many who have been born Mennonites. May not the saying "Familiarity breeds contempt" hold true of many Mennonites who have generations of Mennonite ancestry in back of them? Mrs. Buller spoke to the Intermediate C.E. group of the Bethel College Church on June 4.

—Garman Wedel, pastor of the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, concluded one year of active service on June 11. Brother Wedel has established a record that is somewhat unique these days. He was elected pastor by his home church and now serves it. For the past two years he has been taking the ministerial course at Bethel College. He expects to graduate next year. The Wedels live on the Bethel College campus. Mrs. Wedel was formerly a member of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Inman. She is a registered nurse, having graduated from the School of Nursing of the Bethel Deaconess Hospital, Newton.

—Henry Fransen, pastor of the Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, and Miss Othelia Ewert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ewert, Dolton, South Dakota, plan to be married on June 18 at Dolton. Brother Fransen, who has served the Buhler church for about two years, comes from Vineland, Ontario, Canada, and is the son of Mrs. Mary Fransen. Miss Ewert is a registered nurse, having graduated from the School of Nursing of the Bethel Hospital, Newton, in 1943. Since then she has served in the Bethesda Hospital, Goessel, Kansas. Previous to her nurse's training, she attended Freeman Junior College. She is a member of the Bethel Church, Dolton. After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Fransen will visit Mr. Fransen's mother, who is still ailing.

—The brethren Jacob Friesen and Arnold Nickel will serve the Buhler church on June 18 and 25 respectively.

A further characteristic of these newly established Mennonite communities is their cultural isolation due to differences of language, religion, tradition, and social heritage. This is even true in the Mennonite communities that have been established in Canada for seventy years or more. This sense of isolation is at the present time accentuated because of the traditional Mennonite attitude toward war. There are, however, evidences that the cultural and geographical isolation of these Mennonites is slowly breaking down. Among the younger generation there is considerable evidence of conformity to the ways of the world. One such irrefutable evidence is the surprisingly large number of men who are now performing regular military service.

In all of the four provinces of Canada where community life was observed Mennonites have introduced agricultural patterns different from those which they found there. The intensification of agriculture in the fruit growing areas of Ontario and British Columbia, the truck gardening and oil producing crops in Manitoba are cases in point. Everywhere Mennonites tend to be relatively self-sufficient in terms of growing a variety of products for their own domestic use.

Conclusion

By way of summary we can say that the recently established Mennonite communities in Canada are succeeding economically, and community life is oriented around the church. A large degree of mutual aid characterizes their economic and social life. They remain conscious of themselves as distinctive Mennonite groups with peculiar customs and insights into Christian teachings. It goes without saying, however, that the communities under consideration are not faultless.

CORRESPONDENCE

Immanuel Mennonite Church
Los Angeles, California

This church indeed is experiencing the hand of the Lord in a marvelous way in that He called out a number of our young people into some form of service for Him. Saturday evening, May 27, the two young men, Homer Sperling and Leonard Hanes were examined as to their faith and belief of the Mennonites. They gave a very good testimony of their salvation in Christ and their experience of their calling into the work of the Lord. Sunday morning, May 28, they were then ordained into the ministry. Dr. John Hubbard of the Bible Institute gave the message, basing his thoughts on whatever you do, do it "well pleasing unto Him." Rev. W. A. Regier performed the ordination with the assistance of all present ordained ministers.

The church also received a request from the conference broad for the ordination of our member, Mr. Ben Rahn, who has attended Bethel College for two years, after graduating from the Bible Institute of Los Angeles. Since his home church in Mt. Lake, Minnesota, is willing to perform the ordination, this church consented to its request. He is to serve the church in Enid, Oklahoma, as pastor.

The same day in the Christian Endeavor hour, we had the privilege of having Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buller with us, telling of their experiences and work in France as Mennonite Relief Workers. We thank them for their splendid report.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Ummel and daughter Gwendolyn were also with us that day. They gave us a report of their work in Shafter, California, among the migrants. Their report also was very much appreciated.

A few Sundays ago the church membership voted upon the matter of incorporating the church.

Mrs. Elizabeth Rempel

RELIEF

The Relief Situation in Honan, China

The following paragraph is taken from a report concerning the relief situation in China, prepared by S. J. Goering and J. D. Graber:

"The Honan area has suffered from a whole series of calamities. Flood, locusts, drouth, and the ravages of war have stalked hard on the heels of one another through the Province. It is estimated that during 1943 one million people starved in this Province alone. Besides flood, which silted up and practically destroyed over a hundred villages in Honan, the dykes of the Yellow River were breached as a military necessity causing a radical change in the course of this great river through the Province. This has inundated, destroyed, or surrounded with water other hundreds of villages. . . . This has thrown thousands of people out of employment and thus robbed them of their only means of livelihood. As a result of all these streams refugees have left the Province for other parts of China and there has thus been a tragic and wide-spread dislocation of normal life. The task of reconstruction and rehabilitation will be colossal."

Dr. Klassen Reports Again

In a letter, dated March 17, G. S. Klassen, dentist to the Mennonite colonists in Paraguay, gives further report on the extent of his activities:

"Up to date I have extracted almost three thousand teeth here in Paraguay, including those in Friesland . . . Up to the present time, we have made and delivered fifty-five dentures. That may not sound like much to the layman but when one considers that each denture is handmade, in each case for a particular mouth taking hours of work, it keep my 'nose to the grind stone.' . . . We will not keep up this pace because I must also teach the boys the art of filling teeth. . . . I have three apprentices. They really make me a great deal of extra work. But in the last two weeks they are showing signs of being more of an asset than a liability to my work. In fact each one has already given anesthetic for and extracted more than 100 teeth. . . It thrills me to think that when I leave here the people of Friesland and Fernheim will be taken care of as far as dentistry is concerned. These apprentices get very little theory but we are making the best of the time."

JOTTINGS

—Brother J. C. Regier, father of Mrs. Harold Ratzlaff India, died on June 6. The funeral was held on June 9.

—Brother Ralph C. Kauffman, who has been stationed at Akron relative to his entry into relief work, left on June 4 to visit C.P.S. camps and units in New Jersey Rhode Island, Ohio, Michigan, and Wisconsin. However he is subject to call and may sail for the Near Eas at any time in the near future.

—Brother Arthur F. Ortmann, pastor of the Woodland Mennonite Church, Warroad, Minnesota, writes, "Jus a word of appreciation for the recent article "And Y

Visited Me" by Walter A. Gering. I certainly enjoyed reading it. I too believe as ministers we often forget this important part of the pastor's work. It has always proved a source of encouragement and help to me to visit the sick. Many times I have received far more than the little I gave as it seemed. Another thought: Jesus says I was sick and in prison and ye visited me not. Is that perhaps the reason why our boys from C.P.S. camps are now serving in hospital units and mental institutions? For truly the patients here are both sick and in prison and ordinarily we as Mennonites neglected them."

—Brother Jacob J. Enz is to be ordained into the ministry on June 18 by Rev. J. E. Entz, the pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas. See the invitation of his home church elsewhere in this paper. Brother Jacob Enz has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Mennonite Church, Nappannee, Ind. On May 22, 1944, he received his Bachelor of Sacred Theology degree from the Bibilcal Seminary, New York. On May 25 he was married to Joan Veston. After a visit in the Newton community Brother and Sister Enz will take up their work at Nappannee. They hope to begin their work there by July 1. They will make their home in the church parsonage. Rev. E. S. Mullet was the former pastor of the Nappannee church.

—The Nominating Committee for the General Conference is to consist of: Rev. J. H. Enns, 392 Alexander Avenue, Winnipeg, Canada; Rev. E. J. Miller, Lind, Washington; Rev. I. J. Dick, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, Chairman; Rev. Henry Hege, Corn, Oklahoma; Rev. B. H. Janzen, Lehigh, Kansas; Rev. J. T. Neufeld, Chicago, Illinois, and Rev. Olin Krehbiel, Lansdale, Pa. This is according to a statement released by Brother Walter Gering, Secretary of the Business Committee.

—Brother Erwin C. Goering, Director of the Civilian Public Service Camp at Camino, California, writes, "We are still enjoying our work heartily, even though the going is hard at times. But together all of us must 'Be about our Father's business,' diligently and confidently pursuing that which is His will."

—C.P.S. Funds Very Low: Brother L. J. Horsch, Treasurer of our Peace Committee wrote on May 28: "Only $3000.00 has been transmitted to the M.C.C. to date. This is the poorest record since way back in 1942. . . . We have put our hand to the plow and there is no turning back now."

—The Bethel Deaconess Hospital at Newton admitted seventeen new students to the school of nursing on June 1. Of these thirteen are from Kansas, while Minnesota, North Dakota, Oklahoma, and Iowa each have sent one student.

—J. Winfield Fretz, who is Secretary of the Mennonite Aid Section of the M.C.C., is now in Old Mexico making a study of past and present Mennonite colonization efforts there. He will be gone about six weeks. The Church of God in Christ Mennonites (Holdeman) are particularly interested in this study. Mrs. Fretz and son Burton are again making their home on the Bethel College campus.

—Brother H. T. Unruh, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, is to visit C.P.S. camps from June 11-27. He will visit camps and units in Colorado, Utah, Idaho, and Nebraska. Brother Unruh is also chairman of the Peace Committee of the General Conference.

—The Northern District Conference is to be held at Henderson, Nebraska, August 25 to 29, right after the General Conference.

—Mrs. Rev. John F. Epp, Henderson, Nebraska, passed to her heavenly home on June 1.

—Brother and Sister George B. Neufeld, of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, visited the Emmanuel congregation near Moundridge on June 6. Brother Neufeld, who brought the morning message, spoke on the subject of "Power." The Neufelds plan to go to the African mission field some time in June.

—Johannestal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Mrs. Gerhard Friesen of Newton and Mrs. John A. Bartel taught our three-weeks Bible school. Twelve infants were consecrated on Mother's Day. The Sunday School enjoyed a picnic on May 24. After the fellowship supper, Professor Ebel of Tabor College gave an interesting chalk talk. On Memorial Day a group gathered at the cemetery for services.

—D. D. Eitzen, in an address on "Except A Man Be Born Again" given at the California Sunday School and C.E. Convention, pointed out that there are three issues which all men must face: (1) Am I right with God? (2) The choice of a life-mate to help me carry out the will of God in my life. (3) In what line of work can we carry out God's will.

—Miss Martha Burkhalter, who recently came home on furlough from our mission work in India, was given a large informal reception on May 31. Plans for the reception and pot-luck dinner were made by the official board of the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana. Miss Burkhalter, who is a member of this church, has been doing missionary work in India since 1917. Twice, while home on furlough, she has served on the faculty of Bluffton College. Since her last furlough in 1936 Miss Burkhalter has been serving as Principal of the Janjgir Bible Training School.

—Rev. Forrest Musser, field representative for Bluffton College, and a ladies trio from the school recently gave a short program during the mid-week prayer service of the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana.

—Brother W. F. Unruh, pastor of the West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, will leave around the middle of June for Chicago, where he will take a five weeks seminary course especially designed for pastors of rural churches.

—Brother Henry Hege, pastor of the Bergtal Mennonite Church, Corn, Oklahoma, recently came to Kansas to officiate at the wedding of one of his young men who is in C.P.S. Six young men from the Bergtal Church are in C.P.S. Brother Hege relates that the church has finished putting a new roof on the meetinghouse and that 620 gallon tanks for butane gas have been installed. They hope to get stoves for this. The meetinghouse is also to receive a coat of paint. If possible a choir loft is to be built on on the east side of the building. Fluorescent lamps are to be installed. Brother Hege, who has been superintendent of the Corn High School this past year, has resigned this position because of the very heavy responsibilities involved while also serving as pastor of the church. Next year he will serve as principal of the school. However, he will still teach full time. Brother Hege's career as pastor and teacher began fourteen years ago, and it has been a very busy one.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

Rev. Gerald Stucky, missionary candidate to Bogota, Colombia, visited several churches in the Conference recently as follows: Second Church, Philadelphia, with the congregations of First Church and Germantown, cooperating; Schwenksville Church, and Grace Church, Lansdale. May 29, the brethren, J. J. Plenert and A. J. Neuenschwander, members of the General Conference Home Mission Board, accompanied him to Akron, Pa., to have a consultation with leaders of the M.C.C. in reference to the Mennonites in South America. May 30, he gave a brief message at the C.E. Convention, and in the evening he gave a message at the Swamp Brotherhood meeting in Bethany Church, Quakertown. On Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Freeman H. Swartz took him to Christ Children's Home at Warminister, Pa., and in the evening he spoke at First Church, Allentown. From Allentown he went to Berne, Indiana, for a brief visit with his folks. His visit in the east was greatly appreciated.

The 49th Annual Convention of the Eastern District Mennonite Young People's Union was held in the East Swamp Church May 30. The convention theme was "Be Thou An Example." During the business session it was revealed that we went over the top with the mission project by $27.00. The following project was adopted for the year 1944-45, $200.00 toward the repair of the parsonage at Napier. This parsonage belongs to the Conference, the Church being under the Home Mission Committee of the Conference; $150.00 toward the beginning of the mission work in South America, and $150.00 toward the mission work in Africa. After the business session there were three group conferences under the theme of the Convention as follows: "Be Thou An Example" 1st, "For Consistent Christian Living in the Church," led by Mrs. Walter Dick, of Second Church, Philadelphia; 2nd, "For Consistent Christian Living before the World," led by Mr. Norman Geissinger of the Upper Milford Church, and 3rd, "For Consistent Peace Living" led by Mr. George Miller, a C.O. in the Allentown State Hospital Unit. The convention speaker was the Rev. George Stoneback, pastor of the Fairfield Mennonite Church, who gave a very challenging message. The newly elected officers are President, Miss Grace Moyer; Vice President, Mr. John Moser; Corr. Sec'y, Miss Luella Geissinger; Rec. Sec'y, Mrs. LeRoy Meyers; Treasurer, Mr. Erwin Miller; Mission Treas., Mrs. Ruth Miller; Intermediate Supt., Mrs. Ted Moyer; Junior Supt., Mrs. Lester Schafer; C. E. Witness Editor, Miss Grace Binder and pastor counsellor, Rev. Howard G. Nyce.

The East Swamp Church observed Home Coming Day with dedication services, June 4. The pastor, the Rev. Harold D. Burkholder, spoke on the theme "God's Architecture" during the dedication service. In the afternoon, the conference service was held. The scripture lesson and prayer was in charge of the Rev. Howard G. Nyce, pastor of the Allentown-Upper Milford Charge, and a former pastor of the Church. The address of the afternoon was given by the Rev. Reed F. Landis, who supplied the church for a while during his pastorate at Souderton. Rev. Landis is at present Field Secretary for The American Sunday School Union. The following brought greetings, Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman, missionaries to India; Rev. Russell L. Mast, Conference President and pastor of the Deep Run Church; Rev. John Unruh of the Saucon Church; Rev. Freeman H. Swartz of the Schwenksville Church; Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel of the Lansdale Church; Rev. Howard G. Nyce of Allentown and Upper Milford Churches and the Rev. D. J. Unruh, Field Secretary of the Northern Bible Society and formerly pastor of the Lansdale Church.

Rev. D. J. Unruh spoke in the Deep Run (Old) Mennonite Church Sunday morning, June 4; he then went to East Swamp to consecrate the baby of Rev. and Mrs. Burkholder. The same evening he spoke in the First Baptist Church at Perkasie, Pa. June 6, 7, and 8 he conducted a Bible Conference at the Saucon Mennonite Church, near Coopersburg, of which his brother, the Rev. John Unruh is the pastor.

Community Baccalaureate Services. Dr. J. E. Hartzler, supply pastor of Zion Church, Souderton, delivere the message at the Souderton High School auditorium Sunday evening, June 4. He used for his theme, "Building the Nest High." The Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander pastor of the Swamp Charge delivered the messag for the Quakertown High School graduates, Sunda evening, June 4.

The Junior C.E. Convention was held in Bethan Church, Qaukertown, June 3. There were three con ference periods under the convention theme, "Christ fo the World," as follows: "Christ for the Community led by Rev. Russell L. Mast; "Christ for the Nation led by Miss Catherine Niswander of First Church, Phila delphia, and "Christ for the World" led by Dr. Ell Bauman. Dr. J. E. Hartzler delivered the conventio address. —Conf. Corr.

Peace Committee Sends Letter to All Pastors

(Below we present the letter which the Peace Committee of our Conference recently sent to the pastors of all of our churches.)

June 1, 1944

Dear Brother in Christ:

It is with considerable hesitancy and no little reluctance that the Peace Committee intrudes itself upon you again. But we are faced with a situation that compels us to secure your personal attention.

Attached to this letter you will find a copy of the monthly "Quota Control Record" of the Civilian Public Service operated by the Mennonite Central Committee. Please note that the General Conference is still falling short of meeting its obligations. Not shown on the record is the fact that the May payments were only $3,400. It isn't pleasant for your Peace Committee to call these facts to your attention. It is discouraging to your Committee to face this constant deficit. We are charged by the General Conference to carry the burden of raising the money that the C.P.S. program, which we have voluntarily undertaken as a united General Conference, may function. We can meet this obligation only in so far as you folks on the "home front" support us. And many of you have, and have done well. Your large checks month after month have been so heartening, so encouraging. You have been, and are so faithful. But those blank spaces that appear in the empty record of some of our churches—they are responsible for many an anxious moment.

This appeal is quite frank and personal, but we of the Committee feel it should be so. We come to you frankly and in complete confidence that each of you will give our need the consideration it deserves. Wouldn't it be splendid if the deficit could be completely removed by the time the General Conference meets in August?

We of the Peace Committee are grateful for everything you have done for the boys, our boys and yours, in the C.P.S. camps. We praise God for the generous and sympathetic spirit which prevails in so many of our churches. We thank Him for His blessings on the work we are doing and we trust Him to guide, direct and sustain us further.

Faithfully yours, in the service of our Lord,
The Peace Committee of the General Conference

The Basis of Judgment Used by Christ

The basis of Christ's judgment as described in Matthew 25:31-46 is: Did you give food to the hungry? Did you give drink to the thirsty? Did you take in the stranger? Did you clothe the naked? Did you visit the sick? Did you visit those in prison? The appraisal of Jesus rests upon the performance of these. These are matters that count. These are matters that make one wrong or right with God. These are matters that count tremendously now and in the time to come. These are concrete, specific acts that can be measured like the bushels of wheat in a wagon. These are not verbal professions given easily and perhaps with pride. These are acts that come out of a loving heart. These are not acts that bring on war. These are acts that erase conflict and bind people together in fellowship.

Unfortunately some Christians seldom if ever use this basis when they appraise other Christians. Especially is this true of some religious leaders. The religious leaders of Jesus' day also failed to consider this basis as important. The story of the Good Samaritan makes this plain. Would it not be well if all Christians paid more heed to this basis of judgment? No, not in a self-conscious way, but in honest, humble love to God and man.

How terribly the Kingdom of God has suffered because Christians have sought to detour around this basis of judgment. Look at the hell that is in this world today. Would it be there if all Christians had taken the standard of Jesus very seriously? Perhaps even then some of it would be there, but certainly a great many conditions would be very much more heavenly. Instead of doing good to those in need, Christians who go to war help to create conditions of hunger, thirst, nakedness, sickness, imprisonment, and suspicion of the stranger. The war system leads them to do this. How different are the achievements of those who are led by the Spirit of Christ.

The great mass of Christians has taken the basis of Christ's judgment much too lightly. However, in practically every community and church there are salt and light Christians who do much good according to Christ's standard. They are the Christian neighbors, friends, and fellow church members who are sensitive to all kinds of human need and do something about it. They are the ones who live sermons. They are the ones who do God's will upon earth as it is done in heaven. They let His kingdom come. What a blessing they are!

God wants all Christians to be concerned about this fundamental teaching of Christ. God is concerned, not just for my needs, but for the needs of everyone. It is God's will that his children have the same concern.

Christ said, "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—rw.

WAR PRAYER

(When Mark Twain wrote this "War Prayer," he said, "It can be published after I am dead, for only dead men can tell the truth in this world and I have told the truth in that prayer.") Here it is:

O Lord our God help us to tear their soldiers to bloody shreds with our shells; help us to cover their smiling fields with the pale forms of their patriotic dead; help us to lay waste their humble homes with a hurricane of fire; help us to wring the hearts of their unoffending widows with unavailing grief, help us to turn them out roofless with their little children to wander unfriended through wastes of their desolated land in rags and hunger and thirst, sport of the sun's flames of summer and the icy winds of winter, broken in spirit, worn with travail, imploring Thee for the refuge of the grave and denied it—for our sakes, who adore thee, Lord blast their hopes, blight their lives, protract their bitter pilgrimage, make heavy their steps, water their way with their tears, stain the white snow with the blood of their wounded feet! We ask of One who is the spirit of love and who is the ever-faithful refuge and friend of all that are sore beset, and seek His aid with humble and contrite hearts. Grant our prayer, O Lord, and Thine shall be the praise and honor and glory, now and ever. Amen.

RESPONSIVE READING

Leader: From Jesus we learn:

Group: "That he who loves God is to love his brother as well." I John 4:21b.

Leader: "If anyone declares, 'I love God' and yet hates his brother, he is a liar; for he who will not love his brother whom he has seen, cannot possibly love the God whom he has never seen." I John 4: 20.

Group: "Love is very patient, very kind, love knows no jealousy; love makes no parade; gives itself no airs, is never rude, never selfish, never irritated, never resentful: love is never glad when others go wrong; love is gladdened by goodness, always slow to expose, always eager to believe the best, always hopeful, always patient." I Corinthians 13:4-7.

Leader: "Beloved, let us love one another, for love belongs to God, and everyone who loves is born of God and knows God: he who does not love, does not know God, for God is love." I John 4 7-8.

Group: "God no one has ever seen; but if we love one another, then God remains within us, and love for him is complete in us." I John 4:12

China Calls for Help

by Sam J. Goering

"And a vision appeared to Paul in the night: There stood a man of Macedonia and prayed him saying, Come over into Macedonia and help us." —Acts 16:9.

If you can picture in your mind, China in its great need after seven years of war with Japan, you too will see a vision and hear a voice praying "Come over and help us." Over half of China is occupied by the Japanese. Thousands and thousands of Chinese men, women, and children have been ruthlessly killed; missionaries have been placed into concentration camps. Many of the churches and schools in occupied China have been destroyed by the enemy. Millions of Chinese have fled from their homes leaving behind all their possessions. They have gone west into territory not controlled by the Japanese, or what is known as free China, because it is not occupied by the Japanese. Important cities are today being mercilessly bombed. The roads leading from Indo-China and Burma into free China were closed when Japan occupied these countries. By bombing the cities and closing the roads to keep out of free China, food and other important supplies, the Japanese hope to get the Chinese government to surrender. China, however, has joined the United Nations and is determined to fight to the bitter end, feeling sure that in the end Japan will be defeated.

Outside Supplies Cut Off

One cannot visit China at this time without being impressed with the fact that the Chinese people are busy producing for themselves, as much as possible, the things they need. Supplies from the outside world are cut off except for what little is brought in over the long winding mountain road to the Northwest leading to Russia or by air from India.

Very Poor Transportation

Free China has only about 700 miles of railway, while the rest, about 12,000 miles are in the hands of the Japanese. None of free China's roads are comparable to the highways in the United States. Trucks and automobiles are few and many are in bad repair. Most of the goods in China is moved by men carrying things on their shoulders or pushing them by wheelbarrows. One sees heavily loaded carts pulled by men instead of animals. One sees men, women, children, soldiers, student-refugees, etc., all walking along the dusty roads, many of them carrying heavy loads. Knowing there is no chance for them to ride, they all walk bravely along symbolizing the way the Chinese people face their many needs which are intensified by war and famine.

Famine Areas

Free China has two famine areas, one in Honan and the other in Kwantung. The famine in Kwantung Province is in a densely populated district which has always depended on the outside for a large part of its food supply. This supply is now being cut off by the Japanese. The result is that there is not enough food to go around. What food is available sells at a very high price.

The Honan famine area was brought about by a number of causes. In 1942 there was a severe drought extending northward from northeastern Honan far into Japanese occupied Hopei. To halt the advance of the Japanese army, the Chinese destroyed the retaining dykes of the Yellow River, and although the enemy was temporarily stopped, thousands of acres of fertile farm land were destroyed as the waters of the river sought their new course. In 1943 the flood waters of the Yellow River known as "China's sorrow" destroyed crops and made thousands of people homeless. After the drought and the flood, came the locusts, in swarms that filled the air, and devoured what they could in this already stricken area. The distress is increased by the havoc wrought by the destruction of the war and the continued demands of the armies--the Chinese on the one side and the Japanese on the other. Within the last few weeks there has been severe fighting in this area. Crops almost ready to harvest have been desroyed.

Relief Work

Organized relief work which we visited in Chengchow and other places, has been disrupted. Missionaries and thousands of refugees are again moving westward to escape the horrors of war. These refugees are looking to us and others for help. It is estimated that to meet the situation a million Chinese dollars per month will be needed for some time to come. Truly, suffering China needs relief.

The problem of doing effective relief work in China at this time is greatly intensified by the blockade which makes it impossible to bring in supplies from the outside: by inflation which brings with it extremely high prices, and finally by the lack of properly equipped, qualified relief workers due mainly to the blockade and inflation. Nevertheless, we must keep China in our plans and our prayers. Some funds and some workers should go to China now for emergency relief; other funds and workers should be prepared for the day when the present obstacles to effective relief work will have been removed that then we may be ready to answer more fully the call, "Come over and help us."

VERY FUNDAMENTAL

Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God. And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

New Missions

New Field Location Studied, Lancaster, Pa.

With the resignation of Rev. Sylvan Lehman, pastor of Calvary Mennonite Church, Mechanics Grove, Pa., in effect, the Home Mission Board and the Home Mission Committee of the Eastern District felt that this was an opportune time to study the Lancaster field with a view of opening a work in that city in connection with Calvary Church, Mechanics Grove.

On Thursday, June 8, Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, chairman of the Eastern District Home Mission Committee, Rev. John J. Plenert, and Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, looked up such individuals who are members of General Conference Mennonite churches to enlist their interest in forming a nucleus for the work that is to be opened. There is a real interest and we found a good number of such individuals and also families who with their children are interested in such a work. After a few more individuals and homes are contacted it is the plan of this Committee to call all who are interested together for a period of fellowship in order that all might become acquainted with each other.

The plan is that the new pastor is to serve the Calvary Congregation and also this new church.

Anyone knowing of individuals or families living in or near to Lancaster who are members of General Conference churches or such who might be interested, will help this movement greatly by submitting the names and addresses to the Secretary of the Home Mission Board.

Transfer of Treasury

On June 30, Rev. John J. Plenert, 7319 Whitaker Avenue, Philadelphia, 11, Pa. will close his books and make up the triennial report for the General Conference.

Until that date, friends are asked to send all gifts to Rev. Plenert.

Beginning with July 1, all gifts for home missions are to be sent to Mennonite General Conference, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas.

The Home Mission Board took action at their meeting in April that the treasury be transferred as indicated above.

All the many friends we thank with a whole heart for regular and repeated gifts from individuals, congregations, Sunday Schools, C. E. societies, missionary societies, and other groups.

Especially do the gifts in the form of legacies serve a permanently useful purpose in that these go into a special fund known as the Rotating Church Building Fund. Money in this fund has helped build many churches in the past.

May the Lord richly reward all givers.

Faithfully yours,
A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.

Toronto Mennonite Mission

It is with grateful praise to God that we report what He has done for us in this one-half year's time. Our attendance has increased considerably from what it was at first. Mennonite soldiers and air force men are attending our worship services when they get their week-end leaves. Cards of welcome with other needed information about our Sunday services have been placed into the hands of Chaplains of the army, navy, and air force stations in Toronto for the benefit of the service men. As many as seven service men have been present in the Sunday morning service. One of the regular attending service men is now our choir leader. He is very capable as a choir director and as a result we have enjoyed a nice group of fifteen voices bring the Gospel in song. Along with the four Sunday School classes, an adult Bible class, lead by the Pastor, is enjoying many blessings. A few of the children have made a decision for Christ as their own personal Saviour.

On Easter Sunday, the Lord willing, we expect the choir to render a number of Easter selections. For the children is planned a flannel-graph story based on the resurrection of Christ. A message on the resurrection of Christ will also be given in the worship service. A monthly bulletin prepared by the Pastor, will appear for the first time on Palm Sunday, the purpose of which is to exalt our risen Saviour and serve as a news, information, and encouragement bulletin for the Mission members.

At the beginning of the New Year our annual election was held. The election of Sunday School teachers, pianists, ushers, and the mission committee took place.

There are two problems which are before us which we would like to have you pray about. One which has only recently presented itself—that of accommodating the service men here when on their leaves from other camps, thus encouraging them to attend our services; and the other, that of securing a new location for our Mission, making possible the holding of mid-week services.

Young People and Christian Education

By J. S. Schultz

The word education is so commonly thought of as meaning schooling, that it is necessary to warn the reader that it is not the number of days or years a person has been in school that determines his education. This holds equally for general education and for Christian education. Just as we find many a farmer or business man who is not only successful in his daily work but even very desirable and efficient as neighbor and citizen with a minimum of schooling, so there is many a Christian, who has a minimum of formal schooling yet is a tower of strength spiritually. Lest I be misunderstood, I hasten to say that I am not minimizing formal education in the schoolroom, for both day school as well as Sunday School. Much of education does come that way, but there are so many exceptions to the rule that we must not think of schooling and education as being synonymous.

Education Outside the Home

From the time of creation of man to this day parents have been responsible for much of what their children learned, and we cannot even conceive of a Christian society in any other way. After many centuries, however, it became necessary to supplement the influence of the home by formal schooling, and that has remained the basic aim of schools through the ages, namely, to do that for children or young people which the home or related agencies failed to do.

Some Observations

In a recent class in Christian Religious Education this total problem of how we become Christians and how we may "increase in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man," became so real to us that I thought I might well share a few observations and conclusions from that group with you as readers and fellow-seekers of these important truths.

As part of our study we asked ourselves the questions: (1) What are the aims or purposes of Christian education; (2) Which institutions or organizations are endeavoring to meet these aims or needs of children and young people in particular and with what degree of effectiveness?

As aims we accepted basically those set forth by De Blois and Gorham in their book, Christian Religious Education. In abbreviated form they could be said to emphasize the importance in a Christion of (a) conversion and a God-consciouness and fellowship with Him; (b) a complete and Christ-like personality together with a Christian life philosophy; (c) a social-consciousness, which includes an interest in and a sympathy for others and a rightful sharing of responsibility for the welfare of every group to which he belongs.

Of institutions or organizations entrusted with the holy task of bringing individuals to Christ the following were repeatedly listed: home, Sunday church school, vacation Bible school, weekday church school, summer retreats and assemblies, and Christian Endeavor. The several members of the class (and it may be of interest that one was a Japanese American) in their papers evaluating these organizations as means of Christian Education expressed themselves in part as follows:

"God-consciousness and a Christ-like personality can best be developed and a solid foundation can best be laid in a Christian home."

"Fellowship with God and with fellowman is especially stressed in the vacation Bible school."

"The Sunday School and the weekday church school can best interpret the Bible and teach youth in early life to live religiously."

"Some people go to Sunday School for social contact and to get more clothes to wear; such things should be eliminated by Christians."

"God-consciousness is almost unknown to many present-day materialists; only when we as individuals adopt Christ's ways and within ourselves have His Spirit can we utilize His teachings.—The parents' attitude toward God and other people are known to the family, and in this way the child is molded into a unified personality."

"In a program of Christian education I would make the Sunday morning church service supreme. On Sunday evening there could be a program similar to Sunday School in which well-qualified teachers would have charge and the sessions could be as long as desired. All outside amusements would be closed for Sunday evening, thus no competition. In this way a constructive program of Christian education could be carried on."

"The Christian home should be the center of all Christian education and also the laboratory for putting all teaching into practice."

"The home, I feel, must be the basis for all religious education."

"To teach youth to live religiously is primarily the duty of the home, for children follow examples, and who could be a better example for them than their parents with whom they are most."

"The basic institution of society is the home, and it is from here that we first obtain the fundamentals for the spiritual and the eternal.—To achieve this the parents must be consecrated Christians."

"The future of American Christian education depends largely upon the vitality, efficiency,and devoted consecration of parents in the home."

The Home and Personal Evangelism

If we drew evidence or testimony from no other source than this submitted by these students, we should be convinced that our homes are the key centers for Christian education. Insofar as many American homes are only nominally Christian and a still larger number are utterly devoid of Christ's Spirit or even knowledge of Him, I see but one solution and that is for the Church to make this one of its supreme obligations. In spite of the fact that we Americans are often ridiculed for organizing and appointing committees, it does seem that only an organized effort on the part of the Christian churches of any given community are in a better position to contact all of these homes through personal evangelism than any other available method. Such calls can bring words of neighborly friendliness and cheer, deeds of kindly help, invitations for children and adults to Sunday School and church services, and other forms of Christian fellowship; present reading material in the form of the Bible, parts of the Bible, devotional booklets, suitable tracts and leaflets; repeat visits for any kind of Christian service to suit the occasion. The best pulpit oratory will not bring these people into fellowship; newspaper and billboard invitations will not do it; spasmodic pre-Easter calls will not do it; all these will help but only a concerted effort on the part of the Christian churches can make all of these effective and should bring results. Such campaigns have proved their worth in some communities and seem to take the place of protracted meetings in church or tabernacle to which place some people just will not come.

Formal Education in the Home

The question of a total program of Christian education in the home has at least the following two aspects. The one that comes to mind immediately to all such folk as may read this article is that of family devotions. And the family altar certainly is basic. Prayer and Bible reading should be as much a part of the day's schedule as soon as a young couple establishes a home as three meals a day. These channels of spiritual insight and strength are essentials for young parents, for children from their earliest years, and remain such continuously for the family group and or individuals by themselves as tangible efforts and evidences in the direction of a Christian home. Almost as soon as the child learns to talk he learns to pray. While his conception of prayer is naturally very limited in these early years, these very simple memorized prayers help him to develop that God-consciousness referred to above. Very soon he is taught by his godly mother to add his own words of petition or thanksgiving and establishes a relationship with God and Christ which leads to his own acceptance of Christ as his personal Savior.

Informal Education in the Home

There is a second area of Christian life and education in the home not so common and more difficult for most parents in addition to family devotions, though in no way to be looked upon as a substitute but as a supplement to the family altar. I am thinking of those many occasional opportunities parents have for teaching both by precept and example that Christ is "the way, the truth, and the life." Though the morning or evening praper offers a wonderful opportunity to thank God for His protection, blessings, and strength for the day, the detailed experiences throughout the day lend occasion for father to call son's attention to this particular fact as it occurs; and mother can conveniently remind daughter that on an otherwise strenuous and trying day she (the daughter) has succeeded exceptionally well in showing such a fine cooperative spirit which she couldn't have done without Jesus' help.

As an illustration such spontaneous natural childlike expression of faith was shown by the lad, who when he sensed that the burdens of the day were threatening to overwhelm his mother, greatly comforted her and the family by quoting the Bible verse, "Endure hardness like good a soldier of Jesus Christ." Increasingly greater faith can be established in children if parents frankly testify to them the peculiar guidance the good Lord has given them in overcoming a temptation or being spared an unfortunate deal with someone. The child should be taught early to ask another for forgiveness for a wrong done him or her. The hardest among all these may be for a parent to confess to another member of the family the wrong done him, this before God and man. All of these, however, are absolute musts for the purest human and spiritual relationships.

The need of absolute genuineness in any such experiences before God and youth cannot be overemphasized. Should they come too often or flavor in the least of insincerity in the mind of young people, immeasurable harm can only result in the matter of spiritual growth. Many a well-meaning but indiscreet soul under misdirected zeal has driven away rather than attracted the child or youth to the riches of Christ and the great spiritual resources by either forcing acceptance or decisions, or by an overuse of words and phrases in religious matters instead of letting his life be the light that Jesus refers to at the close of the Beatitudes.

A DAY IN JUNE

What is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then Heaven tries the earth if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays.
Whether we look or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur, or see it glisten.
Then every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within it that reaches and towers,
Till, striving blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grasses and flowers.

RELIEF

Refugee Camp Gets Under Way

In a lengthy letter, dated April 18, Delvin Kirchhofer, Mennonite relief worker among Yugoslav refugees in the Middle East, related a number of his experiences. The following paragraph is taken from his letter:

"One can see slow progress has been made in getting the camp into working order. We have some more tools now and the work shops are gradually producing more and varied articles. Wood is extremely scarce in this part of the world and that is great handicap to us. This week we expect to get the shoe cobblers to work, also the gardeners to produce a few vegetables. By using water from the bath house as irrigation water and adding some Nile soil which we transport in, we think we can have a few things growing and we certainly have plenty of farmers who could be able and willing to do something for us in that line."

Relief Clothing Shipments

The Mennonite relief workers in the Middle East have requested for some time that a shipment of relief clothing from the Ephrata Depot might be sent into the Egypt area. Permission has finally been granted and shipping space allotted to send approximately ten tons in the near future. This shipment of clothing will be distributed by the relief workers among needy Yugoslav, Greek, and probably Polish refugees, who have been forced to flee hundreds of miles from their homes taking only things which could be carried.

A small shipment of relief clothing, about 800 pounds, is also being sent to Puerto Rico to be used in connection with the hospital at the Mennonite unit at La Plata. This shipment consists mostly of sheets, pillow cases, blankets, and other articles for use in the hospital.

C.P.S. Camps

C.P.S. NOTES

Congress and C.P.S.

At the time of this writing, two measures are before Congress that concern C.P.S. men. The first one has to do with the matter of using moneys from the frozen farm fund for the support of C.P.S. dependents. The "frozen fund" represents the accumulated wages of C.P.S. men who are on dairy farm service. The House Military Affairs Committee has reported favorably on a bill permitting the use of these funds for the support of the dependents of C.P.S. men. The bill has yet to pass both House and Senate.

The other measure is a rider attached to the Military Appropriations Bill. This rider is similar to the Starnes rider which was passed last year forbidding C.P.S. men to engage in foreign relief service. The Starnes rider expires June 30, 1944.

C. O.'s Featured in "Yank"

The April 21 issue of Yank, the weekly magazine of the armed forces, carried a full-page article concerning the work of C.P.S. men in Puerto Rico, titled, "Conchies in Puerto Rico." The article was objective in its viewpoint and rather commended the work of C.P.S. men in Puerto Rico. The following excerpts are taken from the article:

"Conscientious objectors are helping to bring medical relief to hundred of disease-ridden Puerto Ricans, and two of the conchies interned here have died while performing this kind of service. . . This is no time to glamorize young Americans who decline to fight for their country because war is against their moral principles, but the conscientious objectors are helping in a major engagement in America's backyard: a tough battle against disease. . . . By act of Congress, no appropriation may be made by the Federal Government to pay conscientious objectors. . . So it is little wonder that the average conchy is broke; he is sweating out the duration on $5.00 a month."

C.P.S. BRIEFS

Melvin Funk will serve as Assistant Director of the C.P.S. unit at Greystone Park, New Jersey, mental hospital, replacing Lawrence Burkhalter.

Goldie Gerber, Kidron, Ohio, has replaced the stenographical vacancy left by Rhoda Hess, who was transferred to the Canadian Office.

Ellen Harder, relief worker appointed for England, is acting as nurse-matron at the Sideling Hill, Penna., camp until the door opens for her to leave for England.

N. S. B. 101's Should be Returned Immediately

It has been requested that men about to be inducted into C.P.S., who receive the form 101 from National Service Board, should return the form immediately. The impression that the holding of this form will delay the time of induction is not correct. The assignment is made whether the form is received or not, and when the form is not received valuable information is withheld from both the N.S.B. and the Service Committee that would assist in the assignment.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Wilbur Nussbaum, Berne, Indiana

June 25—"Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." Acts 3:6. Peter had nothing to help this unfortunate man along in his crippled condition, but he did have something that would cure this condition. Today the church has been endeavoring to give men something to help them along in their helplessness instead of sharing with them the life-giving gospel which can make them walk. Spiritual healing is what men need and it is the glorious privilege of every Christian to share the unspeakable Gift with those outside the gate.

June 26—"And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." John 6:35 That "bread of life" is sent from God to the world, for the world, and whoever partakes thereof finds real life, eternal life, and satisfying life. Hence, Christians are not fed, spiritually, through ordinances, or religious services, or even doctrines however true and correct, but through the Person of the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Bread of Life.

June 27—"That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God." Eph. 3:17-19. The love of God is broad, including all men, Jew and Gentile. It is long, from eternity to eternity, throughout all ages. It is deep, being measured by the depth of His descent for us, a depth unfathomable. It is high, beyond the power of any foe to deprive us of it, and reaching to Heaven itself, to which we shall be lifted. We may now, as well as in eternity, enjoy the fullness of His presence by allowing the Holy Spirit to fill us with God's wisdom, holiness, knowledge, power and love, as they are provided for us in Christ.

June 28—"Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth. And for their sakes I sanctify myself, John 17:17,19. He who has already been sanctified John 17:17,19. H ewho has already been sanctiifed by the blood of Christ, set apart to God in all the value of Christ's finished work, is now called upon to walk in this world in holiness of life, a life of practical sanctification, daily being separated more and more from the things that are unclean, the things that are contrary to the mind of God. And this practical aspect of sanctification is by the Word of God.

June 29—"In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise." Eph. 1:13. Every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ is sealed. This seal is the Holy Spirit Himself. A seal signifies a finished transaction. There has taken place in every believer's heart a transaction which is full and complete. God has placed upon us His seal which is the Holy Spirit. He has "sealed us unto the day of redemption." Eph. 4:30.

June 30—"For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor powers, nor things, present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Romans 8:38,39. We who have trusted the Saviour have been set apart to Goc for time and eternity. "Who shall separate us fron the Love of God?" Rom. 8:35. There is nothing ir life and nothing in death that can separate us fron the love of God. Angels, principalities, powers, things present and things to come cannot sparate us from Hi love. Nothing in the height all the way up to Heaver and nothing in the depth all the way down to Hel can come between us and God. Nothing ever create shall be able to separate us from the love of Go which is in Christ Jesus our Lord! That is the kin of salvation every believer has, and the kind ever lost sinner can have if he will trust in Christ!

Race, Language, and Customs of Puerto Ricans

by Carl M. Lehman

"Black out, Black out," cried one Puerto Rican boy as he laughingly pointed to a darkie approaching us, "he is Black out."

And that is about the extent of race consciousness in Puerto Rico. Sixty-five per cent of the people are white, thirty per cent are of mixed blood, and only five per cent are pure negro. Occasionally we see an old man, or a woman, whose straight black hair and high cheek bones suggest traces of Indian blood, but other than that there is little left to remind us of the first Borinquenos, the people who lived here long before Columbus and Ponce de Leon ever set foot on the island.

Old Spain, while in her greatest glory and during the period of her greatest domination over Europe, furnished the stock from which most of the people now living in Puerto Rico descended. These people are Spanish. Their culture, their customs, their language—all are Spanish. Since 1898, when the United States Army took the island from Spain, an American culture and language have been superimposed upon the Latin culture. The Latin temperament has not been too well suited to the change and the Americanization process is slow. Even so, many regret that more and more New York, and not Spain, is becoming the style center for Puerto Rico—New York and Hollywood. Just as modern American architecture in the old capital city of San Juan jolts and jars one, and sticks out like a sore thumb in its setting of colorful and ornamental Spanish arches, so a great many of the styles and customs imported from America will probably never quite be in keeping with the dark hair and deep brown eyes and quick warmth of temperament so characteristic of these people. If on the other hand, New York customs ever put pants on the little boys who now wear nothing but small jackets not quite reaching down to the stomach, not all will have been lost.

Although there is no race consciousness in Puerto Rico as we know it in the states, there is, neverthelses, a real social advantage in having a light complexion. A mother would give almost anything to see her baby have light hair. A girl too is really beautiful only when her face is fair and her hair is light. Though that has its advantages in the States as well, it is not nearly so pronounced as in Puerto Rico.

A Puerto Rican government offcial told us that while studying on the continent in one of the southern states, he witnessed two negro lynchings. To him it was the most terrible thing he had ever seen and he could scarcely believe it possible in a civilized country. Such a thing is unheard of in Puerto Rico, for here white children play with negro children and their parents live on the same streets and work in the same shops. Race is not a problem in Puerto Rico.

Language

One day several of us boarded the bus for Cavey to Cidra. We crowded into the center aisle after giving up the only seat left to a lady, for giving up your seat to a lady is a quaint old custom which many men in Puerto Rico still cling to. Just preceding us was a group of youths, evidently heading for an induction center. They were celebrating the occasion as their custom is. They looked like a happy-go-lucky group, much more so than any other group of young men I had previously seen on the island. Each of them was carrying a bottle of cervesa (beer), and they pretty much monoplized the back end of the guagua. As the bus started on it careening way towards the narrow and winding road to Cidra, and as we were leaving the city of Cayey, the boys began singing. The first song they sang startled us a bit, for it was English, and an old standby at that—perhaps inspired by the cervesa—"Happy Birthday to You." Whether anybody's birthday in particular was being celebrated or whether it was just birthdays in general, was more than we could tell, but they sang it with gusto and with accent. But after that everything was in Spanish, one song after another, until we reached the Rincon center and left the bus. It was not the slap-stick, rowdy, hip-hip-hooray cut-up type of thing one finds when a similar group of continentals get together, but more of the folk-song type which one would expect to find in peasant Europe among groups giving vent to their feelings of festivity. One could almost imagine oneself in rural Spain or Switzerland, or even in the Balkans where once in happier days the people gathered at their festivals and from out of their souls burst into gay song and merry making.

The "Happy Birthday to You" is symbolical of the English spoken in Puerto Rico. English is taught in all the schools, in fact after about the sixth grade the texts are in English. But it is an academic English, taught generally by teachers who know little more than academic English. They pronounce words like they are spelled, which in English just isn't done, and the results are amusing. Since even the teachers talk that way, the mistakes are perpetuated. Grammar and sentence structure is Spanish even when English words are used. Such monstrosities as "I have angry with you" or "give for me five cents" are almost constantly heard.

It is probably true that we could get along in Puerto Rico without ever learning Spanish, though it would certainly be inconvenient at times. All children who have gone as far as the eighth grade know enough English that when you talk to them slowly they understand most of what you say. Most government officials, business men and clerks know at least a little English. It takes a while to learn to understand their English, but after hearing it for a while and learning to keep a straight face as they stumble through such words as "plumber," one can get along fairly well. But the real language of Puerto Rico is Spanish, and will be Spanish for a long time to come. We are trying to master the language, for we know that we can never get next to these people without being able to speak their own tongue. Everywhere in Puerto Rico I find that when I start talking in English and then switch to Spanish, I immediately and almost like magic make friends of clerk, business man or what not. There is a response that is like magic. All the ice is removed. Suddenly we are no longer salesman and customer, but two human beings talking things over and likely to make a mutual impression which neither of us will forget. I have gone back months later to the same store to find that the clerk would greet me with a hearty smile of recognition. The "Americano" who had tried to speak their language had not been forgotten.

Many Different Customs

There is an informality about the people of Puerto Rico that in a way is refreshing. There is a refusal or inability to separate into what we have in the States—a public formality and public awareness. There is an informality and all-in-the-same-family mindedness that permeates everything they do, whether it be operating a taxi, a guagua, a hotel, a resturant, a business or an amateur entertainment—either as operator, performer, customer or member of an audience. There is a friendliness and warmth in the smiles of little children that carries over into old age. They are human—as human as any people we have ever seen. They have their faults too—many of them. They are poor and weak from centuries of oppression, and now that there are so many of them, the island economy can no longer support them all.

I was walking down one of the side streets of the city of San Juan one day when I passed a house with a long narrow porch nearly jutting out into the street. On the porch I saw three little Puerto Rican boys playing "horse." Two of them were wearing nothing but their dirty little jackets, and the other one nothing at all. The two that were the "horses" were slowly crawling side by side on their hands and knees across the rickety old porch. A small rope was tied around a leg of each and the middle of it was tightly clasped in the small hands of the third boy, who was the driver. I had seen animals in Puerto Rico driven that way, with a rope tied to the bottom of a back leg. Evidently these babies had too, for there they were imitating, as boys will, the things they had seen. All three were ditry, but having a wonderful time speaking baby talk in Spanish and playing "horse" as best they knew how. Somehow I felt a bit queer about it as I thought of it afterwards. There was something about the way that rope looked with each end fastened to the leg of a little boy, and the way the little boys looked as they made their way across the floor of the old porch. Submissive?—yes, really more than that—they were enjoying it.

I thought of Puerto Rico and of her people. In spite of dirt and hardship, in spite of centuries of tyranny and hunger, lacking both bread and the food of the Spirit—these people somehow have managed to get along. Like little boys with ropes tied around their legs, they take life as it comes and make a game of it. They laugh and they cry. They work and they like to play. Usually they are very friendly and easy-going, but they are readily hurt and when hurt seldom forget. They live on a beautiful island with colorful mountains and hills, with green forests and sweet smelling flowers scattered along the roadside, silver rivers and deep valleys, rain and sunshine and cool breezes blowing every day. The blue waves by the seashore dash against the sandy beaches; the fields of sugar cane, coffee, pinapples, tobacco, oranges, bananas and platanos dot the hillsides and cover the plains along the coast. They have all these things, and much more—things that even music can not fully express and which must been seen and experienced to be fully appreciated and understood. Yet having all this beauty and much that is good and fine, they stil seem like little boys playing, with ropes tied to their legs and crawling along like horses. Somehow man was not meant to be that way.

Is the Mennonite Church ready with an answer? What will it be? Again and again we are told by government officials, by university professors, by the people themselves that what they really need more than they need anything else, is Jesus Christ. Thy need the power of God to transform their lives. The church has too long neglected them. The hour i late. As we labor among them in the La Plat Valley we hope above all else that someday soon the Mennonite Church will open a mission field here

We are doing what we can to help them. We are ving their little children milk to drink so their ıdies will have a chance to grow strong. We are aching them to play together and make some use their leisure time. We are opening a small ıspital so that when they are sick or badly hurt ey need not give up the chance to live and grow ıll and strong again. We are living among them ying to lay the best kind of a foundation for the y when there will be a church here. The people ıow that we are "Americanos." We hope to make e name "Americano" a respectable one among ese friendly people. Many of them also know as Mennonites. We hope they will always think Mennonites as a good kind of "Americano," and want them to know that the essentials of being Mennonite are the essentials of the Christian ith and the life in Christ. So whether there will a church here or not, we will want to keep on ing and working that way—but we hope there ll be a church.

El Divino Salvador

The Church in Mexico City that holds its services in old Catholic Church. All Church properties belong the Government.

Tonight we visited the Igelsia de "El Divino Salva- r" which is the Presbyterian Church here in the y. It is under the direction of Rev. Perez, a real ebrand. I'm afraid N.Y.C. Presbyterian would not re to sit in the same pew with these down here, t I think these are far preferable. I wish we could ve been together tonight. In the first place, the urch is in an ex-R.C. church. Since all church operties belong to the state, and the old Presbyterian urch had to be surrendered, the Government per- tted them to use this unused R. C. church. They re permitted to take out the "idols" and in the hes they put scripture verses. They were not per- tted to remove the altar, so here is a practically angelical church with an elaborate altar! The ople are of the lower middle class—no wealth as whole—but rather they look like almost a slum ss. But the church is spiritual and on fire. The mon was Spanish, but in spite of it I was able to enough so I know what he was preaching about. was Rev. 3:20 and the sermon was very simply en to a full church. No emotion but a lot of cerity. There was hardly what one might call an itar call" yet Rev. Perez had not more than finish- when the people streamed forward for salvation. I n't think I've ever seen an invitation, so short, so emotional, with such immediate and large results. talked to Rev. Perez after the service and he d us that we should have seen the morning ser- e—the church was packed, and great numbers came salvation. He said they are constantly coming. preaches a very simple Gospel sermon, and the ople are very hungry, and the Holy Spirit blesses and saves. There was a lot of the service—I mean much—I didn't understand, but yet I was pleased to see how much I could understand. I hope by the time I return that I'll be able to understand the whole msg. I'm so glad for the work the Presbyterians are doing here, and though denominationalism means but little, I'm glad to have met Rev. Taylor and Perez. I was also glad for the right hand of fellowship extended to us, Voth and I, as well as an invitation to you and me to come share in a new work in Mexico.

The Mexican Bus System

The buses of Mexico are of two grades—First and Second. The First is somewhat like our Greyhound. The "Segunda Clase" is terrible. It is very crowded and uses the theory that there is "always room for one more." Not only do people ride one of these buses, but small animals like chickens, pigs, ducks, etc. too. The "Flecha Rocho" (Red Arrow) became synonymous with bad transportation.

Name Cards became a necessity as a means of identification.

Visas, Pesos and a Xochmillico Ride

We've spent the whole day trying to get visas, and got two, one more in process, and one (Guat. is to be received after word from Guat. Government is received.) We got to Honduras and Paraguay. In the morning we tried street cars, but we were so continuously lost that in the afternoon we hired a taxi by the hour (2 hours for $10, pesos). Most of the consulates were closed, or something. I'm sorry we spent that $5 for the Paraguay visa in L. A., for here we got it without question. You should hear me talk Spanish to the consuls! It is really worth hearing!

These pesos are "the nuts." I'm forever dividing my prices by 5 to figure out how much we are getting jipped or what kind of a bargain we are getting. I really should tell you about our being taken for a ride at the Floating Gardens. Voth had heard of them and wanted to see them, so I was willing. So we went to Xochmillia where the gardens are. They are combed with canals and one can take a boat and ride through them. Well, the boatman saw us—and no doubt knew us for suckers—and said $8 (pesos) for the boat. Well, that seemed high, so he came down to $6 and finally told us his last price was $5 ($1 American). Well, that still seemed high, but we figured that we had gone all the way to Xochmillia, we might as well see what there was to see. We took our ride, saw but little. When we came back, we knew we had been suckers—but I didn't know just how badly we had been sucked in until tonight on the street car I saw advertised, "Rides—Xochmillico—pnmira Clan, 50 cents, seganda close, 30 cents!! Am I disgusted!

This PESO was given to me as Change. Up-country Mexico was short in metal change. When I bought some Pepsi-cola for 25 centavos, I paid for it with this Peso. It was torn in half, and half of it returned as a 50 cent piece. Ex. 1 x 4.83. (Caption with torn Peso)

RESISTING TEMPTATION

Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

HEROES OF THE FAITH

Song: Faith of our Fathers

Scripture: Hebrews 11:1-3 and Prayer

Leader: Young people want and need a faith. Especially today when the world is at war we need to have faith in something that makes us hopeful and then sure. A test to discover what young people have faith in is to notice what they are doing. Youth who are fighting and who have an absolute surety that the thing they are doing will achieve their fondest hopes have faith in war. Sometimes the faith of youth today is found in the governments of dictatorships—and sometimes even in the moving picture theater, where the things we hope for appear real before our eyes. The heroes of our faith become Bob Hope, Robert Taylor, or some other star.

To Christian youth, however, there can be only one faith worth achieving and that faith in God which is made perfect through faith in Jesus Christ. Of this faith there are many noble and exciting heroes—living in different centuries and speaking different languages.

This summer we are going to discuss six of them. Prepare in advance. Consult your pastor for material. Perhaps dramatize the life of one of them. They are: MOSES and ST. PAUL from the Bible; MENNO SIMONS and CHRISTOPHER DOCK from Mennonite history; and ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI and MARTIN LUTHER, from the Middle Ages and the Reformation.

Moses

Moses' life is a wonder-tale. His mother was a slave, a woman of the Hebrew colony that was engaged in cruel forced labor on one of the Egyptian Pharaoh's public works. Because the Hebrews multiplied in great numbers, all male babies were ordered to be killed. Moses' mother, in despair, hid him in the river rushes. The royal princess discovered him, engaged his own mother as nurse, and had him reared in the palace.

His Life. When he grew to be a man he was not a slave, but he had a real compassion for his people, and one day he killed an Egyptian for striking a Hebrew workman. Then he had to flee to the mountains, where he was received by a clan of shepherds. He lived many years with them and married the chief shepherd's daughter.

But God had chosen him to deliver his people, the Israelites, out of the hands of the Egyptians. He revealed Himself to Moses in the burning bush (Exodus 3:2). Although Moses was eighty years old at this time, he gained new courage, shrewdness, and above all, great meekness and obedience to God.

He meets his brother Aaron and together they seek freedom for their people from Pharoah. But Pharoah is stubborn and proud. He refuses their plea. Then the ten plagues are visited on the people of Egypt (have ten people find and describe these in Chapters 7-13 of Exodus).

Finally the Israelites are freed and Moses leads them across the Red Sea into the wilderness. Here he is to prepare them for life in the Promised Land. Here, too, God through Moses persents the people with the Ten Commandments (Exodus 20:1-17).

HIS TEACHINGS. The Ten Commandments: Memorize the shortened form: (1) Thou shalt have no other gods before me. (2) Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven images. (3) Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain. (4)Remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy. (5) Honor thy father and thy mother.
(6)Thou shalt not kill. (7) Thou shalt not comm adultery. (8) Thou shalt not steal. (9) Thou shalt n bear false witness against thy neighbor. (10) Thou sha not covet thy neighbor's house, nor his wife, nor h other property.

Questions

1. Compare Moses with some of our leaders toda
What makes him a great figure in history?

2. Did Moses seek his role as a great leader to ga honor, glory, and wealth for himself? Was his faith
God real and absolute?

3. How many of the Ten Commandments are practise by our nation as a whole today.

4. Imagine Moses living today. What would he like? What peoples living in bondage might he lead a better land?

5. Find out where Christ gives complete approval the Ten Commandments.

6. Who has been called "The Moses of the Menn nites?" Why? —Mrs. Donovan Smuck

HOW TRUE TO OUR FAITH

Faith is victory. Victorious over self, victorious in life, and victorious over death. Faith is an implicit trust in God and His plan of salvation. This becomes more real to us as we experience His love and fellowship. We grow in faith like a child who learns to walk. How uncertain was that first step, but what joy came to the little child when it trusted it's little legs to walk. As we grow in faith the stronger we become; the stronger we become in our faith the greater tasks God can call upon us to do. Faith then is simply to trust God for everything.

SECOND MENNONITE CHURCH

Beatrice, Nebraska

Elbert E. Koontz Is Ordained

Rev. Elbert E. Koontz, the newly elected pastor of the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, received his pastoral ordination in an impressive ceremony on Sunday June 4, 1944.

The ministers participating in this service were Rev. Walter H. Dyck, who based his sermon on the text, "A charge to keep I have." Rev. Jacob Wiebe read the scriptural charge to pastor and congregation, and Rev. H. Albert Claassen conducted the ordination installation service. The hand of fellowship was extended to the new pastor by the mentioned ministers and Rev. and Mrs. Clyde A. Koontz, the pastor's parents. Rev. Clyde A. Koontz also led in prayer and read the opening scripture passage. Rev. Elbert Koontz based his responding remarks on I Cor. 2:2, "For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified."

Following the morning service the congregation and visitors joined in a fellowship dinner at the local Chautauqua Park. Rev. Clyde A. Koontz made appropriate remarks, and Brother E. G. Wiebe, chairman of the church board, presented Rev. and Mrs. H. Albert Claassen with a token of appreciation from the congregation for the service rendered. The new pastor joined the church by hand of fellowship. Communion services were held on that Sunday evening. May God richly bless our pastor, and may we all work together for the furtherance of His cause and kingdom.—W.C.A. Corr.

ZION MENNONITE CHURCH

Souderton, Pa.

"Dr. J. E. and Mrs. Hartzler left for their home at Goshen, Indiana, on Tuesday morning after being residents of Souderton for seven months. During that time Dr. Hartzler was the Interim Pastor at Zion Mennonite Church, he serving the congregation and community well. Through his 29 sermons and 26 Bible lectures he offered the opportunity of learning in a few months what it sometimes takes a lifetime to understand.

During his stay, the church membership was increased by 24 and the debt reduced from $5,900 to $1,694.30, or a total reduction of $4,205.70.

Vital has been the benefit of his counsel and guiding influence in helping to secure Ellis Graber as the permanent pastor, who will begin serving Zion Church about September 1.

Dr. Hartzler also gave freely of his time to th community and to Hartford Theological Seminar where he lectured 128 hours during the past seme ter. Over 30 addresses were delivered by him b fore service clubs, at church conferences and oth public affairs in the Souderton community.

In appreciation for the Hartzler's coming Souderton, Zion Congregation presented Dr. Hart ler with a Bible and Mrs. Hartzler with a har bag as an expression of appreciation for the se vices of two very lovely Christian servants, wh have endeared themselves to the people of Zi and many others in the community."

—Madrid, Nebraska June 8: We were glad to add some improvements to our church. The floor has now been sanded and finished. A new porch floor has also been put in. By the coming Lord's Day we hope to have everything in order again so that we may worship there. This coming Sunday afternoon we will have special services with Rev. Sidney Correll, a great missionary speaker of Dayton, Ohio. This meeting is one of those held in connection with the Western Nebraska Minister's Fellowship which is held bi-monthly. A few weeks ago the pastor visited the C.P.S. boys in the Nebraska State Experiment Farm near North Platte.

—Army chaplains totalled 6,993 at the end of 1943. Of these 4,255 were in the United States and 2,743 overseas.

—The Eicher Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Noble, Iowa, had two weeks of Bible school this year. In May Rev. Orie Miller, pastor of a Mennonite mission in Peoria, Illinois, told us of some of the problems that a mission has in a war industry city. He also gave us a picture of the juvenile delinquency problem of Peoria.

—What's in a name? Selective Service reports that the name of a registrant from Nottoway, Va., is William Loves Peace. William Loves Peace asked for an I-A-O classification and, apparently impressed, his Local Board gave it to him. The army induction station, apparently even more impressed, rejected him entirely. We as a congregation are deeply indebted to them for the splendid work that they have done during their stay here. It has been a pleasure to have them here and to work with them. . . As a congregation we say 'Thank You'." The bulletin also states that Brother Paul Wenger, missionary on furlough from India, is to serve as supply pastor for several months. Brother Wenger was scheduled to begin his service on June 11. The church is working hard to erase its indebtedness. By June 4 a total $3605.70 had been contributed towards its payment, leaving $1,694.30 to be paid. The debt is all within the church. Regular evening services will be discontinued during June, July, and August.

—Sunday School visits Kauffman Museum: The Sunday School of the First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, visited the Kauffman Museum on the Bethel College campus on the afternoon of Sunday, June 11. The visit was a great success. Some of those who went through reported that they had not expected to see so many wonderful things. The large bird collection was of great interest to the visitors. The log cabin, which depicts conditions as they were when the Mennonites settled in South Dakota, was also of special interest to many. Among the many things enjoyed by the children were the old automobiles. Mr. Charles Kauffman, who for the greater part of his life, has worked exceedingly hard to create this museum, was there to tell the story of various things of interest. Since the group was so large Mrs. Kauffman and others acquainted with the museum also assisted in the tour.

Binders and combines are again whirling around and around the fields of yellow grain. God is giving man his daily bread. Yet hunger gnaws at millions in the low countries of Europe, Greece, India, and China. Even in the United States there are millions of sharecroppers and slum dwellers who lack fresh milk, eggs, vegetables, and fruits.

It is clear to us that giving relief to famine suf-Hardly. He has so made the world that it can produce enough food for all its people. He has made it possible for mankind to develop systems of transportation, communication, and storage that should eliminate the hazards of crop failures. God has prepared to feed all peoples, and He wants to do it. However, He needs obedient human beings to carry out his intention.

It is clear to us that giving relief to famine sufferers is an act of Christian mercy. It is not equally clear to us, however, that measures for the prevention of such famines are also acts of Christian mercy. Christians still have much to do in the way of cooperating with their Father who makes daily bread possible.

A group of churchmen has issued a statement relative to postwar treatment of Japan. It demands that Japan "give up all territory seized by her since July, 1937." Perhaps, some other nations seized territory before 1937. Shouldn't this also be given up? Or what are the rules for this game of "keeps" among the nations? Should churchmen forget about sins committed long ago but still unconfessed? A thorough change of heart seems to be needed.

The moderator of one conference which sat in session recently aptly pointed out that "The rule of love transcends parliamentary law." Parliamentary rules are indeed helpful for promoting orderly procedure, but the rule of love in the hearts of all concerned is most helpful.

Soldiers in the Pacific, according to news reports, frequently express surprize at the fact that they are not pounced upon and eaten by the natives. Instead they are treated hospitably by people who are gentle and loving. Maybe the soldiers ought to be surprised. Certainly it has not been armed might which has made these natives so gentle, loving, and hospitable. Strange that missionaries depend upon the love of God to make savages peaceful and that the governments of civilized nations depend upon armed force to make other civilized peoples peaceful. Of course, one wonders what would happen to these former savages were they to become industrialized and have cause to wrangle about tariffs, export markets, raw materials, and national prestige.

SAFELY HOME!

Inman, Kansas
June 17, 1944

Dear Friends:

In Psalm 126:2,3 we read the following, "The Lord hath done great things for them. The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad."

Looking back over the long ocean voyage which we have just made we have experienced this again, that he Lord truly hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad. As the time drew near for me to go home on furlough I hesitated to give my name for going home as I had no great desire to take that ocean voyage at this time. But I took the matter to the Lord in prayer and after awhile He opened the way or me to go, and He gave grace for the journey. Eleanor Thiessen and I had made all preparations to leave on the first ship after February 15. We were old to be all packed up and ready to leave on short notice. So we packed our trunks and waited at our tations until word came for us to come to Bombay. n the meantime I helped along with the work as much as I could.

By the end of March word came for us to be n Bombay by the first week in April. We left Champa on April 3, together with Mr. and Mrs. Thiessen and Dorothy Ann, for Bilaspur where we pent the night. Early the next morning we boarded he train for Bombay. Mr. and Mrs. Thiessen came with us as far as Raipur. The trains were crowded as usual and were hot and dirty. After we arrived we got our papers ready and made the other necessary preparations for the journey. Here too as we went about our business we felt the Lord's guiding hand. After about a week we boarded our ship for the homeland. We got on not knowing where it would take us, but we knew that eventually it would bring us to he homeland. We entrusted ourselves and those hat were with us into the Lord's keeping. We knew not what the journey might have in store for us, but he precious promises in Isa. 41:10; Isa. 43:2 were a great comfort to me. Though perhaps surrounded by dangers the Lord was with us, and He kept us and watched over us. The verse in Ps. 4:8 meant more to me at this time than ever before, "I will both ay me down in peace and sleep; for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety."

Our ocean voyage was quite comfortable and though we stopped at several ports we were never allowed off he ship all the forty days we were on there until we disembarked in the U.S.A. The food was very good and we received good treatment and good medical care where needed. The weather was very warm as we passed the equator and again quite cold when we were in Australia. The ocean was exceptionally quiet and peaceful throughout our voyage. It was a pleasant sight as we neared the shores of the U.S.A. on May 22. Though the ocean voyage was as comfortable as we could have expected it, I was thankful to get off and be on land again. Here too we encountered no difficulty and were well taken care of.

On our way home from Boston we stopped off at Quakertown, Pa., where we visited Drs. Bauman and family. Eleanor Thiessen went on to Bluffton for a short visit. In Chicago Rev. Neufeld met me at the station and took me to his home for supper. I left again that evening for home. I arrived at McPherson on May 27, in the afternoon. All my folks were there to meet me. Needless to say it was a happy reunion. My heart is filled with praise and gratitude for the Lord's wonderful leading and guiding hand. His protecting hand was over us, and we felt His presence with us as we journeyed over the dangerous waters. "The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad."

I thank you all for the many prayers that have ascended unto the Throne of Grace in our behalf. You have prayed for our safety and protection, and the Lord has graciously heard your prayers. To Him be the praise and the glory. —Eva Pauls

A. L. RUTSCHMAN TO BE ORDAINED

The Lord willing, our mission candidate, A. L. Rutschman is to be ordained on Sunday, July 9, 1944, at 2:30 P.M. as missionary to South America to go along with Brother and Sister G. B. Stucky soon after the conference session, unless the conference decides otherwise. Sister Mary Becker and perhaps a nurse will then also be sent.

Whether the service will be in the small Swiss church or in the larger Emmaus church near by will be definitely announced next week.

All mission friends are requested to participate in this service with their interest and prayer.

The Training of Our Ministers

Paul E. Whitmer

The world in which we live today is a wholly different world than it was fifty years ago. Let me cite a few examples. Fifty years ago the airplane, the radio, the automobile, hard roads, power machinery on the farms, free rural delivery of mail, the daily newspaper, the moving picture, rural telephones, centralized schools, rural and village high schools were not known in the community in which I lived. Fifty years ago there was not a single high school graduate in my home church. One man had been a rural school teacher in his early manhood. He was regarded as a highly educated man.

As It Was

The ministers in the churches in my community were selected from the lay membership of the church by vote of the congregation and sometimes by lot. The men chosen were usually outstanding men of good character, religious zeal, and sometimes they were born leaders and preachers of ability. On the whole, the leadership of the church was the best to be had in the congregation. These men did a fine piece of work in their day, and the church usually prospered. But would this same type of minister today serve the same congregation acceptably and helpfully?

Today

Many believe that the minister of fifty years ago in the average Mennonite church could not meet the demands of today as he did then. Why not? By means of the radio, the automobile, the picture show, the rural and village high school, the easy means of communication between the farms and the city, and the wide distribution of all types of reading material our young people are exposed to influences and impressions which were wholly unknown in my youth. The easy leisurely program of our rural Mennonite churches of fifty years ago and the meager preparation of our ministers for their important tasks as leaders, advisors, and preachers would not meet the needs of today. Today we have literally dozens of high school students and graduates in our Mennonite churches. Many of our churches have a considerable number of college graduates and professionally trained men and women in their membership. A neighboring village Mennonite church had forty-four college graduates in its active membership a few years ago.

Must Know His People

The minister must know the minds of his people to serve them successfully. Our Mennonite ministers of fifty years ago did know the minds of their people because they were one of them in background, training, and life interests. A minister who has not read the books which his young people read cannot understand their minds well enough to lead them successfully. A minister who has not had the opportunities to acquaint himself with the thought world in which his young people live cannot know their mental outlook, their plans, hopes, and purposes in life. Consequently he cannot successfully lead, advise, an shepherd them. For such reason as these our churche need ministers who have had at least some of the advantages and educational opportunities of their youn people.

Demand for Well-trained Ministers

Judging by the type of ministers that our churche are seeking when a vacancy occurs, it is evident tha our people are aware of the need of an adequatel trained ministry. The better trained men are usually first placed as pastors. Neither our churc leaders nor any committee or board of the churc can control the growing conviction that the traine minister will render better service on the whole tha any other type. You will be interested in the resu that you get if you list all the ministers called a pastors of our churches in the last ten years. Traine men are coming into our pulpits in an increasing number.

The Training That Is Needed

Where shall our Mennonite ministers get the training? All major Protestant denominations hav long ago discovered that they must train their ow ministers in order to have a harmonious leadersh in their churches, schools, boards, and other instit tions. No greater disaster can befall a denominati than a divided and controversial leadership. The on way that has been found to overcome this disast is to provide for the training of our ministers, mi sionaries, and leaders of church institutions in o own schools and colleges. Some schools thrive controversies. Their whole atmosphere is rife wi strife and discord, and distrust. Such schools a poor places in which to train our Mennonite minist who have constructive jobs to do in their own co gregations and denomination. Our ministers can on be trained with satisfactory results in our own scho and colleges under the guidance of consecrated a devout men and women who love their church a who are willing to serve it sacrificially and constru tively.

THE LORD JESUS CHRIST IS THE WAY

As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lo, so walk ye in him: Rooted and built up in him, a established in the faith, as ye have been taug, abounding therein with thanksgiving. Beware le any man spoil you through philosophy and vain c-ceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudimes of the world, and not after Christ. For in him dwe-eth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. And e are complete in him, which is the head of all prin-pality and power. Col. 2:6-10.

Civilian Public Service in Glacier National Park

By Lester Hostetler

Most of our Civilian Public Service Camps are avorably located so far as natural scenery is conerned. The boys in Belton, Montana, Camp No. 5, with their four side camps, are particularly lucky. They are working amidst some of the finest scenery in America, for Glacier National Park with its lakes, waterfalls, and glaciers, rugged mountain peaks, its ine road and trails, is unsurpassed for natural beauty. t. Mary Lake (see picture on page 1) where one f the side camps is located is only one of the many beautiful spots in the Park.

I do not know if the boys always appreciate the grandeur of their natural surroundings. It is of course one thing to go into the Park as a visitor or sighteer and quite another to be camped there for months and go out on the routine of work day after day, without pay, and with only imprisonment or military ervice as alternatives. The work is important to he welfare of the park, but it is not easy and not always interesting. Shoveling ground and lifting rocks s hard work, no matter if you are doing it on a beautiful mountain side.

Many of the campers are on fire duty, and all subject to call by day or night when fire breaks out. The prevention and control of forest fires has a high rating among all the different types of work that are assigned to conscientious objectors. Some of the men are engaged in keeping the highways open and the water courses under control. When I visited Belton the first part of June, Mr. Willard Unruh, educational director of the camp, and his wife, (the former Selma Dick of Mountain Lake, Minnesota) took me over Logan Pass on a government truck loaded with provisions for the men in the side camps. We passed through trenches of snow ten feet deep at places. Our boys had opened the pass just a few days previous to our trip, with tractors, bulldozers, and snow shovels. In many places there were rock slides over the roads. These had to be cleaned off, and the boys were out rain or shine, with shovels and trucks.

Some of our campers are not always sure that the projects assigned them are work of national importance, especially in view of the fact that only a comparatively few people visit the park during war time. Those who ask captious questions must remember, of course, that in the choice of work, men in Civilian Public Service haven't much freedom. According to the law, they can do only what the President of the United States designates as work of national importance. It makes no difference how great the need for help on farms, or how eager they are to do relief work among suffering people in war-stricken countries, they cannot engage in such tasks unless approved by the President. In time of war, very few of us have freedom to do what we most like. This is true of soldiers as well as civilians. It is one of the prices we pay for having the country at war.

A number of men in side camps in Glacier Park are engaged during late spring and early summer in doing work for the entomological department of the forestry service. Specifically, their task is to grub gooseberry and other bushes which are the carriers of insects and fungus diseases that kill valuable trees in the park. This type of work requires a far look into the future to assess its value. The immediate benefits are not so evident, but generations to come will be blessed by it. The government already has spent many millions of dollars in Glacier National Park and apparently is determined to preserve its beauty and resources even though there is a war to be won.

It was gratifying to learn of the cordial relations that exist between our boys in camp and the park service officials under whom they work. After I had given an address to the group in one of the side camps, I invited discussion and questions and suggestions. One of the government officials said he wished me to know that in his opinion the men working for him are of a very high type, that even though they work under difficulties sometimes, he has heard almost no complaining. He said he never worked with a finer group of men, and that he is more than happy to work with them. I was encouraged with this testimony. Without being self-conscious about it or in any way trying to be moral heroes, these men are proving themselves salt of the earth and a light to the world. Their spirit has a salutary effect upon their associates. I have often thought that we owe it to C.P.S. that many men in government positions who never knew what a consicentious objector was like and couldn't tell the difference between a Mennonite and an Ammonite or a Hittite are now finding us out. In many cases they live in camp with our men, eat and sleep with them, and occasionally play ball with them. They may not understand our position on war, but they size up our boys as good fellows who do honest work, live decent personal lives, and take their religion seriously. They invariably respect them and speak well of their work.

The present crisis drives us out of our self-contained, walled-in communities to make new contacts with the outside world. It is a sort of captivity in which our young men are conscripted to go places and do things not of their choosing. The Babylonian Captivity of the Hebrews was all of that and infinitely worse. But it resulted in some of the profoundest thinking and gave birth to some of the most significant literature in Jewish history. Out of C.P.S. will come good things for the future of the church. The men in camps are making the most of the situation.

There are many evidences of spiritual growth and maturity among them, and we believe that their return to civilian life will mean a quickening of the spiritual life of the church.

One more word concerning so grand a place of natural scenery as Glacier National Park. Nature itself does not lead to God. From nature alone we should never have learned the nature of God. Only Christ can reveal God's purpose and character. A mountain may be a place of prayer or of temptation, depending upon the purpose and character of the individual. Our national parks reveal the majesty of creation, but they are not known primarily as centers of religious worship. They are often escapes from true worship. Their chalets, their dining and dancing places are often centers of vice and debauchery. Yes, our boys in Glacier Park are fortunately situated. But only as they live in Christ who called them will they rise above the feeling of servitude to the state. As captives of Christ, they can serve with gladness the Lord of Creation who made all things good and beautiful.

From Whence Freedom?

By Melvin Gingerich

Many a time I have listened to patriotic orations delivered on our national holidays. Often the speakers have insisted that all the liberties we hold dear have been won for us by the sacrifices of those who gave their lives on the battlefields. The implication was that only through the many wars of history has the human race been able to free itself from terrible bondage.

It may be that many are convinced that these arguments are entirely correct, and although the thought of war is repulsive to them, they conclude that past wars have been necessary and that since they personally are enjoying the freedoms of a democratic society, it would be unbecoming on their part to question the wisdom of their country's wars. Some who can not bring themselves to participate in warfare even concede the point that others are fighting their wars for them.

It it correct to assume that before men attempt to fight for freedom, they have become convinced of the desirability of freedom. What is the source of this desire for freedom? Is it generally stronger in military groups than in civilian groups? It is usually conceded that the military mind leans towards authoritarianism and away from democratic, civil liberties. Armies are run on an authoritarian and not on a democratic program. One would scarcely expect, therefore, that a program for the extension of human freedom would fare as well in a country at war as in a country at peace.

We as Christians contend that the most basic work in the creation of the desire for human freedom has been done by the Christian church. The real battle for freedom, then, is a spiritual battle and is won in the human mind when Christ's vision of the sacredness of human personality has gripped the individual. For people who have this vision

"Stone walls do not a prison make Nor iron bars a cage."

A John Buyan, and a Paul in prison had more genuine liberty and freedom than the jailers outside the locked doors, for they had experienced these words: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free;" and "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

We believe, therefore, that unless people have inner, spiritual freedom, they do not possess genuine liberty. Wars may change political institutions, but they cannot bring the kind of freedom concerning which Jesus spoke. And when we once have this freedom, outward circumstances can not take it from us. We must remember that Jesus lived under a totalitarian government and that the Christian church has during most of its history succeeded in growing under authoritarian governments. We believe that the church has advantages under democracy that it does not possess under other governments, but we do not admit that Christianity and democracy are synonomous. It would follow, therefore, that by far the greatest contribution any of us can make to the cause of human liberty is witnessing to the reality of our Christian experience.

It may be that certain good results have come out of war, for "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee." But having admitted that point, it does not follow that the good coming from any war in history has outweighed the bad. Nor does it follow that the good results could not have been obtained in a better way than through wars.

England and the countries of Latin America got rid of slavery without a civil war and many are persuaded that the same thing could have been done in the United States. It is entirely conceivable that the thirteen colonies could have obtained a desirable position without engaging in a Revolutionary War. As the historian studies the events leading to this war, he is convinced that right was not all on one side and wrong exclusively on the other. It is possible to argue that England was not tyrannical and that her laws to which the colonists objected were all legal. It is possible to show, too, that one of the major causes of the War was the false interpretation the American Protestants gave to the extension of Quebec and the Catholic Church into the Ohio valley.

It should be noted that only one-third of the Mission Field at Great Deer

Laird, Saskatchewan
March 9, 1944

Dear Mission Friends:

The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. You asked me to report on the work at our Mission Field at Great Deer, Saskatchewan. Praise be to the Dear Lord that he has blessed us in the work in the year 1943. We have had no outward growth in the church. The Sunday Schools were held as ever with a good attendance, and in the church as a whole, it was good. As much as I know there are six young men called for service. One is serving in the army and the others are C.O's., but are not yet in camps. Three of them have families. It will be hard for these families for they are very poor.

We observed the Lord's supper twice a year. Your question is, if we planned something for Easter. Not so far, but my plan is to hold Revival meetings next week for six days. Please pray for a blessing. The Lord willing I will go there tomorrow and preach the six evenings, and make home to home visitations. Two weeks ago, I was there two days and did visiting work. We had some clothing along and gave them to the poor. They were very glad to get some help. Four souls accepted Christ as their personal Savior in one evening.

You ask if we have evangelistic meetings. Yes, every year before we start a Catechism class, but if there are none to come to be baptized we have no catechism class. The evangelistic meeting we have one week each year.

The Sunday Schools have something with the children once a year. We have had two weddings in 1943.

How many are in service? There were two but one had been in camp and could come home and the other one is in the service, and four are still at home. Three of them have families.

We were very glad to have Rev. J. J. Esau in the Great Deer Church in the summer. Fifteen young boys and girls were saved. Praise the Lord for the blessing at the same time. We have had a Thanksgiving Day service and the church was filled with people.

You ask for a snapshot. I will send one of myself. Will you please hand it to your missionary society to remember me at my birthday on March 21, when I am 68. Please pray for me and the dear mission work.

Yours in the Master's Service

MY CROSS

I thank Thee Lord for sunny skies
  Thy love and mercy which never dies
And the cross that has been given me,
  As it brought me so much nearer Thee.

Without my sorrows and my woes
  I may have never sought repose
In Thy divine and comforting heart;
  Dear God, more of Thy truths to me impart.

Thou knowest my failings; please help me to be Daily, more and more like Thee;
Forgiving the wrongs that come my way,
  And being more kind to those who stray.

Dear Savior, do I seek forgiveness of Thee?
  Were it denied me, how wretched I'd be:
So a forgiving heart awaken in me
  That I may take up my cross and follow Thee.

GOD AND ATROCITIES

Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance in mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. Rom. 12:19-21.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

Rev. Howard G. Nyce, Allentown, Pa.

July 1—"Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven"—Matt. 6:10. Read Matt. 6:1-15. The text is taken from the prayer commonly spoken of as The Lord's Prayer. Many people would have us believe that in due time the kingdom of God will be ushered in through their moral efforts. The fact is that those who have not been "born from above" will not be included in Christ's kingdom. True, the kingdom of God will be established, but it will be for God's people only. His will can not be done in earth as it is in heaven by ungodly people. Are you a child of God? If not, you can be by accepting Christ's finished work on the cross for you. Why not let Him come into your life now?

July 2—"Blessed are the peace makers: for they shall be called the children of God." Matt. 5:9. Read Matt. 5:1-16. When we speak of peace, we must be careful to reveal just what we mean. Do we mean God's peace, or are we speaking of peace as the opposite of war? Certainly the text would not imply that ungodly leaders of nations will become the children of God when they strive to make peace between nations at war. A person does not become a child of God by DOING a good work. The child of God is anxious that all people may have the Peace of God which will be the result of having made Peace with God. This peace is ours when we have accepted Christ as Saviour and Lord.

July 3—". . . Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt 18:3. Read Matt. 18:1-10. That is a big order, a great man to become as a child. No, beloved, it is not a big order when a great man has been converted. He is a great man in the sight of God when he becomes like a child. Apart from God, he may think he is great, but he really is not. "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God" and all need to come to God by the way which He has provided.

July 4—"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." Galatians 5:1. Read Gal. 5:1-15. This is Independence Day. How we rejoice in being a free people. Paul was saying to the Galatians, "Ye are a free people." Do not insist on keeping the law, for if you feel you should keep part of the law, you must observe the whole law, and even then it is meaningless. Thank God, that we are saved by grace through faith. Yet is it not true that many people whom God had set free because their sins had been forgiven are living as though they were again under the bondage of sin. Are you happy in the service of your Lord, or have you chosen to be a servant of sin?

July 5—"Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling be glory and majesty." Jude 24,25. Read Jude 17-25. We rejoice with Paul who said, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift" but we also praise God for the words of Jude as quoted in the text. Yes, of ourselves we would make a complete failure of ourselves. Over and over we would yield to the tempter, but when we "keep ourselves in the love of God, He will keep us from falling." Paul experienced the conflict of that dual nature with which we all have to do as long as we are in the flesh. But blessed be God we "are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time."

July 6—"Fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine." Isa. 43:1. Read Isaiah 43:1-7. Dear heart, do you know that God has said that of you? True He loved Israel with an everlasting love, but on Calvary's cross He paid the price in full to redeem you. In I Cor. 6:17,18 we read, "Wherefore come out from among them, (the ungodly), and be ye separate saith the Lord, . . . and I will receive you, an will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

July 7—". . . As long as he sought the Lord, Go made him to prosper." II Chronicles 26:5. Read II Chron. 26:1-15. This is a very interesting accoun of how God prospers the man who puts his trust in the Lord. What was true of Uzziah, is equally tru of us today. The man who has not prospered is the man who trys to worship God that he migh prosper. It doesn't work that way. If on the othe hand, a man loves the Lord God in all sincerity and thinks only of pleasing Him, that man wil prosper.

July 8—". . . When he was strong, his heart wa lifted up to his destruction: for he transgresse against the Lord his God." II Chronicles 26:16 Read 16-21. How often have we seen people wh look to the Lord for help and strength in time o trouble and want. We have seen that God wa faithful and supplied the need. Later, during th time of prosperity, the very same individuals turne their faces away from God. What was the reason They have come to the place of sufficiency in them selves. In other words, they were getting along al right. Yes, the word of the text is appropriat they became strong, their hearts were not lifted u to God, but instead were lifted up to their ow destruction.

"Eyes They Have, Yet They See Not"

Ruth Ewert

Sad, isn't it, how few of us really see with our yes. Many, many years ago the prophet Jeremiah ttered these words when he saw the blindness of he people. That was a long time ago, but even in ur "modern" day there are but few who see with heir eyes, hear with their ears, and understand.

The Beautiful Out-of-doors

God's beautiful out-of-doors is too frequently taken or granted. The beautiful flowers, the soft grass, he shady trees overhead, yes, even the pebbles under ur feet are a part of God's handiwork. They are efore our eyes every day, but how often do we pause n recognition and adoration to our Heavenly Father ho made them. How often do we look overhead o see the birds with their beautiful plumage? No, hese things do not attract us as much as man's inentions. The noisy airplane causes many an individal to strain his eyes just to see whether he can not dentify the plane, but few there be who would exend so much energy to identify a bird flying swiftly nd quietly overhead. We admire the shiny new ar whizzing by as we travel on the highways and note he ads on huge billboards, but seldom marvel at he cattle grazing along the roadside. Isn't God's ature a far more marvelous creation to behold than an's inventions and accomplishments? Yes, most f us have that powerful, although small, organ called he eye, but we see not the beauty of God's handiork.

Eyes for the Good

Strange as it may seem, when others make mistakes ur eyes open at once and we see the error as through microscope, full size and perhaps enlarged many imes. Yet how dim are our eyes and how blurred ur vision when it comes to seeing the needs of our ellowmen. We have, as it were, "shut our eyes and annot see." (Isaiah 44:18) Yes, we have shut hem so we cannot see because we do not want to see. o many it is much more comfortable to keep their yes closed to the needs of our own churches, missions, chools, camps, hospitals, etc. We make excellent eyewitnesses" as well as "broadcasters" when it omes to criticizing our fellowmen for a wrong he may ave done or a contribution he may have failed to ake. Why could we not rather be "eyewitnesses" and "broadcasters" of the good in others? We will see the good in them if we look for it. Perhaps all they need is a word of encouragement, a warm handclasp, and a friendly smile. How quickly can you and I discern the needs of others? Let us not be responsible for having caused anyone to bury his talents instead of having helped him to use them for the Master. There are endless opportunities for doing good right among our fellow workers if we will but open our eyes to see them.

O Jesus, Open Our Eyes

What our physical eye sees depends largely upon what our "spiritual" eyes sees. Can we say with the Psalmist, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help?" Our prayer should be, "Open our eyes O loving and compassionate Jesus, that we may see to follow thee" as the song so well expresses. We should learn to see things as Christ would see them, but perhaps our Master is keeping things hidden from our eyes simply because we do not ask to have our eyes opened. We cannot expect to see everything at once, but He will reveal His will to us step by step. We must take his Word as "a lamp unto our feet and a light unto our path."

Fields White Unto Harvest

Yes, we need a vision for the present as well as for the future. Today is the time to prepare for tomorrow, but we need to meet the needs of today, today. We need not wait until after the war to help alleviate suffering and bind up wounds; we have opportunities to do that today. We need not wait for opportunities to proclaim Christ until we can go to some foreign land; look at the fields white unto harvest right around you. If you cannot seem to see God's plan for your life, ask Him to open your eyes. Saul's eyes were opened and surely the Lord will open ours. In order to keep our spiritual eyes open we must study the Word of God. We must not only see it; we must try to understand it by faith and believe that it will come to pass.

In such a time as this when laborers are few, let us pray God that our eyes might be opened so that we might show our love and admiration for Him by taking advantage of the opportunities for service which come our way every day, no matter how great or how lowly they may be.

The Lord Answers Prayer

The other incident—Monday the Guat. Consul sent a cable to Guat. for permission for our entry to Guat. It was to have arrived this a.m. P.A.A. told us we must have it if we want to leave tomorrow. Well, the cable wasn't returned this a.m., nor had answer been received when I called at 12 noon, nor at 3:30. Well, after the above record experience, I came home about 4 p.m.—somewhat concerned about the Guat. affair. I knew if the cable didn't come, the Lord must have some reason for it. Being concerned about it, I knelt in prayer and prayed definitely that His will be done and that He should guide us, especially guide in regard to the visa. I then felt somewhat relieved. At 4:45 I again called the consul, and he reported our cable and permission had come. We immediately went over to the Consul, and when we arrived, he told us that we were very fortunate—in that, out of four cables sent, our was the ONLY ONE answered. He said an American woman sat in the office all afternoon waiting for her reply, but her's didn't come. I believe the Lord did this—I can't believe that things "just happen," but rather, "before we call, He will answer."

The City of Rafts Became a Garden

Fifteen miles out from Mexico City are the Floating Gardens of Xochimilco. You've doubtless seen pictures of this wondrous water-garden—but you may not have heard of its strange beginnings. Six hundred years ago Xochimilco was a lake. Indians, seeking protection, built a settlement of homes on separate rafts, propelled about the lake by oars, and drawn together for defense. These rafts were constructed of branches, reeds and generous layers of mud. With the passage of time, growing things on the rafts took root on the bottom of the lake so that now rafts are land and the lake "streets."

Our first plane ride was from Mexico City to Guatemala City. About 1000 miles. Sept. 30, '43.

Money

The money exchange in Guatemala is 1 x 1. This is the only completely independent Latin American country with a 1 x 1 exchange.

Guatemala

Guatemala is the chief commerical country of Central America. It has a land surface of 45,452 square miles.

Guatemala City, the capital, is set on a plateau of 4,880 feet above the sea level. Its surroundings of green hills and volcanoes are strikingly beautiful.

Of the numerous volcanoes two only are still active. Fuego (12,581 ft.), erupted in 1932 and is still smoking. A new and active vent in the volcano Santa Maria burst out in 1902 and gives continual evidence of activity; it is close to Quetzaltenango.

Temperatures depend mainly on the altitude. Most of the population lives at altitudes between 3,000 and 8,000 feet, where the climate is healthy and of an even springlike warmth.

Population: 3,283,209, of these 66 per cent are Indian. The rest are ladinos (mixed blood).

Language: Spanish and Indian.

YOUTH RALLY

By Erna Davis

A combined youth rally was held by the Herald and Sichar Mennonite churches on the evening o May 29, 1944. The rally was held in the Flynn School where a banquet was served to the young people of the two churches and their friends by the Ladies Aid.

The topic of the youth rally was "The Christian and the World." Rev. Noah Unruh, toastmaster o the banquet, opened the evening by asking Otto Pankratz to present to the young people the purpose o the youth rally.

While the main course of the meal was being served the following program was presented: Duet by Mrs Alfred Schmidt and Lula Schmidt, Testimonies and Scripture verses were given by various young people present. A song was presented by Ester Kliewer and Elvera Kliewer. A Bible quiz was held by the toastmaster. Quartett by Ernest Bergen, Otto Pankratz Fred Schmidt, and Menno Schmidt. The after dinne address was given by Rev. H. N. Harder, Geary Oklahoma. Rev. Harder presented the problems o the Christian in his relationship to the world an worldly amusements and his relationship with hi fellowman. Duet by the Holliman brothers. A round table discussion was led by Rev. Menno H Kliewer at which time questions which had been submitted by the young people were discussed. Th close and dismissal of the evening was given by th toastmaster.

It was very much regretted that Rev. C. B. Friese was unable to attend the youth rally due to th illness of Mrs. C. B. Friesen.

A recreation hour led by Rev. H. N. Harder, basket dinner, and an afternoon program were planned for the following day in the groves. Due to hard rain, we were unable to have the planned even

All the young people present expressed their e joyment of the youth rally and requested that even of this nature be held again at later dates. We fin that it helps to bring the young people of the com munity closer together and affords them Christia recreation as well as a spiritual blessing.

We wish to encourage all Mennonite youth to pla to have informal Christian social gatherings in the communities and we believe that they will find favorable a response as we have.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—The Western District Young People's Retreat will convene at Camp Wood from July 24 to July 28. The theme of the retreat is "Toward a Greater Loyalty." Course 1 is entitled "Toward Greater Loyalty in Every-day Living." It will deal with vocational choices, community activities, home reationships, and life's ultimate goal. The name of course 2 is "Toward Greater Loyalty to God's Word." Course 3, entitled "Toward Greater Loyalty to the Church" will present an appreciation of the past, a look at present problems and the future. Rev. David Wedel of Halstead will be the director of the retreat. A large number of capable leaders are being secured for the various courses and activities. Plan now to attend the retreat.

—The Western District C.E. Convention will meet mmediately after the retreat, July 29-30. The convention theme is "The Christian's Relation to the Church." The convention will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Memorial Hall, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas. Talks will be given on "Young People in Relief Work," "Young People in C.P.S. Work," and "Young People in Mission Work." There will also be a talk on the subject "The Relation of he Young People's C.E. to the General Conference."

"A separate meeting is being planned for the uniors and will be held at the same time as the young people's session on Sunday afternoon. A special speaker will be secured for this program. All junior sponsors are urged to be present and are asked to bring their juniors with them.

The annual business session will be held on Saturday evening. Every society should elect its delegates —one delegate for every twenty members or fracion thereof. This is the year for the election of a new president and a new convention program committee. Two new retreat committee members are to be elected and also a young people's repreentative to the council of the General Conference Young People's Union.

Registration will begin at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and the registration fee will be 25c. Furher announcements will be mailed to every C.E. ociety. The detailed convention program will also be published."

Unit in P.R. Starts Community Paper

A mimeographed community paper, "El Heraldo", has been started by the Mennonite Unit at La Plata. The paper is written in Spanish, and Justus Holsinger is the editor. Unit members write their contributions in English and then meticulously translate them into Spanish. Members from the Puerto Rican community also contribute. The paper was begun to provide expression for the educational program of the unit. The first issue was received with considerable interest.

Relief Worker Visits C.P.S. Camps

Lois Gunden former Mennonite relief worker in France, has given considerable time within the past months to lecturing in C.P.S. camps and units throughout the Mid-West. Her talks related to her experiences in relief work in France and her internment in Germany. One camp reports on her visit as follows: "Her talks led some of the men to see that relief work may involve small every day tasks among a very small group."

New Guinea-Pig Experiment Begins

Recently, sixteen men from the C.P.S. camps at Grottoes, Luray, and Sideling Hill reported to Pinehurst, North Carolina, as members of a 45-man medical experiment unit. The men have turned themselves over as "human guinea pigs" for medical research with a typical pneumonia. The experiment will last at least four or five months. This project, like the Mennonite unit at the University of Illinois, is under the administration of the Office of Scientific Research and Development.

MINISTERIAL ORDINATION

(The following statment on ministerial ordination was discussed by conference boards and committees in joint session this past spring. Since it will very likely come up for discussion at the conference session in August, we herewith present this statement. —Editor)

The Christian Ministry at home and abroad is of such vital and far reaching importance that the best which anyone can bring to it is none too good. Such work demands a deep and humble consecration to God. It also requires a sound understanding of the needs of people in all walks of life and the problems which they must face. This requires preparation of body, mind, and spirit, so that one can walk among men and see them as nearly as possible as God sees them. Finally, it also requires the approval of others who are also interested in Christian work and its possibilities. This approval, so far as the Christian Ministry is concerned, is usually expressed by some form of recognition or ordination by the church.

Thus far our Church has placed its emphasis on a meaningful ordination service rather than upon uniformity of qualifications. Our Foreign Mission Board and several of our District Conferences have, however, undertaken to set up certain standards for those who are to be ordained. A study of this important question leads the Board of Education to make the following suggestions:

1. Any person looking forward to ordination for Christian work needs to be a consecrated Christian who feels the call of God to do the work of a minister of Jesus Christ.

2. Young people who expect later to work in our Conference, at home or abroad, are urged to attend our schools so that their training will be in line with Mennonite faith and practice, and that they may become acquainted with those with whom they are to work.

3. In the light of the needs of our time, which call of an increasing measure of general training, it is recommended that, if possible, a general college course or its equivalent be completed before ordination. Further special training for Christian service at home or abroad is recommended wherever possible.

4. Ordination should take place only after a person has been appointed to a definite field of service.

5. Before ordination, the candidate should have served for about one year in a church, or churches, under the supervision of some constituted conference or church authority.

6. Letters of recommendation regarding the candidate, his work and his fitness, should be available from each of the following:

   a. The school the individual attended, including a transcript of high school, Bible school, college, and seminary courses; other pertinent records from school files pertaining to health, mental tests, personality traits, extra-curricular activities, and so forth.
   b. A statement from the candidate's home church indicating his standing as a church members.
   c. A statement from the church or station at which the candidate has last served, regarding the type and quality of his services.
   d. A statement from a recognized physician regarding the candidate's health.
   e. A brief autobiography together with a statement of the candidate's Christian experience leading to his call to the ministry.
   f. A written statement from the candidate as to his agreement (1) with the Statement of Faith adopted by the General Conference, (2) with the Mennonite peace principles, and (3) with the work of our Conference, its Boards and institutions, and his willingness to support the same.

7. Each Congregation, District Conference Committee, or General Conference Board, after having obtained all above records and papers, is urged to arrange for a personal interview with the candidat before deciding on or making arrangements for hi ordination.

8. It is recommended that a candidate for appointment pursue a reading course suggested to him b the Board of Education in consulation with othe Boards and confer with the Board of Education regarding arrangements for supervised practical experience in church work. The candidate shall suppl the Board of Education with a complete record of a material pertaining to his qualifications.

9. The ordination proper is to be performed prefe ably in the candidate's home church or congregatio he is then serving, by the proper church or confe ence authorities, or in connection with a District General Conference meeting.

OUR HOME IN THE CHACO

By Mrs. John R. Schmidt

A home is a home wherever it may be, but we hink it is even more so after months of waiting and atching and in the midst of the impossible Chaco a foreign land.

From November till April John and I managed ery nicely in a very small two-room house which ad at one time been a hospital for the Chaco Inians. But all the while we were watching with ancipation the building of our "home," which was oing on directly in back of the little house.

In Appreciation

The colony had decided several months before our rrival here to provide improved living quarters for s, planning a nice, large burnt brick building with ecial conveniences. These improvements were not lanned only to give us the conveniences that the ome provides, but also to act as an influence for s to stay longer. The walls were already up when e arrived, so that we thought that surely by Christas we would be living there, but we are living in e land of "manana" (tomorrow). Sometimes for eeks on end nothing would be done on the building. aterials are hard to get here and perhaps they had wait over a month for some material that had iven out. And so we waited, but not in vain. As e days went by, we thought of one thing and anther that we would like to incorporate into our home. First we asked for a back door, and with it came the idea of a screened back porch, which is unknown here. The arrangement of the porch gave birth to the idea of a cistern, which opens on the porch, so that we have our water very handy. We draw it up in a bucket. Then came the built-in closet in our bedroom. We also had a fireplace built which fills one corner of the living room and makes the room cosy on cool evenings.

The New House

The house itself is about 45 x 18 feet in size, located on the hospital grounds, in the town of Philadelphia. It is the only one built of burnt brick in the colony, an improvement to their usual adobe brick buildings. The interior has four rooms with the two porches. Our large bedroom is to the west; in the middle is the living room, and to the east are two smaller rooms, one the guest bedroom and the other the kitchen. An unusual feature about our kitchen is that it is in the same building with the rest of the house. Usually these people have their kitchen off in another building and maybe the dining room in still another, so that the food has to be carried back and forth. Their stoves are built of mud brick and throw off much heat so that they like to have them separate from the rest of the house. We were very fortunate to get a wood range here in the colony which fits nicely into our small kitchen.

Tile Floors and Electricity

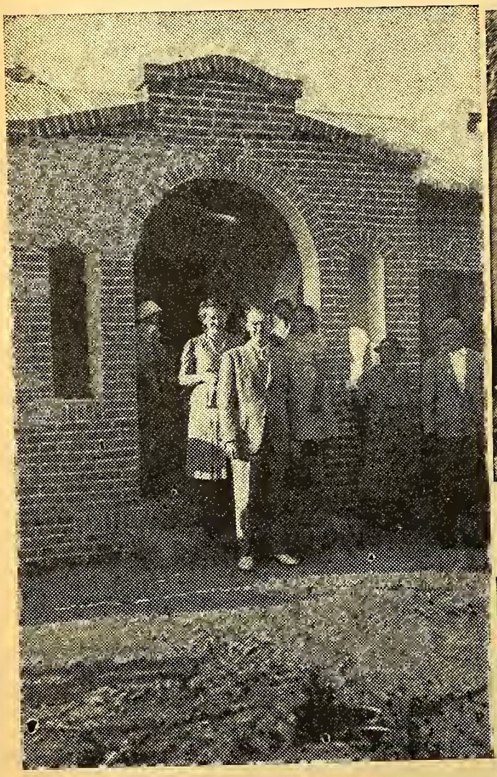
All of the rooms have tile flooring, and we say it with emphasis, because usually floors here are plain dirt mixed with cow manure, smeared once a week to keep them in shape. The walls are finished with chalt paint, tinted pink, brown, and gray. The windows are all screened, and the living room also has glass windows. The whole house is wired for electricity. All in all, it is a nice place to live. We feel that it is much like the homes we find in the States, not as if we were very far removed from the same. But we keenly feel the difference between it and the homes in which the colonists live. I have already given some of the major comparisons. They are a recently settled people, who have thus far had to eke out a bare existence. They live in very plain houses, the women, as well as the men, spending many of their days in the fields, working. Then with large families, little of attraction can be expected in their homes. Now that they are having another fine cotton crop, which is their chief harvest, we hope that they, too, will soon be able to allow themselves more convenient and attractive houses.

Moving Day

Saturday, March 25, saw us carrying over our things to our new home. There was still some furniture that had been ordered but was not yet ready, but we had by this time our bed, dresser, and a table with several chairs, and this was enough to get started. Most of our furniture has been blueprinted by us and has been made in the colony. Because of the shortage of help, it was a long time coming. Now we also finally had the fun of unpacking our freight boxes which we had carefully packed in Newton, Kansas, more than one-half years ago which had arrived here in December. Till now we had so little space, that we had taken out only a few of the things which we really needed. Many of the things packed were gifts from friends back home, which brought many pleasant memories and also added much to the beauty of our home.

Dedication of the Home

On the evening of Easter Sunday, April 9, we dedicated our home with friends present who had speci connections with our work and with the hospital. Rev Balzer, the leader of the Mennonit



Dr. and Mrs. Schmidt in front of their home in the Chaco. This home was built by the colonists in appreciation for medical service.

od's blessing upon it and upon all who would enter

Our eight nurses brought some of their talents add to our program. They sang some songs and ve Easter readings; one of them had also made a ecial recitation for the occasion. As a little recog- tion for the good work that the nurses are doing, d invited their parents for the dedication. They pressed their gratitude for our willingness to serve e colony, and thus give their daughters an oppor- nity to receive this training. They are glad that e colony could provide this house for us.

"Open House"

In order to show our appreciation to all of the ople of the colony, who have made this home pos- ble for us, we planned an "open-house" day for ich we invited everyone. This was on Tuesday, ril 11 the third Easter holiday, which they observe re. Through the afternoon and evening about 300 ends accepted the invitation to view the house. e idea of "open house" was entirely new to them. ey had to be coaxed to see the different rooms and rangements. Also some just took it as an invitation the afternoon and sat and visited several hours. t that did not matter either. Of great interest re the photographs and pictures on the mantel and walls. The nurses again served refreshments to guests, this time as they came and went. It s quite a day for us. (See accompanying pictures). We will treasure these events as happy memories our work and stay in the Chaco. They serve to ease us from the constant stream of work that nfronts us from day to day. May God bless our me and all who enter here, as well as all Christian mes everywhere.

RELIEF

Commissioner to Middle East

J. N. Byler, at present director of M.C.C.-C.P.S. mental hospital units, has been appointed to leave in the near future as relief commissioner to the Middle East. Brother Byler was also a former relief worker in France before the occupation of that country by Germany. He will have the task of giving direction to our relief efforts in the Middle East, and will make the necessary official contacts to organize the work there. According to present plans, he will also visit the relief work in England.

Middle East Workers Enter Training School

Four additional relief workers, appointed to serve in the Middle East, will have the privilege of receiving relief training in the special school set up by UNRRA at the University of Maryland, College Park, Maryland. As announced previously, Ervin Hooley was accepted some time ago, which brings the number of Mennonite workers up to five. The four workers recently accepted are Nancy Hernley, Grace Augsberger, Mary Emma Showalter, and Marie Fast. Their acceptance for actual relief work in the Middle East is pending physical examination and other requirements.

JOTTINGS

—Brother S. F. Pannabecker spoke to the 1st Menn. Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, on June 25, on the topic "The Permanent Results of the Wadsworth Mennonite Academy." His message about the school established by our conference in 1868 was based on a study made recently.

—Mrs. P. S. Goertz is still faithfully cataloging the books of the Mennonite Historical Library, which is housed in the Science Hall on the Bethel College Campus. Mrs. Goertz hopes to have the room in good condition by conference time. She reports the addition of a card catalog listing all works in the historical library at Goshen College. Goshen in turn will receive cards of the publications in our library.

—Brother and Sister George Neufeld, who are going to the African mission field, plan to leave the United States sometime in early July. They will sail on a neutral ship. The Neufelds come from the Bethel Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas.

—The marriage of Helen Louise Regier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob J. Regier, Newton, Kansas, and Rev. Leonard C. Hanes, son of Mrs. H. O. Grimes, Glendale, California, took place in the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, on June 12. Rev. Jacob J. Regier, Freeman, South Dakota, a brother to the bride performed the ceremony. Willard Wiebe, a ministerial student at Bethel College, served as best man and delivered the reception address. The young couple left the following Saturday morning for Bacone, Oklahoma, where they will attend a summer institute in linguistics, preparatory to doing mission work in South America. Both are graduates of the Los Angeles Bible Institute. The bride attended the Missionary Medical Institute at Toronto, Ontario, Canada, this past year. The groom is a member of the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles.

—Mennonite Bible Academy, North Newton, Kansas: Rev. Arnold J. Regier brought the morning message to the Bruderthal Church at Hillsboro on June 18. Five Academy students accompanied him and furnished special numbers of music. According to the new catalog, which anyone may secure by writing for a copy, the fall term will open on the fifth of September.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, Calif.: "Word comes from our Mennonite Central Committee that the General Conference Churches are behind in the gifts to the Civilian Public Service project to the extent of about $15,000.00.

We are glad to report that up to the present quarter we have been able to meet our obligations in the work, though we are behind this quarter. We wish to use this opportunity to thank the good people who have been generous and have given gladly and freely. This work can be supported by all of us who wish to give a testimony of our belief and our support of the principles of Christ, of Democracy, and of the freedoms granted us by the constitution of our Country.

It gives us an opportunity to uphold the hands of our boys, who are giving years of their life, free and in courageous service to uphold the high principles for which our forefathers lived and died, and which their consciences tell them are right and Christian.

May we not give this matter some time for thought and serious consideration, and then act as our conscience and heart prompt us.

Please use the envelopes you find in the pews for your gift and mark the amount in the space labelled Civilian Public Service. Again, thank you for your generous support."

—Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, President of Bethel College, attended the recent Pacific District Conference. He also visited some of the churches in the Pacific District.

—Brother Henry W. Goossen was ordained into the full gospel ministry on June 25 at the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska. In 1943 Bro. Goossen was licensed as student minister. In this capacity he served the Gnadenberg Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas, for about six months. He graduated from Bethel College in the spring of 1943. The following summer he began serving the Mennonite group at Burns, Kansas. While serving this group he continued his ministerial studies at Bethel College, and his wife taught school. They lived on the Bethel campus. Now they are planning to move in order that they may live in or near Burns. On June 16 the group at Burns organized itself into the First Mennonite Church at Burns, Kansas. Previously they had adopted a constitution. Three young people were baptized on June 18 by Rev. P. H. Richert and received into the church. All those who join before August 1 will be regarded as charter members. The average attendance at church services is about forty-five.

—The Northern District Conference will convene for its fifty-second session at Henderon, Nebraska, on August 25 to 29, immediately following the General Conference session. It will be a mission conference.—L.H. Linscheid, Secretary, Business Committee.

—Rev. W. C. Voth visited the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, on the evening of June 18. He reported on his recent survey trip to South America and showed pictures which he had taken on the trip.

—"What will your children do during their leisure time this summer? The reading of good books is a profitable way of spending leisure time.—Church Bulletin.

—Rev. Gerald Stucky, Dr. E. G. Kaufman, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buller were recent guest speakers at the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington.

—It has been stated by the National Christian Council of China that the first aim of the Council after the war will be to find a means of cooperation with Japanese brother Christians. Stirred by this pronouncement, American Christian groups are raising funds, amounting to several thousand dollars, to go as soon as the war ends to Toyohiko Kagawa for his religious work of rehabilitating slum dwellers in the Japanese cities.

—The new and enlarged edition of Who's Who Among the Mennonites is now off the press. The book contains about twice as many names as the first edition did and is about twice as thick. Part II is a classified directory which lists Mennonites in certain professions, business firms controlled o partly controlled by Mennonites, C.P.S. camps Mennonite girls' homes, Mennonite groups, home for the aged, hospitals, periodicals, Mennonit schools, etc. Part III consists of illustrations an announcements. The book has 428 pages. Dr. A Warkentin is the editor of the book and Dr. Melvi Gingerich, assistant editor. Copies of the book ma be had by writing to Who's Who Among the Mennonites, North Newton, Kansas. The price is $3.50 copy. This is a valuable book for the libraries o church workers.

First, Phila.—Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf delivered the message Sunday morning, May 14. Miss Kuyf is a daughte of this congregation. Sunday evening, May 28, men i C.P.S. units in this district who are members of th Mennonite Brthren Church, had complete charge the service. Dr. G. A. (Dad) Lehman, of Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, gave a concert of sacred musi in the Holmesburg Baptist Church recently. Dr. Lehman was formerly music teachers at Bluffton College.

GENERAL CONFERENCE SESSION POSTPONED

On June 27, 1944, the Government Transportation Department at Washington issued another most urgent request that "any conventions or meetings scheduled for 1944" be canceled. An added reason given was that the wounded might be transported to hospitals most comfortably and quickly.

In compliance with this, the Executive Committee of the General Conference has voted to postpone the session set to begin August 17, 1944, at North Newton, Kansas.

This action is taken with the approval of members of the Conference Business Committee, of the General Committee of inviting churches near Newton, of Officers of District Conferences, of the Women's Missionary Society, of the Y.P.U., etc.

It seemed evident, under given circumstances, that Canadian representation would almost be nil, and that distant churches in the States would not be represented in their usual number or strength. Thus the session would tend to take on too much the nature of a sectional or district conference, which, too, might be unduly reflected in the elections.

It was further voted that the Conference Churches be asked in lieu of the postponed session—to observe August 20, 1944, as "Conference Sunday."

We therefore appeal to all officers, boards and committee members, ministers,and church members to make August 20, a day of special prayer for our whole membership and the work which the Lord has entrusted to our Conference.

Let us claim the promise of Scripture, James 4:8 "Draw night to God, and He will draw nigh to you."

Let us pray for forgiveness and Divine grace and guidance so that—one in Christ Jesus and one among ourselves—our testimony may ring true and souls may be won in a world of contention and mortal strife.

Let us pray for an early peace based not only on Justice but upon Divine Mercy and Love.

The General Conference Executive Committee
C. E. Krehbiel, Chairman, Newton, Kansas

The Basis on Which Christ Grants Recognition

A mere "Lord, Lord" will not secure recognition from Christ. Neither will "many wonderful works" done without a genuine love for God. Christ cannot and will not honor a faith that is without works and therefore dead. Neither can He or will He honor one for preaching, teaching, or healing that is done out of self-love rather than out of grateful love towards a Father in heaven. Jesus says that He will give His recognition to those who out of a genuine love for the Father in heaven do His will.

In Matthew 7:21 Jesus speaks of two groups of people. One group which says "Lord, Lord" shall not enter the Kingdom of Heaven. Another group which confesses the Lord and does the will of the Father in Heaven shall enter the Kingdom.

In the following verse the first group defends itself by pointing to a record of prophesying, casting out devils, and many wonderful works, all done in the name of the Lord. At first glance it appears as though this group has been doing the will of the Father in Heaven.

However something must be lacking, for in verse 23 Jesus pictures himself as professing unto them "I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." It seems strange, at first, that such hard words should come to those who apparently had done good. But closer examination reveals something different.

The contrast of the two groups in verse 21 suggests that group one has not done the will of the Father in Heaven. The members of this group have done their own will out of self-love. They have done some good because they wanted to appear good and receive recognition from men for it. Their good done through self-will and self-love was not an honor and glory to God or an expression of love to Him.

Jesus grants fellowship to those who are like Him, to those who have been born spiritually, and who have come to love the Father in heaven who first loved them. Such children of God are concerned about doing the Father's will because they love Him. The good that they do is not done self-consciously for self-glorification, but rather it is done in self-sacrifice for the glorification of a Father whom they love very much.

Such children of God have come to Him and have become acquainted with Him through Jesus Christ. Through Christ they have entered into an intimate relationship with the Father. Of course, first of all they have learned to know Christ intimately. Having genuinely concerned themselves with learning to know God and His son, the Lord Jesus Christ can give them the recognition which is a natural product of such an intimate fellowship.

Christ loved His Father deeply, deeply. He did His Father's will. Christians who love God very deeply do His will. They have intimate fellowshi with God and will receive recognition from Christ Those who say "Lord, Lord" but do not get away from self-love naturally do not fit into Christ's circle Not really recognizing God through Christ, they cannot expect recognition from God through Christ.—rw

Now as always it is our privilege to pray tha God's will be done on earth as it is in heaven. W can pray that all men might confess the sinfulnes of war, repent of it, and bring forth fruits worthy of repentance. God wants to save the lives that ar in danger, but will men let Him have his way Someone has said that prayer is essentially surrender. O that men might surrender to God and his way of love.

Speaking of mid-week choir practice, a pastor make this statement in a church bulletin, "Parents ar kindly requested to encourage their young people t attend practice regularly." Young people in a rura communities need opportunities for social get-togethers. Choir practice is a wholesome form o social activity. Such features as freezers full of ice cream and some well-selected games before or afte add to the enjoyment of the evening.

Perhaps, it is true that "there are no atheists i foxholes." However, according to the statements o a man who has visited many of the fighting fronts there are plenty of atheists in the places of debaucher frequented by some of the survivors of foxholes.

Mennonite Church, Pierceland, Saskatchewan

“Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.” I Cor. 3:17. The hundred dollars asked for to elp complete this church was quickly granted by the embers of the Home Mission Board. The Canadian ome Mission Committee is also helping to make it ossible to finish the church.

In a letter to the Board, Rev. Toews said, “about 5 families, mostly belonging to the General Confernce” live in this vicinity. They have been holding heir meetings thus far in the home of their minister acob J. Dyck.

In a letter after the request had been granted, Rev. oews said “thank you” to the Board members, he aid further, “I am wondering how many churches in he United States there would be who would consider uilding a church like that.”

Pierceland, Saskatchewan is the farthest northern settlement and church group that we have. Those of you who were in Saskatoon, Sask. at the General Conference in August 1938, can imagine where this place is if you consider that it is about 260 miles to the north-west from Saskatoon.

Money was also sent to a Brother Janzen in this region who is laboring among Russians, to furnish Bibles to those who are interested.

Finding and Polishing Diamonds

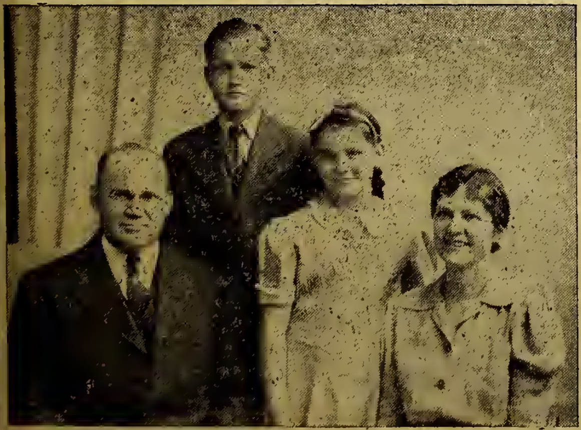
ear Mission Friends,

Some one has recently called Africa the land of listening diamonds. The dark continent is no longer a solid mass of darkness but is dotted with ocasional specks of brilliant gems. Before the war it was reported that 75 per cent of the world’s commercial diamonds came from Africa, mostly from the Belgian Congo and the Union of South Africa.



ev. and Mrs. Henry Toews and children who will soon il for the African mission field if they are not already on the way

One of our Congo Inland Mission Stations, namely Kalamda is located in the diamond mining territory. One must acquire a permit if one desires to travel in this territory. Many have been drawn or attracted to the Congo to search for these precious gems.

The missionary is attracted to the Belgian Congo to search for precious souls. He realizes that they are of inestimable value.

After the diamonds have been sought and found they must go through a process of cutting and polishing to bring out the true lustre and sparkle of the precious gems.

In a similar way the missionary searches for precious souls. After he has found them and they have committed themselves to Christ the task is not completed. Christ’s command is more inclusive. “Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them.” It continues further, “teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you.”

The process of cutting the diamonds might be compared to the severing of the native Christian from adherence to the witchdoctor, heathern superstitutions, polygamy, etc.

Through the evangelistic work, the day school and Bible School the process of polishing and beautifying continues. Thus the genuineness of the experience of Christ within is manifested in the brilliance and lustre of the outward expression of the believers.

Yours in His Service,
Mary and Henry Toews

The Miracle of Calvary

By Jacob H. Janzen

The Word of God says according to Romans 8:1-4, "There is therefore no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made me free from the law of sin and death. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

According to this scripture passage the greatest miracle which Jesus ever wrought is the breaking of the bondage of sin, and setting us free, to sin no more.

Great Possibilities

All other miracles are such that we too can do them if we believe. Yea, Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth in me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father." By His miraculous works Jesus has shown us that everything is possible for him who believeth. It can be done. And Jesus entreated us to emulate him faithfully until we are able to do the works which He did when He walked this earth—give sight to the blind, make the lame walk, cleanse the lepers, make the deaf hear, raise the dead, and preach the gospel to the poor.

Men and women have already achieved much along these lines through faith, because Jesus showed them that it could be done. And they will do more and more if they keep on emulating Christ, if they do not lose their faith.

Our Limitation

But as far as freedom from sin is concerned, nobody can give it to us except Jesus Christ who suffered for us on Calvary's hill. It says in Psalm 49:7-8, "None can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him: For the redemption of their soul is precious and it ceaseth forever." The American Version says, "faileth forever."

Ransom Needed

God himself recognizes the law of sin. Men have sinned in the beginning by their own free will, and thus placed themselves under the authority of sin, and Satan, the mighty ruler of the kingdom of sin. They are in the bondage of sin and cannot get free unless the ransom is paid for them. That ransom is very precious, i.e., very high, and no human being can ever pay it for his brother. If our freedom would depend on the ability of human beings to pay that ransom we would have to stay in bondage eternally, as human redemption must cease here, or faileth for ever, being utterly insufficient to ransom a soul.

But the ransom must be paid or there can be no freedom from the law of sin.

God did not go against the law, nor did he declare the law of sin to be null and void. He, on the contrary, has warned us very earnestly that every farthing of our debt must be paid to our creditor, and that we will not get out of prison before this is done. Wordly courts can cancel worldly debts. But no law pertaining to the Kingdom of God can ever be cancelled by anyone, and as far as God's own are concerned, He has said very definitely, "Zion shall be redeemed by justice, and her converts by righteousness!"

Christ Fulfilled the Law

Our debt is not null and void until it is paid, and since no man can pay it for us, the only begotten Son of God came into the likeness of our sinful flesh and paid our debt, the ransom, for us. He came not to do away with the law but to fulfill it. Only a fulfilled law has no further claim on me, no matter whether it was fulfilled by myself or by somebody else for me.

Jesus did on Calvary's hill what nobody was ever able, nor ever will be able to do. He washed our sins away and made us free to sin no more. Into the heart, cleansed of its sins, the Holy Spirt is given by Jesus Christ, who is the power within us that "fulfilleth the law in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." We are free!

Responsibility

But our freedom puts a very important responsibility upon us. Had Jesus not come and paid the ransom for us, we would still be sinners but we could not be made responsible for our sins since we were helpless in the bondage of sin and were compelled to do the will of Satan and to sin. He held us in prison, and there was no possibility for us to escape, as we were too weak to break the heavy fetters and locks of that prison.

But Jesus came and smashed these locks and broke our fetters. If we now remain in prison and in bondage of sin we do so on our own responsibility and by our own free will, as there is none who could keep us imprisoned forcibly. The doors are open. The fetters have fallen off our hands and feet. If we remain in bondage and continue in sin we will be found guilty because we sin now willfully and consciously with nobody to blame for it except ourselves.

Free to Choose

Keeping the Faith

By C. Henry Smith

Many Mennonites are still under the impression hat the traditional peace principles of the church, eld for over four centuries, are still the peculiar and xclusive possession of the Mennonites and several ther small religious groups. But one of the surprising facts of recent years, and especially since he first World War, has been the remarkable growth hroughout the Christian church as a whole, of the entiment against war, and especially of sympathy with the Mennonite attitude of non-participation nd non-resistance.

Large Denominations and War

Nearly all the large Protestant denominations in heir official capacities have denounced war in no ncertain terms and repeatedly declared that they would never again bless war, as many of them had one in World War One. Although some of these denominations, as a result of war psychology, and he pressure, in church conferences and assemblies, of nfluential church laymen, have somewhat modified heir declarations in recent months, yet it is significant that in most of these cases the ministry, at least, have kept their earlier convictions and declarations.

Attitude of the Press

Especially is this favorable change of attitude toward the Conscientious Objector and the boys in the C.P.S. camps to be noticed in the metropolitan press and in both the popular and religious magazines. RELIGION IN LIFE published by the Abingdon-Cokesbury Press, of New York, in its recent Summer Number of 1944, carries an article written by D. Elton Trueblood, Professor of Philosophy at Leland Stanford University, entitled "The Christian Heritage of Non-Resistance," in which the author describes the growth and significance of non-resistance in the Christian Church throughout history.

Sympathy for Non-Resistance

Several extracts from this article should be of interest to Mennonite readers, who may still be under the impression that non-resistance is unknown except among the three peace denominations—Mennonite, Dunkard, and Quaker. Speaking of the growing opposition throughout the Christian Church to the war system, Dr. Trueblood says:

"There is a great deal of religious objection to participation in war which never appears in the statistics of Selective Service, because many whose opposition is strongest are women, or men beyond the draft age, or clergymen automatically exempt. Protestantism knows that there are thousands of ministers whose opposition to participation in war is quite as strong as that of the young men in the Civilian Public Service camps."

In addition there may be an even larger number who, though they do not have the courage to make the sacrifices entailed by an open avowal of the non-resistant faith, yet are glad for those that have. "Most Christians," Dr. Trueblood continues, "do not accept for themselves the Christian tradition of non-resistance, but many of them have reason to be glad that the tradition exists. They may not be able to take this stand themselves, but they are thankful that there are those who can."

The Early Church and War

The early Christian Church, Dr. Trueblood says, took the non-resistant stand. The early church fathers opposed the war system, and early Christians refused army service. But the so-called conversion of Constantine, and the unfortunate union of church and state in the early fourth century under that ruler changed all this. After this the Christian Church became a fighting church. Modern pacifism has two sources; one among the Anabaptists in the sixteenth century; and the other among the Quakers of the seventeenth—the former predominantly Scriptural, the latter more largely philosophical.

"The pacifist heritage," Dr. Trueblood concludes, "is a precious one and really belongs to the entire Body of Christ. It has shown remarkable continuity through the centuries in spite of some differences in basis as well as application. It has been modest but it has been effective. No matter how ironic the testimony of a separated minority may be, the mere fact that it is known to exist produces a salutary and sobering influence on the judgment of political leaders."

A Grave Concern

It is a source of satisfaction to the peace lover, who sees in the non-resistant faith the only effective method of combating the war evil, to notice this expanding anti-war sentiment throughout the whole Christian church. On the other hand, it remains a source of deep concern to observe at the same time a growing laxness among the Mennonites themselves, th pioneers in this movement, in the preservation of their traditional peace principles.

Can it be that the Mennonites, who for four hundred years bore the torch of peace with such courage sometimes single-handed, and often against the most bitter persecution, are willing just now when the cause for which the fathers struggled and died, seems about to bear fruit in larger fields of influence—can it be that, just now, they are willing to drop the role of torchbearer and turn the task over to newer but more willing hands?

One can't be about the devil's business and have the Lord's blessing.

The Kansas Mennonite Sunday School Convention

The Sixtieth Annual Kansas Mennonite Sunday School Convention met April 30, 1944, in the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church.

The convention theme was, "Workers Together With Him." II Cor. 6:1.

Many attended the afternoon session. Rev. C. H. Dirks, president, presided and fed our souls with a short inspiring message from John 6:67-68. Namely, there are those of Jesus' followers who follow only for a time and then walk no more with Him, and then there are those who not only walk close to the Lord but in addition also lead others closer to Him. These introductory words led up to the question, "What draws us and keeps us there?" The answer can be given in the words of Peter. "To whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."

The words of Jesus are first, tender words in which He gives Himself; second, words of authority revealing sin in the life; third, words of life and power; fourth, words we must declare as followers of Him.

During the business meeting the following recommendations were presented and discussed:

First, that the Kansas Mennonite Sunday School Convention be enlarged to include all the churches of the Western District Conference. That the name of The Kansas Mennonite Sunday School Convention be changed to The Western District Mennonite Sunday School Convention.

Second, that the Sunday School Board be elected from the various states on the basis of one for each two thousand Sunday School enrollment or fraction thereof, and that the term of office be for three years, one-third of the board members elected each year.

Third, that in order to provide a working budget, we ask our Sunday Schools to contribute annually for convention purposes.

Fourth, that the convention through its Sunday School Board work toward the providing of a field worker, either as a full time worker or in cooperation with other boards and committees of our conference.

These recommendations were discussed and all acted upon favorably.

The officers of the convention are, president, Rev. C. H. Dirks, Hutchinson, Kansas; vice president, Albert Graber, Pretty Prairie, Kansas; treasurer, Alvin Buller, Hillsboro, Kansas; secretary, Elfrieda Regier, Newton, Kansas; board member, Rosella Dyck, Inman, Kansas.

The evening meeting was opened with general singing. Introductory remarks were made by Albert Graber, Pretty Prairie, Kansas, who presented the world's need of redemption and pointed out as Sunday School teachers we find our courage in the Word of God and in Christ the only hope for the future.

The convention speaker was Dr. H. A. Kelsey, President of Sterling College, Sterling, Kansas. He spoke on the subject, "The New World and a Great Commission as Workers Together with Him."

The essence of his challenging message was that the program of the Lord Jesus Christ is always a world program. In other words it is always a plan to reach the ends of the world.

The Lord Jesus is interested in a new world because it is full of sin, and because we have lowered our standards of integrity, honor, and righteousness. The world's remedy for a new world is materialism and education which in itself does not reach the springs of life.

The Lord Jesus Christ has the way and the remedy, "Go ye therefore and preach the gospel of power unto salvation." Teach them to make their break with the world and pledge their allegiance to Him. His great command to us is to evangelize the world. We have overworked the word, but not overdone the thing. The church has almost lost the art of winning souls.

Christian workers will find the simplest and most effective work is to learn how to touch the men at our side with the power of God. Glorify God, triumph in Christ and there will be victory for us at the end of the age.

great miracle of Calvary because it passes all my understanding. But I have experienced its power, and I feel its effects. My sins are forgiven. My debt has been paid. Nobody can force me to sin. I am free to live to the glory of God! I do not have to destroy myself by sin anymore! I can choose for myself that which is good for me and do it.

Surely, "This world needs Christ" or its ransom will never be paid, and it will never be free, even if we fight a hundred more wars in the defence of our freedom which we have not.

I do not know when the world as a whole will accept Christ and be free. But anyone who listens in today can become a ransomed soul, today, thanks to the miracle of Calvary—can be free and happy and have life everlasting.

"This world needs Christ,"—and you need Christ!

Have you accepted Him?

Are you free?

The Christian and His Bible

E. A. Sommer

There is nothing that is so universally neglected, misused and abused by Christian people as is the ble. Many Christians do not rightly understand and do not know how to use its contents. There- e it has no charm for them and becomes a dry d uninteresting book. Yet this is the only weapon t a Christian has for defence against the enemy the soul.

If other books were read so unsystematically and elessly as is the Bible, there would not be an eresting book in the world. If people approach Bible logically and systematically, it becomes the st interesting book. Every book written preserves a greater or lesser degree the intellect and the e of the author. If this be true of all books of re human composition, how much more is it true the Bible, the Book given by inspiration of God. e Bible is a life-giving book and has life-giving wer.

When we begin our study in any book of the Bible is well to raise a number of questions: 1. Who is the author? 2. To whom was he iting? 3. What was his purpose in writing? 4. What s the moral, social, economic, political and spiritual tus? 5. What message has it for our day, and ecially what message has it for me?

Too often we approach the Bible not to find what ssage it has for our souls, but for a suitable pas- ge or portion of Scripture that will fit into or engthen our selfish, man-made philosophy or in- pretation. Out of this grow the most bitter con- versies and misunderstandings, labelings, and andings of each other until there is a danger of coming unchristian in trying to do effective Chris- n work.

There are certain fundamental facts of the Doc- ne of the Christian faith that are unchangeable— d as creator and father, Jesus Christ as our viour through the atoning blood on Calvary, the ly Spirit as the believer's guide, repentance, faith, generation, justification, adoption, sanctification, d prayer.

If we learn the secret of always allowing the Holy ripture to be its own interpreter, then the Holy irit will guide us into all truth. The Bible is the spired Word of the living God and the only safe le for Christian guidance and daily living; it de- ands our most reverent and careful study. We st not simply read it, but we must study it. "Study show thyself approved unto God, a workman that edeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word Truth." II Tim. 2:15.

There are many methods of study, but I shall give few that I have found very profitable and deeply eresting:

1. A general familiarity with the Bible as a whole, its stories, its words, and its spirit. That can only be accomplished by systematically reading the entire Bible a number of times.
2. Study the Bible by books.
    - A. Divide the book into sections.
3. Study the Bible topically.
4. Study them by means of harmony.
5. Study the Bible by chapters.
    - A. What is the principle subject?
    - B. What is the leading lesson?
    - C. What is the best verse?
    - D. Who are the principle persons?
6. Study the Bible by words.
    - A. Many words have several shades of meaning.
    - B. The English Bible contains some archaic or old-fashioned words which need to be remembered.
    - C. Some words are ambiguous as in Gen. 32:31, I Kings 18:21, Amos 8:8, Joshua 24:14.
7. Biographical study of the Bible
    - A. Each great character of the Bible has a mission to the world. It is God speaking to men through men, revealing the laws that should govern our lives through the medium of other lives that have been governed by these laws.
8. Study the Bible by periods.
    - A. God's dealing with man may be properly divided into definite eras or periods.
9. Study of the parables and miracles of our Lord.
    - A. Guard against fanciful interpretation.
    - B. Never attempt to prove any point of doctrine or duty from simple phrases or incidental circumstances.
    - C. Consider carefully the purpose of the writer or speaker.
10. Study the Bible prophetically.

There is no other approach to Bible study that is so open to wrong, fanciful, speculative interpretation, and some have tried to peer into the secrets of the unfolding program which Jesus admits is only known to His Father God. Thus much of the speculative interpretation has not and does not adorn the Gospel of God.

However full of mystery this approach to Bible study may be, there is one outstanding truth that runs like a silver thread from Genesis to Revelation. The uncovering or unveiling, and it is as though the great doors swing open and visions of glory appear. It is the unveiling of God's heart and program for all ages through Jesus Christ His Son.

Let us keep a growing faith in the Bible. It is the greatest and truest book in all the world; its pages gleam with the splendor of God. It is the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christian's character.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

Rev. Howard G. Nyce, Allentown, Pa.

July 9—"Then said I, Woe is me!" Isaiah 6:5. Read Isa. 6:1-8. Would to God that all professing Christians would come to this period in life that they would see themselves as Isaiah saw himself. Then too, all people would cry out, "Woe is me!" All people who profess to be followers of Christ would then serve him in true sincerity. The weakness of the Christian Church is the testimony of the average so-called Christian denies the Lord who bought him with a life that is displeasing to God. Apart from Christ we are undone, unclean, as filthy rags. Have you been made whole?

JULY 10—"Whither thou goest, I will go." Ruth 1:16. Read Ruth 1:1-18. We all admire Ruth for this wonderful statement but more for the fact that she lived up to the statement. How often have you sung the hymn, "Where He leads me, I will follow?" Did you not say what Ruth said then? Or again when you sang, "I'll go where you want me to go dear Lord," did you not again express the same thing? Ruth didn't say "Whither thou goest, I will go" with her lips but refused to do so with her life. She was willing to leave all that had been near and dear to her that she might accompany Naomi. That is what Christ expects of us. We are to forsake the world and all its lusts that we might follow him.

JULY 11—"Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." John 5:24. Read John 5:17-30. We praise God for these words. Many people are having a struggle within themselves as to whether or not they are truly a child of God. Not every person has the same experience of conversion similar to that of Saul of Tarsus. But beloved, you do not have to be smitten to the ground as Saul was. There is only one question of importance, that is, "Do you believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and that He died for your sin on Calvary's cross?" If you can answer this in the affirmative, you have been born again and have everlasting life. By living a consistent Christian life you will prove to the world that you are a child of God.

JULY 12—Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness: considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." Gal. 6:1. Read Gal. 6:1-10. Usually when a person has been overtaken in a fault, his friends are ready to push him down still further. This may be the way of the world and the ungodly, but not the way of Christians. Note these words, "considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." In other words, try to put yourself in the place of the man who has been overtaken in a fault, and you will deal with him in a Christlike manner. Yes, "Do unto others, as ye would that they should do unto you."

JULY 13—". . . I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge." Romans 10:2. Read Romans 10. This passage very definitely refers to Israel, for in the first verse Paul says, "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved." We know that they have a zeal of God, but that they are also blinded that they cannot see the truth, namely that their Messiah has come. But how about the average church member today? He may have a zeal for the church but be in darkness oftentimes concerning the truth as revealed in God's Word. Churchianity is not Christianity, and a person may be faithful to the church all his life and yet not be a child of God. Are you a member of a church, or a member of the Church, the Body of Believers?

JULY 14—"Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." Luke 23:43. Read Luke 23:39-45. "He descended into hell." The passage I have selected for this meditation refers definitely to the fact that Jesus descended into hell. Why? That He might speak to the souls of all the righteous that have died before He went to the cross. In the Old Testament, hel was divided into two parts, one part for the souls o the righteous and the other part for the unrighteous After Jesus cried, "It is finished" and after He gave up the Ghost, He descended into hell that He migh take to God His Father, the souls of all the old Testament saints. The thief on the cross was the las soul to go into the place of the righteous departed souls in hell.

JULY 15—"For I am in a strait betwixt two, having desire to depart and be with Christ; which is fa better. Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is mor needful for you." Phil. 1:23, 24. Read II Cor. 5:1-9 In our last meditation we stated that the thief on th cross was the last soul to go into the place of th righteous souls in hell. Paul says "to be absent fro the body is to be present with the Lord." To b with Christ for Paul would be far better than abidin here on earth. The Apostolic Creed informs us tha Christ "ascended into heaven." The angels informe the disciples at the scene of Christ's ascension, "Thi same Jesus shall so come in like manner as ye hav seen him go into heaven." Yes, Christ is seated the right hand of God, therefore to be absent fro the body is to be in the presence of Christ in heaven.

JULY 16—"Beloved, now are we the sons of God I John 3:2. Read I John 3:1-11. Unfortunatel there are Christian people who do not know wheth they are children of God or not. This is a sad situa tion. God's Word informs us that we can know tha we are saved. In Romans 10:9 we read, " . . .

Western District Retreat Meets July 24-28

The Nineteenth Annual Western District Young People's Retreat is to be held July 24-28 at Camp Wood, Elmdale, Kansas. The retreat theme for this year is "Toward Greater Loyalty."

Courses to be offered and the leaders giving them are: Course 1. "Toward Greater Loyalty in Everyday Living" by Henry N. Harder. Course 2. "Toward Greater Loyalty to God's Word" by Walter Gering. Course 3. "Toward Greater Loyalty to the Church" by J. M. Regier.

Donovan E. Smucker, who is pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, and who conducts a weekly religious broadcast, will give the morning devotions and the evening messages. Rev. Smucker is a dynamic and resourceful speaker.

Other retreat leaders are: Prof. Vilas Gerber, music instructor at Bethel College, who will direct the music; Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, President of the General Conference Mission Societies, who will serve as girl's counsellor; Mrs. Garman Wedel, a graduate of the School of Nursing, Bethel Deaconess Hospital, who will be camp nurse; and Verney Unruh, ministerial student at Bethel College, who will be recreational director.

The purpose of the retreat is given as, "The aim of the retreat is to make possible a vital experience of God's grace, to provide Christian fellowship, to foster spiritual growth, and challenge retreaters to consecrated Christian service." The foregoing has been used by the Eastern District Retreat as its statement of purpose.

Enrollment is limited to those who will be high school sophomores and above, or an equivalent age. Visitors are welcome on the first and the last day of the retreat.

Retreaters should arrive at camp Monday afternoon July 24, 4 p.m. Registration will be from 4 to 6 p.m. The first meal will be served at 6 p.m.

The cost of attending the retreat includes $6.00, plus tax, for twelve meals, lodging, and use of camp equipment and $2.50 for the registration fee.

How to Register

See your pastor for a registration card, get your parent's and your pastor's signature, sign it yourself and with $1.00 send it to the General Conference Headquarters, in care of Mrs. A. Theodore Mueller, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, before July 20.

Members of the Retreat Committee this year are: Walter H. Dyck, Beatrice, Nebraska; Herbert Miller, Deer Creek, Oklahoma; William Juhnke, McPherson, Kansas; A. J. Regier, North Newton, Kansas; Mary Becker, Newton, Kansas; Bennie Bargen, North Newton, Kansas; Mrs. A. Theodore Mueller, North Newton, Kansas, and David C. Wedel, Halstead, Kansas.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Mennonite high school teacher shows the courage and purpose of a Daniel when day for scrap-drive arrives. Miss Vera Friesen, who has been teaching music in the Ransom, Kansas, High School for the past several years, believes in sticking to principles when the going gets hard. Miss Friesen did not try to insure the safety of her job by hiding her light under a bushel when the day for a scrap-drive arrived. Neither did she take a mere negative attitude. She did someting positive. Let Miss Friesen, who is a member of the First Mennonite Church of Lehigh, Kansas, tell you something of her course of action on scrap-drive day. Here is her story as written for the youth section at the invitation of the editor:

"When our Principal, W. A. Bollinger, announced that the school would be closed all day for the scrap-drive, I began thinking of an alternative constructive course of action that some of us teachers and students could do while others were gathering scrap iron.

I discussed my proposition with the Principal, an excellent, open-minded man, and with his help we made plans for several "cleaning-squads" to clean up the empty lots in the business section as well as yards and lots of elderly people. These lots would have been cleaned had they been able to find the workers, but, as everyone knows, our young men just aren't around. So these high school students and teachers helped beautify the city.

"We had splendid cooperation from the business men; they closed their stores for several hours and helped us.

"At the end of the day all of us, as well as those who gathered scrap-iron, felt the day had been spent in a worth-while way."

—Young people of the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, hold gospel services. In their paper The Y.P.C.E. they report: "On Sunday June 4, we again started holding services at the Mexican Labor Camp. These services, as last year, consist of Spanish recordings of musical selections and ser-ionettes. A very good attendance is reported and ie request for several Spanish Bibles has been iade by the Mexicans. . . Please pray for these ervices, the spreading of the Gospel of our Lord esus Christ."

-Ed F. Baer, one of the young men from the Abereen Church writes from Fairfield, Connecticut: Since I left Idaho the latter part of November, 943, I have seen and learned many interesting nd helpful things. While I was at Bethel I enyed myself immensely and also learned much, I ope. I liked Sundays at Bethel too because they ad a fine minister, and I heard many good mesages. When I finally decided with much prayer to eave Bethel I came to Fairfield, Connecticut, which about two miles from Bridgeport and about fortyve miles from New York City. I worked at a u Pont Plastic factory. I work ten hours a day . . . I go to night school at a branch of Yale Uniersity. I have many friends here already and all oes quite well." Ed did not forget to send $5.00 his young people's society at home.

-More Aberdeen, Idaho, news: Randolph Moser home again after another year of school. Alice ehman's Sunday School class sang at the American all's Hospital. Catherine Harder has gone to uson, Montana, she is camp nurse for the C.P.S. moke Jumpers. "Success used to indicate superior bility, but now people just wonder what vitamins ou are taking." So reads a little humor from berdeen.

—Verney Unruh goes to First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, as ministerial interne. Because of new draft regulations it looked for a while as though Verney would not get to undertake his interneship, but now his local board has approved the project. Verney arrived at Beatrice on June 24. He was ordained into the ministry on May 21 in his home church at Bloomfield, Mont. This spring he graduated om Bethel College with a major in Bible. He lans to continue his ministerial studies at Bethel is coming year. As President of the Student hristian Movement he will have many opportunities r planning Christian activities. Verney ultimately opes to go to the foreign mission field, having een accepted as a candidate by the Foreign Mission oard. H. P. Unruh, the grandfather of Verney, erved the Mennoite church at Avon, South Dakota, r forty-six years. Robert, a brother to Verney, Sunday School Superintendent of the Bloomfield hurch, and another brother, Willard, is educational irector at the Belton, Montana, C.P.S. camp. His arents are Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Unruh of Bloomeld.

-Mrs. Harold Oswald, formerly Ruth Riemer of eatrice, Nebraska, is now doing public health work t Provo, Utah, where her husband is in a C.P.S. nit. Mrs. Oswald, a member of the First Mennoite Church of Beatrice, formerly did nursing work the Mennonite hospital at Beatrice and then in ie state of Oregon.

-Miss Lora Schultz, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. S. chultz, Bluffton, Ohio, and Russell Oyer, son of Ir. and Mrs. P. W. Oyer, Congerville, Illinois, were married on June 24. The couple will reside at 15 East Superior Street, Chicago.

—Leaders for Oklahoma Young People's Retreat: Leaders for this retreat, according to tentative plans, will be Olin A. Krehbiel, Pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa.; Gerald Stucky, who is to open a new mission field in Colombia, South America; and Herbert E. Miller, Pastor of the Deer Creek Mennonite Church, Deer Creek, Oklahoma. It wil be a retreat of spiritual refreshment, Christian fellowship, hearty singing, and wholesome recreation. There will be instruction in Bible, missions, and doctrine. Youth will also have the opportunity to discuss their problems. The date is August 9-13.

—Miss Eleanor Thiessen, who recently came from India, is now visiting with the Rev. John T. Neufeld family in Chicago. She will be there for some time yet and then will visit relatives in the west. Miss Thiessen plans to enter nurse's training this fall.

—A group of young people from the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, recently went out to sing for the sick and the aged. Seven homes were visited.

—The Henderson, Nebraska, C.E., which set a goal of $300 for the year, had already given $170 by the end of the first six months.

—Daniel Ewy, from the Reedley, California, Mennonite Church, recently entered the Belton, Montana, C.P.S. camp.

—Miss Helen A. Penner spoke at the Camino, California, C.P.S. camp recently.

—Prof. Bernhard Bargen was guest speaker at an invitational banquet given by the Hoffnungsau Young People's League in honor of the Hebron and the Buhler Mennonite churches on June 25. The invitation included the ministers of the churches as well as the young people. A group of approximately 150 people were present for the meal and program. The Hoffnungsau Young People's League is a local organization. —Rosella Dyck, Corr.

Mountain Lake Young People's Retreat

By Adeline Franz

The 1944 Mountain Lake Young People's Retreat was held in the First Mennonite Church from June 11 to 14. It was the sixth annual retreat sponsored by the three General Conference churches of Mountain Lake.

The theme of the retreat was "Serving Christ in Crisis"; the motto was, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Phil. 4:13, and the theme song was "Rise up, O Men of God."

Our guest speaker was Rev. Gerald Stucky, Berne, Indiana, a candidate for mission work in South America. He spoke at the evening services, giving the following inspiring messages: Sunday evening, "Seeing Christ in the Crisis," Monday, "Hearing the Macedonian Call" (he also showed pictures of South America), Tuesday, "The Feeling of Stability," and "Serving As an Ambassador" as the consecration service message on Wednesday. Rev. Stucky also conducted a class on "The Sermon of the Mount."

Dr. J. D. Unruh, President of Freeman Junior College, Freeman, South Dakota, conducted a class in "Mennonite Contributions to the World Crisis." He was also in charge of the boy's discussion group.

Rev. Victor Sawatzky, pastor of the Mennonite Church north of Butterfield, conducted a class entitled "Service for Christ in Everyday Living" and was in charge of the music classes during which we learned choruses. Miss Emma Linscheid, church worker in Lincoln, Nebraska led the high school girl's discussion group and Mrs. Erland Waltner led a class for the older girls. As a project the girls hemmed dish towels to be sent to the Mennonite Central Committee for relief purposes.

A class entitled "Service for Christ in One's Life Work" was represented by Miss Olmyra Baher, a teacher; Mr. Rudy Janzen, a farmer, and Mr. W. H. Regier, a business man. Mr. Norman Voth was in charge of the music at the evening services. We were greatly blessed in each of these classes.

Officers were elected to plan the 1945 retreat. Norman Voth was elected president.

On Wednesday afternoon we enjoyed a "Retreaters" picnic on the church grounds. Our 1944 retreat closed that evening with an inspirational consecration and candlelight service.

We are thankful to God for the many blessings received during those few short days of spiritual refreshing. We are looking forward to the retreat of 1945.

NO JULY 4TH ISSUE

If you missed your copy of The Mennonite last week and do not know why, then let us remind you that The Mennonite is not published during the weeks of July 4th and Christmas.

CHANGE OF TREASURY

Beginning with July 1 all contributions for C.P.S. should be sent to General Conference Headquarters, 722, Main Street, Newton, Kansas. This request is made by L. J. Horsch, who will cease to act as treasurer for the Peace Committee on July 1. On that day the Peace Committe will open its treasury at General Conference Headquarters.

IN MEMORIAM

Rev. Paul Mouttet

Paul Mouttet was born on December 20, 1864, in Berne Canton, Switzerland, and passed to his eternal reward on the morning of April 24. According to the doctor's pronouncement, death was caused by a stroke.

Our father was one of the four children of Uebert and Ursuela Lantz Mouttet. With the early death of his father it became necessary for him to help the sisters to provide for the daily sustenance of the family. His mother died when he was fifteen years of age; his three sisters also have preceded him in death.

At the age of seventeen he migrated to America with a friend and landed in New York at about Easter time in 1881. From there he traveled by train to Berne, Indiana, where he had some acquaintances. Here he worked as a day laborer for about three years. It was during this time that he received his catechetical instruction and was baptized upon the profession of his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as his Saviour.

In 1885 a call came for a farm laborer in the mission field of the General Conference at Cantonment, then Indian Territory in Oklahoma. So father volunteered for this work. After he had labored there under considerable difficulties for several years, he pursued his education at Halstead Seminary for a period of three years.

On November 7, 1890, he was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Katherin Riesen. Together they returned to their previous field of service. After serving here for some time, they settled on a farm in Marion county, Kansas. In this community father and mother shared joys and sorrows for the remainder of their life.

Having made their home in this community, father transferred membership from the Berne church to the Bruderthal church where he has remained an active and faithful member the rest of his life. He showed his interest in the church, the Sunday School, and the C.E. through his helping hand. He was one of the founders of the C.E. Jugenderbanung in 1900 and served in the program committee and later as leader for years. On January 22, 1911, father was elected as an evangelist and was ordained to this office on February 26, 1911. In this position he served his Lord for a period of twenty-five years. From 1926-1930 he served as leader of the church in the absence of an elder.

The home was blessed with four children, three sons and one daughter. Father and mother were blessed in their union for over forty-five years. Mother preceded father in death on February 21, 1936. Since mother's home-going, father spent many lonely hours, and feeling that his work here was done, yearned to meet his Saviour whom he served and loved. He reached the age of seventy-nine years, four months and four days.

JOTTINGS

The Mennonite Hospital at Beatrice, Nebraska, "reports a bed occupancy of over 95 per cent for the last six months. In the first three months of this period it was well over 100 per cent. In the same period a year ago the occupancy was only a little over 80 per cent."

—Correction: In the recent report of the Bethel Mission, Winnipeg, Canada, it should have stated that the proceeds from a public auction of articles had been $220.00 instead of $22.00.

—Bluffton College is planning for the future. In this planning the following points are being considered: 1. An educational program in which all activties center about Christian truth. 2. Better service to the church and community. 3. High academic work consistent with the ability of the student. 4. Rebuilding of the young people, are devoted Christians, are well prepared academically, are committed to th basic principles of the Mennonite Church, and who are willing to make teaching at Bluffton their life's mission. 5. Improvement of the facilities and financial condition of the college. 6. A higher sense of appreciation by he students of the beautiful in life. 7. Self-liquidating, self-help plans for students who need to work to elp pay expenses. 8. Such excellent educational chievement as wil merit membership in the North entral Association. The above points are adapted rom The Bluffton College Bulletin of June, 1944. ccording to this bulletin, "...friends have given to he extent that Bluffton has been more than able to old her own even in days like this. During the first ight months of the present fiscal year gifts which ould be counted toward current and improvement unds totaled over $24.000.00 in cash and government onds...." Eight years ago the college debt was ver $200,000. Now only about one-tenth that amount s owed to others. "If the college is able to balance its udget this year, of which there now seems little oubt, it will be the fifth consecutive year of operation ithin its income."

WE ARE SORRY

We are sorry that the author of the poem "My ross" was not given in the last issue. The poem My Cross" was written by Angela Belair, who beame a member of the Mennonite Bible Mission, hicago, Illinois, this past spring. It is reported to e the expression of a deep spiritual experience.

—John P. Klassen, professor of art at Bluffton College, as two sons in C.P.S. Brother Klassen, who was a .O. in Russia during World War I, is now conducting rt and craft institutes in some of the C.P.S. camps. He hopes that C.P.S. men will express their experiences n art.

—Rufus Franz, regional director for C.P.S., brought the orning message to the Menno congregation, Lind, Washington, on July 23. A note in the Menno bulle-in reads, 'We are in the midst of our fifth war loan rive. Remember, you may purchase Civilian Government Bonds and in this way show your loyalty to God-given convictions and to your government at he same time."

—Rev. H. T. Unruh, who recently returned from visiting .P.S. camps and units in Colorado, Idaho, Utah, and Nebraska, in commenting upon the attendance of hurches by C.P.S. men, stated, "Their testimonies n most of the churches are well accepted, and in many ases they are responsible for strengthening the spiriual life of the church they attend."

—The Immanuel Mennonite Church, Delft, Minnesota, had its mission festival on July 2. Rev. C. H. Suckau f Omaha was the guest speaker.

—The First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, and the Butterfield Mennonite Church recently had a joint C.E. program. Rev. Ben J. Nickel gave the message of the evening.

—Rev. John Bartel accepts pastorate of Shafter Church: According to a statement in the Mountain Lake Observer, Rev. John Bartel will shortly assume the pastorate of the First Mennonite Church, Shafter, California. Until recently Brother Bartel served the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Delft, Minnesota, having come there in 1940 after a seven-year pastorate in the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake. Previous to his service in Mountain Lake, Brother Bartel served the First Mennonite Church, Madrid ,Nebraska, for four years. From 1925 to 1929 he served as teacher in the Mennonite Bible Academy, Beatrice, Nebraska. Brother Bartel attended the Hillsboro Bible Academy from 1914-1917; the Bible Institute, Los Angeles, from 1920-1922; and Bethel College from 1923-1925. Mrs. Bartel is the former Elma Brandt of Hillsboro, Kansas. The Bartels have six children, four boys and two girls. The Shafter congregation recently lost its pastor, the Rev. Arthur Wenger, when he entered the chaplaincy.

TELEGRAM FROM SISTER NICKEL

Arrived quickly and safe. Send information by letter to Fresno address.

Note: This good news comes from Los Angeles, dated July 3. Signed: P. H. Richert, Sec.

—Mrs. H. J. Krehbiel passes. A note in the bulletin of the Reedley Church states, "Tuesday (June 27) afternoon memorial services were held for Mrs. Lydia Krehbiel, the wife of the first pastor of this congregation, Rev. H. J. Krehbiel. They began their work here in 1909. Since then she has been an active member here. She reached an age of seventy-three years."

—Speakers at the coming Northern District Conference, according to a tentative program will be: Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Brown, Rev. P. A. Penner, Rev. C. H. Dirks, Rev. and Mrs. John P. Suderman, Rev. Gerald Stucky, Rev. A. P. Waltner, and Rev. Sam Goering. Rev. Erland Waltner, as president of the conference will give the conference sermon. Rev. A. W. Friesen, as pastor of the host church, will give the welcome, and Rev. L. H. Linscheid will lead the memorial service. The conference dates are August 25-29.

—Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The project of completing the third story of the Bethel Hospital and of purchasing new equipment is to be presented to the congregation in July 30 by H. J. Andres, the Administrator of the Bethel Hospital, Newton. Union meetings are again being held in the park on Sunday evenings. The offerings go for religious education in the community. The women of the church have again been invited to can for C.P.S. The church board has decided to make available to the congregation some worthwhile tracts and pamphlets by enclosing these with the Eden Chronicles which every family receives monthly. According to reports Sister Alida Schrag is busily engaged in language study and thoroughly enjoys her work. Her address is Champa, C.P., India. About thirty of the young men are C.P.S. camps and units. One of them, Erwin Goering is regional director of the Rocky Mountain Area. Martin Schrag is educational director at the Fort Collins, Colorado, Camp. A number of the young women also serve in C.P.S. Ruth Wedel is camp nurse at Terry, Montana. Mrs. Delbert Preheim assists her husband in Puerto Rico, and Edna Kaufman serves at Colorado Springs. About fifteen of the young men are in the armed forces.

—Rev. D. J. Unruh accepts call of First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas: Rev. D. J. Unruh, in a telegram read to the First Mennonite Church on July 2, stated, "I hereby accept the call of the First Mennonite Church to serve as minister. May the Lord bless our work together to his glory." The telegram was read to the congregation by Rev. J. E. Entz just before he brought the message of the morning. It is hoped that Brother Unruh may begin his work around August 1. However, at the time of writing it is not certain as to whether Rev. Unruh can make arrangements to begin his service at that time. Rev. Unruh's call is for two years. Rev. J. E. Entz is the Elder of the First Mennonite Church. Brother Unruh is at present employed by the Northern Bible Society of Duluth, Minnesota. Previous to this work he served as pastor of the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon. From 1936 to 1940 he served as pastor of the St. John Church, Pandora, Ohio, and from 1930 to 1936 he served as pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa. Previous to that he did home mission work for the General Conference at Quarryville, Pa., Didsbury, Alberta, and Renata, British Columbia. From 1919-1921 he attended Moody Bible Institute. He attended the Potomac Bible College Washington, D.C., in 1926 and 1928 and the Eastern Baptist Seminary, Philadelphia, from 1926-1927. His wife is the former Hazel Kuglin of Chicago. They have two adopted children. Brother Unruh is a member of the Foreign Mission Board of the General Conference.

—Brother Orlo Kaufman has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Mennonite Church, Paso Robles, California. Brother Kaufman, who is a member of the Eden Church, Moundridge, is to begin his work at Paso Robles in the near future. In 1941 he graduated from Bethel College. This past spring he graduated from Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois. He has had experience as supply pastor. His wife is the former Edna Goering, also from the Eden Church. She has been active in music work.

—The Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church, Goessel, Kansas, surpassed its C.P.S. quota for July 1 by $147.52. This church, which has met its quota since December 1, 1943, raises $458.50 a month for C.P.S. Adolf Bartel, member of the church peace committee, states that the church is informed regularly as to how it stands in its contributions for C.P.S. By March of this year the church had about twenty-one men in C.P.S. and twenty in the armed forces. Among the C.P.S. men is Roland Bartel, who is educational assistant director at Camino, California. For the morning service of July 2, the mixed choir of forty-five voices gave a very beautiful rendition of "Hast du Jesu Ruf Vernommen?" They used the English translation as given in the Mennonite Hymnnary. Arthur Banman is the director of the choir. The church puts out a monthly church paper called "Our Home Church.' This is produced by multilith process at the Bethel College Secretarial Bureau. It began as a paper for the men in government service. Now copies are distributed to the whole church. (The editor hopes that he will be put on the mailing list.)

—Rev. Albert J. Penner, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, Holyoke, Massachusetts, brought the morning message to the Bethel College Mennonite Church on July 9. Rev. Penner is a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Penner, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, and a nephew to Dr. P. A. Penner. He is pastor of a congregation of over 2,000 members.

—The Brotherhood of the Swamp Charge, Quakertown, Pa., has completed a cabin for leaders on the Men-O-Lan retreat grounds. It has been named "Ober-Shel" in honor of Rev. J. H. Oberholtzer and Rev. A. B. Shelly, who formerly served the West Swamp Church. Pictures of the two men have been placed in the cabin.

—The Deep Run Church has completed a kitchen workers' cottage on the Men-o-lan retreat grounds. This was built in honor of Rev. A. M. Fretz.

—"Crops are yielding over the average around Deer Creek, (Oklahoma)." So wrote Herbert Miller, pastor of the Deer Creek Church on June 19. Brother Miller helped harvest.

—Wholesome Recreation: The Hoffnungsfeld C.E. of Moundridge, Kansas, held its annual picnic at the William Juhnke Grove near Elyria. The older people visited while the young folks played ball. The pre-school children also did justice to their physical abilty. After the refreshments everyone enjoyed a program of men's chorus, grls' trio, accordian music, and a talk by a young man on furlough. Rev. Gustav Frey closed with prayer. —Corr.

—It is reported that work on the completion of the third floor of the new hospital addition at the Bethel Deaconess Hospital at Newton, Kansas, is progressing nicely. Carpenters, plumbers, and electricians have been busy for some time setting partitions and getting the rooms ready for the plasterers who will be expected to begin their work next week. As previously reported the War Production Board has granted all necessary authorizations for the purchase of materials and equipment because of the urgent need of these additional facilities. Delivery of materials and equipment not already actually on the grounds has been assured and the hospital does not expect to encounter any undue delays in carrying this project through to completion. It is estimated that the cost of this third floor project will approximate $15,000 and will add eighteen beds to the existing facilities. The hospital is also contemplating the purchase of new X-ray equipment and is currently making appeals to friends in the community and surrounding churches for support of the above projects. It is reported that the response to these appeals is very gratifying for which the hospital authorities are sincerely grateful.

—The book containing the Proceedings of the Second Annual Conference on Mennonite Cultural Problems, held at Goshen, Indiana, July 22, 23, 1943, contains many important facts and interpretations for workers in the Mennonite Church. The Bethel College Press, North Newton, Kansas, is taking care of the mailing and distribution of copies. The price is fifty cents a copy.

—Eden Mennonite Church, Inola, Oklahoma: "The Rev. Alvin G. Becker of Sterling, Kansas, gave a most inspiring message on "The Power of the Word." Rev. Becker is one of the representatives of the Northern Bible Society. During the evening services, held at the M.B. Church, he gave interesting facts about Africa, where he was at one time a missionary. He also reported on what the Northern Bible Society is doing."

—Col. Baden-Powell, the English militarist who founded the Boy Scouts organizations, was the commanding officer during a 217-day siege of the City of Mafeking during the Boer War.

—Officers elected at the recent Pacific District Conference are: President, Rev. Homer Leisy; Vice President, Rev. P. K. Regier; Secretary, Marvin Linscheid; Treasurer, John C. Jantz; Minister-at-Large, Rev. J. M. Franz. Officers elected by the Women's Missionary Society were: President, Mrs. Earl Salzman; Vice President, Mrs. Homer Leisy; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Elmer Widmer; Junior-Intermediate Advisor, Mrs. P. K. Regier; Cutting Advisor, Mrs. A. J. Richert.

—"Some men preach as though they have to say something, while others preach as though they have something to say."

—The brewing industry in the United States, according to a statement by a farmer and wholesale oil dealer, is using this year an amount of grain that would "provide a sustenance ration for the entire population of a half-dozen of the smaller nations of Europe."

—When Rev. Gerald Stucky recently visited the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, he showed kodachrome slides of views in South America and told of the dire need there. He presented the need as a challenge to our denomination.

—The Fairfield Mennonite Church, Fairfield, Pa., has been given a new Victor 16 mm. sound projector. Howard Musselman was the contributor.

—Although under doctor's orders not to speak to public gatherings, Rev. Sam J. Goering spoke to members of the Bethel College Mennonite Church on the evening of June 25, sharing many interesting experiences and insights of his trip to China.

—"Miss Helen Nickel, Mennonite missionary to India and a fellow worker with Miss Martha Burkhalter, is thought to be enroute to the United States at this time, according to a letter received here . . . by friends from Miss Nickel's sister, Mrs. P. R. Schroeder of Mountain Lake, Minnesota. In her last letter, Miss Nickel stated that she was on her way to Bombay to take a boat for the states." —Berne Witness

—Dr. A. Warkentin writes from Chicago: "I receive our papers regularly and read them with great care and much interest. They never have been so valuable to me as now. For some time I have had in mind to write a short article for The Mennonite on Bibles, but I lack the necessary energy. I have discovered six old Bibles in the Newberry Library in the Low German language. The oldest two are of 1478 and 1494, long before Luther printed his translation (1534). They are wonderful volumes and interesting to read. Let no one say that the Low German is not a language! Some day I would like to take a few pictures of those books and send them to you. We are all well. The Lord has been very gracious to us."

—Missionary P. A. Penner left June 20 for Manitoba, Canada, to speak at a mission conference and to transact some matters for the Foreign Mission Board.

—The Berne Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, used 114 plants for landscaping around church building and parsonage. Sidewalk and road improvements are also being made.

—The Middle District Conference will convene at Pulaski, Iowa, August 12-15.

—The Northern District Conference is to convene at Henderson, Nebraska, August 25-29.

—The Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago, Illinois, puts out a neat, mimeographed sheet entitled Kingdom News. On the front page of the present copy it announces the coming vacation Bible school. Child readers are confronted with the question, "What is the purpose of life?" They are told to ask parents, friends, and everyone, and then come for the opening session of Bible school. The church held a farewell service for the Henry Toews family on July 23. A little article on "Soap and Shoes" in the paper says,

"These are very commonplace articles to most of us (except to some boys), but they become very precious when scarce. Our Ladies Aid Society had a soap shower for relief. The soap will be sent to the Mennonite Central Committee and from there will find its way to the various parts of the world where it is needed.

"At the next Ladies meeting, to be held this Thursday, they will bring together used shoes for relief. The Relief Committee makes this suggestion as to shoes. They should have good soles and heels, with shoe strings, and cleaned and polished. The latter is very important because of the shipping and storing of such articles. Cleanliness is next to Godliness in relief work."

—An ice-cream social was enjoyed on the evening of July 4, by the Sunday School of the Eicher Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Noble, Iowa.

—New members on the Bethel College faculty this coming year will be: Mrs. Erwin Goering, Miss Minnie Harms, Cornelius Krahn, and Herbert Wiebe. Both Mrs. Goering, and Mr. Krahn have taught at Bethel in former years. Mrs. Erwin Goering, who has an A.B. from Bethel and a Mus.M. from Sherwood, will teach piano and courses in music. For the past several years she has been serving in C.P.S. camps where her husband has been director. Miss Minnie Harms, who has an A.M. degree in French and also one in Spanish, has attended Bethel College and the universities of Kansas and Minnesota. She will serve as instructor in French and Spanish. She has taught in colleges in Oklahoma and Tennessee. Dr. Cornelius Krahn, who has an A.M. degree from the University of Wisconsin and a Th.D. degree from the University of Heidelberg, will teach Church History and German. For the past several years he has been professor at Tabor College, Hillboro, Kansas. Mr. Herbert Wiebe, with an A.B. from Bethel College and an A.M. degree from Colorado State College, will be Dean of Men and Director of Recreation and Student Labor, besides teaching Industrial Arts. Mr. Wiebe taught in the Hillsboro, Kansas, high school for many years. Last year he taught Industrial Arts at Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kansas. He also served as Dean of Men and Director of Employment at that school.

—Erwin C. Goering, who has been serving as Director of the C.P.S. Camp, Camino, California, has been appointed regional director of the C.P.S. camps and units in the Rocky Mountain area. He succeeds Brother Harry Martens, who goes as regional director to one of the eastern areas.

—The Burrton Mennonite Church recently spent a whole day of Christian fellowship in the Halstead Park. Sunday School and church services were held out in the open. It proved to be a great success. There were 115 present. At noon we had a basket dinner. It was a great day for our spiritual and physical welfare. —Corr., Evelyn Regier.

—In the afternoon of June 11, the West Zion Church held its semi-annual business meeting. One of the important matters to be taken up was the election of a deacon. Brother D. J. Huxman was elected and ordained on June 18. The Intermediate C.E. climaxed their year's activties with a picnic and a swimming party at the Athletic Park at Newton on the afternoon of June 25.

—The morning service messages of the Hoffnungsau Church for June 25 were given by Sister Lena Mae Smith and Rev. Henry Toews. Sister Lena Mae spoke in interest of the Bethel Deaconess Hospital. Rev. Toews, who now is in Chicago waiting for word to sail for Africa in company with Rev. and Mrs. George Neufeld, gave the church a message on "The Need for Laborers." Mrs. Toews spoke to the young women's Sunday School class. Rev. A. J. Dyck of the Hoffnungsau church, officiated at the communion service in the Buhler Mennonite Church, July 2. Rev. Franzen, minister of the Buhler Mennonite Church, returned, with his wife, from Canada, where he had been to see his mother, who is ill. —Rosella Dyck, Corr.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER

The newly organized Western District Sunday School Board has decided to edit a quarterly "leaflet" or paper. Contributions should be sent to Rosella Dyck, Inman, Kansas, before July 20. The contributions are to consist of material of interest to the Sunday Schools within the Western District. Any projects, special work, etc., may be sent in. A copy will be distributed to every church within the district.

Thank you, kindly!

Sincerely yours,
Rosella Dyck, Editor

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

West Swamp—The Summer Bible School was held with an average attendance of seventy-eight. The age limit was lowered to twelve years because of the shortage of teachers. The teachers and helpers were: Mrs. William Sell, Superintendent, Mrs. Earl Schmeck, Mrs. Elmer Mumbauer, Mrs. Clarence Rosenberger, Stanley Stauffer, Grace Sell, and Ruth Neuenschwander. —Arlene Rosenberger, Church Corr.

Schwenksville—On July 1, Morris DeHaven, for many years a deacon of the church, was laid to rest.

Lansdale—The congregation mourns the loss of William F. Yost who for several years served on the Church Council and also served as janitor of the church for seven years.

Souderton—Henry S. Detwiler has been named by the M.C.C. to serve as a relief worker in Palestine. Mr. Detwiler was formerly the Treasurer of the Eastern District Peace Committee.

Fairfield—Mr. Howard Musselman donated a new Victor 16 mm sound projector to the church recently. This gift is greatly appreciated and will be used for the presentation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Swamp Charge—In the June issue of the Church Messenger, the monthly church bulletin of the Swamp Charge, there is a picture of the workers cabin "Ober-Shel," built by the Brotherhood of the Charge. The name is in honor of two former pastors, J. H. Oberholtzer and A. B. Shelly.

Zionsville—The Christian Endeavor Society held a meeting on the church lawn, Sunday afternoon, June 25. Mrs. Howard Nyce discussed the topic.

Allentown—The pastor had charge of the meeting for the C.O.'s in the Allentown State Hospital, Thursday evening, June 29. The young people's choir rendered several numbers, and Mrs. Nyce delivered the message. A number of interested members and friends of the church accompanied the pastor and choir.

The First Quarterly Conference for the 1944-'45 Conference year will be held in the Flatland church, July 31.

The Fifteenth Joint Conference of Mennonites, Schwenkfelders, Brethren and Friends will be held in the Friends' Meeting House, Swede and Jacoby streets, Norristown, on July 8. In the afternoon Gladys Walser, missionary in Tokio 1916 to 1942, will deliver an address on "A Constructive Attitude Toward Our Enemies After the War." In the evening there will be a panel discussion on the theme, "Conscience."

Rev. Harold D. Burkholder, pastor of the East Swamp Church, delivered the message at the Tent Evangel in Allentown, June 18.

Rev. Howard G. Nyce, pastor of the Allentown—Upper Milford Charge was elected Vice President of the Allentown School of the Open Bible at its annual business meeting. On the following evening he was elected Vice President of the Allentown Fundamentalist Fellowship.

Souderton—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gottshall, Thomas Miller, and Mrs. Henry S. Detwiler recently visited the M.C.C. headquarters at Akron, in Lancaster County.

Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel would like to have as soon as possible the names of volunteers to help in the kitchen at Men-O-Lan Retreat Grounds. The retreats will be held July 20 to 30. —Conf. Corr.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGE

thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Can anything be clearer? Indeed a person can not be a happy Chirstian if he doesn't know whether he is saved or not. Beloved, are you saved? You can know it. Look at the text again, and rejoice that you can be a child of God.

The Earth is the Lord's

The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." Psalm 24:1.

"The life in Christ cannot be known fully until we surrender everything to Him. Such a otal surrender does not mean just a total surrender of our sentiments and good intenions, but, as well, the total surrender of the job that is ours, the business we do, the day-y-day plans and the skills and all our earthly possessions—we must look upon it all as he Lord's." —Esko Loewen (See article on page 5)

EDITORIALS

Shall we discontinue the Daily Devotional Messages? There have been some suggestions that we do so.

It is admitted that some very good messages have been presented. However, it seems that very few people use these messages for their daily devotions. Some families use the Bible only. Others depend upon such devotional helps as The Upper Room, The Quiet Hour, etc.

We wonder how our readers would feel about the omission of the Daily Devotional Messages? We can't know your attitude unless you inform us of it. Therefore, won't you, dear reader, send us a postcard stating whether you are in favor, opposed, or neutral to the omission of the Daily Messages. You might also state whether you use these messages regularly. Just a few words on a card may help us greatly. Thank you!—

"Mental violence is just as real as physical violence, more subtle but just as futile because of the reactions which follow it." These words by a seminary president, who is a "peace-maker," have been confirmed again and again in those encounters in which mind sought to knock out mind. The aggressive mind which seeks to invade another mind soon finds a bristling wall of defense. Mental violence is as real as physical violence and is just as much out of place.

ONE USE OF SPIRITUAL ARMOR

Herewith we present a news release as recently received from New York. It needs little comment. The heading and the italics are by the editor.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"In ministering to the spiritual needs of our fighting forces, the Church is making a solid contribution and a greatly appreciated contribution to our coming victory," declared Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Pacific Fleet Sunday, June 18.

Speaking from Honolulu, Admiral Nimitz paid high tribute to the 10,000 chaplains in the Army and Navy and cited several outstanding instances of their heroic conduct under fire.

"To wage this war America has turned out the best weapons and equipment of which our advanced industrial technology is capable," he pointed out. "Many months have been spent in training our citizen Army and Navy in the use of these weapons. Every effort has been made to harden the muscles of our fighting men, increasing their physical ability to accomplish their difficult tasks."

"But even the finest weapons and the skill to use them, and the stamina to keep them in sustained use," he added, are not enough. There must be added t these things a spiritual armament to give the strengt born of simple faith and the ultimate triumph of th Christian ideal through the world."

M.C.C. Workers Help

The pulpit of Calvary Mennonite Church, Me chanics Grove, Pa. is vacant since the resignation o Rev. Sylvan S. Lehman. Substitutes must be foun to supply the pulpit on Sunday mornings. For th month of June the Calvary Church Council provide the supply speakers.

For July the Secretary of the Home Mission Boar asked the General Conference men and woman a the Mennonite Central Committee to furnish th supplies for July. Among the workers it was agree that they would do so. This is greatly appreciate and is easily done since Akron is only about twelv miles from Lancaster and Mechanics Grove is easil reached from Lancaster.

In the meantime the Home Mission Board an Calvary Church Council are cooperating in finding new leader for Calvary and the work in Lancaster.

Canning for C.P.S.

Frequently inquiries come to us about the C.P.S. unning program. Since the Missionary News and 'otes is not published for July and August I take this pportunity to share with the women of General onference churches the following letter received ometime ago from Mr. Snyder of the M.C.C. and make known the action of our Executive Commite on this point.

Last year through the district officers of the Vomen's Missionary Association representatives were ppointed in various communities to handle arrangeents for the canning. In some instances it was ound that since each church needs to have its own anning sponsor anyway there was loss of time and uplication of effort in consulting with community epresentatives. After consulting with the district fficers of the societies the Executive Committee sugests that this year each society or church appoint s sponsor to be responsible for securing of labels nd sugar ration points and the keeping of records. n most societies this was done at the June business neeting.

Where it has worked well to handle it through a ommunity or conference representative that of course s left up to each community. We would suggest hat the local or district peace committee be notified f the appointment at an early opportunity to insure he best cooperation for the collecting and packing of he canned goods.

Helpful suggestions for the work can be found in he "Gifts in Kind" folder and "Suggestions for Canning and Drying for Mennonite C.P.S. Camps" pubished and distributed by the M.C.C. Anyone desirng copies may write the undersigned or to the M.C.C.

Sincerely Yours,

Canning for C.P.S. Camps

May 29, 1944

We are pleased that the Women's Missionary Association is again planning to assume an active part in helping to provide food for the operation of our Mennonite Civilian Public Service camps. This is a fine testimony of your interest in the men who have chosen Civilian Public Service instead of service in the armed forces.

Your Women's Missionary Association for the General Conference should feel free to write the folks in your various districts in furthering the first phase of the work. The second phase of collecting and shipping should be done cooperatively by all constituent conferences of the Mennonite Central Committee. Collection centers will be set up at various points to make it most convenient for the people to dispose of the goods that they have prepared. Local arrangements committees will decide the location and persons in charge of each collection center from which the type of food and quantities received will be reported to Akron. Later in the season shipment will be made from the centers.

Last year the General Conference program was handled very similar to the way we would like to see it this year in that the Women's Missionary Association looked after the early part of the program and the Peace Committee appointed people to attend to the packing and shipping.

You asked if there was too much writing to M.C.C. Headquarters last year by the local canning groups. We did not feel that there was too much. In fact, if the local canning groups request labels and sugar ration points directly, it relieves your leaders of considerable detail. It will be quite satisfactory for . . . local canning leaders to write for sugar ration points and labels as they did last year. Several conferences, however, have asked that these matters be handled by one person. It is entirely a question of how you find it most convenient to work.

The Kansas people should plan to purchase most of the jars to be used in the canning program. This should be at wholesale if at all possible. Mennonite grocers are frequently willing to let the canning groups have the jars at cost for this purpose. The jars sent from Kansas to California will be retained in the camps for use in their own canning program or for distribution to the canning groups in California. This will be more economical than shipping the empty jars a great distance. The Colorado camps will have only a limited number of jars available and there, at present, you should not plan on receiving jars from them. Those folks who marked their jars "to be returned" last year may replace them at M.C.C. expense. These should be preferrably at used jar prices though they may be new if used jars cannot be purchased.

We have tried to give you a broad outline of our plan for the over-all program. You may write us if you have any questions that should be clarified. May the Lord bless the efforts of the Women's Missionary Association in its endeavors.

Sincerely yours,
Mennonite Central Committee
(Signed) Wm. T. Snyder

Relief Work in India

The Mennonite Relief Committee of India was organized in the spring of 1942 at the request of the Mennonite Central Committee of America for the purpose of doing relief work should the need arise. (Our own American Mennonite Mission, at the same time, received a communication from the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities also encouraging us to help in the formation of such an organization among the different Mennonite Missions in India.) The first representative meeting was held at Champa, C.P., on April 9, 1942. At that time a relief program was discussed, a constitution adopted, and an organization effected in which each cooperating mission was allowed membership according to the number of her missionaries. All the Mennonite missions appointed representatives according to their respective quotas as follows: American Mennonite Brethren (Hyderabad) two members, Brethren in Christ (Saharsa) one member, General Conference Mennonite (Champa) two members, Mennonite Brethren in Christ (Rangadih) one member, an the American Mennonite (Dhamtar) two members. Thus the organization consists of eight members and represents five missions.

When Begun

The M.R.C.I. was formed at a time when war refugees were pouring into India from Burma and just as we were gathering for our first representative meeting, we learned of the bombing of an Indian port. So it appeared that we would soon have a number of war sufferers to care for, and we made preparation for the task. We were indeed glad, however, when the enemy suddenly left the shores of India, and the possibility of war sufferers became less. Then, too, the refugees from Burma were in the main soon taken care of, since most of them were Indians who had been living in Burma. Now they returned to their former homes and were soon assimilated in their respective communities.

Great Need and Few Workers

Even though the anticipated need of helping war sufferers in India did not materialize, our Committee has had opportunities of helping the needy and suffering ever since its founding. The first great need presented itself in the fall of 1942 when a cyclone and tidal wave struck a portion of Bengal Province destroying many liv and homes. There was also a great loss of livestoc and in the crops just ready for harvest. Represent tives of our Committee at once went to the area destruction and after investigating conditions ga some financial assistance to worthy agencies whic were ready to give immediate relief. We were gla to give help in this way, since we could spare workers at that time and also since it was hope that conditions would improve in a few months. B additional factors arose which made the situatio worse, and by September, 1943, severe famine cond tions prevailed in and around Calcutta. By Octob we were definitely committed to a relief program our own for Bengal in spite of our shortage of missio workers. Fortunately, the Brethren Goering an Graber arrived in India just at this time and we

THEY STARVED TO DEATH—"A number of children ready for burial. The bodies have been stripped of clothing which is again used by the family or sold at the bazaar." This is the explanation under the above picture which appears in the book, "Feeding the Hungry, Russia Famine, 1919-1925." Although this is not a picture of present famine victims in India, China, Europe, or elsewhere, it does suggest the tragedy which has overcome millions in the past few years and is still haunting thousands upon thousands. It is estimated that during 1943 one million people starved in Honan Province, China, alone. How many millions have starved in Europe because of the present war we do not know. (See the report on relief conditions in Europe in another part of this paper.) Brother Sam Goering tells of walking out into the streets of Calcutta in the morning and seeing the dead being picked up from the street and being thrown into trucks and hauled away. Relief workers who traversed the flood area referred to in the above article, tell how white, round objects which looked like stones turned out to be the skulls of flood victims which had not been buried or disposed of in some way. We thank God that we have been able to do something about this terrible need. Through the Mennonite Central Committee we have done and are doing relief work in India, Paraquay, and in Europe. Plans have been made to do relief work in China. The above picture is used through the courtesy of the Mennonite Central Committee.

Hagerstown Farm and Community School

By Esko Loewen

After eight hours of digging post holes and ilding fence, which is the main job throughout the ır, the thirty men at the Clearspring, Maryland P.S. unit come in to the unit's farm home and dy agriculture, farm life, and rural Christian com- nity living. During evening hours, they listen to iculture men from the University of Maryland or m the Department of Agriculture in Washington. they hear church leaders speak on the family, on ırchwork, on recreation, and community life.

For four months this has been the schedule of s unit of men. They make up the special school the Farm and Rural Community. The school was nned having in mind those campers who plan to e in a rural community or to be farmers when y are released. It was not planned for a highly ined group of men who would be technicians on farm and community when they are released. ther, the school was planned for men who look ward to being regular dirt farmers and lay people the community in which they will settle. Men h eighth grade schooling and men with college grees study together and they both benefit from school and from each other.

THE PROJECT — Fences, fences, fences. But along with this the men are able to observe first hand the mistakes and achievements of the farmers throughout the county in which they work. They are making up their minds about what is good and what is bad farming.

The men at the school come from nine different tes. They come from farming areas which are te different from each other. The California re- sentative, who comes from Reedley, lives in an irrigation section, a number come from Oklahoma and Kansas in the semi-arid country, others come from Iowa, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania where the country is more humid.

These men also come from sixteen different C.P.S. camps. They were chosen out of 170 applicants as being men deeply interested in such a school and came to Maryland last January from all over the country. As a result, there are many opportunities to compare notes on the different camps, their work programs, and the way they operate. After having seen many pictures of the waste of erosion, forest fires, and poor management, as well as after working in areas spoiled by human hands, there is a deep and strong consciousness of the duty to conserve God-given natural resources.

Where the Men Work

The Clearspring camp is located on one side of the Cumberland Valley in Western Maryland. The farm on which the unit lives has some 200 acres and sets at the foot of a mountain range. Washington County, Maryland, where the unit is located, is to the minds of most of the campers only an average county for farming. Most of the fields have rock outcroppings around which the farmers must plow and cultivate. Much of the land has rock within a foot or so below the surface. All this makes farming look quite hopeless to campers who are used to fields without a rock in them.

Generally the appearance of the farms do indicate they are only average. However, a Mennonite community in the northern part of the county looks stable and prosperous. A large percentage of the farms are tenant-operated.

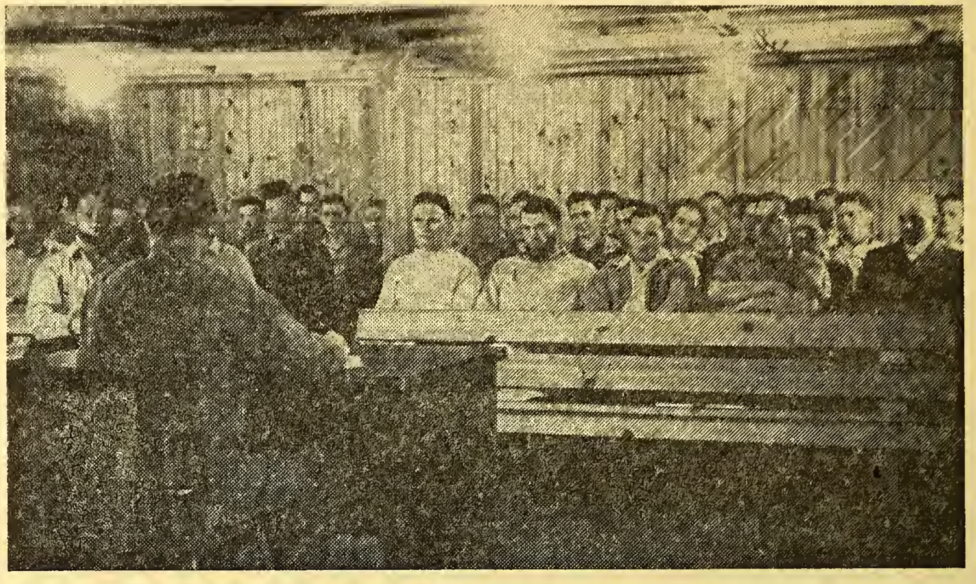
The concern of Soil Conservation Service about the county is that much of the land now cultivated be returned to pasture or wood lot. Many farms cultivate steep slopes, thus only inviting soil erosion. The big job of S.C.S. has been to fence off these steep slopes so that they can be returned to pasture. So much of the work is building fence.

The County has a rather battle-scarred history. A few miles distant from camp is the Antietam battlefield, where the famous bloody battle of Antietam was fought during the Civil War. To the West in the hilly mountainous region, are numerous forts, old Indian forts, recalling the old frontier days when whites and Indians clashed in this region. The farm on which the unit lives also bears traces of war. For it was on this farm that field artillery was tested during World War I. Back on the mountain side, a concrete trench still stands and some of the barracks used at that time still remain. The men have found shells shot twenty-five years ago. In such a setting is the C.P.S. unit located.

Why the School?

The school has a specific life situation in mind—the Mennonite rural community. It does not have a specific occupation in mind because there are many occupations possible in a Mennonite rural community. But, special study and attention has been given to farming because most of the men attending the school will someday be farmers. So, one could sa that the school has centered its attention on t farmer in the various life situations he will face the Mennonite rural community.

This makes the scope of the school very broa It is not an agricultural school, although agricultu is prominent in the study. Of equal importan has been a study of the individual and his churc his school, the community farm organizations, t business life of the community, mutual aid in t community, the large mission of the church, a how it influences individuals in the community.



A CLASS SESSION — Classes were held three nights a week and this picture is typical of the sessions held. Besides this the men had a library available and made special studies. Visual education was also a weekly feature.

The Approach of the School to Its Subject

Psalms 24:1 says, "The earth is the Lord's a the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dw therein."

The whole approach of the school to its study w from such a sense of being completely the Lord The life in Christ cannot be known fully until surrender everything to Him. Such a total surrend does not mean just a total surrender of our sen ments and good intentions. but as well, the to surrender of the job that is ours, the business do, the day-by-day plans and the skills and all c earthly possessions—we must look upon it all as t Lord's. When that is done by us, then in truth recognize that "the earth is the Lord's and the fuln thereof; the world, and they that dwell therei When we see ourselves as God's stewards and that our "possessions" are in reality God's and plac in our hands for a brief period to be used to H glory, then our everyday tasks of tending the cat and pigs, working the soil, and harvesting the cro is a great and noble task—one that can be a gr mission for us to be done to the honor and glo f God our Creator. The first speaker laid this foundation for the school in his message.

In order to achieve such a consecrated life, the chool centered its study in two areas. First, is he individual's relationship to the church and the ommunity. Mennonites have always looked upon he family and the community as being important nfluences on the life of the individual. For this eason the family and the community both are important and it is the church brotherhood's concern nd duty to make them what they ought to be.

The second point of study was the individual's ife work. In this case, since almost all those at he school plan to farm, the study was on farming. s stewards of the land, the men studied under the xpert direction of well-trained agricultural leaders. hese leaders, also, expressed themselves in the same ein as the church leaders. They were much conerned that the family farm be maintained and stressed he importance of sound community life. They ointed to Mennonite communities challenging them o maintain their strong community life, feeling it was of essential importance.

THE UNIT'S FARM HOME—The unit is located on a 200-acre farm where crops and stock is being raised and cared for. The school has a natural farm setting for the subjects being studied.

There is a strong fellowship among the group at Clearspring. They have a keen enthusiasm for the school and do lots of joking, arguing, and serious study and thinking both while on project and in camp. Although week upon week of fencing, digging post holes, etc., becomes very monotonous, the men have lots of fun about it. As one camper said, "We're fencing off Maryland to give it back to the Indians." But, while they are at work, they are also looking forward to getting on their own farm and getting started, making their work and life an humble and noble witness to their faith.

Janet Soldner to be Ordained

The Lord willing, Sister Janet Soldner, R.N., of Berne, Indiana is to be ordained as a missionary nurse for Columbia. She has already had some good experience as nurse. She is to go along with the other four, Brother and Sister G. B. Stucky, Mary Becker, and Laverne Rutschman.

All mission friends are invited to a prayerful participation in this service, which is to take place in her home church, Berne, on Sunday July 23, 10 a.m. Brother D. J. Unruh, a member of the Board, is to officiate.

The Executive Committee of the General Conference has just recently decided in favor of starting this new mission, which will begin with the untainted children of the many lepers near Bogota. May the Lord bless this new mission as he has blessed the Leper Asylum and the healthy children of lepers in India.

In behalf of the Board,
P. H. Richert, Sec.

RELIEF NOTES

Relief Conditions in Europe

Greece

The Greek War Relief News Letter of 12-21-43 gives a tragic picture of 5,000 abandoned children in Athens, some of whom were so young, when left homeless, that the canteens provided for them are the first resemblance of home they can remember. (Famine Relief Committee Letter of March, 1944)

Poland

According to the latest report from Poland, issued in London in January the number of Polish children in urgent need of food and clothing relief is about 525,000. There are practically no Jewish children left on German-occupied territory. The allocation of food received by the Polish children under the rationing scheme covers about fifteen per cent of their actual requirements. (Famine Relief Committee Letter of March, 1944)

France

Children are underweight. Low blood pressure and anemia are common. In Bordeaux, 46 per cent of blood donors had to be rejected. Rickets is very common. Tuberculosis has risen 20 to 30 per cent. The proportion of still births is higher than ever. (New York Times Editorial, 3-13-44)

Belgium

According to official statistics, the number of registered cases of advanced tuberculosis in Belgium has increased from 69,000 in December, 1941, to 109,500 in February, 1943. All reports from hospitals and charity organizations show that the children are particularly affected, and in industrial districts two-thirds of them are either tubercular or threatened with tuberculosis. (Famine Relief Committee, London, 1-22-44)

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

Rev. Howard G. Nyce, Allentown, Pa.

JULY 24—"Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?"—Psalm 139:7. Read Psalm 137:1-12.

Why does the thief or the criminal hate the idea of being caught? The reason is that he doesn't want to face the judge. Thousands upon thousands of people, even though not professing Christianity, dread the thought of death because they know that they must meet the Judge; yet, in spite of it, they will not confess that Christ died for their sin and accept Him as their Lord and Saviour. Dear friend, read this lesson over again and note that nothing can be hid from God. On the other hand, if you accept Christ as Saviour, your sin will be forgiven and "cast into the sea of forgetfulness, never to be remembered against you anymore."

JULY 25—"Let my prayer come before thee: incline thine ear unto my cry; for my soul is full of trouble." Psalm 88:2,3. Read Psalm 88.

On the morning of the invasion, a radio commentator said, "People of all faiths are praying to God, yes, people who haven't thought about God for a long while, are turning their eyes heavenward and praying." How ridiculous for such people to cry to God. God only hears the prayer of His children. The only prayer of the sinner is the prayer of mercy and repentance when he accepts Christ as Saviour. The Psalmist, David, knew God. It was right for him to cry out to God when his soul was full of troubles. What is your relation to God?

JULY 26—"Ye are the light of the world." Matt. 5:14. Read Matt. 5:13-16.

It is inspiring to hear a group of children sing the chorus, "This little light of mine, I'm going to let it shine." How much more brightly these little lights would shine if the children received the proper home training which is lacking in so many places today. The text is taken from the sermon on the mount and was uttered by Jesus who said of Himself, "I am the Light of the World." Our light will shine only as we receive light from Him who is THE LIGHT.

JULY 27—". . . Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you."—Acts 1:8. Read Acts 1:1-12.

What is wrong with many churches today? They do not have power. Why don't they have power? The reason is that members of the church are not Spirit-filled. Instead of the preaching of The Word, they substitute a social gospel, and because of the absence of the power of the Holy Ghost they need to entertain their members in order to try to hold them. The Spirit-filled minister will preach The Word and non-Christians will either find Christ as Saviour or cease to come to church. But the commission is "Preach the Word," and when you have the Holy Ghost you will have power.

JULY 28—". . . This is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully." I Peter 2:19. Read I Peter 2:18-25.

A man may point his finger at you for the stand you take, but if you do it with a pure conscience toward God, you will not mind suffering wrongfully. It is far better to follow the voice of conscience and have peace of heart and mind than to do something contrary to your conscience and suffer agony of mind. On the other hand we not only follow the voice of conscience, but Paul says to suffer wrongfully for obeying the voice of conscience is thankworthy.

JULY 29—"Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." I Peter 5:6. Read John 13:1-17.

As followers of the Lord Jesus, we should frequently read the lesson suggested so that we might remember the lesson of humility which he taught His disciples. Then too, remember the lesson concerning the seat of honor at a wedding. Jesus said, don't take the highest place lest the host inform you that you should take another seat and that it is better to take the lowest seat and be asked to take the seat of honor. We should always be humble before God. In due time, if we are elevated to a higher place, He will exalt us. It is good to know we are in His Will.

JULY 30—"And all that believed were together and had all things common." Acts 2:44. Read Acts 4:32-5:11.

This passage is often misunderstood. It does not teach communism as some would have us believe. To have unity of mind and purpose is good. God has never asked the Christians to share everything they had so that all would be alike. The carrying out of Ananias and Sapphira because they lied to the Holy Ghost was the wrapping up of communism as far as the Word is concerned. This is written to reveal a terrible blunder the early Christians had made. Just read the last verse of the suggested lesson and you will see that it was not in accordance with the will of God because "great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things."

JULY 31—"Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and everyone that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." I John 4:7. Read I John 4th chapter.

As my closing meditation I want to call attention to this very important passage. As individuals we may not always agree on all things, but there is no reason why we should not cooperate. If we can not co-

Why Go to Retreat?

By Stanley Stauffer

Summer is here again and with it comes the annual :treat.

To me the word "Retreat" means just about the pposite of the dictionary meaning. True, one does :treat from the hustle and bustle of the world. But ı this retreat from the world I feel we advance to-ards God.

When we come to "Retreat" we leave our radios ıd glaring news headlines behind.

The only things you see and hear are the sights ıd sounds of nature. So in the beginning we are ready drawn closer to our Creator. I think anyone ho has been around a campfire at twilight cannot :lp but feel the closeness of God.

Then come our friends who surely have an interest Christ or they would not be at Retreat.

The attitude of all "Retreaters" is a very friendly ıe. And it is indeed a thrill each year to make :w friends and renew old friendships. I am sure e softball and volleyball games will not soon be rgotten, especially, by those who took part in them. dare not forget to mention the quantities of good od and milk which we always have at "Retreat."

The biggest part of the whole "Retreat" is the iritual strength and knowledge gotten there. With ıders such as we always have, the Christian know-ldge and experience available is priceless. With ıristian leaders such as these you cannot help but t something valuable from each period.

So after having been at "Retreat" for a few short ys, I feel sure that very few leave without feeling e need and the desire to live a better Christian life.

FROM GERALD STUCKY'S SCRAP BOOK

Guatemala City

About Guatemala. The city is exceedingly clean. is the first place that I've ever been that my ıscience smote me for spitting on the street. I ·k around to see if there is a policeman before ›ectorating. The streets are very clean. All over : city are scores of motor bikes—and instead of p lights, policemen are found at nearly every ner. It takes three men to run a small street bus. e man to drive, one to give you the ticket, and the third to tear it up. The cars seem to toot at every corner where here is no policeman. The first tooter wins. The people are so tiny that even I feel tall. The little women run around (literally) with a basket on their heads, a baby on their backs, and stuff in their hands. They certainly carry burdens down here. A woman here not only carries a baby before birth—but for a long time afterwards as well. I certainly missed it when I was a baby. What fun it must be to have all these rumble seat rides! The babies are tiny—and cute. The mothers seem to have no scruples about nursing their babies in public—many do it while walking down the street! About half the women one sees seem to be carrying a baby on their backs.... At first I thought that the women must be doing all of the work around here, but then I soon learned differently. The men too carry burdens—they carry tremendous burdens on their backs. I don't see how they do it. They are so little, yet they carry from 125-200 pounds on their backs. Some carry burdens weighing up to 125 lbs. for thirty miles! Even the wee little boys and girls trot after their mothers and daddies—carrying a proportionately heavy bundle on their backs. Every property has a fence. Most of them are made of mud. you know how the cities look with their streets walled. No front lawn. Patios for all. No doubt they are nice, but as Harry Peters said—"I don't like them." It portrays a philosophy of self-centeredness. Everything looks in. The outside is shut out by a big wall. Social interest here comes primarily when the higher-ups demand it.... I like the way they take pigs to the market. A pig is led around like we might lead a dog! Many of the homes are real works of art. They are very, very nice.

I think Guatamala is probably the Korea of this hemisphere. Though there is yet much need, yet practically every city here has an evangelical witness.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Gnadenberg Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas: Three of our young couples have been married this spring and summer, namely: Olga Janzen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Janzen to Robert Zook, son of Harvey Zook; Luella Koehn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Koehn, Halstead, Kansas, to John Penner, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Penner; Laura Balzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Balzer to Henry Janzen of Fort Collins, Colorado. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. R. O.

Janzen. Our pastor, Rev. J. J. Voth, officiated at all three weddings.

—The Iowa Young People's Retreat will be held at Pulaski, July 29 and 30. The program will consist of music, discussion groups, and addresses, with Rev. Alvin Beachy, Normal, Illinois, as guest speaker.

—Rev. Howard Raid, pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna, Missouri, has a good basis for interest and understanding when the members of his church talk "farming." He writes of his parish farm, "... a number of men came several days in the early spring and pulled out the hedge in front, from the north corner all the way down to the church. Now we have some fine corn, potatoes, and muskmelons growing where once was hedge... the hogs that we had made about $100.00... another litter will be ready to go about conference time. We have a few over 200 pullets that will soon start to lay and some R.O.P. chicks that will make it by fall. We bought another cow, a Holstein. She has been fresh about seven months, and we still get five gallons a day. The other cow is also fresh now. So we get from 9½ to 10½ gallons a day, and sell about 8 to 9 gallons to a coop-milk drying plant at Marshall. We have made our hay—really had fine clover. Now the second cutting is more than a foot high."

—Miss Janet Soldner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Soldner, Berne, Indiana, has been accepted by the Foreign Mission Board as a missionary for the new field in South America. Miss Soldner, who is a graduate of the School of Nursing of the Bethel Deaconess Hospital, Newton, Kansas, served this past year as assistant supervisor and surgical nurse at the Community Hospital, Bluffton, Ohio. She also served as college nurse for Bluffton College. She will very likely leave for her work this fall.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

HEROES OF THE FAITH (2)

Hymns: "Come, Thou Almighty King;" "O Master, let me walk with Thee."

Scripture: I Corinthians 13

Leader: (Read before the scripture reading) This chapter has been called a "Song of Love." Its lyric and spiritual beauty has thrilled readers since early history. Recall its historical background. Paul wrote these words to his church members in Corinth, which in those days was the principal city of Greece. Like all large cities it contained great wealth, luxury, pleasure, and corruption. It possessed a large harbor and brought people of all the world to its streets. Naturally the Corinthian church drew its membership from these people. So it contained a mixture of Jews, Greeks of heathen background, Roman freedmen, and others. By profession they were probably dock-laborers, petty merchants, and slaves. After Paul left them their differences and national jealousies broke out. Imagine such a church today made up of all the community—Negroes, Jews, and Gentiles. Would similar difficulties arise? What did Paul do? He wrote them a letter (the above Scripture) and his inspired words on love showed these church people "a more excellent way." How well do we apply these teachings of love in our churches today?

St. Paul

His Life—Paul's life is perhaps the most dramatic of all the leaders in the long history of the Christian church. For the past months our Sunday School lessons have dwelt on it. Refer to them for further and more complete details.

Saul was the son of a tentmaker in the corrupt commercial, yet scholarly city of Tarsus. He was both a Jew and a Roman citizen. Ardent and zealous were his youthful days in the study of Moses' laws. Very early he became a student in Jerusalem and dreamed of the day when the Messiah would come and lead his people and make of them an invincible kingdom. With all his heart he thought he "loved the Lord." Paul never did anything by halves. Thus, he developed a burning hatred for the "blasphemous" followers of the Nazarene. He hurled his stones of indignation at the beautiful and courageous Stephen. He was hurrying to Damascus to exterminate more of Christ's followers when his tremendous conversion took place. From then on he was Paul, the Christian, who almost at once became Paul, the great missionary (His many journeys are well outlined in the Sunday School quarterlies). It was Paul who convinced his followers that Gentiles did not need conversion to Judaism. All that mattered was whether the convert was a "new man in Christ Jesus." It was Paul, too, who brought Christianity to Europ and into the western world. In Rome he met hi death as a Christian martyr.

His Teachings

Paul's teachings are many. We'll consider on of them—our Scripture Lesson with its teaching on Love. Henry Drummond's little book The Greatest Thing In the World summarizes verses 4-8 thi way. Love is a compound of nine factors: (Cop the following on the blackboard)

Patience—"Love suffereth long."
Kindness—"And is kind"
Generosity—"Love envieth not"
Humility—"Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffe up."
Courtesy—"Doth not behave itself unseemly"
Unselfishness—"Seeketh not her own"
Good Temper—"Is not easily provoked" Guilelessness—"Thinketh not evil."
Sincerity—"Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoicet in the truth"

Questions:

1. What do you consider to be Paul's outstandin contribution?
2. List the factors that help to explain Paul greatness.
3. Compare I Cor. 13 with Heb. 11.
4. Paul was born in a city and did most of h work in big cities. Is this an argument:
   a. Against rural life?
   b. For city life?
   c. For a city missionary outreach while mai taining strong rural communities?
5. What contribution does Paul make to the d trine of non-resistance? (Rom. 12:17-21; I The 5:15; Gal. 5:22-23).

able to lend their assistance in getting this work started before proceeding to China. The various Mennonite missions have been supplying Indian and missionary workers as much as it has been possible to do so. Since none of the missions could spare a missionary for more than one or two months at a time, we have been handicapped not only by a shortage of workers but by a lack of continuity in the directing of our relief program. It was a great boon to our work when Brother Graber on his return from China agreed to serve as Director of our Bengal Relief Program. This gave an impetus and hope for which we had longed, and we were greatly disappointed when Brother Graber was so suddenly called home. For the past few months the task has been rather heavy and trying for our workers in Bengal. But we are indeed grateful for the safe arrival in India of the Isaacs and Miss Schrag and for the fact that Brother Isaac has been loaned to the M.R.C.I. for a period of at least six months. He has just assumed duties as Director of our Bengal Relief Program, and Brother Vogt, who has been on the job since April, will continue a few weeks longer. Other helpers from our missions will continue to be used, but we are hoping that more help will soon come from America.

Help to 8,000

Our relief work in Bengal is carried on in villages outside of Calcutta in the 24-Parganas District, the three main centers being at Sonarpur, Champahatti, and Goria. The district magistrate has been very sympathetic toward our program and most helpful in various ways in the planning and carrying out of the relief work. From the beginning we have been distributing rice and clothing, and those suffering from malaria have also been given quinine. For the last few months we have also been giving milk to babies and children. This milk was shipped from the U.S.A. to the Friends' Ambulance Unit in Calcutta from whom we receive our supply without cost. Cloth and clothing have been purchased at very reasonable rates, and the Sisters' Sewing Circles of our Indian Church have made a number of garments for distribution. We appreciate the fact that the home Church has offered to send ready-made clothing and blankets, but thus far we have found it more practical and economical to supply such articles made in India rather than to import the same. At present about 8,000 people are receiving help from our organization. For many of these the help is of a supplementary nature as they are now able to provide some of their own requirements. Then too, about twenty-five per cent of those receiving food and clothing pay in part for the same, the charge being about one-half the cost. This is to encourage those who are able to help provide for their own needs. Without such stipulations our relief work could soon prove a hinderance rather than a blessing as many would gladly become subjects of a charitable organization rather than try to live independently. It seems that the motives of charity can easily be misunderstood and that even deeds of mercy may have a demoralizing effect. W desire to be among the merciful, praying that ou deeds may be seasoned with wisdom and justice.

Work Camp and Hospital

In addition to the above we have recently opene a work camp and hospital in Sonarpur within a shor distance of our headquarters. This Camp itself ha been provided by Government, and the District Magistrate took a very active interest in the constructio of the same and is following up our work with th same interest. The purpose of this camp is to provid work for the poor as they become fit for manu labor, and thus it is intended to help them back normal and independent living. The medical part the camp is also considered important. The inmat who are suffering from malaria, malnutrition, et need more than merely food to restore them to healt and others outside the camp can be touched by th agency. At present there are about twenty in-patien and sixty out-patients who are receiving attenti daily. An Indian doctor is in charge of the medic work.

Famine Past Its Crisis

How long should our relief program in Bengal co tinue? This question can not be answered definite now, but under the most favorable conditions for covery we feel that we can continue a worthwh project throughout 1944, and likely that will not he end of our task. The present Bengal famine has assed it crisis, and many of the relief agencies have losed their work. In Calcutta, in particular, the ituation has greatly improved. If a good rice crop harvested in the fall of 1944 we can hope for coninued and rapid improvement. Even though many elief agencies are now closing their work in Bengal, e are glad that our workers and the officials upon hose approval we must depend, feel that we have a nique task which should not terminate at this time. he future needs and opportunities will be closely udied, and we hope to continue the work in Bengal long as conditions warrant and as long as the efrts put forth make a real contribution to the cause Christ.

M.C.C. NEWS NOTES

Relief

rewell Service for Outgoing Workers

On June 30, at the daily devotional service at the Akn Office, farewell services were conducted for several rkers about to leave for relief work. Marvin Dyck, hitewater, Kansas, will be leaving on July 6 for service a hospital orderly at the Mennonite Unit at La Plata, erto Rico.

Elvin Souder, Souderton, Pennsylvania, and Orval ers, Sweetser, Indiana, are leaving from New Orleans ly 10, on an Argentine steamer, for Paraguay. They ve training along lines of legal and electrical enginring skills, respectively, and will serve in connection h the "thank-you" project for the Paraguayan Govment in return for the haven that was provided for Russian Mennonite immigrants in 1930.

arewell services were also held for Orie Miller who leaving for a visit to Paraquay. Brother Miller origily planned to leave New Orleans on July 3, but he has n detained by transportation irregularities for about week.

p Clothing to Middle East

uly 3, 186 bales of relief clothing, ten tons, left the rata clothing clothing warehouse for shipment to Middle East. The shipment consisted of mostly nen's and children's clothing to be distributed by relief workers to Greek and Yugoslav refugees in Middle East.

he permission to ship this clothing came after ths of negotiations with various government agencies he time the church was concertedly praying that f clothing could be sent to areas of need. (See yer Booklet," prayer request for May 18. Permission e on May 19).

. Miller Visits Colonists in Paraguay

the time this release appears, O. O. Miller will be is way to Paraguay. His trip is planned to enable e weeks in Asuncion and a possible visit to the ral Mennonite colonist groups in that country. Nine C. workers now represent and serve the Committee's ral interests and concerns in Paraguay under Bro- Willard Smith's direction and leadership. The addil workers under appointment are expected to reach field during July and August. Finally formulating coming year's program with Brother Smith and workers is the main occasion for the M.C.C. Secretary's visit. A three-days' visit to the Puerto Rican unit is planned on the return journey from Paraguay. M.C.C. Chairman, Brother P. C. Hiebert, will assume the work of the Executive Secretary during Brother Miller's absence.

Puerto Rico Briefs

The main emphasis at La Plata continues to be the building of the hospital and dormitory accommodations for the staff. P.R.R.A. has given more than $8,000.00 toward this work.

The Seven-months' Drought, the worst in Puerto Rico in twenty-five years, has finally broken, and the Island's electric current is back on 24-hour service. The fields are getting green again.

C.P.S.

New Director of Hospital Units

On July 1, J. N. Byler, Director of M.C.C.-C.P.S. mental hospital units, left his desk and began to prepare for his assignment as relief commissioner to the Middle East. The general directorship of the hospital units has been given to Albert Gaeddert, who is also general director of other M.C.C.-C.P.S. units and camps. Robert Kreider, formerly J. N. Byler's assistant, will now work with Albert Gaeddert in supervising the hospital units.

The map in the pamphlet, "Three Years in C.P.S.," showing the location of Mennonite C.P.S. camps in the United States, is now available in wall size, 17 by 21 inches. The sketch may be used for a poster to provide a better understanding of the extent of C.P.S. work, and the location of the camps. It may be secured for ten cents postpaid by ordering from M.C.C. Headquarters, Akron, Pennsylvania.

PEACE SECTION NOTES

The following statement has been prepared by Jesse Hoover, Secretary of the Peace Section, who is keeping abreast with developments in regard to post-war militarism in behalf of the Mennonite and Brethren in Christ churches:

"Since about the Middle of February we have kept rather constantly in touch with the developments in Washington in regard to the possible passage of a permanent conscription bill. From all indications the press releases concerning the imminence of such legislation were premature and unfounded.

"A part of this reticent attitude in relation to the passage of a permanent conscription bill at present may be due to the very determined opposition of a number of groups including the National Education Association, the National Child Labor Committee, the Congress of Parents and Teachers in New York City, the Convention of State Governors and probably many others. Doubt is now being expressed by those in high position as to the possibility of passage of such legislation during war time.

"However, by past experiences we have learned how quickly the situation may change. Not only do we need to be constantly alert to such encroachments, but we should be constantly in prayer that our Heavenly Father may over-rule all of these circumstances to His divine glory. 'More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of.' "

—Rev. Arnold C. Schultz announced his resignation as pastor of the Ebenezer Mennonite Church of Bluffton, Ohio, on June 25. He has accepted a call from Northern Baptist Theological Seminary to become head of the Old Testament department. The Seminary is located in Chicago and is the largest in the Northern Baptist denomination. —Church Corr.

—The Ebenezer Church, Bluffton, puts out a monthly church bulletin called the Ebenezer Bulletin. The editor wishes that his name might be placed on the mailing list of the Ebenezer Bulletin.)

—Rev. and Mrs. Gerald Stucky are the happy parents of a daughter, Judith Ann, who was born June 1.

—The C.P.S. unit at the Marlboro State Hospital, Marlboro, New Jersey, through their leader, Mr. Loris A. Habegger, asked Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Quakertown, to come and conduct open communion on Sunday, July 9. In order to accommodate everyone it was necessary to have two services, one at 5:15 P.M for those who work on the night shift and the next one at 7:30 P.M. for those on the day shift. Mrs. Neuenschwander accompanied her husband and visited with the wives of the men. Some of the men had missed communion in their home churches and had not had opportunity to participate in this sacred rite for almost two years.

—Miss Helen Nickel, in a recent letter, wrote to Miss Martha Burkhalter the following: "For days I thought I might be able to send you a telegram when I would arrive, saying that I almost caught up with you, but our waiting in Bombay dragged out five weeks and it was so warm and humid. But when we at last got on a ship it surely was a fast one, came through in record breaking time, one day less than a month (calendar). Of all the varied experiences and uncertainties we can talk when we shall meet.

"The Red Cross ladies in uniform surely did wonderfully well in welcoming us and arranging for a place to stay. Tomorrow I shall cable and send telegrams. It is a wonderful mercy to have arrived safe and well without mishap or incident. We surely will be able to compare experiences. Was happy to get a visa to stay in the states for a year so do not count on going to Saskatchewan this summer or fall but perhaps in April of '45." Helen.

The above letter is taken from the Berne Witness. It was written shortly after Miss Nickel landed in the United States in the first days of July. —"The past June was the driest June in the past thirty-five years." So reports the Berne Witness, Berne, Indiana.

—Rev. I. J. Dick, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, left on July 10 for a trip of five weeks, through Montana, Washington, Oregon, California, and Kansas. In Montana Brother Dick will visit the C.P.S. camp at Belton. Willard Unruh, educational director at Belton, is a son-in-law of Rev. Dick, having married Selma Dick. Mrs. Unruh is employed in Belton. This little village lies at the entrance to Glacier National Park. Rev. H. E. Wiens will be i charge of the services at the First Mennonite Churc during the absence of Rev. Dick.

Christian Service in a Yugoslav Refugee Camp in Egypt

Setting Up a Post Office

"The first job I tackled was the setting up of a Post Office. After quite a struggle I finally managed to get it going. A post mistress and two postal clerks have now taken over the responsibility and seem to be getting along all right. This post office, of course, is for the refugees and the three workers are of their group. For the past few days I have devoted most of my time to seeing refugees who have relatives in foreign countries, anywhere from Chile and New Zealand to Chicago, Illinois, but do not have their full names or addresses. I have gathered all the information I could from the refugees and have it all tabulated so that when a representative of the International Red Cross arrives here soon we may be able to locate some of these people through hat agency."

Inoculation Day

"On Tuesday and Wednesday the people of this amp were inoculated for typhoid and typhus. For his purpose two tents are erected with the partition valls between them removed. The people queue up nd go in two lines through the tents where the medical taff and helpers do the work. Since records must e kept of each person receiving inoculations, I helped n taking the names, number of each person's disc vhich he is supposed to wear around his neck, and is tent number. It is quite a job to get these acurately in the rush. On the first day we did 2049 noculations but the second day only 1339. We could ave done far more if the people had come."

Irrigation Plans

"Utilizing the water from the bath house for irriating some truck patches and gardens is one of the elds which we are investigating . . . The water from e Canal (Suez) is not far away if the pumps and ipes and other paraphernalia can be gotten. We are so investigating the possibilities of having these exerienced fishermen getting an opportunity to do some fishing and thus provide for their own kitchens . . . I secured some old rope a few days ago and also some old fishing nets. Yesterday we had some fishermen, who were experienced in rope splicing, make some rope rings for deck tennis."

Starting a Library

"Another project I should like to work on would be the establishment of some sort of library and reading room. Serbo-Croat books are not to be had but a good many read Italian and a few French and some German . . . As I speak to the educational representatives of the Yugoslav committee the one thing they ask for most often is "Would it be possible to get some English grammars and readers somewhere?" I understand a British society is having some printed in this area but I do not know when they will be ready. A few days ago we received a shipment of exercise books, pens, rulers, erasers, chalk, crayons, etc. Blackboards are needed very badly."

Sand Storms

"We are within fifteen minutes walking distance of the Canal (Suez) and occasionally I see our own flag which looks nice indeed. We have had two severe sand storms since I have been here—both times some tents have been blown down but fortunately mine has stayed up so far, although the last time I barely managed to save it. At such times everythings gets covered with sand and it is impossible to keep anything clean anywhere. Our dress suits and white shirts are getting a much needed rest for they are out of place in such a camp. On the other hand two khaki shirts and two pairs trousers are not enough and if we did not have good laundry services by Egyptians right in our own camp, we could never get along on that limited number."

Whooping Cough, Mumps, Worms, Etc.

"There are epidemics of whooping cough, influenza, chicken pox in the camp and today I discovered the first case of mumps. Almost every other patient has fever and a cough. How I wish I had sufficient cough syrup to go around. There are dozens of children here with round worms, also, and if we ever succeed in getting some santonin we will have a busy time with them. It will be the first experience of its kind to me. I feel I am learning a great deal and I really enjoy it. Dealing with these people does require considerable patience at times. On the other hand, they respond readily to sympathy and kindness as do human beings no matter from what part they come."

EDITORIALS

When "blue" try being thankful. That is a good way to make of the "blues" a mild case or to get rid of them. For when we are "blue" we tend to feel inadequate towards the conditions of life. Worry, insecurity, and fear tend to paralyze one with excessive tension. We become over-tensioned and feel "blue" as a result. Thankfulness, on the other hand, instigates thoughts and feelings of security and adequacy. It brings about a release of tension. As it does so, the individual returns to a more normal balance of tension and relaxation; he sees that life is not altogether easy, nor altogether hard. He again is happy.

Paul wrote to the Philippians, "Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." Fail to thank God and your requests soon become burdens of anxiety. Express them with thanksgiving for what God has already given you, and they become problems turned over to God for solution. As our feeling of need is balanced by a feeling of fulfillment, there comes to us a deep peace.

"That's your problem—not mine." This is an attitude of which we are guilty far too often. The other day a young, married school teacher expressed to me his concern about the fact that his home church was doing so little for its young people. His implication was that this church, which is a rural one, is not sufficiently concerned about the needs of youth. The situation in this church is undoubtedly typical of that in many others. The young people want to get together; they want social activities. The older, married people no longer have the same problem, for they have found a mate and established a home. Other problems concern them now. Forgetful about the needs of the young people they do little or nothing about them.

Yet the Christian attitude is that of being our brother's keeper, of looking not only upon our own things but also upon those of others. Yes, perhaps, the problems of the young people will in the end be solved without any planning from the older people. Things have a way of settling themselves—but often in a very imperfect way. Wise people plan. The church can and should plan for wholesome get-togethers. Before me is a bulletin from one of our churches. It has this invitation for the young people, "Fellowship gardeners are asked to be at the garden Wednesday evening for work. There are weeds to pull, beans to pick, and beets to pull." Another item in the bulletin says, "From the fellowship garden we have canned 99 quarts of beans, and 22 quarts of beets." In conclusion the reader is told, "A letter from the Hill City C.P.S. camp states that they received the fresh beans, sent to them from the Fellowship garden, in fine shape, and they were grateful to receive them."

The young people of this church have an opportunity to fellowship in constructive activity. The conditions of their fellowship draw out desirable traits. The settling of their fellowship is not artificial, surreptitious, or degrading. It is something definite and wholesome that can be looked forward to and enjoyed.

Some groups of young people sing for the aged and the sick. Others bring the good news of Christ to those in prison. Others do essential work for those handicapped by sickness. Some groups frequently have social or "fun" evenings. Some meet for prayer and Bible study. Some have a combination of activities. Young people can be given opportunities for fellowship.

Dear reader, if you know of a church that has done well in providing its young people with opportunities for fellowship, won't you describe this program for the youth section of this paper. Send your article to The Mennonite, North Newton, Kansas.

Is it to the glory of God to have in our churches emblems or services in honor of those who have chosen to participate in worldliness?

NOON HOUR WOMEN'S MEETINGS IN JAGDEESHPUR

By Hilda Dester

The time, 12:45 p.m., Friday. The church bell has ust called the group of women, mostly illiterate, together for a Bible class. It is the cool season, so vomen from two different settlements of our Chrisian community are meeting for an hour of worship nd Bible study under the big spreading, shady moaw trees on the church compound. The attendance aries from thirty to forty-eight, according to the mount of illness among the children in the families nd the rush of the house mother's duties. This year ve had a real epidemic of whooping cough, measles, nd dysentery. Very few babies are brought in the rms of the mothers. They are taking their noon est along with father and older brother or sister. So nother has a chance to give her attention to the esson. Many of the women are Christians of long tanding and have attended these classes as well as he Rainy Season Bible Classes for many years. They re quite well acquainted with the many Bible stories ve teach. But others have moved into our community rom outside villages where they did not have these rivileges. The majority listen with the closest atention and interest as we again relate the stories f the martyrs of the early Christian church as found the book of Acts. We also memorize Bible verses nd songs.

On Wednesday, at the same time, another similar roup in a nearby Christian settlement meets for the me Bible study under the spreading banyan tree in eir midst. And the third group in a village, about fteen minute's walk distance, meets on Thursday, the same hour, under the leafy boughs of a large angoe tree. At first I did mind not observing my on siesta, as had been my custom, but I have been ell repaid, for the fellowship with all these women s been a source of joy and great blessing to me well as to them. Neither has it been easy for em to hasten home after a morning of hard work, nany of these are laborers in homes, in fields, or rdens, or wherever work can be obtained,) prepare meal for the family, bathe, eat, and come to class. any came directly from bathing at the public tank, thout having eaten, only to hurry home again their ternoon tasks.

Now the hot winds will soon begin to blow, and will have to close our noon meetings until after the ny season. The Lord has been in our midst these st six months and has blessed all of us as we sat d studied his Word.

General Conference Recognition of Organizations and Institutions

(The following statement was discussed by the various conference boards when they met in joint session this past spring.—Editor)

The General Conference has found it advisable to discover ways of identifying individual ministers and congregations as belonging to the Conference fold. In order to avoid confusion, would it not be equally desirable for the General Conference to have some recognized procedure whereby organizations and institutions (such as hospitals, Bible Societies, orphanages, mission stations, schools, etc.) could establish official relationship with the Conference by making written application for such approval and affiliation including the privilege to solicit financial support from General Conference congregations?

Such application to be made through the respective General Conference Board which is charged with the oversight of the general type of service the applying organization or institution represents. If this Conference Board, after examining the aim and work of the applying organization or institution, favors such recognition it shall report its findings with recommendations to the Executive Committee of the General Conference for general review. If the Executive Committee, after careful consideration, also favors such recognition it shall report its findings and recommendations to the General Conference in delegate session for consideration and action. Naturally, Conference congregations are expected to abide by Conference action regarding the recognition of organizations and institutions.

In considering the advisability of such General Conference recognition, consideration shall be given to such questions as:

1. What is the proposed aim, scope and character of the work, and how does it harmonize with General Conference aims and methods of work?

2. Is there a need for the proposed organization or institution in our Conference enterprise?

3. Would its work overlap with that of organizations and institutions already serving our Conference?

4. Is the Conference able to carry the proposed work?

5. Does the organization or institution profess wholehearted adherence to the General Conference statement of faith, its constitution and its work?

6. Is the organization or institution prepared to arrange for a majority representation on its Board of Control to be elected by our General or District Conferences?

7. In general, how would recognition of the organization or institution under consideration affect the best interest and the peaceful upbuilding of Christ's cause in our Conference and among our churches and people?

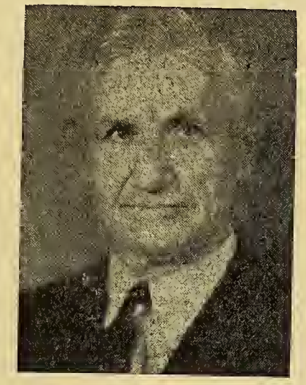
What I Saw in the C.P.S. Camps

By Lester Hostetler

In a recent three-weeks' tour which took me to a ozen or more camps and side camps in Utah, Idaho, Iontana, and Nebraska, I saw many things which eartened me. Also some things which surprised me id made me ask questions. Upon the suggestion of ie editor, I am glad to share with readers of The Iennonite some of these observations.

Starting Fourth Year

I saw men starting their fourth year in C.P.S. They e wondering how much longer it will last. They ng for D-day—dismissal from camp and departure r home. They have accepted camp e and benefitted by it in many ways id are grateful for the friendships they ive struck up, and they appreciate the ternative it offered them to military rvice. They are not always sure that e work they do is of national impornce; but they feel they can do it witht staining their hands with human ood, and that is what really matters. iey do not like camp life, and I for e do not blame them. Young men not made to live in camps permantly. They are made to live in homes, families, and in churches. These the products of peace, and every normal young in desires them.



Rev. Lester Hostetler

Various Types in C.P.S.

I saw different types of men living and working ;ether in the same camp—various kinds of Mennoes, Methodists, Presbyterians, Mormons, Jehovah's tnesses, and some of no religious affiliation. A W." in one of the camps, a likeable fellow in many ys, is characteristically zealous. He tries by argunt and offers of free literature to make Christians t is, "J.W.'s" of all the rest. He is not an objector war, only to the draft. He claims to be a minister, all "J.W.'s" are supposed to be, though not orned. His religious ideas are not rooted in sound rpretation of history and the Bible, but his zeal fearlessness is truly apostolic and is in striking trast to some of our apologetic and timid Menites both in camp and in the home church. Our 1 will become keener and broader as a result of contact with different types of religious beliefs.

saw a number of our boys at work in mental pitals. There is at first something repulsive about work. The actions and facial distortions of some ents make your flesh creep and your hair stand end. Some are so uncouth in their helplessness they make you want to get away. Many of our have the same feeling when first assigned to this work. But after a while they begin to like the work, and soon they start taking a personal interest in the patients and become attached to them. A few of our boys have been found to be unadapted by temperament for this kind of work and had to be reassigned. But most of them make a success of it. It is a work of mercy inspired by the Christ who healed the sick of palsy and those possessed of devils and evil spirits, though modern doctors diagnose these ills in different terms.

In normal times over 50 per cent of hospital beds in America are for mental patients. After the war this will be greatly increased because of the many patients whose lives have been wrecked by the conflicts to which war subjected them. I have not found many of our young men who look forward to mental hospital work as a life task, but I see no reason why some should not become interested through their C.P.S. experience and go into specialized training for this type of service.

Looking Ahead

I saw men who were concerned about their future work after they are through with C.P.S., but not many. Their principal concern is not what to do when they get out, but rather when they will get out. I talked with many who had definite plans for the future—on farms, in business, in school, or in offices. A few plan to finish their education and enter upon full time religious work. Their days in camp have resulted in this decision. There are some who feel that the home church is too much concerned about their future finances and not enough about the moral and spiritual support they give the boys now. They are not so much interested in whether the church will give them a farm or a job as they are whether the church back home is sincere and true to the faith which C.P.S. symbolizes, whether they are making a clear-cut Christian witness in this time of crisis, or whether church members are compromising and hedging whenever expediency and the making of profits dictates. They are more disturbed about this question than any other that faces them.

Home Canned Goods

I saw in the camp cellars and storage rooms row upon row of canned goods that were provided by people in the home churches. Everywhere there was appreciation expressed for this. A government superintendent who dines with the boys in a side camp suggested that inasmuch as many of the cans bear labels with the names and addresses of the donors, that the men send them their word of appreciation on a post card. In some instances there seemed to be an over supply of vegetables and not enough fruit. But each community must can what is available, and we can be sure that all will be put to the best possible use.

Health

I saw that the men in camp are in good health and physically fit. Their material needs are well cared for. This is as it should be. Most of the men are engaged in hard, out-of-door, physical work. They should have the best of food in as large quantities as they desire. I am strong for this point. There is no substitute for an abundant supply of good food in keeping up the strength and morale of a group of men. Most of these men will come out of camp with tough physical fibre and in the best of health to tackle any job that is assigned them.

Community Relations

I found that our boys are on the best of terms with the government men under whom their work is done, and in most cases with the people in the community, including the soldiers. They have little fear that they will not be able to get along in post war days with the men who went into the armed service. They fear only the parents of such men. The young men seem to understand each other. The older people are apparently going to be the flag wavers and fomentors of discord. I was told of a ball game in which the contestants were a team from a Japanese-American barbed wire camp and a team from the C.P.S. Their umpire was a soldier in uniform. There wasn't a bit of trouble, and they had a grand game. The post war game in any community will depend for its spirit upon the good sense and fair play which various groups show toward each other. I believe the younger generation will find a solution for this problem.

C.P.S. Marriages

I saw a number of married men in camp and some who plan to be married. I see no reason for discouraging C.P.S. marriages provided the parties concerned are fully aware of the special problems involved. In most cases the wife must be the bread winner. Usually there is opportunity for work at good wages. War marriages which culminate after a boy has known a girl three or four days are almost doomed to failure. But our C.P.S. marriages are not of this type. They are more often the culmination of long periods of acquaintance and courtship. I see no reason why a bride's sharing of the problems of a husband in C.P.S. if she chooses to do so, should not make for mutua understanding and a happy marriage, especially wher both parties have been brought up to think of marriage in Christian terms. I saw married men in C.P.S who have wife and children at home and they seeme to be thinking long thoughts. We can only hop that such will be the first to be mustered out whe demobilization day arrives.

Vision

I saw men whose days in camp are probably no very meaningful. They put in their required tim on project and spend their spare time smoking an playing cards. They think of camp life as a nuisanc and a way of sitting out the war. But the larg majority get more than that out of C.P.S. The make a real contribution to camp life. They prof by every experience. They think out more clearl for themselves the true meaning of life and how t live more nearly in the will of God in their hon community when they return. They are trying keep their vision clear and their eye single to something to help the human family realize the drea of the ancient seer who spoke of a time when m shall beat their swords into plowshares and the spears into pruning hooks. I saw men of this typ many of them, whom to know is an inspiration. Th will bring back into our churches new vision and deeper spiritual life.

Bible Institute and Visitation Program

A. J. Neuenschwander, Chairman

The following is to supplement our letter. In this we are briefly giving the reasons for such a united mission to C.P.S. and our churches and the general pattern that it might follow.

The Background and Purpose

1. To bring a message to our people in C.P.S. and our home churches that is central and basic to the future mission of our General Conference group.
   a. Rev. William Stauffer's work for the Home Mission Board revealed the value of serving the C.P.S. camps and churches as one.
   b. Most of us have to admit that as a General Conference group we are not as effective as we might be in making a distinct contribution as a Christian group. The stand taken on the questi of non-resistance is but one measurable index. behooves us to have a spirit of repentance.
   c. There is a growing confidence among some our group that we do have a definite potential to make a contribution to other Mennor groups, to the Christian church at large, and the materialistic, warring, sinful world. The fore we must strengthen our foundation.

2. To emphasize the Biblical basis for faith a work. To strengthen our peace position and ot phases of our distinct contribution we must strengt the basis for all decisions, the authority, for the tot consecrated Christian life.

a. For such an authority in our life we must feel the compulsion of the Holy Spirit which is nurtured in us by the Word of God.

b. We must establish the practical importance of the Bible, its importance to the origin of our Mennonite group, and the place that it must have in our homes and churches.

c. The difficulties that parents and individuals have in making the Bible meaningful must be faced in a practical and frank way so that individuals will gain new confidence and habits and learn to use the Bible helpfully in their personal and home life.

3. To help lay the basis for a good postwar adjustment between the home church and those who have been in C.P.S.

a. The experience of the last war indicated that the two groups did not have the same educational experience nor the same hopes and vision of the duty of Christians.

b. It would be well to help the groups at home and those in C.P.S. crystallize and share what they have learned by this experience, their association with other Mennonite groups, non-Mennonites.

c. We should present to the people at home and in C.P.S. the great need of our world for our service and witness in time of war and peace and the need for preparing individuals and groups to render such service.

4. Now during the time of war the need is so vident we should begin a pattern of education which ocal groups might develop further and serve as a hannel for other major emphases.

General Suggestions as to Pattern of Carrying out the Purposes

1. Retreat of the Field Workers (in connection ith the General Conference in Kansas)

a. To meditate upon the central need of our General Conference people and with the leading of the Lord get a clear vision of our distinct mission and this particular project.

b. Each to come prepared as much as possible to share what he feels would be the central message and the best method of Bible study (and materials).

c. To become oriented to what others have learned about working in C.P.S. and oriented to the work, plans, and spirit of the Mennonite Central Committee.

d. To share on how the short period of church visitation can be made the occasion for meeting the central needs of our people at home.

e. The mechanics of the C.P.S. and church visitation—areas, schedules, etc.

f. To discuss particular aims of personal counselling in the camps.

2. The work in C.P.S. Camps and Units (about a week in each camp, about two days in units)

(1) Conduct a series of 45-minute Bible classes for a series study based on the first ten chapters of the Book of Acts.

(2) Give three or four additional talks on the central message—the Bible.

(3) Have a meeting with the General Conference men on what they have learned by their C.P.S. experience, their association with other Mennonite groups and non-Mennonites; discussion of the future mission and service of the General Conference.

(4) Help General Conference men regarding personal problems, their plans for the future.

3. The work in the churches (about two days at each church or combination)

a. The same basic message on the Bible to the people at home and in C.P.S.; studies from Acts 1 to 10.

b. The visit of the field worker might well be the occasion for having a two-day institute where possible.

(1) Local committees could develop the plans for this.

(2) Since such an institute pattern is not familiar to many of our communities it might be well to have one such as Rev. J. N. Smucker of the Peace Committee draw up a suggested foremat of program and leadership.

c. In addition to leadership brought in to the Institute, this occasion might be used to sell literature that every home should have—translations of Bibles which might refresh Bible reading and meaning, Bible story books that every home should have, family devotional guides, church papers.

d. In some areas, particularly the rural, the mornings or afternoons might be used for special discussions with church groups to lay the ground work for a more vital church faith and work.

4. Follow up values of the visits.

a. Immediate reports after visitation of particular camp and church might be requested to be sent to some central place to be duplicated for various interested committees.

b. Someone might also be able to compile what the various committees would want to know and work out a system whereby more complete reports could be handed to the committees after the completion of the visitation.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By J. Herbert Fretz, Lansdale, Pennsylvania

AUGUST 1—"Lord thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations." Ps. 90:1. Read Ps. 90. One of the greatest blessings God has given to his creatures is an unbroken godly heritage. Holy Scripture and history unite in acclaiming that many of the greatest physical, mental, and moral characters are found in the families whose previous generations have lived Spirit-filled lives in the fear and admonition of the Lord. A great football coach once said, "Every player plays the first half of the game in his own strength; the third quarter he plays in the strength of his parents, and the hard and critical fourth quarter he plays in the strength of his grandparents." O Lord, keep us this day from sinning against thee when we would defile our bodies with the lust of the flesh, dull our minds with foolish thoughts, and starve our souls with the opinions of men. Amen.

AUGUST 2—"Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin." Matt. 6:28. Read Matt. 6:19-34. In these days of stress when many are too busy looking after food, clothing, shelter, and a good time, there comes the reproof of our Lord to stop and, "consider." It's amazing how easy it is for one to pass through life and look at God's nature but never see it. Tennyson once wrote:

> Little flower—but if I could understand
> What you are, root and all, and all in all
> I should know what God and man is."

It's wonderful to realize day by day that the great God of nature is the great God of our salvation. Our Father, forgive our blindness to thy handiwork and teach us that strength comes not from our toiling and spinning but from the riches of Thy Grace. Amen.

AUGUST 3—"Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us." Titus 3:5. Read Titus 3. It is human nature to seek a "balanced life", but how often we establish our own idea of a balanced life. No doubt, Paul was well aware of human nature when he wrote these "unbalanced" words to Titus. It's so easy for us to mix Faith and Works to suit ourselves. Strangely enough—and yet not so strange—is the fact that one of Paul's main themes in this short epistle is the necessary Christian witness from a life of good works. When we understand this we begin to see the diference between man's ideals and the balanced life of God's Word. Before God we are saved through faith alone; before our fellowmen we show that faith by our works. Lord, help us to be zealous, "to maintain good works that we be not unfruitful" yet ever remind us that there is not one good thing that we have done, are doing or ever shall do, to inherit eternal life. Amen.

AUGUST 4—"Sorrow is better than laughter" Eccles. 7:3. Read II Cor. 7:5-11. How pessimistic this verse sounds. We know that every Christian should be happy and should develop a good sense of humor. There is a time for humor, but perhaps even more to be emphasized today is the time for earnest seriousness. The trouble with the world is that the wrong things amuse it. That which is holy becomes humorous and that which is tragic becomes trivial. There are some things in God's sight which are never funny, such as sin and salvation. The world laughs at sin and jokes about redemption. Christians should know what "godly sorrow" is for their own sins and the sins of the world. Dear Lord, teach us the joy of forgiveness, which follows the sorow of penitence. Amen.

AUGUST 5—"Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed . . . he . . prayed and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime." Dan 6:10. Read Dan. 6. Some people are too indifferent to cause trouble; other people go out of their way to make trouble, the rest hate trouble but face it rather than compromise their convictions. Daniel was of the latter. We can learn a valuable lesson of Christian tactfulness from Daniel. He didn't condemn the king for that which he had unconsciously done. He didn't demand "favoritism" from the king in opposition to the law. But in the face of trouble he acted normally and openly, willing to take the consequences. No wonder the king respected Daniel. Today, Lord, may we, by thy Spirit, with resolute and quiet determination face those problems which yesterday we shirked. Teach us not to be ashamed of Jesus. Amen.

AUGUST 6—"And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." I Cor. 9:25. Read the Sunday School lesson. The athlete is under strict training as to food, drink, and exercise. We under the new covenant of Grace are not bound by strict ceremonial laws. That is all the more reason why we need the Holy Spirit within us subduing our passions and bringing our bodies under control. Today everybody wants "freedom." Without the inner filling of the Spirit, even the Christian lets his freedom become license. Not only is the spread of the Gospel thwarted by weak and mediocre lives, but every Christian owes it to God to love purely and passionately, drinking to the depth of life's many opportunities and joys. O God of all Creation, make our lives physically rigorous, mentally alert, and spiritually devoted, so that thou and thy Gospel may be glorified. Amen.

BETTER THAN GOSSIP

Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. Matt. 18:15.

Youth-Church Relationship and How It Might Be Improved

(There is a wide-awake group of Mennonite youth at Altona, Manitoba, Canada. The young people have organized the Altona Youth Forum, which carried on Sunday afternoon discussion meetings this past winter. Menno Klassen, the president, writes, "This organization has been formed to make up for obvious deficiencies many of us find in our present church youth program. We do not carry on this work for the purpose of replacing youth work already being carried on, but rather to add to the youth work already sponsored by the church in the district." The following article is a brief summary of the points of general agreement as arrived at during a discussion of youth-church relationships.—Editor)

It was learned that the church has for its purpose: 1. To acquire members. 2. To keep its members and help them grow in their spiritual life. 3. To spread he Christian gospel throughout all the world. Desirable relations between youth and the church would be fostered if all would help the church to strive for he above mentioned goals. Youth should make this heir duty.

Problems to be solved: The forum members felt hat there were some problems to be considered which f solved would improve the chances for better relaionships. They may be stated as follows:

1. The Church Language Question: Young people o not feel free and capable to express themselves in the German language and for this reason the vast majority of youth cannot be expected to take more than a passive part in the work of the church.

2. Lack of Understanding Between Youth and the hurch Leaders: It was agreed that there was not sufficient opportunity for youth and age, and for youth and the minister to meet on common terms for real understanding and confidence to exist between them.

3. Recreation and Social life: It was felt that better relations would result if a list of approved sports and social program for the young people of the comunity were openly announced and encouraged and healthy balance between work and play aimed at.

4. Youth Program of the Church: The youth ornizations of the church should be conducted by youth themselves. Youth should have the benefits of e experience in arranging for and carrying out the youth program. This experience would be beneficial in training for future church leadership.

Sweeping Our Own Door Step: It was agreed that youth themselves could do a great deal to establish better relationships in the following way:

1. Church Papers: Both English and German Mennonite church papers are available to youth. If they were more generally read by them they would be better informed on matters pertaining to church work. This would help to create a better understanding generally.

2. Reverence and attention at church services, respect, and gratitude toward the minister and generous support to the church and its work would have a most desirable effect.

3. It was generally agreed that we should not think of the condition of our church as it is today, but rather we should always have a picture of the ideal church in our minds. Then we should contribute to its welfare as generously as we would contribute to the ideal church. Then and then only can we expect to get the improvements we are looking for; then only is it possible for improvements to be made. The church does not improve by itself. The people, young and old, who attend the church must sow the seeds of improvement. The harvest will surely be great in the end.

"In order to achieve such a consecrated life, the school centered its study in two areas. First, is the individual's relationship to the church and the community. The high rate of juvenile delinquency in the U.S. today is attributed, in the main, to irresponsible parents and broken homes. The products of those broken homes have become the concern of our home missions who try to bring them Christ's message of salvation. A healthy, strong Christ-centered family life gives the child so reared the knowledge and the experience so that he, too, may choose to accept and follow Christ. Such a family cannot very easily maintain its unity and strength in a community of broken families and irresponsible people. To maintain a Christian family, a devoted, Christ-centered community is important. The school spent about half its time studying both the value and functions of a Christian community. The study of the church, the family, the school, the business life of the community was included.

Oklahoma Young People's Retreat

The Oklahoma Young People's Retreat will be held at Meno, Oklahoma, August 9-15. The registration fee is $1.00 or $.50 for one day. Room and board will cost $5. Evening meetings will be conducted at the church and will be open to the public. Age of retreaters may include high school and college age. Retreaters are urged to come Wednesday afternoon, August 9. Registration begins at 4 p.m. The first meeting is Wednesday evening at 7:30. The retreat closes August 13 with an early morning communion service. Retreaters are encouraged to have personal contact and fellowship with the leaders.

A Letter fron Ypsilanti, Michigan

(Miss Esther Lehrman, who writes the letter below, is a member of the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho. The letter is addressed to the young people at home.)

Box A
Ypsilanti, Michigan
June 8, 1944

Dear Young People,

It is just a week ago today since I started working here, but it seems that I have been gone much longer. As I suppose most of you know I am taking the Women's Relief Training Course sponsored by the Mennonite Central Committee. Together with this we are working, mostly as ward attendants, in the State Mental Hospital here.

There are about thirty-five girls in the unit and we have acquired the name "cogs" which stands for C.O. Girls. There is a C.O. boy's group of about 100 who are working at the Hospital. The girls(including other women employees) have a large three-story dormitory here on the grounds. Then there is another dorm for married couples. The C.O. boys have one section of one of the hospital buildings. Part of this has been converted into a chapel where we have Sunday School, prayer meeting, and Sunday night services. We are also planning to organize a chorus.

The girls in our group are all Mennonites, but only about four or five of us are General Conference Mennonites. Most of these here are from Hesston or Goshen College. About three or four are from Bluffton, and only one from Bethel. Several are trained nurses or teachers, but most of them are college students.

The courses we are going to take will be on hospital time so we will get our regular pay with time out for classes four times a week. Miss Lois Gunden who has recently returned from relief work in France is our matron, and will teach a class in Internationa Relief. Dr. Yoder, the superintendent of the hospital is going to teach mental hygiene. For the next tw weeks we will have orientation classes to learn abou the different parts of the hospital and how they work. Today we were shown through the Occupational Therapy building, which was especially interesting to me. This is where the better patients wor on all kinds of handwork-clay modeling, weaving sewing, shoe repair, book binding, vegetable preparation, and many other things.

We eat our meals in a cafeteria, and we really d get good food here. There are about 500 employee now, so the place is busy for two hours every mea time.

There are about 3,400 patients here now. Th is an immense place with three large hospital buil ings besides the extra building such as dorms etc. is more like a college campus, and is one of the mo beautiful places I have ever seen. There are lots trees and grass here. Also flowers and shrubs everywhere. The grounds have all kinds of recreation facilities—from golf to croquet. We girls also ha a softball team.

Now a few words about my work. I work three hours a day in the women's ward. It is extremely interesting. I am in one of the least violent wards, but I find that the people are very peculiar, nevertheless. Everything is locked, so we are constantly opening and closing doors. Even the telephone is under lock and key. The buildings are all connected by underground tunnels and we take them to meals, baths, and to the O.T. building through these. Some of the patients talk constantly all day long, you would be surprised at the terrible language one hears and the things one sees. The first few days I was rather afraid at their outbursts but you get used to it, and most of them are harmless. The worst thing I had to do was to settle an argument between two women. One was just ready to hit the other with a shoe, but she didn't succeed. I am learning new things every day, and find the work not nearly as bad as I expected.

I would certainly enjoy hearing from some of you, and wish you a pleasant and profitable summer in your C.E. work.

Sincerely,
Esther Lehrman

THE TRIP TO QUEZALTENANGO TO SEE DR. AND MRS. PAUL BURGESS

Guatemala is really quite a place. I'm sorry that when the Mennonites came over to America from Europe that the Swiss Mennonites didn't land down here instead of in the states. It is really quite a beauty spot—not unlike what I suppose Switzerland looks like. We left this city early Saturday morning and went by station wagon to Quezaltenango. There seems to be the philosophy in Central America that when a bus operates between two cities it operates for the purpose of carrying passengers. There is always room for one more, it seems, regardless of how many are already in the bus. On the way to Quezaltenango we were about 21 in the little station wagon. That was sardenic. But I'm getting so that don't mind it so much anymore. In Mexico we raveled on the "Flecha Rojo" bus system, which in ny vocabulary means the "rottenest bus system in he world." Even the station wagon was better than hat.

The trip to Quezalt was cold. This is the tropic ountry all right, but it is the rainy season, and I do nean it rains. It rained buckets of water almost ll of the 130 miles. But the trip was beautiful—I hink the corn must grow to 15 feet. The soil is rich nd vegetation is prolific. In Quezalt we visited with he Harry Peters who are the Presbyterian missionaries here. But our real object was to see the Burgesses who were in Santa Maria, so we took another bus and ot to that outpost of the wilderness. My they are nice people. We had a grand time. It rained cats and dogs all evening and night, but Sunday morning (my birthday!) was nice. They are working with the Indians—and they admit it to be a slow and difficult work. They find it very hard to find the interest of the Indian. They are so unconcerned and seem to have no fear of sin or eternity. The Burgesses are conducting a small Bible training school with about 11 boys in attendance (all Indian). The work is slow, but they plod along. I think Mr. Burgess, and his wife as well, are really great people. I like humility and unassumingness.

When I got to Quezalt, one of the first things I learned was that the banker was looking for me. I was quite amazed! I couldn't imagine what he could be wanting with me. But the answer was not long in forthcoming. Waiting for me at Burgesses were letters. One from mother, and another from dad. Dad had sent through the banks a check for my birthday—a check for $30. I was certainly surprised. Their letters came perfectly timed for my birthday. Your letter too was perfectly timed for that and it was so nice of you to do it. I really don't remember what I wanted for birthday, so whether you got "it" or the records, I will be most appreciative of either. I hope our birthdays will hereafter be spent together.

—Guatemala City, October 4, 1943

I've been drinking all kinds of things, but I'm obeying you quite religiously. I've absorbed a lot of coffee—I think that by the time I come back I'll loathe the stuff. How I love cold water, how I crave cold water—my kingdom for some good ice cold water!

Rev. Donovan E. Smucker

Rev. Donovan E. Smucker, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, will speak on "The Cross or the Weather-Vane?" at the Western District C.E. Convention Sunday evening, July 30. Formerly Reverend Smucker served as executive secretary of the Kansas Institute of International Relations. Many may have heard his broadcasts every Sunday morning from 9:00 to 9:30 EWT over station WAKR.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Please note that there will be a separate session for the Junior C.E.'s during the regular Western District C. E. Convention session July 30 at 2:30 p.m. There will be a short worship service, a play-let, special music, and a talk on "Beginnings" by Mrs. Willis Rich. We ask that each junior society be represented one hundred per cent. In churches where there are not separate junior societies we urge that the leader of the adult society encourage all the juniors of the church to attend. Let's not neglect the children of our churches. Bring them to this convention held in the Bethel College chapel July 30 at 2:30 p.m.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—The Young People's Beacon of the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, reports better attendance at the Sunday evening pre-prayer services and greater blessings in the C.E. hour that follows. All members of the department are urged to attend the pre-prayer service. A recent C. E. program featured a "home-made" radio broadcast from an adjoining room. The next Sunday evening a number of members gave short talks on the 100th Psalm. (The editor hopes that he will be put on the mailing list of the Beacon.)

—Clinton Koppes, of the Bethel College Mennonite Church, and Effie Schmidt, of the Bergtal Mennonite Church, Pawnee Rock, Kansas, were married on July 16. Clinton is in C.P.S.

—C.E. news from the First Mennonite Church, Halstead, Kansas: In June we held an ice cream social in town on Saturday night. Members of the society donated freezers of ice cream. It sold very rapidly. We used the proceeds for the projects which we undertook for the year.

In June our group also rendered a program at the Bethel Home for the Aged on a Sunday afternoon. Following the program we sang for those who could not come down for the program. We also sang several selections at the Bethel Hospital.

At present we are making plans for another all-day retreat for all the young people of our Church to be held in August. We held our first one last year. It proved successful and everyone was in favor of holding another one this year. —Halstead C. E.

LOVE IS MISSING IN THE ACTION

Fighters on both sides in this war commend the opposition for their dexterity, strategy, cunning, intelligence, loyalty, etc. It is a tragedy to know that such capable energy is expended for such futile waste. Out of this maze grows frustration and bewilderment for those who try to understand the real objectives and results of war. Not so with a young man in the service, who upon receiving a medallion copy of the statue of Christ in his church, wrote in substance this: "My government sent me here to kill, kill, kill, and here is this emblem representing a call to a life so different that the two do not seem to go together. I can't wear this so long as my government demands that I kill." How many others must feel the same?

INHABITANTS

The United States has an average of 40 inhabitants for every square mile of land; "good land, poor land, and utterly impossible land." China has an average of 299 people for each square mile, Germany 364, The Netherlands 659, England and Wales 685, and Belgium supports an average of 701 inhabitants in each "section".

A Last Minute Jubilee Appeal

This is the last week in July when the Jubilee record will be closed. That does not mean that the door is closed for further gifts for the college debt, but how much more joy will it be to count the gift in this year's income.

The government is very considerate with us in not compelling us to buy war bonds. That alone is worth all the debt, which the college still has. Why could not every one, who has not yet bought at least the small 18.50 civil bond, buy one this week, and send it to Prof. Moyer the last minute. Even Monday, the 31st would still be in time. Send a check to Bethel College for the size of the bond you wish, and the rest will be taken care of by Prof. Moyer.

It is our school, and it is our debt, and the Lord has blessed most of us with a good harvest except where it hailed. Even the corn looks fine, (for Kansas exceptionally fine) and so are the prices. With the Bible Academy now associated with the College, we have an ideal school. Let us show our appreciation.

Bethel is one of the strongest bulwarks for our peace doctrine. It brings sacrifice for it. Such a school these days is a treasure for the denomination that cannot be measured in money.

M.C.C. NEWS NOTES

Relief

More Refugees Arrive in Egypt

Delvin Kirchhofer, Mennonite relief worker among Yugoslav refugees in the Middle East, in a recent letter tells about the arrival of new refugee groups at the El Shatt camp where he is working:

"What a day we had yesterday! We received a large number more at this camp, but they were so different from the groups before . . . For ten hours we strained ourselves to register, bathe, feed, disinfect, inoculate, vaccinate, and tabulate them, and provide them with bedding and transport them to their tents . . .

"I suppose thousands and thousands in Europe are far worse than these, but it was my first experience of working with people who were actually in need. Especially in the children and the old people one could actually see the effects of hunger . . . We had to assist women and children who fainted before us with sheer exhaustion from their grueling experiences in the past."

China Relief Area Invaded

Newspaper reports in the past several months contained the disturbing news that the Japanese Army in their offensive to cut China in two, from Peking in the north to Canton in the south, have been quite successful and have occupied the central part of the Honan Province where the proposed Mennonite relief project was to be established. A report in the July issue of CHRISTIAN AID IN ASIA portrays a graphic picture of the situation in Honan:

"Again vast multitudes, including the rich and the poor, the old and young, are on the move. They are forced to depart hurriedly abandoning their homes, shops, lands, and practically all they possess . . . Gripped by abject despair, these unfortunate multitudes know not where to go and have little hope of finding their belongings if indeed they may ever return to their ravaged cities and villages. Children are separated from their parents. Many die on the way. Their worry is intensified by hunger, homelessness and a hopeless outlook ahead."

Paraguay Bound

Late word has reached the Akron Headquarters hat Brother Orie Miller left New Orleans by plane or Paraguay early on the morning of July 10. Later in the same day, Elvin Souder and Orval Myers also left for Paraguay by steamer.

Inflation in China

The following account is taken from the report n conditions in China, prepared by Brothers Graber nd Goering. Inflationary conditions present a erious problem to contemplated missionary and elief efforts in Free China at the present time.

"In India we heard wild rumors about prices in hina. A missionary had sold his bicycle for what mounted in U.S. currency to a thousand dollars; s fountain pen for eight thousand Chinese currency, which exchanges to $266.66. But we were ure there must be a joker in the land somewhere. o we were due a series of shocks as we first came ce to face with China's prices in Kunming. There as no trickery about it; the prices of practically l commodities were simply fantastic, as for example, matches, $10.00 per box; Little Ben alarm ock, $6800.00; tumbler, $30.00; aluminum teaspoon, 5.00; knife, $160.00 (poor quality); No. 50 black cotton thread, $40.00 per spool; Gillette razor blades, $50.00 each; 3-cell flashlight, $750.00; quarter pint Carnation Milk, $290.00; bath towel, $1200.00; sugar cubes, $170.00 per pound . . . eggs, $80.00 per dozen; beef, $70.00 per pound; . . . We were like Alice in Wonderland. People carried stacks of paper currency about on the streets in baskets and by the armful like cordwood."

Relief Work in Middle East Versatile

A relief worker in the Middle East is called upon to perform diverse tasks, as the following paragraph indicates, taken from a recent letter written by Delvin Kirchhofer:

"Got the post office organized and working. My time was divided among various projects. I spent considerable time in dealing with inquiries of refugees' relatives whose address is unknown and prepared the inquiries for the International Red Cross. I supervised the work of carpenters making various things for our offices: fisherman making nets, and painters who marked petrol tins for the school and church to be inverted and used as stools. I dealt with many personal inquiries and assisted in various ways in making the refugees more comfortable and satisfied."

Women's Unit at Howard, Rhode Island

Edna Ramseyer, supervisor in charge of the Mennonite women at the summer service unit, located at the Howard, Rhode Island, State Hospital for Mental Diseases, reports that the unit there has gotten off to a good start with twenty-three girls enrolled.

In addition to eight hours of work per day as ward attendants, the women also spend approximately eight hours per week in evening class work in Mental Hygiene and Psychiatry, and International Relief courses, Mixed Chorus, and religious services. Most of the members of the unit come from Mennonite colleges or academies, and had desired to engage in some form of Christian service over the summer months while earning wages at the same time. The breakdown according to schools represented is as follows:

Grantham	5
Bluffton	3
Goshen	3
Bethel	2

Smoke Jumpers Ready for Action

The 120 smoke jumpers at the Missoula, Montana, C.P.S. camp, have completed their period of training and are on the alert for forest fires. The period of training consisted of work-outs on an obstacle course and several practice jumps. The first jump is really the crucial one, and even though it is anticipated, the actual time for "stepping out into the blue" brings varied reactions. Below are a few:

"It was a tense situation from the time the plane took off, and at the moment the slap on the back came my heart tripled its beating. It was only a second's fall through nothingness until I was yanked to security by the umbrella of silk."

"As I got on the plane, some of the boys came by carrying the first injury of the season on a stretcher. I suddenly began to feel splinters up and down my legs. But with good faith and a good static line I pulled through."

"My teeth were chattering and my knees knocking until I got outside the door. From then on, it was really fun."

Foreign Relief Service for C.P.S. Men Out Again

The ruling preventing men in C.P.S. camps from serving in foreign relief service came to an end with the termination of the 1944 Federal fiscal year on June 30. But a similar ruling, with the same results, was enacted for the coming fiscal year. This restriction has been disheartening to the many relief trainees and others, who have a conviction to perform relief work. This closed door, however, is no doubt of the Lord, and will be understood better in the years ahead.

Mennonite Aid
"Mennonite Colonization"

An eighty-page book with the above title, and a sub-title, "Lessons from the Past for the Future," has come off the press and is ready for distribution. This first publication of the Mennonite Aid Section was prepared by J. Winfield Fretz, who for the past year has been visiting and studying successful and unsuccessful Mennonite colonization efforts in United States, Canada, and Mexico. While this study was made in behalf of C.P.S. men, who will be faced with similar problems upon discharge from camp, the book will be of interest to the Mennonite groups at large. The book may be purchased from the Mennonite Aid Section, Akron, Pa., for twenty cents per copy.

Music Institute in C.P.S. Camps

A number of ten-day music institutes have recently been conducted in C.P.S. camps in connection with the educational program. A series of these institutes was planned for the Western camps when John Thut, appointed relief worker for England, could not enter that country at the present time. One camp reports on such an institute as follows: "The quality of our congregational singing was increased; we have more volume, more spirit and I think more spirituality, 'Strong Christian men sing like men; with this strength we can combine beauty and depth of experience.' Whatever was said in theory, was explained and demonstrated in song."

Government Camps

C.P.S. camps, administered directly by Selective Service, are now three in number. The third camp opened last month at Germfask, Michigan. The other camps are located at Mancos, Colorado, and Lapine, Oregon. As of May 1, 1944, 225 C.P.S. men were in government camps. At Germfask the C.P.S. men will construct dams and shallow lakes in connection with the Seney Wildlife Refuge.

Art and Crafts Institutes

John P. Klassen, art instructor at Bluffton College, has been secured to conduct ten-day art and crafts institutes in the Eastern M.C.C.-C.P.S. camps. Brother Klassen is an accomplished Mennonite artist and sculptor who received training in various European countries. During World War I he was a C.O. in Russia and was instrumental in assisting many of the Mennonites to leave Russia.

A report of an art and crafts institute at the Sideling Hill Camp contains the following item:

"The men worked largely with clay making pots, cups, vases, animals, plaques, etc. A number made moulds out of plaster. We estimate that at least thirty-five men participated in these activties to the extent of making at least one article. Many were surprised at what they could do, and the look of satisfaction which passed over their faces upon completion of a project gave ample visible evidence of enjoyment."

Breakdown of Men in C.P.S. According to Administrative Agencies

The following table is as of May 31, 1944:

Agency	No. of Camps	No. of Men
Friends	30	1643
Mennonites	45	3041
Brethren	30	1823
Catholic	2	67
Methodists	2	67
Government	3	279
Cooperative	1	70
Detached Service		82
Total	109	7072

C. O.'s Given Citizenship

The following note is taken from the Christian Century, May 24, 1944:

"In the district court at Tacoma, Washington, Federal Judge Leavy recently granted citizenship to William R. Kinlock and William McKillop, conscientious objectors serving in the army medical corps. Judge Leavy ruled that their army service made them eligible for citizenship despite past Supreme Court decisions denying suffrage to those refusing to bear arms."

Mennonites Welcomed to Mexico

The following item is also taken from the Christian Century, May 24:

"Mexico has welcomed a new colony of Mennonite settlers from Canada to farms in the state of San Luis Potosi. Pledges have been given that the pacifist scruples of the colonists will be respected."

Ratio of C.O.'s in World Wars I and II

The National Service Board points out that in World War II the number of conscientious objectors is 38.5 per 10,000 inductees. This ratio is almost three times as high during World War I.

China Commissioners Return

S. J. Goering and J. D. Graber, Mennonite commissioners to China, have returned home from India by way of Suez and the Mediterranean. They traveled on a Norwegian freighter that docked in New York City, May 11. Reporting briefly on their trip, they spoke of stupendous need, but also of great difficulties in the way of transportation, money exchange, visas, etc. They, however, will recommend that a small relief unit be sent to China.

Children who with their father survive are Dwight M., Petersburg; and Virginia, Byron M. and Huldah E. at home.

JOTTINGS

—Rev. Phil A. Wedel has asked to be released by the end of October, 1944, as minister of the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, in order to fill the pastorate of the Alexanderwohl Church of Kansas. —Corr.

—"Children's Page" is a new feature in the church bulletin of the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, of which Rev. Elbert E. Koontz is pastor. On it the pastor presents interesting stories from The Children's Hour, scripture verses, poems, and sayings. This is the first bulletin that the editor remembers seeing to have such a feature. Brother Koontz writes that the work is going very nicely and that the prayer meetings are well attended, with about thirty present every week.

—The Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, had a reception for their pastor and his wife when they recently returned from Canada where they had gone after their wedding on June 18.

—Interest in canning for C.P.S. is shown by the definite instructions contained in the bulletin of the First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota.

—The financial drive to pay for the completion of the third floor of the Bethel Hospital and the purchase of X-ray equipment is going along very well. So reports Brother H. J. Andres, Administrator of the Bethel Hospital, Newton, Kansas. Money is also being received for debt reduction. It is hoped that the third floor will be ready for occupancy by October 1.

—The Zoar Mennonite Church, Goltry, Oklahoma, participated in a community Bible school this summer. The school had fifty-one pupils and five teachers. Nine young people are to be baptized July 23, and one young woman is to be accepted into the membership by letter. The church plans to observe communion on July 30.

—"Rev. C. H. Dirks, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas, returned recently from Wolf Point, Montana, where he conducted a series of evangelistic services in the Bethel Mennonite Church. A fine spirit prevailed and God richly blessed His Word. There were a number of decisions and consecrations, including decisions for full time Christian service. This is one of his former pastorates. Rev. Albert Ewert is the present pastor."

—Mail for the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Delft, Minnesota, should no longer be addressed to Rev. John Bartel, Delft, Minnesota, for he has moved to California. All mail for the church should be addressed: Immanuel Mennonite Church, Delft, Minnesota.

—Rufus Franz, Director of Mennonite C.P.S. camps on the Pacific coast, spoke to the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington, on July 23.

—Pastor, are your sending your church bulletin to the editor? You like to read jottings, don't you? Remember that others like to read news from your church.

—"Do You Tell Your Children Bible Stories?" is the heading of an article in the bulletin of the Ebenezer Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio. Each Thursday night at 9:30 the church has a prayer service for the young people in the service of our country. Herbert Fretz brought the messages on July 9 and 16.

—Paul Shelly, who has been working towards his doctor's degree, has accepted a call to teach Bible at Bluffton College. Brother Shelly was awarded a fellowship for study in Europe upon his graduation from seminary. Due to the war he could not go across. After a pastorate in Washington, he continued his studies in this country, writing his doctor's thesis on a subject dealing with Mennonite piety. He is to teach the courses formerly taught by Brother A. C. Schultz.

—Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pa., On June 11, our Primary Department attended the morning worship services and conducted part of them. Their attendance, in a body, was quite an incentive and encouragement to the church members. Our attendance in our Sunday School has increased quite a bit over last year. Our pastor, Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson, is feeding us on the Bread of Life as found in our scriptures. On July 2, Prof. G. A. Lehman, of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, Rochester, New York, spent the day with us and rendered a few selections during the morning worship services. Our church people brought a covered dish for the noon meal. During this hour we celebrated our pastor's birthday by a very appropriate sketch prepared by Ralph W. Berky. We also gave recognition to "Dad" Lehman since he was our guest and to Ralph W. Berky, who has done so much for our church by writing effective sketches and poetry. "Dad" Lehman gave a concert in the afternoon, ending the day by conducting a good old-fashioned hymn sing. Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger and the Doctors Harvey Bauman and family spend the day with us.

—The following is the substance of an appeal recently made in a letter sent out by the Bethel College Board of Directors:

Dear Friends of Christian Education:

"Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." I Sam. 7:21 More than 2,000 of you have made gifts totalling approximately $58,500 during this Golden Anniversary School Year. If you are one of these donors please accept the sincere gratitude of the Board o Directors of Bethel College.

The purpose of this appeal is to remind thos who have not given, that GIFTS of any size ar WELCOME and are NEEDED. We rejoice that i has been possible through the generosity and sacr ficial interest of many friends of the College t reduce the debt from a high of $141,329.87 to present of about $39,000.00.

The urgency of getting rid of this old debt promp us to make repeated efforts until the goal of de liquidation is reached. We believe that this persi tence is in harmony with God's will.

If we have the will as God has blessed us fina cially and otherwise, the entire debt will be liquidate by the end of the fiscal year on August 1, 194 We seek your prayerful interest and action in th endeavor.

Sincerely yours in His Service,
Bethel College Board of Directors

Conference Sunday - How Shall We Observe It

The Conference Executive Committee kindly reuests all General Conference Churches to observe ugust 20, 1944, as "Conference Sunday." In order put into the hands of our pastors and the members formation that may profitably be used on that unday, the secretaries of all conference boards and mmittees were asked to submit in not over 350 ords the gist of the reports they had in preparation r the session which was to be held at North Newn, Kansas, August 17-23, 1944.

These brief reports are herewith published in our vo church papers, The Mennonite and the Christlicher undesbote. Even in their brevity they definitely reeal that the Lord is pleased to use us, as Nehemiah ys, in "doing a great work." And every pastor of ery one of our conference churches by reading and editating on "what God has wrought," will, if he ves the Conference and the work Christ has entrusted to it, doubtless find inspiration for a practical Christian message.

This is our work, our blessing, not our doom. God grant that with a good conscience we may say with His Son: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business!"

Another way in which these reports may be put to a wider use is to have lay members each take one report and discuss it briefly. This may be done in a Women's Mission Society meeting, or at a Senior C.E. meeting. Junior or Intermediate Endeavor can profit if different members each simply read one report. No doubt that will keep up interest and show how farreaching that church work is.

Please write your church papers just how your church or society observed "Conference Sunday." And do you think it would please our Lord if we had such a "Conference Sunday" every year?

Report of the Officers and the Executive Committee

A Liberal Gift

One oustanding event of this triennium is that the rd has answered prayer and has laid it upon the art of Sister Elva K. Leisy of Dallas, Texas, in emory of her parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Krehbiel Newton, to donate to the General Conference for headquarters a store building at 722 Main street, ewton, Kansas. This generous offer was accepted th thanks on May 5, 1943. On May 7, 1943, issionary P. A. Penner accepted a call as office nager; and on July 19, 1943, after a brief building dicatory service lead by the conference president, other Penner assumed his office. Several liberal ecial gifts made it possible to equip the office apopriately. Praise the Lord for all this!

Appointments by the conference officers were made fill the following vacancies: Walter Gering to the isiness Committee; H. T. Unruh and J. N. Smucker the Peace Committee; Walter H. Temple to the lief Board.

Certificates

By June 22, 1944, 266 certificates had been issued to ministers of the General Conference by the officers.

Appointments made by the Executive Committee: as "Historical Committee:" Abr. Warkentin, A. J. Dyck and P. A. Penner, with C. Henry Smith and Ernest E. Leisy as consultative members; and as a "Ministers' Aid Committee:" Homer Leisy, Herbert Goering, H. Albert Claassen, Robert Stauffer, Mrs. J. E. Entz, and Miss Mary Bargen.

Complying with an urgent request from Washington, it was decided on July 6, to postpone the session set for August 17-23, 1944, till next year (possibly early in June) and instead to request all conference churches kindly to observe August 20, 1944, as "Conference Sunday." All secretaries of boards and committees were asked to submit brief reports of their activities for prayerful meditation and consideration on Conference Sunday for both pastors and members.

May the Lord richly bless you. The Executive Committee. C. E. Krehbiel, Chairman; Phil. A. Wedel, Secretary.

Our Foreign Mission Work Since 1941

In spite of hindering war conditions, our mission work was kept going another three years under the Lord's visible protection and guidance.

Even in China, where the war has now raged for six years, the work has not stopped. Native helpers carry on as best they can. For us the doors are closed now. All our missionaries have returned except eight, who are interned, two in China and eight in the Philippines.

India is much understaffed because of war conditions. Only seventeen are left there, eight are at home unless we count the four on pension who work for the Board on part time. One, P. A. Penner, of them works on full time as treasurer of the General Conference.

The China missionaries are mostly on private employment, except Sister Fast and Brother and Sister Brown. Brother S. F. Pannabecker is going to China as Relief Director under the M.C.C.

Five new workers have been sent out, one to India, two to Arizona as substitutes for a while for Brother and Sister Suderman on furlough, and two to Montana. Brother and Sister P. A. Wenger are packing to return to India, and Sister Augusta Schmidt is ready to go as soon as Sister Eleanor Schmidt (nurse) can go along this fall.

In spite of the shortage of workers in India the work prospers greatly. During the last three years about 1000 souls have been won there. Among the American Indians sixty-one were baptized in spite of growing opposition by the non-Christians.

Because of China's closed doors, and increasing interest for South America and Africa, we have begun cooperative work in the Congo Inland mission, and five new workers are ready to start work in Colombia, South America within a month.

With praise to the Lord for his guidance and with thanks to our churches for their faithful support ($153,000.00 and many prayers) we make these few statements for encouragement to still more interest, because we have many new applicants, who will want to be sent out in the near future.

Statistics

Missionaries 67, native helpers 345, organized churches 64, converts 6,018, Sunday Schools 98, main stations 18, out-stations 83, hospitals 4, registered treatments in one year (including the last figure from China three years ago) 52,000, inpatients 3,710, lepers 547.

Home Mission Work During 1941-1944

During the past three years several churches in the United States became strong enough to assume all financial obligations and have become independent. This indicates a virile spiritual life and a sincere devotion to the cause of Christ.

In Canada our fields were increased and the work in other respects enlarged. This advance was made possible largely because of the increasing support given by Canadian churches. This in turn was possible, because the Lord granted better harvests and crops. The itinerant work is still one of the very important phases of our work since it keeps the scattered families in touch with the work of the Conference.

Tract and Evangelism work: A special committee looks after these two phases of work. They have assembled a fine set of tracts and they have also been helpful in supplying evangelists to hold series of meetings in different churches and communities.

Visitation Work in C.P.S. Camps and Units and Colonization work: This large task was delegated to Rev. William H. Stauffer. With rare enthusiasm he entered into these tasks. He presented Mennonite rural life as the best way to conserve our forces. This was presented in district conferences and in the home churches. The camp visitation brought forth many other good things. The General Conference young men greatly appreciated the contacts that were thus made. As a result a Bible Teaching Institute and Visitation Program has been inaugurated. Every camp and unit is to be visited for a longer period of time, giving the men a chance to have personal conferences and united Bible studies. Acts chapters 1-10 are to serve as a Scripture basis for this work. In order that the young men in camps and the home folks might develop along the same lines each home church is to be visited.

The statistical tables show that the churches in the States and in Canada, in the main, have increased in numbers. An encouraging feature is the growth of the Sunday Schools in Canada.

Contributions

The Board is grateful to God for the continued and regular support that has been coming in so that the work could go on without handicap. Bequests and special gifts are now all put into the Rotating Church Building Fund. Aid in the form of loans has been given to many congregations from this Fund.

May the Lord bless each individual, or group that has given support to this work either in gifts or prayers.

Since July 1, 1944, the Home Mission Treasury has been transferred to the General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas.

Yours for a strong, growing and united church in Christ. For the Home Mission Board.
A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec., Quakertown, Pa.

Our Publication Work

ear Pastors and Members of the General Conference hurches:

In compliance with the request of the President of ır conference, the Board of Publication presents the llowing report of its work during the past three ears. On the whole this work has been reasonably tisfactory, and noticeable progress can be reported ong various lines. To God be the praise!

The 100 Per Cent Plan

1. Progress has been made with the 100 Per Cent ıurch Subscription Plan. Twenty-nine churches ıve now adopted this plan, and the church subscrip- ons now number 2,846. Of these 1,378 are new bscriptions. This means: (a) that all of these bscribers are receiving their church paper for fifty nts less per year than they would be paying if ese churches had not adopted this plan, (b) that conference paper goes to 1,378 Mennonite homes ıich in all probability otherwise would not be re- iving one. This is real progress toward attaining ur conference goal, namely, "A Conference Paper every General Conference Mennonite Home."

Increase in Circulation

2. Progress has been made toward increasing the culation of our conference publications. Our Ger- ın periodicals, the Bundesbote, the Kinderbote, and S. S. Lektionen, have practically held their own. ıe circulation of the Junior Messenger has increased out 700. But the greatest gains have been scored The Mennonite and the Mennonite Senior-Adult arterly (formerly the Christian S. S. Quarterly). e Mennonite subscriptions have risen from 2,600 in 41 to 5,200 at the present time. A gain of 2,600 in ee years. Likewise has the Mennonite Senior-Adult arterly scored a big gain during the past three ırs: In 1941 13,400 for the July quarter of 1944 r 16,300, a gain of almost 3,000 for three years. e Mennonite Junior Quarterly, the newest of our ference periodicals, is also doing remarkably well. the July quarter of 1944 (the third quarter of its existence) ninety-six or 64 per cent, of our General Conference S. S. ordered this quarter.

Hymnaries

3. Progress has also been made with reference to the Mennonite Hymnary and the Canadian Gesangbuch. To date over 17,000 Mennonite Hymnary and almost 7,000 copies of the Gesangbuch have been sold At present new editions of both books are in preparation, and will be ready for delivery shortly. Please watch the papers for further announcements.

Need for Regular Contributions

4. Thus far we have reported only the bright side of our publication work. There is, however, one serious problem confronting our Board, and that is the financial problem. Due to the war, prices of materials and labor have advanced greatly. As a result, the operating expenses for the past year have considerably exceeded the income from our periodicals. This condition will most likely continue for some time. It would not be wise to raise the price of our periodicals to a sufficient degree to offset this deficit. The only way to meet this situation is for the churches of our conference to help support the publication work through regular voluntary contributions. The publication work of our conference is as important as missions, education, and relief work. Consequently it deserves financial support by the churches as well as these other worthy causes. Your Board of Publication therefore urgently appeals to you to send at least one contribution annually to our treasurer, Brother E. W. Baumgartner, Berne, Indiana. During 1941-44 only about one-third of the churches contributed financially to the support of this important branch of our conference activities. The Board earnestly hopes that this percentage will be materially increased during the trying years immediately before us. May the Lord give us joy to support all our conference activities with our prayers and our gifts as they deserve.

Respectfully submitted,
The Board of Publication
J. M. Suderman, Sec., Newton, Kansas

Report of the Board of Education

The Board of Education proceeds on the assump- ı that the Christian faith and life can be brought perfection only as Christian people read and study Word of God and develop an inner strength suf- ent to meet the tasks and to resist the evils of day. Conversion is a first and necessary step; after the new birth there must be a continuous cess of nurture and growth in the religious life.

he field of activity for the Board of Education ery wide, and we have not been able to do all we hoped to do since the last meeting of the ıeral Conference. But we have made efforts along certain lines which we believe are worthy of the prayerful support of the Conference churches.

Material for the Senior-Adult Quarterly is being supplied by this Board and while the quarterly is not perfect, it is nevertheless meeting a great need and is being widely used in our churches. Miss Erna Fast has been employed to produce the Junior Quarterly and her work has been well received. She is also being encouraged to produce a three month's course for juniors on the history and teachings of the Mennonite Church.

At the suggestion of the men in our Civilian Public Service Camps, and in cooperation with other Conference Boards, an institute for young people interested in full time religious work has been planned and will be held on the Bethel College campus some time in August. The educational standards for the Christian ministry is a live question in all denominations, and we too are giving attention to this problem. A method of procedure for the ordination of ministers was worked out and approved by a meeting of various Conference Boards held in April.

The Board is trying to be helpful in unifying the various educational efforts throughout the conference such as Bible Academies, parochial schools, and colleges. That we may study to show ourselves approved workmen in God's vineyard and that we may grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ shall be our aim in all our work, and to this end we solicit your continued interest and prayers.

The Board of Education, L. Hostetler, Secretary

Report of Emergency Relief Board

At the last session of the General Conference the term of our dear Brother and long time chairman, Rev. John Lichti, expired. Due to ill health he asked to be released from all duties on this board. Dr. H. A. Fast was elected to succeed Rev. Lichti. After conference the Board was reorganized as follows: I. W. Bauman, Chairman; H. A. Fast, Vice Chairman; P. H. Unruh, Treasurer; John C. Mueller, Secretary, with Dr. Bauman and Rev. Unruh as representatives on the M.C.C.

Famine on our mission fields in India and China in 1941 created a great need. We have tried to give relief by sending money direct to our missionaries in both countries. The M.C.C. also has carried on relief work in India in the various Mennonite mission fields where starvation existed. This work continues. The famine in the Bengal district was almost beyond description. Much suffering has been relieved through the united eforts with the M.C.C.

In South America much relief work is being done through the M.C.C. by means of money, clothing, and relief workers, who are willing to give time and effort for the welfare of suffering humanity. What the M.C.C. as our agent, and we in cooperation with it, are doing in South America, can also be said of relief projects started in Puerto Rico, the Near East or North Africa, Palestine, or the project planned for Western China.

Since times are more prosperous, not so many individual cases for relief have come to the attention of the board.

While work in a number of places had to be closed due to the war, other doors may open at any place at any time in the near future. May we be ready to make use of such opportunities.

Aid to Dependents

Since the meeting of the several boards and committees of the Conference this spring, we have undertaken to make monthly payments where necessary to the dependents of our C.P.S. men. We have set aside a specific sum of our General Fund for this purpose and now kindly ask our churches for extra contributions to meet these needs.

In cooperation with your Home Mission Board and the Peace Committee, we have undertaken to make a careful study of the rehabilitation problem.

Since the General Conference has been postponed, we will have to feel our way step by step under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. We solicit the continued prayers of the conference churches that the Lord may bless his work.

We were deeply moved when the Lord, in his infinite wisdom, very suddenly took our dear Brother, Rev. P. H. Unruh out of our midst to his heavenly reward. We are truly thankful for the splendid choice that the officers of the Conference made in Brother Walter H. Temple as successor.

In His Service,
The Emergency Relief Board
John C. Mueller, Sec., Freeman, S. D.

Summary Report of Peace Committee 1941 1944

Since the meeting of General Conference in 1941, the Peace Committee has had three annual meetings: at Winona Lake, Indiana, in 1942; Goshen, Indiana, in 1943 and North Newton, Kansas, in 1944. There follows a summary report of some problems considered and action taken.

1. Gratitude for the loyal support of the churches to the Civilian Public Service program, and a strong appeal to churches to continue their support.
2. Urging those sharing in increased profits because of war to contribute accordingly to the various activities of General Conference.
3. Each District Conference urged to consider the appointment of a "minister-at-large" in interests of Conference activities.
4. An effort was made to find a man to give a full time in visiting the churches in the interests of C.P.S. and to bring peace education to the churches.
5. Regular articles to be contributed to the church papers on the subject of Biblical peace.
6. Plans to bring more peace education to the churches; recommend that peace lessons be included quarterly in the Sunday School lesson helps.
7. Urging all churches to keep in definite touch with all boys in camps, and more pastoral visits to camps.
8. With the Home Mission Board plans were put in motion to have a number of pastors released for period of time to give Bible teaching to the C.P.S. oys and the local churches, to give more unity to il. Recommended to District Peace Committees work out plans for week-end conferences to be ırried out in conjunction with the visiting peace reresentatives.

9. Suggested that there be appointed an Executive ecretary for General Conference, to give full time the work.

10. Recommended that churches plan to fittingly bserve a Peace Day when peace again shall come.

11. Join with the Relief Board and the Home Mission Board to set up a fact-finding committee to set up organization for giving mutual aid to General Conference young people.

12. Hearty approval and support of the canning project for C.P.S.

13. The treasury of Committee to be transferred to general headquarters, beginning July 1, 1944.

The Unity Committee

ear Brother:

In response to your letter relative to "Conference unday" I wish to say that the Church Unity Comittee would like to make the following prayer reuests:

1. Let us thank God for the good relationships that e developing between the various Mennonite denomiations as a result of our cooperation in the C.P.S. ıd M.C.C. relief work, and let us pray that the bond love may be strengthened.

2. Let us thank God for the fact that the Central onference and General Conference have joined hands doing mission work in Africa, and let us pray that ırough this united effort many people in Africa may saved. Let us pray also that the two cooperating oreign Mission Boards may find the best solution all the problems that may come up in this cooperave undertaking.

3. Let us thank God for the cordial relationship that exists between the Central Conference and the General Conference and let us pray that soon a way may be found for a closer union in fellowship and organization.

4. Let us thank God for the numerous Mennonite churches, such as for instance the large Bergtahl Congregation in Manitoba, which have not as yet joined the Conference but which are doing a great work for the Lord. Let us pray that the day may soon come when they will unite with the Conference. And let us pray that we as a Conference may be truly worthy of the confidence and trust which these congregations place in us by seeking to unite with us.

The Unity Committee

Support of Aged Needy Ministers

At its last session the General Conference instructed s Executive Committee to appoint a committee of x, "at least four of whom shall be lay members—o women and two men—to solicit, administer, and locate said funds under rules formulated by this ırticular committee."

To implement this "Minister Aid Committee" work e Conference adopted two other resolutions as folws: No. 61. "Resolved, that the Conferences urches be requested to contribute annually 10 cents r member for this fund;" and No. 62. "Resolved, at individuals be invited to make personal gifts or quests to this particular fund."

When making up your slate of offerings for the year, please, do not forget to have one offering for this worthy purpose. We should certainly never let it be said of us that our Christianity permits us to accept the faithful, sacrificial service of the best years of our ministers only to forget them in their declining days and let them or their widows become objects of public charity. Jesus himself said of the service His disciples were rendering, "the laborer is worthy of his hire." (Luke 10:7) Send all contributions to Conference Headquarters.

Let no one give one cent to this cause under outward pressure, but let every contribution, large or small, be a real Love Offering.

For Homer Leisy, Chairman, Dallas, Ore.

Report of Women's Missionary Association

The work of the women's organization has grown scope and effectiveness in the last few years. Beles their time-honored work of sewing for mission ations and contributing to worthy causes, the socies have been sewing for relief and C.P.S. Last year d again this year the canning and drying for C.P.S. mps, though done by the women of the church as whole, is sponsored largely by the mission or aid cieties.

Relief—According to Mrs. Lehman, M.C.C., interest in General Conference societies has increased greatly in the last year and a half. The appointment of Mrs. Sara Richert, Newton, as special relief supervisor, we believe, has helped. She gives specific directions for the work, answers inquiries and sends out many patterns to the district advisors.

Missionary News and Notes: A present circulation of over 6,000 continues to be issued ten months a year. Mrs. Goerz has given to it many years of untiring, sacrificial service and devotion. This past year Miss Mary Becker assisted, and Mrs. Gerhard Friesen has for several years assisted with the German section.

Junior and Intermediate Department: Miss Hulda Myers, Sec., feels keenly the need of a contact person in each district to help with the work of organizing more mission societies among the younger generation. At present the Middle District is the only district to have a secretary, Miss Elizabeth Locker. Through the column of the Missionary News and Notes Miss Myers has presented material for the use of Juniors and Intermediates. She has also been on the lookout for suitable literature and presented this. Stories sent to Miss Myers for this work will be greatly appreciated.

The Literature Committee supplies literature for all societies. Mrs. A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec., writes that many societies have made use of the literature but many have not because they do not have programs but do sewing only. This committee also has a page in the Missionary News and Notes. In each number the suggested topics and material for programs are given. Each year the Home and Foreign Study Books, as recommended by the "Missionary Education Movement" are advertised. Missionary biographies were written up. At each district conference there has been a literature table with literature for sale as well as some free. A great deal of preparation has gone into new literature that is being printed. When all off the press it will number 30,000 leaflets.

Contributions for all causes have steadily increased. In 1938-41 the contributions amounted to $43,963.03; those for the years 1942-43 alone totaled $53,025.47.

Migrant Work: It was decided to appoint a member on a Mennonite Women's United Service Committee, a cooperative body for Central, Defenseless, and General Conference women. Special project: Work among migrants. The worker is Miss Leonore Friesen of Newton, Kansas, a graduate of Bethel College and last winter a student at Biblical Seminary, New York.

After attending a conference for migrant workers at Benton Harbor, Michigan, Miss Friesen was stationed at Lennon and Swartz Creek near Flint, Michigan. Her work is largely among Mexicans. The work is done with the cooperation of the pastor and community people and aims to enlist the sympathy and help of the community.

Miss Friesen writes that when one considers the short time of contact with those migrants one almost becomes discouraged but that if done in the name of Christ and in His strength He can bless the efforts.

The same is true of all our efforts for missions and relief.

Respectfully Submitted,
The Women's Missionary Association
Mrs. Wm. C. Voth, Sec. Newton, Kansas

Report of Doctrine and Conduct Committee

"Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine; continue in them, for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." (I Timothy 4:16)

The work of this committee has consisted largely in the distribution of literature. As time goes on some doctrines stand in need of more attention, others less. That is to say, for example, the second World War has demonstrated the need for a more thorough education and conviction on our historic peace principles. This need our committee has tried to take note of in the distribution of some literature. As it happens the conference already has a committee which devotes its whole time to peace problems. We have tried to work in harmony with that committee.

A number of articles were written in our church papers by members of the committee during the past three years. The chairman of the committee wrote a series of articles on the Apostles' Creed.

Attached to this report is a list of literature in possession of the secretary of the committee. This literature has been gathered over a period of years and reveals some of the problems the committee has been dealing with: Salvation, Security, Mennonite Confession of Faith, Speaking in Tongues, the Oath, Secret Societies, Peace and Non-resistance, Inspiration, Baptism, Foot-washing and Lord's Supper, Temperance, the Bible, Christian Life, Child Welfare, etc. The committee will be happy to send or recommend literature on any of the above mentioned subjects.

The committee will welcome helpful literature, pamphlets, or tractlets written by our brethren in the conference, dealing with our Mennonite doctrines or essays that would help us as a denomination to relate ourselves to this age in a Christian way.

We pray that our heavenly Father may help us to stand united in our common faith in these times of testing. And in this our common loyalty to Christ may God use us mightily to the glory of His name.

The Committee on Doctrine & Conduct,
Willard K. Classen, Sec., Freeman, S. Dak.

A POST WAR PLAN

A plan to help CO's find suitable, significant jobs in the post-war world has been started by the campers at Powellsville, Maryland.

The plan calls for a registration of all pacifists interested in binding themselves into a society of mutual assistance for obtaining desirable employment after the war. After lists are compiled, a copy will be furnished to each signer of the pledge. Then all possible cities will be organized so that a local placement officer can bring the jobs and the men together.

Greetings from Our Young People's Union

It is a definite handicap to our work that conditions vould not permit us to meet this year in order to nake plans for a more active program; however, the ord knows how to solve every problem, and may we eek His will in prayer.

To a large extent the local societies determine the tanding of our Conference Young People's Union. hus, we urge each church to be praying for the oung people, that those who have not accepted hrist might yield their lives to Him, that Christians ight grow spiritually, that together we may work or the spreading of the gospel, and that our postponed ellowship will not hinder our carrying out the Lord's vill for our youth organizations.

During the last few years we have especially tried to encourage our societies to use the Fellowship Prayer Calendar, to give financial support to the home and foreign mission work and the C.P.S. program, to pray for and contribute to the purchase of the Rosthern Experimental Farm in Canada, and to have a regular system of contact with those in service.

The interest and cooperation received from the various district groups has been very much appreciated. May we ever "Press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

BETWEEN TWO FIRES!

By P. W. Penner

The several years harvest failures caused most disheartening poverty in the neighborhood. A good many had to beg for their sustenance. Yet they obtained insufficient to satisfy their physical needs. These destitutes appeared daily before our doors. Their bodies were wrapped in a few dangling rags, covering their haggard physique. They begged for money or food, mostly for both. This begging was practiced at all places, both by non-Christians and Christians.

Frequently, of course, the gospel is presented at such occasions with the urge to embrace another Saviour from what they thus far claimed to be the only one. To this many assented. But, alas, others said, "Then we lose out, if this One is accepted, you cannot and will not support us altogether; our caste will discontinue to give alms. Therefore we are facing further a distressful situation. We shall refrain from leaving our religion and caste. Give us now some alms for the present!"

For us to urge them to become Christians only to satisfy their physical hunger is quite unwise. It would swell the church membership only but not add to the helpful and spiritual virtue of the Christian community. Nevertheless, somehow several have managed to receive baptism; they have later on proved themselves deceitful. One can hardly be careful enough not to run into a snag occasionally. It has been proved in various instances after the famine was over that a goodly number of those gathered in during the famine rejoined their caste, leaving the church behind, denied that what they at the time of baptism solemnly promised. "O Lord, keep our eyes open to look deeper in order to find out the heart's motive when candidates appear!"

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By J. Herbert Fretz, Lansdale, Pennsylvania

"Cleanse thou me from secret faults." Ps. 19:12. Read Ps. 19. Our thought for today is a very simple one—just one little word—"me." Let us now read the verse again. "Cleanse thou me from secret faults." How we need today to worry less about other people's sins and more about our own. Only when we begin to see our own countless, hidden sins do we begin to appreciate the wickedness of man, the temptations of our fellowmen and the riches of Saving Grace. O God, before we reach, preach or teach others, help us to say "Cleanse thou me from secret faults." Amen.

"A false balance is an abomination to the Lord: but a just weight is his delight." Prov. 11:1. Read Prov. 11. We have government inspectors to check the scales and measures of our merchants for accuracy. But how many of us use "false balances" to measure out our time, money, and enthusiasm for the Kingdom of God. How unlike our God, who despite our stinginess returns to us "good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over." It's heart rending to see the millions of dollars the world and many of God's children squander on self, pleasure, and debauchery while the gospel tarries, lacking funds. If this money were used for the spread of the gospel, there would be no fear of inflation. If this time would be used to train the children in God's Word, there would be no delinquency problem. O Lord, forgive us where we, "have been weighed and found wanting," Amen.

The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. Eccles. 9:11. Read 11 Cor. 12:6-10. Life is full of paradoxes. Perhaps that is one reason why life is so interesting. One of the first stories a child learns is how the over-confident have lost the race to the persistent tortoise. Yet how often we Christians must be reminded that human weaknesses need not overwhelm us, nor human superiorities help us, in the race or battle of life. Christians too often suffer from an inferiority-complex when facing the giants of the world and from a superiority-complex when considering their own, meager strength. O Lord, help us to see that when we are weak in ourselves, then are we strong in Thee. Amen.

There is none other name under heaven given among men . . . whereby we must be saved. Acts 4:12. Read Acts 4:1-13. The boldness and clarity of Peter's statement is striking. Nor is he alone, for every page of Scripture speaks with this same authority of God. Many people would call this statement negative and narrow. In the Bible the word "name" as applied to God means more than our word denotes. It connotes His nature and works. In St. Mark's Church at Venice are inscribed these words, a beautiful definition of the name of Jesus:

Who He was:
And for what purpose:
And at what price: He redeemed thee:
And why he did this for thee:
And gave thee all things.
Consider!

Our Father, help us to consider the name of Christ today whether in the home, shop, office or field. Amen.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts neither are your ways my ways saith the Lord. Isa. 55:8. Read Isa. 55. It's comforting to know that transcending all our feeble plans and program lies the great Masterplan of God. Does that thwart our freedom or lull our initiative? The way some Christians complain and others drift through life, one would think so—but not at all. When the few drops from God's boundless sea of goodness and sovereignty flood our feeble, finite hearts, who then can contain the zeal and devotion which surges up within? Almighty Father in Heaven give us today the zeal and comfort that comes from trusting in Thy ways and save us from the discouragement and fear of our own willful ways. Amen.

But speak thou the things which became sound doctrine. Titus 2:1. Read Titus 2. Opinions are plentiful and cheap. We delight in making them, tossing them about, and discarding them at leisure. Not so with the Word of God. It's great truths of creation, sin, and salvation are mistakably clear, tangible, and abiding. Like electricity we know these truths without fully understanding them. Like the manna of old we must feed upon them day by day. The Bible is not only the key to eternal life, but to individual piety and national welfare. O Lord, by Thy Spirit, help us to hold fast to that which is true and to search out that which is still hidden. Amen.

Migrant Work

By Lenore G. Friesen

What Has Been Done

Twenty-four years ago the Council of Women for Home Missions saw the need of doing something for up-rooted agricultural laborers and became the first agency to attempt any kind of constructive program on behalf of these people. At first the chief concern was to furnish care for babies and small children who were neglected while older members of the family worked in fields and canneries. It was soon realized hat this program was a mere beginning and that there was real need for work among other age groups.

In January, 1940, a Joint Migrant Committee, representing both men's and women's boards, was formed. The various denominations now are cooperating under the leadership of the Home Missions Council f North America. Plus extensive seasonal programs, ear-round work is now carried on not only in Cali-ornia but in Florida, and in Texas. In these states many winter crops are harvested by the same people who come north in spring and summer.

Present Picture

The total migrant population is about 205,000 and 1,000 of them are found in the mid-west area and re made up of Anglo-Americans, Negroes, Americans f Mexican descent and imported help. Migrants moving in family groups still dominate the labor icture, although there is a trend toward the use of ngle men, particularly due to the groups of imported abor such as Jamaicans, Bahamans, and Mexican ationals. Japanese groups are used in some areas, nd both Italian and German prisoners of war are ssisting in several localities.

Centers that are set up include nurseries, education-l classes with adults participating in the English asses, recreational programs, health work with the ooperation of county health officials, and religious nstruction. Religious work is by far of greatest sting importance and is carried on by means of ouse to house visitation, D.V.B.S., religious group rvices, and personal contacts and is the central in-rest around which our work pivots.

Education, Church Background

Three-fourths of the parents of migrant children ave had no education beyond the fourth grade. The ildren attend irregularily and are often penalized many moves, lack of school facilities for migrant children, segregation, and discrimination.

There is a gain in the number of nominally Roman Catholic migrants, due largely to the movement of Mexican nationals and Spanish-Americans, although many are without contact with any church. Many of the imported Jamaicans and Bahamans are members of the Church of England, though other denominations are represented.

There seems to be an increased interest on the part of migrants in the Eastern and Midwestern areas in the services of resident churches. It is agreed, however, that they are most responsive to services conducted in their camps and in which they may participate with greater freedom.

One Local Area

A migrant worker never knows just what he will find upon entering a community, and therefore his program must be flexible and adjusted to needs and interests of his group. Every area and community is very different, and thus the Lennon-Swartz Creek area near Flint, Michigan, is not necessarily a typical one.

This is a sugar beet region, and the migrants are Mexican families from Texas and nationals from Mexico. We have a Mexican village at Lennon and another one at Swartz Creek. The remainder of the group live in isolated houses scattered throughout the beet fields in a radius of about twenty-five miles.

Since I am staying at the home of the fieldman for this particular area, I have opportunity to visit the most outlying families when he makes his rounds. The rest I contact by use of a bicycle. Since there are surprisingly few children my work is mostly with adults.

It is generally hoped that work can be done through the local church, and in this particular area we are fortunate in having a Spanish-speaking minister. Thus we can have services entirely in the Spanish. However upon his absence during his vacation, I have had the entire responsibility. By letting one of them read the Scripture portion, through use of an interpreter, and by learning some Spanish choruses, services were made possible. They appreciate the little that is done for them and upon several occasions I have caught them reading the Spanish gospels that were distributed among them—a father rocking his baby with one hand and holding the gospel in the other, or yet another one sitting on a block of wood reading while his friend was chopping wood.

Some of them have been to every service held in the Lennen church. One Sunday evening a man and his wife favored us with a duet in Spanish which had the message of God's love.

Home visitation is most revealing and interesting. When the bicycle is seen a quarter of a mile away youngsters scamper into the house and appear in "cleaner" clothes and with a radiant smile. Anything can be expected upon such visits—learning a few words in Spanish, games with the children, getting water for the laundry underway, Bible story and songs with the children or Scripture and prayer with the whole family, and the telling of the gospel message.

On one occasion the visit culminated in the bath of a two-month-old baby. Upon returning the next day the baby was still alive and well but cleaner, and preparations were being made for its bath in just the manner in which I had given it.

If any medical attention is needed it need only to be reported to the local field man who at once secures the services of a doctor.

Some evenings after their supper of tortillas and brown beans, or on days when it is too wet in the fields for work, they enjoy softball on the local school grounds. Occasionally films that have been secured from the American Bible Society or other agency are also enjoyed.

It is our prayer that everywhere work among them may be of lasting spiritual value.

HEROES OF THE FAITH (III)

Menno Simons

Hymns: "Rise up, O Men of God", "Where Cross the Crowded Ways"

Scripture and Prayer:

Life of Menno Simons: It is hard to imagine the world into which Menno Simons was born in 1496. America had just been discovered! Picture the strange tales being told of this new land. Commerce was growing. Peasants were beginning to demand new rights. The Middle Ages were ending and the Reformation was about to be born! The people, for the most part, lived under a powerful and rich dictatorship—different than the kind we know today. It was the Roman Catholic Church. It is estimated that through the Lord Bishops and wealthy monasteries it owned more than a third of all Germany. To obtain more power and wealth, its leaders practiced gross evil and corruption.

Into this world little Menno Simons was born. His parents were simple Dutch peasants and lived in the beautiful village of Witmarsum in the province of Friesland in the far northwest corner of continental Europe. Being devout Catholics they decided to give their son to the service of the church. So at an early age he entered a monastery near his home. Menno studied many books of the church —but never read the Bible! When twenty-eight he was ordained a priest and served as parish priest in nearby communities for twelve years. This part of his life might never have been recorded if the events following it had not taken place.

As a young priest Menno was evidently popular and gay. Outwardly he didn't seem to take his work too seriously. Like most of the young priests of his day he was well paid and lived a frivolous and somewhat dissipated life. Inwardly, however, Menno was rebelling aainst this fruitless living and even against some of the teachings of his church. He began to read the Bible. Doubts entered his mind. Was it true as the Catholic Church taught that at mass the bread and wine were changed into the blood and flesh of the Lord? He searched the scriptures and came to the conclusion that they were only symbols of the suffering and death of Christ. And what about the Catholic practice of infant baptism? The New Testament, he found, taught that baptism on confession of faith alone was scriptural. Menno began to believe these new ideas, but he could not bring himself to practice them. He would lose his job. His comfortable salary would end. People would begin talking behind his back. He might even lose his life. (Do these reasons ever enter into our decisions today?)

At this time many groups were breaking with the Catholic church and forming small religious sects. One of the most radical of them all was a brotherhood known as Anabaptists. Occasionally this pure and God-fearing group split under corrupt leadership. One such split formed the Munsterites, who believed in violence, vengeance, and open revolt. Menno's own brother came under their influence and died defending their beliefs. Menno opposed them strongly. But when 300 of these misguided souls lost their lives at the Old Cloister near Bolsward in Friesland, Menno became stirred. They died for false ideals, he thought, and he was afraid to live for the truth. These people had needed a leader. As a servant of God he could not evade this responsibility. From this moment on he became a great Christian and a gallant leader for the Mennonite church.

Menno Simons' decision to leave the Catholic church and join the Anabaptists in 1536 meant poverty, loss of prestige, danger, homelessness (at one time awards for his arrest were spread throughout the province of West Friesland). He traveled, preached, and wrote tirelessly in various provinces of Holland and Germany. The stories of these trips are dramatic and thrilling.* His death came in 1561; his wife, Gertrude, and two children having preceded him. To the last the greatness of his ideals and convictions possessed his soul. He was a true hero of the Christian faith!

Teachings: (Selected)

All quotations from Menno Simons' writings

1. Primacy of the Scriptures (II Timothy 3:16)

"We write and teach nothing but the pure, heavenly word and the perfect commandments of Jesus Christ and His Apostles."

The only guide for faith and morals is the Bible—not the church, books of theology, or the words o men.

2. Necessity of Atonment through the Cross (Romans 5:11)

"We cannot be saved from our sins by priests, fastings, holy water, good works—but only by accepting Christ as our Saviour, in the belief that He gave his blood as God's expression of forgiveness to us for our sins."

3. Practical Holiness as Disciples of Christ (Gal. 2:20)

"The true believers show in act and deed that they believe, are born of God and spiritually minded." They practice the following:

a. Non-Resistance (Matt. 5:38-44) "The regenerated do not go to war nor fight. They are the children of peace."

b. Non-Conformity (Rom. 12:2) Menno Simons believed that the inward adorning of the spirit was more important than the outward adorning of the body. Jewelry and elaborate clothes, he said, were outward adornment.

c. Ministry to the needy (Isa. 58:7, 8)

Questions:

1. How many believe and practice the above teachings? Give reasons.

2. Why isn't Menno Simons as well known as Wesley, Luther, or Calvin?

3. Have you ever discovered a book in your school library on Menno Simons?

4. Which group of Mennonites have followed his teachings most effectively? Why?

The Canning and Drying Project

A Camper's View

by David D. Schrag, Business Manager C.P.S. Camp No. 64, Terry, Montana

Let us listen in to the conversation of an evening neal. There are eight fellows at the table, all coming from different parts of the United States. As he buttered peas are passed, John from Minnesota emarks, "I wonder if this dish of peas doesn't repre-ent the work of my mother or one of her neighbors. ou know, when that carload of donated food arrived ere several weeks ago, I noticed quite a number of ases of peas, beans, tomatoes, peaches, pears, and herries labeled as coming from my own community. n looking further I surprisingly found the names of y own parents and neighbors on some of the jars. think these peas we are eating now are my mother's ecause she is the only one in the world that can reserve them in such a good way."

"Just a second, John," interrupts Bob, "My mother Nebraska always had the best peas, and I would-'t be surprised if we asked the cooks whose names ere on the jars they opened this afternoon that they ight be my mother's."

"Well," says Harry, "I know some folks in Oregon r whom I used to work who canned some peas for e canning project and some of them must have me here. These peaches we have for dessert prob-bly came from the community in Pennsylvania where y aunt lives. They had plenty of jars of fruit in e shipment." "You know," observed Harry, "All ese donations certainly show a wonderful spirit on e part of the Mennonite and affiliated groups all er the United States. This unselfish service shows at they are thinking of us; they are whole-heartedly ck of us and their spirit is making us more unified."

Gratifying Response

Such remarks as the above, which are quite frequent, e an outgrowth of large shipments of donated nned and dried fruits and vegetables received at amp No. 64 during October, November, and Decem-r, the largest one being a carload of nearly 19,000 arts.

In the winter and spring of 1943, strict rationing, high prices, and shortages made it increasingly hard to stabilize the cost of feeding and to provide a wholesome, nutritious diet. It was then that the Mennonite constituency, having vision and faith in God, launched upon a project of canning and drying fruits and vegetables. The need was laid before the churches, and the outcome was certainly gratifying.

High Quality

Our nearby Mennonite groups worked hard in giving generously of their time and goods to help supply us with both fresh and canned commodities. A collection center in Oregon sent a nice shipment of canned fruit, which was the most difficult item to obtain, commercially. Besides being difficult to obtain, what could be had was usually only water packed and of a poorer quality compared to the home-processed goods we received.

Carload of 19,000 Quarts

A few days before Christmas we received notice of a carload of nearly 19,000 quarts of canned fruits and vegetables to arrive from the Denison, Iowa, collection center. Everyone was anxiously waiting to see just how much that amount would be. Immediately a carpenter began building extra shelves in the basement and root cellar.

The day came when the carload arrived. The technical agency allowed us to have two trucks and six men to do the unloading. One day was spent in transferring cases and barrels of fruits and vegetables from the heated freight car to the camp recreation hall, a room 20 by 80 feet. All the goods were stacked according to kind of food awaiting checking of each jar for spoilage and breakage.

Prayers of Thanksgiving

That evening at the supper table the director made known to all of us what had been received. After a few remarks of gratitude we were all asked to bow our heads in a few words of silent prayer, during which many prayers of thanksgiving were made to God for his many unfailing blessings, for the Mennonite Central Committee, for our tolerant government and for all those over the United States who are praying and giving of their time, money, and goods that we in camp might continue to witness for the cause of Christ. After supper nearly everyone went to the Recreation hall and there before them was represented the loving sacrificial and willing work of many a mother, father, sister, brother, and sweetheart. It truly revealed again that where a call is given and a need presented, our Mennonite people most heartily respond as they always have done in the past four hundred years.

Checking the Jars

The next few days were spent in checking every jar for spoilage and breakage. Very little of either was found. Everyone who had a part in sorting and checking had an enjoyable time doing it. Whenever a case of strawberries, peaches, or pineapple was opened, mouths began to water. The labels attracted the greatest attention. It was a sense of great satisfaction to find on some jars the names of our own parents, relatives, neighbors, or friends. It was a good incentive to write letters to some folks that hadn't been written to for some time.

Shelving

Enough shelving had been made available in the root cellar and basement for about six thousand quarts, and the remainder was stored in the incoming cartons in a vacant room in the laundry building. The shelves full of canned fruits and vegetables certainly created a homelike atmosphere.

Canned Goods, A Great Aid

This canning program has indeed been a great help in supplying vital foods to us in camp. It not only provides a greater variety but also a higher quality. It has greatly lessened the work and worries of those in our camps who are responsible for the purchasing and preparation of the food and meals. The dietician can now make out her menus in advance with greater ease and rest assured that a great variety and quantity of fruits and vegetables are within a few steps.

How important it is to have an abundant supply of good food!

Heartfelt Gratitude

We at Camp No. 64 appreciate with heartfelt gratitude that many folks took so much time and effort in preparing, packaging, and shipping this food. To those of us in camp, this is a genuine token of the abiding interest of all our churches in us and of our testimony to a deeply held Christian conviction which we are trying to bring to a world at war. May the Lord bless each one that had a part, and may this be a means of uniting all of us in the Cause of Christ and His Way of Peace.

Thoughts on the Parables

By Willard K. Claassen

The parables on the thirteenth chapter of Matthew describe the reception and progress of the kingdom n this world. The chapter contains eight parables all given on one occasion, though not in a connected discourse, (verse 53). These parables picture he King's own view of His kingdom as to its history in the age which He initiated by His coming nto the world.

I

Scholars, aware of the contradictory implication e.g. Ollivier) of their interpretations, have sought o show that these parables were given on different ccasions without chronological sequence. This eems to be suggested by Luke 13:18-21, where Jesus peaks several of the same parables in a different etting. Matthew, however, sets them in chronological rder. Jesus, being a traveling teacher, could easily ave repeated these parables on subsequent occaons, as seems to be evident in Luke.

Sitting in a boat at the seaside, Jesus gave four arables to his disciples and the multitude who hronged the shore: the parable of the Soils and its nterpretation and the parables of the Tares, the Mustard Seed, and the Leaven. From the thirtyxth verse we learn that Jesus dismissed the multiude and entered a house with his disciples. There, pon request, he interpreted the parable of the ares, after which he proceeded to tell them four her parables, the parables of Hidden Treasure, e Pearl, the Drag Net, and the Householder.

II

In this thirteenth chapter of Matthew the kingom is viewed in its progress in this age among en. The first four parables were spoken to the ultitude at the seashore, men of sight. The next ur were given in the house to the disciples, men of th. Those spoken to the multitude present the ngdom viewed from the human standpoint. Those oken to the disciples present the same age viewed om the divine aspect. This general interpretation s been suggested by G. Campbell Morgan.

Granting the chronological sequence of these parables, this interpretation has a good deal to commend it. It does not do violence to, but rather puts new meaning into the understanding of human history. It shows, if only in a general way, how God works in history. It confronts us with the old question, "Is the world getting better or worse?" If we rightly understand the teaching of Jesus in this chapter it is both. It is getting better in many respects while at the same time it is growing worse.

In the first four parables which describe the kingdom from the human standpoint, Jesus declared that two antagonistic forces would be at work in human history. He indicated that there would be a long and continuous conflict between them, issuing in an apparent victory of evil on the earth level. In the second group of parables Jesus described the kingdom viewed from the Divine standpoint. Here the Divine activity running through the age is ultimately successful. The evil which seemingly held the upper hand on the earth level is destroyed, and the purpose and reality of the kingdom is brought to a glorious realization.

III

With this survey in mind, let us look at the parables. In the parable of the Sower, the emphasis is laid upon the Soils. Of course, the Sower is Christ and his preacher; the seed is the gospel, and the field is the world. The multitudes came to hear Jesus. How would they receive his gospel of the kingdom? As variously as the Galilean soil received the seed. He told the multitude a story about themselves. The parable works itself out in four sections.

Some seed fell by the wayside, at the edge of a beaten path. There the wind and the birds stole the seed at will. Similarly across the field of our thoughts there are hard beaten tracks. The souls of men that have become thoroughfares—weddings, funerals, pleasures, trade have gone over them, but nothing of spiritual worth stuck. They are hearers who are roadways for any interest or happening that may chance to pass their way. While celebrating God's solemn festivals in God's house, Augustine confesses he was doing business procuring the fruits of death. Matthew has the revealing phrase, "When anyone heareth the word . . . and understandeth it not." This hearer does not understand. He is always on the surface; Jesus is below the surface. Soon the birds will come! Some twittering gossip, some new interest, some new excitement will steal the good seed. Satan goes to church to snatch the gospel away from hearers. Jseus says, "Take heed how ye hear."

We are told of the rocky ground. The harvest on such soil follows the rule, "quickly come, quickly go." The funeral sermon makes an impression. With joy and enthusiasm they join the church. Soon something turns up they do not like, and one by one they drop back into the world. When their convictions come to a test, they are scorched by the heat of temptation; they find it is much easier to "live peaceably with all men" between wars than it is in wars. What shallowness this war has revealed! "When persecution cometh straightway he stumbleth." Christ says, "Take heed how ye hear."

Some fell among the thorns, on land that was fouled by latent weed-seeds. They are the people who receive the truth about God; then other interests quietly spring up to challenge growth. They are hearers of divided loyalties. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Mr. Blank, who is prosperous, attends the Lord's supper in the morning; in the evening he beholds lewd, Christ-defaming pictures! He would carry water on both shoulders. "The cares of this world," and "The deceitfulness of riches," what revealing words! We are not hurling cheap jibes at those who have money. Most of us know what queer effect money has on us (even on Mennonites in war time). We cannot escape the attention Jesus gives to money. David Garrick was showing his mansion and gardens to old Samuel Johnson, who laid his hand lovingly on his friend's shoulder and said "Ah! David, David, these are the things which make a death bed terrible." Thorns can kill corn! Jesus says, "Take heed how ye hear."

Some fell on good ground. We are not asked to live in a fool's paradise in our work in the church. Much of our labor will be fruitless, and we must not be disappointed. What could not be said about missionary work in Japan, for example? Like Jesus we must be realists and keep on sowing the seed. Some will fall into good soil and bring a bountiful harvest. Jesus sowed in hope.

> "From hardened heart, from shallow soul,
> Where faith may fail for lack of root,
> From choking cares, Lord keep me whole,
> To bear, with patience, perfect fruit."
> (F. Cornish)

Relief

New Center Opened in Puerto Rico

On June 13 another branch community center was opened up at Nogueras. Nogueras is located in a thickly populated community, about sixteen miles from La Plata. This is the second branch community center to be opened. Justus Holsinger and Al Bohrer remain at La Plata to conduct the community activities there.

P. C. Hiebert Visits Puetro Rico

As Chairman of the Mennonite Central Committee, Brother Hiebert is scheduled, the Lord willing, to leave Miami on July 30 to visit the Mennonite unit in Puerto Rico. Brother Hiebert's visit has been planned to coincide with Brother Orie Miller's stop on the Island on his return from Paraguay. Brothers Hiebert and Miller together will view the present work to decide upon further plans for the workers at La Plata.

Teacher to Serve in Puerto Rico

Carol Glick, Sugarcreek, Ohio, at present a member of the summer service unit for Mennonite women at Ypsilanti, Michigan, has consented to teach school in Puerto Rico. While Sister Glick will be a member of the Mennonite unit at La Plata, she will serve on the teaching staff of the Baptist high school at the city of Barranquitas. She will teach English and Bible subjects.

India Workers Leave

Brother and Sister George Beare left this country recently for India. Brother Beare will, for a period serve in relief work. He will relieve Brother F. J. Isaac, who has been in charge of the Bengal program, so that Brother Isaac can return to his mission work.

C.P.S.

C.P.S. Staff Changes

Phil L. Frey, who has served as area director for the Eastern States, will be leaving the program August 1. Harry E. Martens, who has been serving in the Rocky Mountain area, will be shifted to the East to fill the vacancy Brother Frey is leaving. Erwin Goering, director at the Camino, California C.P.S. camp, will succeed Brother Martens as area director in the Rocky Mountain section.

Dentist to Serve Camps

Dr. Robert H. Maris, Quaker dentist from Wilmington, Delaware, is giving a month of service to Mennonite camps to provide dental care for the C.P.S. men. Dr. Maris is equipped to transport his instruments from camp to camp. His first stop was at the Luray, Virginia, camp where he arrived the beginning of July.

Dependency Bill Deferred

Before Congress adjourned on June 23, three objections in the House were raised to remove the C.P.S. dependency bill from the unanimous consen calendar. The bill is now in a position where it wil likely not be considered for some time. The C.P.S dependency bill would have permitted the flow o moneys earned by C.P.S. men on dairy service, t dependents of C.P.S. men rather than into a froze treasury fund. Said one Congressman, "I fully agre with the resolution of the American Legion whic says, in effect, that setting up allotment payment to families is encouraging those who would no actually be conscientious objectors to try to take advantage of the law."

C.P.S. Briefs

On June 27, eight campers from the Three River

California, camp, had the opportunity to pick one half ton of apricots for camp use on a ranch near Reedley. The camp as a result now has 299 quarts of canned apricots and 160 quarts of jam, besides several generous meal servings.

A number of campers at the Medaryville, Indiana, camp, have the task of handfeeding 275 Mallard ducklings. During the spring months other men t the same camp transplanted approximately ,300,000 pine trees.

JOTTINGS

—Rev. W. C. Voth spent some fifteen days in Western Kansas, running a combine for a Holderman Mennonite. Rev. Voth reports that over five inches f rain fell in the Montezuma community in a little ver two weeks. It was so wet during the week f July 16 that combines could not get into the eld. People living there say that it is wettest ummer for many years. While in the west, Rev. oth served the Mennonite groups at Montezuma nd Kismet with messages. He also served the ennonite Church at Turpin, Oklahoma. Bronzed nd strong looking, Brother Voth gives no evidence the serious illness that he suffered in Colombia, uth America.

“The Song Kit” is the name of a short compilation songs from the Mennonite Hymnary, made by the etreat Committee of the Western District for use its retreat this year. This pocket-size edition s words and notes. By the multilith process the cretarial Bureau, North Newton, reduced full-size es of the Hymnary to a smaller size and reprint-them. The result is a very usable little song k that will undoubtedly be enlarged and improved he years to come. Use of it at retreats, etc., kes unnecessary the use of the more expensive nnary.

NORTHERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE CANCELLED

Since our government has requested that all con- ences which are “not directly and urgently war- nected” be cancelled for the remainder of 1944 the interest of wartime transportation, and since General Conference has deemed it advisable to nply with this request after a poll of the opinions the Northern District Conference pastors and icers, the decision has been reached to cancel the 4 sessions of the Northern District Conference ich had been scheduled to convene at Henderson, braska, August 25-29.

For the Executive Committee
Erland Waltner
Pres., Northern District Conference

—The Kauffman Museum, North Newton, Kansas, was visited by over 2,000 people from August, 1943, to August, 1944. Increasing numbers of people are visiting this place of interest.

—Rudy Wiens, son of Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Wiens, landed in India on June 6. He is now near Gauhati on the Bramaputre River in northeast India, near the fighting lines. He is doing Y.M.C.A. work among British and Indian soldiers. The weather in this region is very sultry.

—Rev. John P. Suderman of Berne, Indiana, left on July 24 for Flagstaff, Arizona, where he planned to attend the Southwest Bible and Missionary Conference. Rev. Suderman is grounds manager of the conference site. On his return trip he expects to stop at the C.P.S. camp at Colorado Springs.

—The Middle District Conference will not meet this year according to a statement by Rev. J. N. Smucker, President.

—Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, Calif.: Rev. W. A. Regier headed the three weeks vacation Bible school. Nine teachers helped. The average attendance was 100. On July 16 the church had a farewell dinner for the J.C.O. Sperlings and Homer. Mr. and Mrs. Sperling have moved to Newton, Kansas, and Homer is to teach in the Oklahoma Bible Academy. The pastor's wife is recovering from an operation. Miss Dorothy Schroeder, our church worker, is slowly regaining her health.

—The Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas, has organized a Bethel College Fellowship with George Duerksen as chairman. The congregation plans to hold a church retreat some time in September. Sister Magdalene Wiebe is enjoying a month's vacation in Colorado.

—The Mennonite Collegiate Institute, Gretna, Manitoba, directed for over forty-two years by Rev. H. H. Ewert, is appealing through its board of directors for assistance in erecting a new $60,000 school building. $23,000 has already been pledged.—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Beatrice.

—Rev. Ben P. Rahn was recently installed as pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church, Enid, Oklahoma. Rev. P. P. Tschetter, a member of the Home Mission Committee of the Western District, officiated.

—The Oklahoma Bible Academy is soliciting funds from friends in Oklahoma for the purpose of completing the school building that was begun in 1935, when the first story of the west half of the building was completed. The plans call for an expenditure of $18,000 to $29,000. The school has adopted a definite “debt-free” policy for this building.

—Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Delft, Minnesota: In June the young people enjoyed a picnic with the Baptist young people of Jeffers. The picnic was closed with chorus singing and prayer. Rev. S. P. Anderson, of Westbrook, delivered the message on a C.E. mission program, held on June 25. Rev. C. H. Suckau brought the message on the annual missionary and children's day program. Rev. Lando Hiebert of Enid, Oklahoma, preached on July 9.

—Dr. A. J. Regier, Professor of Education at Bethel College, recently returned from Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he took part in the North Central Association Workshop in Higher Education, which was held on the campus of the University of Minnesota. Twenty-eight church-related colleges took part in this project, and Dr. Regier represented Bethel College. The activities of the workshop included group and individual conferences, committee reports, panel discussions, field trips, and lectures by outstanding educators and public men.

—Mennonites living in Minneapolis, Minnesota, had a fellowship picnic dinner in Glenwood Park on Sunday, July 16. Fifty-five Mennonites or former Mennonites were present at this meeting. Thirty of these originally came from Mt. Lake, Minnesota, fifteen from South Dakota, two from Canada, two from Kansas, and one from Indiana.

Of these fifty-five people at the picnic, eleven were secretaries or office workers in the cities, ten were housewives eight children, five nurses, two ministers, two social workers, two college instructors, two Bible school students, two defense workers, two business men, one painter, one dress designer, one electrician, and one telephone operator.

It was interesting to find out where people attend church while in the cities. According to their report at the meeting, sixteen attended the Baptist church, fourteen the Swedish Covenant Tabernacle church, three the Methodists, two the Mayflower Community church, two the Lutheran church, one the Nazarene and thirteen had no regular church chosen which they attended.

During the short program which followed the lunch, each person gave his name, his former home, his occupation, and the church which he attended in the city. Dr. A. J. Regier from Bethel College then briefly spoke on some phase of Mennonite history and Dr. Silas Hertzler, from Goshen College, described his trip to Palastine and around the world.

Martha Buller and John A. Wiens had the main responsibility for arranging this picnic. About half of those present were from General Conference churches.

HARLEY STUCKY TO BE ORDAINED

Brother Harley J. Stucky, member of the Hoffnungsfeld Church, Moundridge, Kansas, is to be ordained to the full ministry August 20, 1944, at 3:00 p. m. The local church invites all friends of God's Kingdom to take part through prayer and supplication that God may bless all concerned.

—Gustav Frey, Minister of the Hoffnungsfeld Church

—Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio: The Ladies' Missionary Society recently presented Miss Martha Burkholder, recently returned missionary from India, for a Sunday evening service. For their July meeting they discussed and held a questionnaire on "Our Mennonite Relief Program." Nine young people of the church attended the Young People's Retreat at Camp Mack, and later presented a program telling of their experiences while there. Rev. and Mrs. Musser both conducted classes at the retreat. The choir is planning a program to be presented in July consisting of selections from some of the great oratorios. The concert will be under the direction of Russell A. Lantz of Bluffton College.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

First Church, Philadelphia—Recently the church observed Father's and Son's day at both services. The pastor, the Rev. J. J. Plenert spoke on the following themes, morning, "The Mighty Man of Valor" and in the evening, "The Secret of a Great Man."

Second Church, Philadelphia—The daily vacation Bible school opened June 26, and the attendance the first week averaged eighty-one in three departments. Sunday afternoon, June 25, the Men's Quartet was in charge of the worship service at the Mennonite Home for the Aged at Frederick. The pastor delivered the message.

Eden, Schwenksville—The Memorial Day services were held in the Reformed Church Sunday, May 28. The three choirs, Reformed, Lutheran, and Mennonite, combined to make a joint group. The church was filled. Father's Day was observed in the Sunday School on June 18. The classes in the school were taught by fathers. They did the secretarial work and gathered the materials after the school. Two non-fathers distributed a rose to each father present.

Deep Run—The Eppley Sisters of Mechanicsburg Pa., presented a musical program July 16. The pastor, the Rev. Russell L. Mast, recently visited C.P.S. camps in Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania.

East Swamp—Dr. Harvey Bauman and family presented a missionary program in the church Sunday evening, June 25. The pastor, the Rev. Harold D Burkholder, recently visited their missionary worker in the Kentucky mountains and took moving pictures of the work. He plans to show them to the members and friends in the near future. Monday evening July 10, Eivin Bjornstad, converted opera singer trained by the late Caruso, then later led to Christ gave a sacred concert in the church. A 1936 Chevrolet Coupe has been purchasd for the Rev. Abraham Unruhs, missionaries to Kentucky.

Zion, Souderton—Miss Frances Hedrick and Rev. George Landis were united in marriage in the church by Rev. Paul Wenger, on July 1. Mrs. Wenger gave a talk on "Missions" at the Women's Missionary Society meeting several weeks ago. Elvin R. Souder recently sailed from New Orleans fo Paraguay to do relief work under the supervisio of the Mennonite Central Committee. The M.C.C plans to use him in opening up, in Eastern Paraguay community relief and health centers.

Fairfield—A union hymn sing was conducted on the Lutheran Church Lawn, Sunday evening July 9, Miss Ruth Burkhard of our Church was the song leader. July 12 was the day set apart for cherr canning for C.P.S. camps in the Orrtanna Methodist Church kitchen. A total of 300 quarts were canned

A "Cup of Water"

By Joanna S. Andres

From the heart of my God I have aken the gift of a summer in the Rockies. Thinking of those I would eave behind me, I asked of Him to grant me from time to time a "cup of vater," or a bit of "mountain fragance" to send back to the plains that soul, which in its daily living would ause to drink and breathe, might be efreshed as my soul is refreshed in hese, God's greater hills.

How quickly is the thirst of the ody quenched and how abundant is he reservoir of earth! Where people nhabit the earth, there is water. Here n the mountains, at the turn of a road, he traveler finds it surging down ome height, tumbling over rocks, dropping down the cliffs, flowing through he sanded canyon beds; in wooded lens the brooklet flows its quieter ourse and from the cleft in a rock the parkling water drops. There is a full upply and when man thirsts, he lrinks.

How different is the response of the oul to its thirst. God's waters for its lrinking flow just as abundantly and reely as flows the water for man's atural thirst, yet some have never ound nor tasted them. Some have urned aside to seek some other wells vhich left the soul unsatisfied; some ave tasted and have drunk freely for he water is good.

We thirst again for that which is ood. So it is that those who have aken freely of the waters of God's ove, are the ones who cry out to Him. As the hart panteth after the water rooks, So panteth my soul after Thee, God."

Here in the mountains, at the turn of a road, the traveler finds it surging down some height, tumbling over rocks, dropping down the cliffs . . .

In so many varied ways God answers this cry of the human heart, leans low, so low, until the soul has taken from His hand its drink. How satisfying are these moments of our life! "As the hart panteth," so we come to Him and as the hart leapeth lightly back to its woodland home, so our soul returns rejoicing to its task.

It was a rainy day. Dark and low hung the clouds over Silver Gables, our mountain home. Below us and around us the mountains had hidden behind a veil so quickly, so mystically spun. The Rocks of the Garden of the Gods on which we had watched the sunlight's changing play on brighter days, were lost to our view. The pillared structure, the entrance to the Cave of the Winds, which stands as a temple on its rocky mount, the winding serpent road which we had followed on a summer day, were shrouded in the veil. Here and there where a cloud had fallen low, the heights were changed to look like a steaming, boiling mass. Where a smaller cloud was tumbling down the hillside, it was as though a child had left its mother's hand, now free in fancied play. To our right, still visible to us, stood Red Castle on its height, proud and firm, looking down as a watchman upon the shrouds that wrapped small Manitou below.

Then came the rain, the beating, drenching rain, and then the hail that tore the summer growth from trees and quickly stripped the gardens row by row. The lightning flashed in its strength and the thunder roared in his anger.

How can a storm that rages on a spot on earth break suddenly to usher peace and quietness and sunshine in instead! As the wild beasts of the forest come forth from their haunts at the passing of a storm and the birds leave their nests again, so we came to greet the sunshine and found a rainbow spanned from ridge to ridge above us, perfect in its formation, perfect as my eyes had never seen it. My soul stood still in awe, stood still and drank the cup of this God's wondrous love! It was as though the voice that once had spoken in the long ago, spoke now again "I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant. . . between me and you."

So close, at times, does God descend on us! His eyes and mine had met within the colors of a rainbow. What if the storms do rage across the soul if at the end they leave it washed from dross as now lay Manitou, its mighty hills, clean from their dust! What if the anger of God pierces the soul with its lightning and shakes its foundations with a thunder, when at its close it leaves still spanned across the soul the colored rainbow of His covenant!

"Between me and you," so had He said. So was it now. Heart to heart there was communion. When the soul meets its God thus, it drinks deeply of the waters that gave it life. As the lighted heavens shone with their evening light, to my soul came again the words from Revelation "There was a rainbow round about the throne, like an emerald to look upon." What soul would not drink, drink deeply of such love! From Genesis to Revelations, from age to age until the heavens shall be rolled up like a scroll God keeps His covenant with man!

CAUSE FOR HUMILITY

By Erland Waltner

"O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all." Ps. 104:24

When we begin to feel quite proud of the achievements of man in this scientific age it is well for us to consider some of the marvels of God's achievements in nature. This always helps us to realize that there is in this universe a mind that is far keener and a hand that is far more skilful than ours.

We pride ourselves in the great speed which can now be attained by man-made airplanes, but according to Dr. Townsend, a famous American etymologist, there is a tiny insect, a species of the botfly, that can travel at the maximum speed of 818 miles per hour, leaving even our fastest planes far behind.

The development of the autogiro, a plane which is able to make a vertical ascent and then change to a forward motion, has also been called a great achievement. But long before the days of the autogiro the humming bird was able to make a vertical "take off" in one twelfth of a second and then fly either forwards or backwards at the speed of 50 miles per hour, or it could hover over one spot. The dragon fly can do the same and can also fly sideways at full speed.

Certainly man has made great progress in the field of artificial lighting, but the firefly still harbors a secret that the scientists have not learned. The firefly produces a light without heat which is something scientists wish they could do. Some fireflies can put their lights on "dim" or on "bright" and produce enough light that a newspaper may be read by it. "Oh the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God."

Home Coming

By Helen E. Nickel

"For the Lord is mindful of His own, He ever membereth His people."

A safe and happy homecoming was granted to me July 1. It was unprecedented for speed, considerg the long distance of the ocean voyage. Unprecented, too, in the many kinds of uncertainties which faced: when would we leave? What way would go? Where and when arrive? Whom might I eet? What might happen? I felt very much alone ien I left Janjgir because no one else from our ission was going just then, and I knew of no travelg companion. But God's presence and promises ere closer than breathing. During the five long, ltry, uncomfortable weeks of waiting at a coast city India one bright experience relieved the monotonous at. I could greet the Isaacs and Miss Schrag and sit hurriedly with them for a few hours and then them board the train for Champa. Their freight xes had also reached India and were put on the me train.

The company of missionaries and Christian friends io gathered in the city to wait for the same ship ew quite large. They represented widely varying ssion fields and could relate harrassing stories. Algether, on the same day and on the same ship we ibarked to sail for America. For one month we re in the navy, if you please, sailing on and on. were crowded eighteen in a cabin, and in lounges d on decks there was the same congestion. We d darkened ship, life belt drills, many wartime trictions, but we also were introduced to many modern conveniences, good food and new gadgets which we had never seen before. The many questions which we wanted to ask were never answered, anymore than we can give out information now, but one essential fact stood unshakable—we would reach our destination in God's own exact time and with His most efficient help.

It was a wonderful feeling to meet relatives and friends back here in U.S.A. and to find their handclasps firmer than we had remembered. Let me take this occasion to thank friends everywhere for prayers and many welcoming kindnesses. For the present I am staying on a little longer in California, until it will be possible to go with heavy baggage to Minnesota. After August 5, it will be best to address mail to me in care of Mrs. P. R. Schroeder, Mountain Lake, Minnesota.

"Unknown"

By Mrs. Harold Ratzlaff

From our front veranda we often watch the trains go by. These days (October, 1943) we stand aghast at the crowds of people who travel, coming from Calcutta, hoping to buy a little rice which they can take back to their starving loved ones in Calcutta or vicinity. Not only the inside of the train compartments is a seething squirming mass of humanity, but on the outside of the cars one sees from thirty to thirty-five people clinging to the doors, windows, and even to the corners of the cars. Yes, even under the cars lie a few venturesome men, clinging for their lives to a few iron bars. Most of them travel without tickets. When the police tried to prevent their traveling they lay down in front of the train on the tracks. Desperation is written on their faces and in their very deeds. They want FOOD.

Naturally with such traveling accidents result. Late one evening recently a man was brought into the hospital by some policemen. He had fallen from a train, his skull was fractured, he was unconscious. There was no relative or friend with him. He was treated, and in the morning his pulse was a little better. One of the compounders searched for a name tattooed on his arm and found one, too. The unconscious man seemed to try to open his eyes in response to the calling of the name. However, as the compounder said, the name might not have been his, but his father's. Late that afternoon the man died. Who was he? Where did he come from? Is there perhaps some wife still waiting for her husband to return? In this land where there are so few papers, and still fewer people who can read them; here where traveling is so extensive, where villages are so numerous, how could one go about to find the relatives of this man? It left one with a strange, helpless feeling, and with a prayer in one's heart for the relatives of this unknown man.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Waterloo, Ontario, Canada

My calendar for 1944 could not be published because I could not find a printer who could see his way clear to publish the same under conditions that would suit me and my readers.

The "Briefe An Unser Volk" for 1943 are still trickling slowly into the "Mennonitsche Rundschau" and into my collection from which I compile my "Predigtbuch" which has sold nicely and provided me with the means to pay for the printing of the Briefe as they come through, while very little has been contributed toward my operating fund by the Conference Churches and by individual friends. Besides, I have so far for 1944 only a few separate subscribers. It seems people appreciate the Predigtbuch more than the loose leaves. I have, at least, no deficit to report today.

With thanks to God and the Home Mission Board of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America we are now watching our Toronto Mission grow. We have a very able and energetic Director of that mission in the person of Rev. Arnold A. Fast. People like both Brother and Sister Fast. He preaches the true Word of God, and the attendance of the services is growing steadily.

More and more services are required of the mission too, and we need a more convenient hall for our services in Toronto, more centrally located living quarters for the pastor, and rooms to accomodate our young men in service who come to the city to spend their weekend leaves.

The group in Toronto is keenly interested in all this and has submitted a workable plan to the Ministers' Conference of the United Mennonite Churches in Ontario, which has approved of it and recommended it to the Home Mission Board for consideration.

The interest in the Toronto Mission has brought an increase in the collections of our churches here in Ontario for the Home Mission Treasury, and we believe they will be still better if that mission can be expanded as planned. We help to maintain girls' homes and other institutions of the Home Mission Board in many large cities and other localities, and therefore we have ventured to ask the H.M.B. to undertake the maintenance and promotion of the work in Toronto.

We are still too small and weak to organize as a separate district conference and to found and maintain institutions of our own on a larger scale as other district conferences are doing. Therefore we will be glad and greateful for every support that we can get from the Conference for the buildings of the Kingdom of God in our vicinity.

In Waterloo-Kitchener everything is running mor or less smoothly. People are still being converte and accept the Lord Jesus Christ as their persona Saviour. The church grows slowly but steadil Regular services are held. The W.M.S., the C.E the choir and other groups are doing their share, an the God of Peace dwells in our midst for which w are especially grateful in these times of turmoil an strife.

A Pastor's Impressions of the Training School for C. P. S. Men

By E. J. Miller

It was my privilege to spend ten days in April at e Training School for Side Camp Leaders at Dow- y, Idaho, as an instructor in Bible. One can hardly me away from such a school without some deep im- essions. I wish to share a few of these with you.

This group of thirty men was a representative group om the various Mennonite, Evangelical, Methodist nominations, and non-affiliated, all here for one irpose . . . to receive training to become efficient mp leaders during the summer months.

Willingness to Learn

It was a group that recognized differences, but d not stress them. There were no heated con- oversies over minor or unimportant things of the hristian life. Much room was given to personal eas and interpretations, but never did the intolerant bigoted spirit prevail. It was a common thing to ar the expression, "Personally I like to believe this ay, but that is just my idea." No dogmatic teach- g or preaching is desired by the group.

"Living Your Religion"

I noticed further that there was a strict emphasis "living your religion." Lip service was not enough r these men. If convictions were not put into ily practice, preaching meant nothing . . . it lost power and testimony. Living in such close quart- s as they did meant that each one had better live at he professed. They were free to call attention to e inconsistency of the one who asked the Lord to ess the food, to make them more worthy of it, and en sat down and griped about the "hash." These en were of one mind . . . religion must be lived ily.

Sincerity

This group may have been exceptional, but I do not ink so. At least the spirit, I am sure, is typical of e men in C.P.S. I could not help but note that this s a singing, praying, studious, and participating oup. Before taking up our study, it was natural have the group lead out in singing hymns and in ort prayers. No, it was not all cut and dried. ere was spontaniety, a freedom of expression, and depth of feeling. It was not hard to detect that ch person meant what he said . . . more than that, he ed it. And as for participation in classes, I wish ery Sunday School class in our churches could have ch free, open, and down to the earth discussions.

Prayer

Prayer meetings? Yes, definitely. Every week y would meet as a group, where Scripture was d ,a short dicourse given, various needs presented, d short prayers offered. Need I say that one left such a meeting convinced that God's presence was manifested?

I could not help but notice how this group was deeply concerned for those in need or in difficult places. Mention was made of the men who are in prison because of their convictions. Prayers were offered in their behalf. Books, Bibles, and necessities were and are being sent to them by the men in C.P.S. They have a mind to help and to encourage those who are less fortunate than they. If we as church would have that same spirit, there would be no deficit in our C.P.S. budget.

No Easy Way Out

Do not think for a moment these men in camp are seeking on easy way out. There is a desire and willingness on the part of the campers to show that theirs is not a protected life, but that it affords opportunities which invlove real danger. They are anxious to do their part in work of national importance, even in the face of death. These men are out to serve their country and their fellowmen according to their God-given convictions.

Ten days in such an atmosphere did something to me. Somehow I could not be the same when I left as when I came. My heart was deeply moved. I had a larger vision, and a clearer understanding of what the "Faith of our Fathers" means to these men in camp, and what it should mean to us.

A CLEAN WIND

I'd like a clean wind blowing o'er my face
To scatter frowns and wrinkles of disdain,
And looks of pride; no longer may they find a place,
Nor cruel lips that give to others pain.
Lord, send a clean wind blowing o'er my face

Oh, for a clean wind blowing o'er my heart
To sweep away the cobwebs of despair,
And ancient dust of malice; blow these apart,
Filling each hidden corner with pure air.
Lord, send a clean wind blowing through my heart.

And with the cleansing wind a still, small voice—
The Holy Spirit dwells within and glows
To burnish, cleanse; so as I now rejoice
With old things blown away, love He bestows.
Lord, let me listen to the still, small voice.

Oh, for a cleansing power through our life,
Removing as the east is from the west
Old hatreds, envies, grudges, and our strife:
These blown away, we in His love find rest.
Oh, let the cleansing Spirit crown our life.

WAYLAND MENNONITE CHURCH

Wayland Iowa

Our church cooperated in a Vacation Bible School. The Wayland Public School buildings were used, and the attendance and interest was very good. Five infant children were consecrated to the Lord on June 4. During this third quarter the pastor is giving catechetical instruction to a group of intermediates the class meeting during the Sunday School hour. Eight of our young people, accompanied by the pastor and his wife, attended the Iowa Young People's Retreat at Pulaski, Iowa, July 29-30.

BETHEL COLLEGE MENNONITE CHURCH

North Newton, Kansas

The Bethel College Church is in many respects a highly favored one. Its location in and connection with the college community provides opportunity of enjoying many an unusual intellectual, musical, and also spiritual treat. Two admonitions well worth heeding in this connection are: "Unto whomsoever much is given of him shall be much required. (Luke 12:48); and "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." (I Thessalonians 5:21).

In mentioning a few highlights, it is freely admitted that they might have been reported sooner. One of these deserving special mention is the observance of the Universal Week of Prayer. The plan followed was to have prayer meetings in a number of homes on two evenings. Such arrangement makes the meetings easily accessible and at the same time draws a larger number into active participation.

The final meeting was held in the chapel and served also as a preparatory service for the Lord's Supper on the following Sunday. For this preparatory service I was glad. We have largely gotten away from the observance of a special "preparation Sunday" preceding the communion service, and perhaps some things can be said in favor of this. But surely, some kind of preparatory service which emphasizes the Lord's admonition that "a man examine himself ,and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup," and. His warning that, "Whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord." (I Cor. 11:28 and 27)—surely, such will help young and old to keep in mind the sacredness of the Lord' supper, that it is indeed "Holy Communion."

So-called Holy Week was the occasion for another series of special services lasting from Monday till Wednesday, and climaxing in a communion service the last evening. As a memorial of our Lord's death it seems very fitting to observe the Lord's supper during this week. The important thing, however, is the spiritual state of the participant and not any outward circumstances.

We seem to be coming back to the old custom—traditional, at least, among the Molotschna Russian Mennonites—of timing the instruction of candidates for baptism so that the baptismal service will fall on Pentecost Sunday. In our congregation there were added to the church by baptism on that day ten mostly very young people. But is anyone who believes on the Lord Jesus with his whole heart ever too young?

Thus far this year five others have come into the church as regular members by letter while twenty have been received as associate members

There have come out a couple of issues of a parish paper, the Bethel College Church Tidings This is edited, and perhaps largely written by the pastor, one very special purpose being to contac absentee members. What church is there that does not have such? In our church the percentage of these seems to run unusually high. By keeping in touch with them the Parish Paper aims to help nurture their interest in the church and in things spiritual. The present writer believes that it has also a contribution to the resident members—at least for himself he finds it both interesting and worthwhile.

Bible school closed with a program June 18 There was an enrollment of 20.

Voting by ballot, the question of joining the General Conference was decided. The decision was to join the Conference.

Then a decision also had to be made in regard to the money in the C. E. treasury. This is to be divided into two portions; one part to be sent to the Lepers' Home in India for the purchase of a cow and the remainder of the money is to be sent to the C. P. S. treasury.

On June 25, occurred the marriage of Elsie Issac daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Issac, to Ralph Turner.

The vacation Bible school gave a program after two weeks of hard work. Rev. Flickinger had charge of the school; he was assisted by Gladys Gyerdevig and Evangeline Spenst. On July 23 Brother Alvin Peters from Mountain Lake, Minnesota gave both the morning and evening messages. On July 24, our congregation felt the effect of the war when Brother and Sister D. D. Schmeiss received word that their son Victor had been killed in France on June 14. This is the first young brother from our congregation to lose his life in the war. Pray for the dear parents, his brothers and sisters, and also his young wife. Only God can comfort at such a time. In my last letter there was a mistake. It read the grain had been sown and was lying in dry ground. It should have been "some of the grain was in dry ground." Soon afterwards we got plenty of moisture. We had a good shower yesterday. Crops look fairly good. Some have started to cut barley. We are thankful for God's blessing both in spiritual and in material things.—Minnie Kunkel, Corr.

Mrs. M. C. Lehman to Tour Northern and Western Districts

pening of New Clothing Depot To Be Discussed

As was known to many, one of the plans for the eneral Conference session was to have Mrs. M. C. ehman of the Akron Clothing Depot as guest speaker r the business meeting of the Women's Missionary ssociation and also for the evening missionary pro- am. Mrs. Lehman's itinerary was to include stop- ers in various communities in the Northern District. nce the General Conference has been postponed,the ennonite Central Committee has decided to arrange this trip anyway regardless of conferences. cordingly Mr. C. L. Graber, Director of Relief, ites that Mrs. Lehman's itinerary includes Mountain ke, Minnesota where she will speak on Friday ening, August 11; Freeman, South Dakota, Saturday d Sunday, August 12 and 13; Henderson, Nebraska esday, August 15; and North Newton, Kansas, ursday 2:00 p.m. August 17 in Memorial Hall.

New Depot

Mrs. Lehman will present the work of relief and in ticular the work that the sisters can do. The open- of a new clothing depot, possibly at Newton, will discussed. Indications that such a move may be essary, according to M. C. C., are the large amounts paid on express shipments of clothing to Akron over against the saving if sent in carload lots.

At a recent meeting in North Newton called by Mr. John M. Snyder of M. C. C. to discuss the canning project with representatives from various Mennonite groups an invitation was extended for such a meeting with Mrs. Lehman. In a letter to Mrs. P. R. Schroeder, Mountain Lake, Mrs. Willard Claassen, Freeman, Mrs. D. P. Ratzlaff, Henderson, and the undersigned Mr. Graber also asks that announcement be made to Mennonite churches of neighboring Mennonite groups to attend the meetings as given above. So may we ask that you please pass the word around to your friends. We are contacting representative women whose names were suggested to us by M. C. C.

Brethern interested in this work are also welcome.

An offering will be taken to help defray expenses of the trip.

We trust a large number will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear first hand about the great work of relief in which we all have a part.

RELIEF

Assisting Incoming Refugees

elvin Kirchhofer, Mennonite relief worker among Yugoslav refugees in the Middle East, writes following lines concerning the arrival of an ad- onal group of refugees:

Not only are they a group of proportionately ge numbers of women and children, but there so many orphans. Again and again we found e children ranging from six to thirteen who had parents, and often not even an aunt or uncle, in some cases they knew absolutely no one in p. We would find them crying not knowing t to do or where to go . . . Certainly, looking r their welfare on the very first day is one of essentials we dare not forget, and trying to families together or to care for the homeless orphans is one of the prime requisites. Our 0 or so at the present time will give us plenty o in this camp for some time to come."

Orie Miller in Paraguay

cable has been received announcing the safe val of Orie Miller in Asuncion, Paraguay. Broth- Miller expects to return via Puerto Rico and ar- in Akron by August 12.

Workers Leaving for Middle East Alert

e four Mennonite relief workers in training at U.N.R.R.A. relief school at College Park, Mary- , are ready to leave for their field of service 4-hour notice. Marie Fast, who, because of her special training as anesthetist, has already left without any announcement of the place and time of her leaving.

C.P.S. Briefs

Aganetha Fast, former Mennonite missionary to China, has been secured to serve the C.P.S. camps as traveling matron. She began her period of service on July 20, starting at Hill City, South Dakota, Camp.

Selective Service has decided that a C.P.S. man who requests transfer to military service, and who is rejected in the army preinduction physical examination, shall be returned to a C.P.S. camp. Formerly, a C.P.S. man who failed the physical examination, was discharged and classifed IV-F.

MENNONITE AID SECTION NOTES

C.O.'s Not to Receive Employment Aid

Section 8-g of the Selective Service Act stipulates that "persons who have satisfactorily completed any period of their training and service under this Act" are to receive the assistance of Selective Service personnel in securing reemployment. While C.O.'s have never counted heavily upon assistance from such quarters, they have been interested to note the memorandum that was recently issued by Selective Service as an interpretation of the above clause:

"The Act does not confer employment rights on conscientious objectors who have been assigned to work of national importance under civilian direction in lieu of military service, and it has been determined as our policy that the Selective Service System has no responsibility to aid such conscientious objectors in regaining their former positions or in obtaining new positions."

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By J. Herbert Fretz, Lansdale, Pennsylvania

AUGUST 13—I will raise me up a faithful priest that shall do according to that which is in mine heart and in my mind. I Sam. 2:35. Read the Sunday School lesson. These were the words of God's prophet to Eli. Eli was a man of "benign personality, sympathetic and kind." No wonder that Hannah felt no hesitancy in leaving young Samuel in his care. But Eli was so thoroughly amiable that he was weak. The gross immoralities of his sons called forth only mild complaints. It's thrilling to see how God raised up Samuel in the midst of such sin and negligence. As Christians we are too often ready to wink at sin and shrink from good. As the skeleton gives form and strength to the flesh, so does justice mold and magnify love.

AUGUST 14—Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. I John 4:10. Read Heb. 9:11-14. A freer translation of this might be. "This is LOVE"—as if to say "the love of parents, friends, and spouse is indeed great, but they are but faint replicas of the Perfect Act of Love—this is Love, that God so loved us rebellious children, to send his obedient Son, to die for our sins." Such love is too wonderful for words. May we look to the Cross and whisper. "This is LOVE."

"When to the Cross, I lift my eyes,
O Lamb of God, my sacrifice
I must remember thee."

O Lord, we plead nought but Jesus' Blood and Righteousness, Forgive us our sins! Amen.

AUGUST 15—Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. I John 4:11. Read I John 4. What a simple and obvious deduction from verse ten! Those vibrant words of the Lord, spoken that memorable night, years back, were still ringing in John's mind. He never could forget them. " . . . Love one another, as I have loved you . . . By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples . . . " That the Christian's love is practical and not sentimental is shown in his love for the brethren. Many revel in the surges of emotion and sympathy but fail to sacrifice. "They are the sensitive plants of the Church and not the fruitbearing trees of goodness." Others strain themselves "loving one another" forgetting that first "God so loved us." O Father, may Thy Spirit impart to us that "unfeigned love of the brethren." In thy Son's name, we ask it. Amen.

AUGUST 16—When He giveth quietness, who then can make trouble? Job 34:29. Read Isa. 40:1,2,26-31. God may see fit to have us endure bitter pain and sorrow upon sorrow. It may be His perfect will for us to be in the slough of despair unable to tur one way or the other. But in and through it al His spirit can give us inner peace and quiet trust "Who then can make trouble?"

AUGUST 17—And these things write we unto you that your joy may be full. I John 1:4. Read I Joh 1. We have many joys in this life; joys of successes joys of work and play, joys of health and friends But the world is never satisfied with these. The constantly seek new joys when the old ones hav worn off. The joy of the Christian is different. T be sure, he shares these earthly joys, but the inne joy of Salvation floods over all of these. He need no new joys, for his joy is always full—at least i should be. Is yours, today? Dear Lord, even i distress, teach us to "rejoice and be exceeding gla for great is our reward in heaven." Amen.

AUGUST 18—And when the Lord saw her, He ha compassion on her. Luke 7:13. Read Luke 7:11-1 This sentence comes from the account of Christ raising of the widow's son. This miracle beautifull portrays the compassion of Our Lord. No one calle on him to help; the stricken mother did not cry f mercy. But the very pathos of that funeral proce sion spoke to his sympathetic heart. Thus always is with Our Lord and human sorrow. Whether his children or of the world. As Mennonite Christia we have a glorious heritage of compassion for a lo world. Let us never love it. Are you willing to sacr fice money or time for relief and missions. O Savio teach us Thy compassion upon the ailing bodies, a sick souls of sinful men, that they too may find re in Thy redemption. Amen.

August 19—For with what judgment ye judge, ye sh be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall measured to you again: Matt. 7:2 Read Matt. 7:1 What a sublime truth from Our Lord's great sermo Does He mean that we are not to discriminate betwe right and wrong? The following sixth verse wou hardly condone that. But it does warn us of this o thing often forgotten today: As much as we judge a demand of others, that much we also are required do. Thank God, that our salvation is through t merits of Jesus Christ and not in our own hazardo efforts! Yet one with our brethern we can expect favoritism from God. How we need militant Chri ians today who will "judge" the sins of the wor and the false doctrines of the church. But first th must judge themselves of the same with no less vig O God, of our salvation, make us to remember t with what measure we mete, so shall the King that great Day measure unto us. Amen.

Western District C. E. Convention

By Helen Hiebert Mueller

More than 100 delegates and as many visitors were present at the business session of the 52nd annual Western District C. E. Convention held July 29 and 30 in Memorial Hall at Bethel College. A luncheon for delegates preceded the business meeting which began at 7 o'clock Saturday evening with William Juhnke presiding. Thirty-three C. E. societies from thirty different churches were represented.

Income of $2,000

After the devotional period, which was conducted by Orlando Schmidt and Marguerite Sprunger, the reports of various committees were given. The treasurer reported that a total of over $2,000.00 had come in during the year. Of this, almost $1,500.00 was contributed by thirty-five societies from thirty-three different churches for the projects of the district C. E. organization. Other sources of income were offerings held at conventions and rallies, and retreat and Tidings income. There was an increase of about $300.00 above last year's income.

Resolutions

The remainder of the evening was spent in discussing and taking action on the resolutions presented by the resolutions committee. Outstanding among these resolutions were those pertaining to retreat, and the four $500.00 projects which were adopted for the coming year. The resolutions call for another young people's retreat for 1945 and also suggest that the committee investigate possibilities for holding retreats for intermediates (children from 12 to 15 years of age) and for older young people (from 25 to 40). The resolutions further call for $500.00 for each of the following: For C.P.S.; for the new mission being opened in South America by our General Conference; for the education of Chinese students who plan to carry on the work of our mission in China as soon as the way opens; and for a scholarship fund at Bethel College for students of other groups, such as Japanese-Americans, Negroes, Mexicans, South Americans, Europeans, etc. It was also decided that funds coming into the treasury above the amount needed for these projects should go for post-war relief. Another important resolution was this: "Be it resolved that the possibilities of transferring the Young People's Treasury to the General Conference Headquarters be investigated." It was the good fortune of the convention to have Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, Counselor for the General Conference YPU, present at this business session. Dr. Langenwalter, with his knowledge of YP work and his keen insight into prevailing problems, was a help to the young people as they considered their program of action for the ensuing year.

Address

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Langenwalter spoke to the convention on the development of YP work in the General Conference. Tracing the history of the YP movement, he showed how as early as 1905 the conference began to think of the needs of young people and set up a Committee on Education. He said that the hope of the future of the Church lies in her young people. He called our attention to the fact that simply demanding our rights does not fit us for the work we need to do and stated that "young people see not their rights but opportunities to do something for the good of all of us." Rev. S. J. Goering spoke on "Young People in Relief Work." He spoke from first-hand observation on his recent trip to the Orient. In addition, his talk was full of recent information regarding conditions in various parts of the world with regard to the food supply. He encouraged young people who are interested in relief work to study the problems involved and suggested that they make it a point to find out what qualifications are necessary for relief workers in different parts of the world. Miss Mary Becker spoke on "Young People in Mission Work," stressing the fact that mission work presents a challenge to young people to use their talents and to answer calls to service. She said that decisions to enter mission service must be made in youth so that there will be a longer period of service. A living church or C. E. can be maintained only as long as the missionary emphasis is present. Miss Becker warned young people that if they are not certain where the Lord wants to use them, to prepare for the foreign field because before we can be ready to serve anywhere, we must be ready to go anywhere. The afternoon offering amounted to $153.50 and was divided between mission work in South America and relief.

Junior Convention

A Junior C. E. Convention was held in the college chapel at the same time that the Sunday afternoon program was held for young people in the Memorial Hall. About sixty juniors attended this meeting, the main feature of which was the talk on "Beginnings" by Marguerite Sprunger of the Middle District who is now a student at Bethel College. Following the junior program, there was a meeting of junior leaders and such who are interested in junior work. Mrs. T. A. van der Smissen was elected president of this group for the coming year and plans were made to hold another junior convention next year with possibilities of making it a delegated meeting.

Evening Session

At the Sunday evening meeting Rev. Roland Goering spoke briefly on the subject "Young People in Active C. E. Work." He stressed three points 1. We must unite ourselves in the Spirit of Christ. 2. We must learn to cooperate, each one carrying out his responsibility. 3. We must learn to carry on and not give up. The resolutions which were adopted at the business session the preceding evening were read by Helen Hiebert Mueller who explained a few points regarding the projects for the coming year. The main address of the convention was given by Rev. Donovan Smucker of Wadsworth, Ohio. The evening's offering of $152.08 was divided between C.P.S. and the work of the convention.

New Officers

Verney Unruh, ministerial student at Bethel College and at present assistant pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, is the new president of the convention. Members of the program committee for the next two years are William Juhnke of the Eden C. E. at Moundridge, Kansas, and Orlando Schmidt of the Buhler, Kansas, C. E. Ruth Ewert of the Johannestal C. E., Hillsboro, Kansas, is the new YP representative to the General Conference YPU. Alvin J. Reimer, Hoffnungsau C. E., Buhler, Kansas, was elected to the retreat committee to finish the unexpired term of Mary Becker, who is leaving this month for South America. Retreat committee members who were elected for a full two-year term were B. Bargen of the Bethel College faculty and Henry Fransen, pastor of the Buhler, Kansas, Mennonite Church.

Resolutions Adopted at the Convention

I. Standards

Whereas there is a definite need for the stimulation of interest and the improvement of organization in our local C. E. societies, be it resolved:

1. That we encourage the societies to examine their own groups and organizations, using the Young People's Standards which were prepared by the Young People's Union.

2. That the Executive Committee work out a plan for giving the local societies meeting these standards some type of recognition such as certificates or badges.

II. Retreat

Whereas the Young People's Retreat has proved to be a source of inspiration and an excellent place for young people to relax from the cares of everyday life and to reconsecrate themselves to the things that are eternal, be it resolved:

1. That we congratulate the Retreat Committee and the faculty on the highly successful retreat held this year.

2. That the Retreat Committee again plan the annual Young People's Retreat for next year.

3. That the Retreat Committee investigate the possibilities of having separate retreats for intermediates (ages 12-15) and for adults (ages 25-40).

4. That the Retreat Committee investigate the possibilities for smaller retreats for outlying districts in the Western District.

III. "Tidings"

Whereas the Tidings has been found beneficial in uniting the C. E. societies of the Western District and in keeping them informed about Young People's activities, be it resolved:

1. That the Executive Committee investigate the possibility of enlarging the Tidings or co-ordinating with the publications of the other districts with the possibility of supplementing this with the Mennonite.

2. That the editor of the Tidings and his assistants be appointed by the Executive Committee.

IV. C. P. S.

Be it resolved:

1. That the societies continue to encourage and support the boys in C. P. S. Camps by sending them news letters and contributing a sum of $500.00.

2. That we support the Conference in its plans to rehabilitate returning men, and when definite plans are made, we will support them financially.

V. Scholarship Fund

Whereas educational opportunities need to be extended to underprivileged groups be it resolved:

1. That we establish a $500.00 scholarship fund at Bethel College for students of other groups such as Chinese, Japanese-Americans, Negroes, Mexicans, South Americans, Europeans, etc.

VI. Missions

Whereas the General Conference is planning to open a new field in South America, be it resolved:

1. That we contribute $500.00 for that work, each society contributing at the rate of 20 cents per member.

2. That we contribute $500.00 toward the education of Chinese students who are planning to carry on the work of our mission as soon as the way opens.

VII. Relief

Whereas there is a growing need for relief all over the world, be it resolved:

1. That until the C. P. S. Rehabilitation project is operation, all funds that we collect above the amount needed for the above projects go to post-war elief.

VIII. Young's People's Treasury

Be it resolved:

1. That the possibilities of transferring the Young People's Treasury to the General Conference Headquarters be investigated.

Camp Wood and Camp Mack

By Don. E. Smucker

This summer I had the glorious experience of erving as pastor of two great Mennonite youth retreats: Camp Mack at Milford, Indiana, for the Middle District and Central Conference people; Camp Wood at Elmdale, Kansas, for the Western District. ome of the shades of comparison and contrast will e set forth in this report.

Physical Setting

The physical setting is somewhat similar in each ase since the camp sites are both owned by non-Mennonites; and, the plan and arrangement of buildings follows the cottage system with several large entral buildings for meetings, recreation, and eating. Both camps have lakes for swimming and boating. The Kansas retreat (like most Western District prorams!) was about double in attendance. But, the ndiana conference is located in a camp with almost wice the capacity, and on the whole, superior equipment. As for the beauty of the natural surroundings hey seemed about the same. Around Camp Wood s a magnificent large hill which lends much to the nspiration; around Camp Mack is the loveliness of he northern Indiana landscape.

Plan of Retreats

Educationally, the plan of the two retreats is uite different. The Middle District and Central onference people permit many more electives in ourses, making for smaller classes and more discusion. The Western District officials present three plendid courses to the entire assembly, which, in ffect, were like another preaching service, although bit more on the informal side. There are advanages both ways, but, by and large, most Christian outh conferences tend to follow the Camp Mack attern since it breaks the monotony of preaching-without-discussion services.

Hunger for Doctrine

The camp pastor has an almost identical assignment in both camps, but in a different physical setting. That is to say, morning devotions and an vening service. At Camp Mack this is the sunset nd sunrise service, both of which meet outdoors, a priceless experience for fellowship with Almighty God. At Camp Wood there are a number of reasons why his cannot be done so readily. In either case, hower, it is a marvelous opportunity to set forth the reat riches of Biblical truth. I sense a hunger mong Mennonite youth for a more deeply doctrinal ype of preaching drawn from the Word of God; but, doctrinal message which does not ignore the importance of a living faith which historically set the Mennonites apart from both Catholics and the Lutheran or Reformed parties. And, what is most important, set them squarely on the solid rock of Scriptural truth, the summum bonum for every doctrinal decision. But, in any case, I did not find these young people in either camp much interested in shallow, superficial, moralistic platitudes which have been the bane of Protestant preaching for the past generation.

Non-resistance

The Western District young people are much more united on the great doctrine of Biblical non-resistance. C.P.S. is, indeed, the dominant pattern. On the other hand, it is clear that there is no complete unity, even in the Western District. In the Camp Mack meeting C.P.S. was definitely a minority position. Most boys were going straight into the army. But, there was a keen interest in discovering a more solid Biblical foundation for this conviction along with a criticism of other peace positions which may fall short of the Scriptural yardstick. This burning issue must be faced in all seriousness in the months ahead.

An Awakening

Among both groups I sense a new and unmistakable awakening. God is laying his hand on a number of these young Christians. Jesus Christ is being exalted afresh. The Bible is being studied more soberly and seriously. The call for a suffering New Testament church strikes deeply in the inner recesses of the heart. The Mennonite church is on the edge of a great historic turning point under the leading of the Holy Spirit. But, there is still a certain hesitancy in both areas for a radical surrender to the will of God; a slight unwillingness to yield to the call of full-time Christian service, a holding back on Cross-preaching and Cross-bearing, the inseparable twin rocks for Biblical Christianity. I live in the faith that a new outburst of intercessory prayer, a new surge of Bible study, and a conscious yielding to the tremendous purposes of the Lord will add the plus element to bring a renewal and revival of apostolic faith among both the young and the old. So help us God!

UNWHOLESOME MISSIONARY ZEAL

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves. Matt. 23:15.

My "Camp Wood" Experience

By Katherine Linscheid

In the hush of the early morning, with the air fresh and untainted from the dust that comes with the day's activities, a breeze pushes across the lake creating countless little ripples which slide back again into shimmering smoothness. The voice of Morning personified in the devotional leader breaks forth in words of inspiration and hope, leaving the retreaters breathless and full of delight,—and a new day begins at camp.

From the classes come thoughts, ideas—refreshing and new, and practical for this day of chaos—found in the experiences and deep considerations of men who know life well.

—And fun! resulting in ravenous appetites after swimming, horseback riding, and numerous other crisp and fascinating activities, which are satisfied only by delicious meals.

Deep spiritual insight is gained and unbounded joy achieved for those who truly seek, for Retreat is a sanctity for those harrassed, and a depth of satisfaction full for those impoverished of soul.

YE VISITED ME

Some were lonesome, some weak, some weary, some distressed, and some discouraged, when from out in the hall, at the end of the corridor, came the words and melody of a familiar church hymn. Four voices, strong and true, took hold of hearts and minds. Hymn followed hymn, and the patients' loneliness, weakness, weariness, distress, and discouragement became less.

From one corridor to another, the singers went. From the Bethel Hospital to the Home for the Aged. Then it was time to go home and do the Sunday evening chores. Four young men drove away happy. They had visited the sick in song. They had visited Christ.

Gerhard Harder, Willard E. Thiessen, Waldimar F. Wiebe, and Edward Wiebe, who made up the quartet, are members of the Young People's Society of the Emmaus Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas. Various members of this young people's group sing at the hospital and at the Home for the Aged in Newton every three weeks. A committee of three is responsible for the schedule.—rw.

When John C.P.S. - Man Arrives at Camp

The brethren in charge of the supervision of the C.P.S. program have felt for some time that new men arriving in camp should be given special orientation training before entering as a full-fledged worker on the project and as a member of camp life and activity. Consulting with Selective Service, an arrangement has been worked out whereby inductees in C.P.S. will receive a 12-day initiatory training in project education, C.P.S. program, camp regulations, first aid, and the concern of the churches.

Selective Service is cooperating by sending registrants to camps twice monthly instead of once every ten days, and whenever possible they will be assigned in larger numbers than before.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—The C.E. of the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Galva, Kansas, now meets every three weeks during the summer instead of once a month as they used to. In this way the group keeps the interest more alive. And that interest must be good, for Rev. Garman Wedel, reports that the attendance at C. E. is not far from that of the morning service. Since it is a small church, young and old, all take part in one C. E. organization. Roy Unruh of Galva is the president. The Emmanuel C. E. gives general programs of musical numbers, recitations, themes, Bible quizzes, and the like. The society has found it very beneficial to exchange programs with other C. E.'s. Right now that has been slowed up by gas and tire restrictions, but they hope to resume this exchange of programs when conditions change.

—The C.E. of the Tabor Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, meets on the fourth Sunday of each month throughout the year. Young and old participate in this organization. The attendance is not very much less than that of the morning service. A general program of singing, papers, recitations, and Scripture expositions is given. Ernest Goertz is the president of this C.E. The past year this C.E. supported every one of the projects sponsored by the Western District C.E. Convention. A monthly, mimeographed paper is sent to all men in service. Roland Schmidt is the editor. Besides this general C.E. there are Junior and Intermediate C.E. societies, which meet on the first Sunday of the month when the older members meet for Bible study.

—The Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas, has two C.E. groups, one composed of the whole church and another one of Juniors. Both C.E.'s meet on the second Sunday of each month, the Juniors from 7:30 to 8:30 and the main C.E. after that. The church C.E. gives miscellaneous programs. The attendance varies from 50 to nearly 100 per cent of that of the morning service. The pastor's wife, Mrs. Ronald von Riesen, is the President of the church C.E.

—The Mennonite Bible Academy Quartet composed of Gladwyn Schmidt, Evelyn Goering, Mary Lou Rich, and Harold Schmidt, has served a number of churches during the month of July and sang at the Western District Christian Endeavour Convention. Their present itinerary for August would include the Swiss and Emmaus churches at Whitewater on the 6th of August and two Beatrice, Nebraska, churches on the weekend of the 13th. On this trip they also hope to visit the C.P.S. Unit at Lincoln. Other students to accompany them will be Marjorie Linscheid and Maurine Siemens.

—Miss Evelyn Stucky of Berne, Indiana, has been chosen as President of the Ohio-Indiana, Young People's Conference. Other officers elected are: Miss Mary K. Ramseyer, Smithville, Ohio, Vice-President; Miss Wilma Augsburger, Bluffton, Secreary-Treasurer. Retiring officers were: Miss Ruth Hilty, President; Richard Boehr, Acting President; and Phyllis Hartzler, Secretary-Treasurer. Over 200 young people recently attended a session of this conference at Berne.

—The Mennonite Church at Geary, Oklahoma, has no young people's society because there are only six young people in the church.

—Nineteen heifers have been sent to Puerto Rico by he Service Committee of the Church of the Brethren. These are to help in a long-range program to mprove the Puerto Rican diet, which is said to nclude only a pint of milk per person per year.

—Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio: The young people of this church participate in an orchesra. Rev. Forrest Musser, pastor, frequently uses his artistic ability to draw chalk pictures. Recently he young people used the program of the retreat as the theme for an evening program.

—The young people's choir of the Reedley, Caliornia, Church practices on Wednesday nights and ings for the Sunday evening worship services.

—The California Young People's Retreat will again be held at Camp Gaines, August 12 to 19. The heme is "Christ the Foundation." Rev. Edgar Toews will be on the faculty. The registration fee s $10.50 plus eight red and eleven blue tokens. Since most retreaters from a distance will come by bus or train, the Reedley young people plan to entertain hem one night before and one night after the rereat.

—A total of $8,000.00 of the $20,000 purchase price of he Rosthern Experimental Farm has been raised, ccording to a statement by Prof. Walter H. Hohmann who recently returned from Canada. A house on the farm is being used for an Old People's Home. t has four inmates. One nurse cares for them. The capacity of the home is about eighteen.

—The young people's C.E. society of the Upland Caliornia, Church meets in the homes of members. There is also a Junior society.

—The young people of the Beatrice, Nebraska, churhes are still busy with their garden project. In one week the garden yielded thirty-two quarts of corn nd thirty-one quarts of beets. About 100 jars of orn were sent to the C.P.S. unit at Lincoln and fifty o the local Mennonite hospital.—The joint choirs f these churches recently gave a concert. Miss Ann Wiebe is director. Miss Wiebe will teach at Hillsboro, Kansas, this coming year.

—A statement in a recent bulletin of the Hillsboro Mennonite Church urges the young people to plan ow to attend next year's retreat. Fern Funk and Dayle Klassen, of this church, attended this year.

—The Goessel Mennonite Church, Goessel, Kansas, as a Junior C.E., which includes everyone below igh school and a Senior C.E. which includes everyne who wishes to attend. The Senior C.E. makes se of the C.E. programs which appear in The Menonite. Junior programs feature Bible verse contests, Bible quizzes, and stories. The societies meet every third Sunday of the month. In July the Seniors ave an exchange program in the Garden Township Church.

—A joint C.E. program is given once a year by the ocieties of the Goessel, Alexanderwohl, and Tabor hurches. This draws a very big attendance.

—William Juhnke plans to work for Ph.D. degree: Mr. Juhnke, who has been teaching history in the Moundridge and Buhler, Kansas, high schools since 936, says he plans to rest some by farming for a while and then get his Ph.D. degree at some university. Mr. Juhnke is very much interested in young people's work. During his term as Secretary-Treasurer of the Y.P. Union of the General Conference, he made things move. He has also served a number of terms as President of the Western District C.E. Convention. He founded the Tidings, the Y.P. paper of the Western District, and edited it until recently when he resigned his position.

—Mrs. Richard Weaver of Pennsburg, Pa., has left for Puerto Rico according to the M.C.C. notes in this issue. She is the former Margaret Shelly, daughter of Rev. Elwood S. Shelly. Mrs. Weaver graduated from Bluffton College in 1943. She is a sister to Paul Shelly, who has joined the Bluffton faculty and also to Andrew Shelly, pastor of a Mennonite Church in Canada.

—Rev. W. C. Voth will leave August 9 for the Young People's Retreat of the Pacific District, where he will teach a course on "Missions." The retreat is at Camp Gaines on Lake Sequoia. Brother Voth plans to return home directly after the retreat.

May We Introduce

Helen Hiebert Mueller, who is Secretary-Treasurer of the Western District C.E. Convention and Secretary to Dr. P. A. Penner of General Conference Headquarters.

Don. E. Smucker, who is pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, and a radio speaker.

Katherine Linscheid, who is a sophomore at Bethel College and a daughter of Mrs. John E. Linscheid and the late Dr. Linscheid.

IN MEMORIAM

Rudolph C. Imhoff was born at Woodsdale, Ohio, on February 13, 1878, and died at Mercy Hospital, Hamilton, Ohio, June 5, 1944. In his youth he united with the Mennonite Church at Trenton, Ohio. He leaves his devoted wife, one daughter, Mrs. Roy Bowlus, one sister, Mrs. Ed Ross and one brother William, and one aunt, Miss Fanny Imhoff.

Louise Lichti, daughter of William and Gottlieben Pflaumer, was born February 21, 1865, in Kochendorf, Germany, and died June 22, 1944. In 1890 she migrated to America, making her home in Philadelphia for the first years. In 1905 she went to Paso Robles, California. In 1906 she married Ernest Lichti. With her husband she moved to Reedley in 1921. Here they took into their home the six children of his deceased brother Otto and wife. They transferred their church membership from the first church, Paso Robles, to the First Church, Reedley. Her husband and the six adopted children mourn her departure.

Katie A. Penner was born on October 4, 1873, near Marienburg, West Prussia, Germany, the daughter of Heinrich and Agatha Penner nee Penner. She came to Gage County, Nebraska, in 1878. Here she attended parochial school taught by Rev. J. K. Penner. In 1890 she was baptized by Elder Gerhard Penner and received into the Mennonite Church. In 1907 she entered nurses training at the Evangelical Deaconess Home and Hospital of St. Louis. After graduation she joined the Mennonite Hospital in Beatrice and served as a Sister for a number of years. In 1921 she was united in marriage to Frank Penner, who now survives her. Death came on June 28. One brother John F. Penner; five sisters, Mrs. Peter Penner, Miss Helen Penner, Miss Agatha Penner, Mrs. Gertrude Epp, and Sister Emelia Penner survive her.

David Wenger, eighty-five, of Pandora, Ohio, died June 18, 1944. He was married to Lydia Geiger, who preceded him in death in 1936. He is survived by ten children: Mrs. Minnie Luginbill and Hiram and Oscar Wenger of Bluffton; Mrs. Selma Schumacher, Findlay; Paul, Lancaster; Mrs. Mary Miller, Mrs. Sarah Kohli, and Homer of Pandora; Wilbert, Salem, Oregon; and Mrs. Josephine McCraedy, Chicago.

Lydia D. Krehbiel, daughter of David B. and Mary Berger Ruth, and was born December 7, 1870, at Summerfield, Illinois. In 1893 she married Rev. H. J. Krehbiel, who less than a year before had been ordained into the Christian ministry and who had now accepted a call to the pastorate of the Mennonite Church at Trenton, Ohio. Here she served with her husband for seventeen yars. Each of the five children which blessed the union were born in different homes, suggestive of the life of a minister's family. In 1908 she and her husband spent the winter in Reedley, California. Soon thereafter they accepted a call from the Reedley Church, moved there, and remained there for the remainder of their lives. In 1925 she and her husband made a trip to Europe. She departed to be with her Lord on June 25, 1944. Her departure is mourned by four sons, Paul of Woodlake, California; Robert of Trenton, Missouri; Walter and Arthur of Reedley; one daughter, Mrs. Ruth Jacobs of Los Angeles; and two brothers, John Ruth, Halstead, Kansas, and Dave Ruth, Summerfield, Illinois.

JOTTINGS

—From twenty-five to forty people turn out for mid-week Bible study and prayer meeting at the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas. Rev. Garman Wedel, pastor, emphasizes a "praying church."

—Preaching services in the Tabor Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, are now mainly in English. Every Sunday Rev. P. H. Richert, pastor, brings a German message of ten minutes and then uses the rest of the time for the English sermon. In addition to this he gives an English children's sermon. The Tabor church does not have mid-week services throughout the year. During the winter months there is a four-fold mid-week meeting. This includes a Sunday School teachers' training class, a Bible study class, singing practice, and a teachers' class which takes through the coming Sunday school lesson. Mostly young people come to this mid-week service. A Bible study and prayer meeting for the whole church is held on the first Sunday evening of the month throughout the year. This is conducted in German. The Book of Matthew was studied this past winter, and now a study is being made of the Book of Romans. The Junior and Intermediate C. E.'s also meet on this night of Bible study and prayer.

—The new church building of the Walton, Kansas, about completed. Then the second floor can be laid. The outside is finished. The basement is complete, and the congregation may soon hold its services in it. Rev. von Riesen reports that the church building may be ready for dedication by September or October.

—Another Mennonite branch uses "Mennonite Junior Quarterly." Rev. J. M. Suderman, manger of the Mennonite Publication Office, reports that for the past two quarters the office has filled a 500-copy order placed by the Church of God in Christ Mennonite. This group puts their own cover on the Mennonite Church is nearing completion. By the time this appears in print the plastering should be quarterly.

—Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago, Illinois: Bible school attendance has averaged fifty-three. "The children have also contributed an average of a little over two dollars per day for children in India and Africa. The expenses of the school have again been born by the community council of the Stock Yard District. This council receives its money from the business men of the packing industry." Special features will replace the regular Sunday School classes during August. Each Sunday there will be an object lesson, chalk talk, etc. The building improvement fund totals $427.65. On July 30 Rev. and Mrs. Henry Toews were still waiting for their passports to go back to Africa. At present they are visiting churches in Montana and Minnesota.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: "Offering for the Northern District Conference Evangelization Treasury. This offering goes for a church building, 28x48 in Huron, South Dakota, which was bought for $1,000.00."

—Rev. and Mrs. Lester Hostetler left on August 7 for Sugarcreek, Ohio, where they will spend a month's vacation.

—Rev. Donovan Smucker brought the morning message to the First Mennonite Church, Newton, on July 30 and to the Bethel College Church on August 6.

—The interior of the First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, was recently re-decorated.

—Of all the church bulletins that come to the editor, the best utilization of bulletin space is exhibited by the bulletin of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska. This four-page bulletin has a picture of the church building on the top of the front page. Below that is given the order of the morning worship. The inside two pages are filled with announcements and news items, stated briefly but adequately. The last page generally carries an editorial. Any-

Evening Shadows

The evergreens on the Bethel Hospital lawn were stretching beautiful, long shadows eastward. A patient in the hospital looked out of the windows towards the Deaconess Home. There two old people came walking. Ninty-two-year-old C. H. A. van der Smissen, of the Home for the Aged, and ninety-six-year-old, Sister Hillegonda van der Smissen, of the Bethel Deaconess Home, were taking their evening walk.

With a step remarkably firm for ones so old and linked arm in arm, brother and sister walked towards the setting sun. Long evening shadows fell after them. Two lives at sunset! The evening shadows they cast are long and beautiful.—rw.

–Sunday School. Let us all make it a point to be n our places on time. You miss something if you ome in late. Isn't this as important as your busiess or other work? If not, why not?"—Bulletin, econd Mennonite Church, Beatrice.

–First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: Rev. . K. Regier, pastor, states in the church bulletin, Since the Church Council has been so kind as to rant a month's vacation the pastor and his family re planning to take the month of August for that urpose." The Reedley church has quarterly offerngs for the Publication and Education work of our onference.

-The Central Conference of Mennonites is meeting t Washington, Illinois, August 8-10. Rev. A. E. 'reider is on the program for addresses on "My hurch" and "Lift Up Your Eyes," Rev. Arnold Funk r an address on "The Christian Life—Living with thers in Unity," Rev. Ernest E. Bohn for an address n "The Christian Life—Living with Others in Worhip," and Dr. J. E. Hartzler for the closing address n the subject, "The Salt of the Earth."

-First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: At recent picnic of the Women's Missionary Society, ev. Salzman spoke on "Pacific District Conference npressions" and Mrs. Salzman told something bout her experiences in relief work in Turkey.

-Prof. Walter H. Hohmann and son Rupert returned n July 30 from a two-month visit to Canadian hurches and retreats. Prof. Hohmann met with e church choirs of churches in Saskatchewan and so participated in the retreats at Swift Current nd Rosthern.

Correction: Brother Delvin Kirchhofer is not a ember of the Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, hio, as stated in a recent issue of The Mennonite. e was a member of the Dalton church until about ght years ago when he moved to Bluffton and anged his membership to the church there. We ank Dora Kirchhofer for the correction.

Dr. Marden C. Habegger of Visalia and son of Misonary Alfred Habegger, brought the morning mesge on August 6 to the First Mennonite Church, edley.

Rev. and Mrs. John F. Schmidt and children of eblo, Colorado, are spending about two weeks ound Newton and Hillsboro, visiting relatives and ends. Rev. Schmidt, who was formerly director the C.P.S. camps at Marietta, Ohio, and Fort llins, Colorado, is serving a Congregational urch in Pueblo. Prior to his service in C.P.S., v. Schmidt served as pastor of the Buhler Mennoe Church.

The little church at Geary, Oklahoma, is doing ngs under the pastoral care and leadership of v. Henry Harder. Church attendance is growing. ere are about forty-four active members. The ximum attendance that might be secured is aund eighty, the average attendance from forty to ty-five. The Yearbook gives the membership of s church as 132. Many of these can no longer traced, and many no longer take an interest. e figures have been pared down to about 100. wever, that still leaves about fifty-six non-resident mbers. The active members are showing an inasing interest in conference activities such as '.S., missions, education, etc. The church recently tributed $160.00 to Bethel College. Every first nday of the month an offering is held for foreign and home missions, the latter including district home missions. The church has a unique way of raising a budget of $1500. A pyramid, made up of many smaller pyramids, all marked with certain sums of money making a total of $1500 gives the members the privilege of choosing one or several of the smaller pyramids in the large one. This plan has worked. This budget includes items for conference work. The church also has a parsonage. During the summer it participates in the union evening services. These are held close to main street. People who do not attend church otherwise come to hear these simple gospel messages.

GREETINGS FROM INDIA

Greetings to the General Conference were drawn up by our Conference of Churches in India and sent air mail on June 26, by the secretary, Missionary P. W. Penner, arriving in Newton on August 1, 1944. Here is the gist of the letter: According to Psalm 139 God's blessings have the "right-of-way." "The Lord has done great things for us; whereof we are glad." "For a great door and effectual is opened unto us and there are many adversaries. Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it!" "Be strong and of good courage, for then thou shalt make thy ways prosperous . . . And, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." And finally: "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit!" CEK.

—Miss Emma Ruth, who is well known for her interest in the youth activities of the Pacific Conference and also those of the General Conference, recently gave a review of her experiences in the Ashram conducted by Dr. E. Stanley Jones and others. The review was given at a evening service of the Reedley Mennonite Church.

—Bulletin, Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio: "A recreational program has been arranged for all ages for the Pandora community . . . Churches should be interested in such a program because it is a positive influence for the upbuilding of the physical, social, and spiritual phase of life. Let us give the committee our whole-hearted support." The pastor, Rev. Forrest Musser, recently had as his sermon theme, "A Game of Minutes."

—On July 30 the editor had the privilege of speak- at the silver wedding anniversary of Brother and Sister F. H. Klassen of the First Mennonite Church, Newton. Besides being active in the local church Mrs. Klassen has served as an associate editor of the Missionary News and Notes. For two years she served as President of the Women's Missionary Societies of the Western District. Her father, the Rev. P. J. Krause, who died in 1917, was very largely responsible for the organization of the First Mennonite Church, Lehigh, Kansas. Mother Krause, who is eighty-four years old now, was present at the anniversary celebration.

—Zoar Mennonite Church, Goltry, Oklahoma: Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Eck plan to leave for Africa the latter part of August. Brother Eck is a member of this church. Mrs. Eck is a daughter of Rev. S. Mouttet. On August 6 we had a farewell service for them—a fellowship meal at noon and then services in the afternoon. The Zoar Church has given its pastor (Rev. J. W. Bergen) and family a good 1941 model car, which is greatly appreciated by them.—Corr.

—The Bluffton College Bible lectures will this year be given by Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, former missionary to Arabia, who is now teaching at Biblical Seminary. He has written about thirty books.

—Bluffton College, in a letter to pastors of the Eastern, Middle, and Central Conferences, invites the observance of Christian Education day on August 27. The letter asks the churches to remember in thought and prayer college education and all education and the teachers who have so great a responsibility. Bluffton again offers a special bulletin for use on Education Sunday. This is free.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas: Mr. A. B. Wall, whose only two sons Arnold and Harold have been called into service and whose wife passed away last winter, was pleasantly surprised Wednesday morning when a host of neighbors with tractors and plows came and helped him plow his field. Those helping with tractors were H. W. Buller, J. W. Zielke, D. T. Dirks, J. D. Buller, Peter Wall, Allen Bartell, Otto Schmidt, and A. A. Siemens. Boys who helped drive these tractors were: John Lee Zielke, Jay Lee Buller, Kenneth Buller, Richard Buller, Robert Wall, and Albert Wiebe. Dinner was prepared for this group by Mrs. P. J. Neufeld, Mrs. J. W. Zielke, Mrs. Nick. Fehdrau, and Mrs. Henry Fehdrau. Mr. Wall greatly appreciated what his friends and neighbors did for him. Ninety-year-old Mrs. Klass Wall, mother of Mr. Wall, was also present at the farm.—Mrs. Arnold Esau, Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Shafter, California: Rev. John Bartel was officially installed as pastor at an all-day meeting held in the church on July 16. Rev. F. F. Janzen of Paso Robles assisted in the installation services. Church members are endeavoring to locate a house for the new pastor and family. —Corr.

—Goessel Mennonite Church Honors Pastor: The Goessel Mennonite Church helped their pastor, the Rev. P. P. Buller, celebrate his seventieth birthday at the church on Sunday evening, July 23. A program of music and short talks had been arranged for the occasion. Ice cream and cake were served to about five hundred. Rev. Buller has served as pastor of this church for twenty-four years, and even though he has purchased a home in Newton and has recently moved there, he will continue to serve this church. He has been an educational and religious leader in this community for the past forty years, serving in many capacities.—The Mission Friends Circle cleared approximately $85.00 by serving at three public sales this summer.—Mrs. Wilbur Ratzlaff, Corr.

—A complete copy of "Gerald Stucky's Scrapbook" may be gotten from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, for $1.00.

—Rev. S. F. Pannabecker was granted his Ph.D. degree at Yale University on June 22. His thesis subject was "Development of the General Conference Mennonite Church of North America in the American Environment."

—Twenty-two friends in Berne, Indiana, recently contributed a new davenport and chair for the lobby or Ropp Hall, Bluffton, College. "The furniture was especially made for this purpose by a Berne furniture company. Mrs. Claudia Oberlie of Berne was responsible for securing the gift."

—Bluffton now offers a B.S. degree in nursing. Training is given at the college and at an approved hospital.

—Marie Fast of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, has left to do relief work in the Near East. Miss Fast received her nurses training in the Mennonite hospital at Beatrice, Nebraska. For a while she served as superintendent of the Bethel Hospital, Mountain Lake. Then she did some graduate work in Chicago and Detroit. Following this she served as anesthetist in the Good Samaritan Hospital, Portland, Oregon. She has preceded other relief workers to the Near East because of her special training as an esthetist. Miss Fast is a member of the Bethe Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake.

—Miss Aganetha Fast, well-known missionary, has consented to serve as traveling matron for the C.P.S. camps, according to the M.C.C. release.

—Dr. P. A. Penner brought the morning message for the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in Newton Kansas, on July 30. On August 6 he preached to the First Presbyterian Church of that city.

—Dr. J. H. Langenwalter served as a leader for the young people's retreat, which met on the campus of Freeman Junior College, August 4 to 6.

WORRY DOESN'T HELP

The mother was doing her regular home duties and continually worrying about how they would meet a certain bill about due. She was so absorbed in her thinking that she didn't realize that she was being harsh to her two-year-old son who only wanted a question answered. Her hasty rebuke made him unhappy, quite unnecessarily so. How much better to have done what she could have by being an understanding mother instead of letting worry engross her.

eaconesses are not all nurses, but our applicant had nursing in mind. After preliminary arrangements were completed, Frieda Kaufman was enrolled in the Deaconess hospital in Cincinnati, Ohio, August 9, 1902, for a two year's course in nursing. On November 14 of the same year, she received her deaconess garb and has since been known as Sister Frieda.

Sister Frieda

Sister Frieda graduated on August 9, 1904, and before the Bethel Deaconess hospital was built, she had four years of valuable experience as a pioneer private duty nurse in Newton and surrounding communities. This work opened the way for her into the homes and hearts of the rich and poor in all walks of life. She made many friends, and her life was enriched in a way that would have been impossible had the hospital position been ready for her when she came home from Cincinnati. During these years, she had charge of many household duties as well as the nursing responsibilities, and instead of working eight hours a day, she worked eighteen to twenty hours. But strenuous as private duty nursing was, our Sister enjoyed it for she possessed that which is so essential for such service—Love—love of God, love of fellow-man and love of work. She realized that there is no joy in life to compare to the joy of being able to give help in time of distress and need. It has often been said that we get out of life what we put into it, and that probably explains why Sister Frieda enjoys life so much. Were we to ask her then or now, she would say that the price paid in service that she could render was not too great.

During this term of four years, the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society, which was organized in 1903, bought a plot of ground and erected the hospital building. On June 11, 1908, the building was dedicated to the Lord to be used in His service. On the same day, Sister Frieda, Sister Catherine, and Sister Ida were ordained and installed into full-time service in the Bethel Deaconess hospital. For thirty-five years (June 11, 1908-June 11, 1943) Sister Frieda has served as sister-in-charge of our institution. She also was superintendent of the hospital from 1908 to 1929 and again from 1932 to 1938. Since September 1, 1938, Mr. H. J. Andres has relieved her of the responsibility of hospital administration.

Besides directing the work of the hospital here at home, Sister Frieda gave much time, thought, and direction to the Mountain Lake hospital and home for aged in their organization, growth, and development during the years of 1911 to 1930. Sister Frieda also solicited funds and planned the construction and method of operation of the Bethel home for aged of Newton, which was opened May 9, 1926.

In all her endeavors, we see her as a woman of keen insight and vision; but above all, we shall always think of her as a builder—a builder of houses and of lives. And we shall always treasure that which she has given us in print. We believe that there is much more in store for us. Many have enjoyed her "Plaudereien." Her gift of presenting experiences in such a picturesque way gives us joy as well as encouragement and help. And in her "Auf Wanderwegen", we could all travel to Europe and enjoy with her that which she enjoyed. Truly, her life has been a rich one! How often we have heard her use the words of the Psalmist: "My lines have fallen unto me in pleasant places!" Ps. 16:6.

Sister Frieda has been a real mother to us in stimulating and guiding the growth and development of the sisterhood and in planning the activities of our entire household. We can never know the joys, griefs, and heartaches of a mother with such a large family, but in a measure we can appreciate them. God's grace is always sufficient, and He has given her the talents, the love, the understanding of people, the ability to win their confidence, as well as the grace and wisdom to guide the lives of others. Many strangers, even salesmen who came to see Sister Frieda on business, have returned to tell us that they appreciated the kindness and the help that they received from her.

What her help and encouragement means to our workers, students, and sisters will only be revealed when all things are made known. In our humble way, we would offer our appreciation and gratitude to God and to our Sister. We would be faithful in rendering such service that will portray her ideal unto others. May the joy and blessing of the Lord be hers continually and may God and His love live o in the lives of all of us!

All things return unto their nest
At eventide.
I but returned—
The window of the ark stood wide—
I but returned
To rest.

Truly great is that soul that ever kneels beneat the Cross, that returns throughout its pilgrim day on earth from paths of toil or paths with laurel strewn—always again, trembling, to the Cross!

Beloved Pilgrim, so shall we remember thee— clinging to the Cross! Ever seeking that healing cleansing flow that washes hearts from sin. Eve loving Him, the Christ of the Cross, God's Saviou for men! Ever loving Him as a treasure to whic the heart would cling—a treasure selected, gleane from the treasures of earth so freely explored b the strong emotions surging in the breast—clingin ever to Him as one clings to a most prized possession, withholding nothing—nothing! Yielding a to Him! Yielding time and strength, thought, mind and soul. Yielding these, and reaping for suc yielding, thirty, sixty, hundredfold. So shall ou hearts remember thee.

And we shall see thee walking, still, our earth— thy feet deep planted in our meadow grasses ta while thy soul soars to higher meadows far, walking there with God. 'Tis so we shall remembe thee—pilgrim always of two worlds while with u here. And we shall see thee, bending still, to pic the flowers from our fields, to plant our garden here with walks that wind and turn according t thy fancy. With hands so busy with their task still dreams thy soul and sees great visions of th wider fields within the heart of men that need skillful gardener's hand. We shall remember thi We shall remember thy deep joys within the Father's world. The joys of melted snows that brough a spring's return, that sent thy soul to stay lon at the Cross, lest in its garden bed there should b found a crusted earth and spring's new bloom should fail. Thy prayers for thawing of all heart —we shall remember these. And thy delight i one small budding rose, in some odd basket fitte for for-get-me-nots—their timid blue. The clingin of a raindrop to a baby-breath's small cheek, th varied hues found in an autumn's painted leaf, a b of draping bittersweet, the song of birds within tree or bush, the sweeping of a willow's weepin threads, its gold of early winter days, the spreadin of an elm where birds can lodge as lodged, w lesser ones, beneath thy spreading life—these joy of thine, we shall remember them. And then th thrill of thy great heart in mountains, hills, an streams, in smaller brooklets, flowing onward i their course, the ocean waves, the clefts in highe rocks that caused the soul to flee rejoicing to it clefted Rock of Ages, and, then, the flight of lone bird against the evening sky when followin its course thy soul stood long and still and wo dered . . These joys shall we remember.

We shall remember, too, the child-like glee whe some small thing, so lovely in its fashioning, wa found by thee. On shelves, on walls, in books, in drawers, we reap what through long years thy heart, with its strong sense for the eternal, has gathered in for us. We shall remember this.

We shall remember this and much much more: the thrill and rapture of the soul, when one brief word from Holy Writ had satisfied its longing, the overflowing heart in witness to the joy of service in His Name, the crystal faith, the simple trust, the reaching out for grace,—and this: that life is joyous in its constant giving, that in much sowing, there is much, much reaping, that faithful labor ends at last in blessing, that seeking God, the soul returns to Him!

Pilgrim, beloved, flown home, at last, at eventide, pilgrim beloved and blessed!

No Fear in Love

"There is no fear in love." I John 4:18. Fear is full of concern for the self. Love is full of concern for the other. Possess a great love for another person and you will not fear him, for you will be primarily concerned with his welfare and not your own. Christ was fearless. He was perfect love towards all humanity.

How greatly we are often burdened by a fear of others. This is a natural result of our shortcoming in love. We can be free from that fear of others by abandoning ourselves to the love of God that would express itself through us to others. Fear flees where love enters.

How different this world would be if there were more love. A man full of love for others can't aim a machine gun towards them or bomb them to obliteration. He would rather suffer injury himself than harm the loved ones. Christ did not ask God to rain down fire upon those who crucified Him. He asked God to forgive them. He loved them. Home and neighborhood relationships are transformed by love. Love never faileth. "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." I John 4:16. We can be free from fear of others by loving them. We don't win that freedom from fear by fighting; we win it by surrendering to the love of God.—rw.

Care for the Mentally Ill

Pain sometimes comes into one's heart when one hears of the treatment accorded to some members of Mennonite families who are mentally ill and cared for in institutions. It is true that there is comparatively good and excellent care in some hospitals. Of others this is not true. The latter frequently have inefficient and even brutal help. Doctors may care very little for Christ and do not use a Christian approach. Conditions in some mental hospitals remind one of how the scum of human society once took care of the physically sick several hundred years ago. Society does not yet provide for the mentally ill as it does for the physically ill.

Should not Mennonites do something for their mentally ill now? Our hospitals have been an unmeasured blessing. Should we not add to this a hospital for the mentally ill, where they could get excellent, Christian care? Many of our young people are now getting training in such work. Surely, a capable Christian psychiatrist could be found for such an institution.

Jesus healed the mentally ill of His day. Have we no responsibility towards those of our own number today?—rw.

A Technical Paper for Ministers

Occasionally the editor receives contributions or some are suggested to him that would be of great interest to the ministers of our conference, but not of much interest to the majority of our readers. To put before 10,000 to 20,000 readers what mostly concerns less than 200 ministers is not practical.

Perhaps, the General Conference could issue a quarterly paper designed solely for ministers. It could deal with technical, ministerial problems, contain reviews of helpful books, feature an outstanding sermon, and contain pertinent information from the various conference boards.

Many of our ministers desire more training. We have students preparing for the ministry. We have no seminary of our own. A well-edited minister's paper might be welcomed by all of these.

Such a paper could hardly be a side issue for someone already overburdened with work. The editor should be given a good chance to make a success of such a paper. That means more and larger contributions for the work of education and publication. In this our conference is weak. We expect to pluck a lot of fruit off the tree without digging around the roots. As the importance of digging is realized, then perhaps more of these "necessities" will become possible.

In general it seems unwise to begin a lot of papers that might well be merged in one or a few, but such a minister's paper would be in place, for it would serve a definite, limited group, which cannot well be served through a paper intended for the general reader.—rw.

ARRESTED PRAYER

Too often we pray when we are in need, and when that need is filled we go on our way as the little boy who was playing on the roof of his home. His foot slipped and began sliding. He prayed that God would save him. His foot caught hold of a nail sticking out of the roof, and the boy said, "Never mind now God, I've caught hold of a nail."—Florence Auernheimer

Mutual Aid in the Mennonite Church of Tommorrow

J. Winfield Fretz

A New Testament Practice

The practice of Christian mutual aid in the Mennonite Church is a traditional one. In the early days it was one of the characteristic practices of our Mennonite forefathers. However, the doctrine was not original with them. Their authority for this doctrine and practice was found in the Scriptures. In the teachings and practice of Jesus, in the teachings and practice of Paul, and in the daily life of the primitive Christians we find a multitude of references to Christian mutual aid. This was not an artificial economic device. It was the result of the transforming power of Christ in the lives of men and women. The practice of mutual aid was a natural result of being filled with the Holy Spirit after accepting Christ as one's Saviour. Pagans were often attracted to Christianity because of the love which Christians manifested one toward another.

A Neglected Doctrine

For several hundred years after the Reformation mutual aid was a characteristic practice among all Mennonites. In some cases as in the Hutterites it expressed itself in religious communism. However, among the large body of Mennonites in Europe, as well as in the United States, this doctrine in the last 150 years has been more and more neglected. In fact, there are those who deny that it is an essential part of the Christian tradition. It is perhaps significant that the period of neglect coincides with the rise of capitalism as an economic system. It is Christian mutual aid that is sacred and not the economic system of the world which is called capitalism. That doctrine was only officially born in 1776 and it had its rise along with the age of industrialism.

Christians today have become so immersed with this secular system of doing business and earning a living that it often seems to them of almost equal sanctity with the Scriptures. It is an interesting fact that although the Mennonites profess the doctrine of non-conformity in matters of social, recreational, and political practice, there has been practically no official pronouncement by the churches on the unchristian economic practices commonly engaged in by a large number of communicant members. In view of the pronouncements of the Hebrew prophets and the teachings of Jesus on the matter of wealth, the use of talents, the exercise of stewardship, and human selfishness, it would seem that the modern Christian could ill afford to be silent on an area of life that affects so large a number of professing Christians.

Rediscovering Mutual Aid

The Mennonite Church today has an opportunity to rediscover the doctrine and practice of mutual aid and make it meaningful in a confused and greedy world. If we believe that the true church is a community of reborn men and women in Christ then this reborn community should put on the new man just as does the individual who is converted. Menno Simons used to say that the true church here on earth should be a small working model of the Kingdom of God. This is a challenge for modern Mennonites who live in closely settled Christian communities. Their love for each other and for Christ ought to be so deep, so abiding, and so genuine that the whole life of the community would reflect that love. Business activities, social participation, recreation, and civic affairs in such communities should be conducted according to the New Testament standard of ethics, not according to Wall Street, Hollywood, or Tammany Hall.

An Immediate Task

As of May 15, 1944, there are 3,021 conscientious objectors in Civilian Public Service maintained by the Mennonite Church. These men have served without pay for periods varying from a month to three years. They have voluntarily given this service in response to the teachings of Jesus Christ and the Mennonite Church. They are not asking for charity, they are only asking that they be supported in the cause for which they are witnessing. The church at large should be grateful that these soldiers of Jesus Christ are witnessing for her in this constructive and consistent manner. She should avail herself of the opportunity to render whatever assistance these men need after they are released from the service of their government to help them become established in normal community life so that they may honorably earn a living and become active witnesses to His Way in the local communities. What the Mennonite Church will do by way of mutually aiding her young men who return from serving their country will in effect point the way toward what she will do for members within the brotherhood in the decades ahead. Christian mutual aid is not a panacea to solve all economic and political ills. It is a divine command to the redeemed in Christ to manifest their love one toward another in a practical way. (I Tim. 5:8).

Mutual Aid in the Future

The forward looking church of tomorrow will have along with its boards and committees on missions, publications, education, peace, and relief, a committee on mutual aid. The duty of such a committee would be to look after the material needs of the members in the brotherhood. In cases of sickness, accident, serious losses through natural causes and in cases where young people needed to have assistance to become established in a life work the resources of the church could be at their disposal. Where communities are becoming too crowded and land too expensive the church might well look after the interests of those who would be willing to colonize in new communities. Where the young people could be established with modest help in local communities it might be an effective preventative of the present annual loss of such people through migration from rural areas to the cities. Committees on Christian mutual aid have a place in the life of a Christian brotherhood, and the wise church of today will provide for such a mutual aid plan in its program for the future.

Assisting Young Ministers

by J. Herbert Fretz, Lansdale, Pa.

From the viewpoint of any present Mennonite ministerial student our General Conference Placement Committee can be of tremendous assistance. The youth who has obeyed the call of God into the ministry must still face great decisions concerning his studies, practical experience, finances etc. Some of us have been greatly assisted by our local pastors for which we are deeply grateful. But all to often in our congregational form of church government the rising student must seek out his own path without the official assistance of the church. It is here where the Placement Committee is needed.

Let us consider three areas in which the Placement Committee can help our ministerial students. They are (1) Education, (2) Practical Experience, and (3) Counseling.

Education

Formal schooling has one of the greatest influences upon the life of the minister and consequently the denomination. If of the proper kind, it is without equal. The great ministry of S. F. Sprunger of Berne, Indiana, stands as a monument to the gone-but-not-forgotten Wadsworth Seminary. On the other hand, a superficial training narrows the usefulness of any minister.

Most important is a thorough knowledge of the infallible Word of God, for we are commanded to "preach the word," not ourselves. The late William Lyon Phelps of Yale once said, "Everyone who has a thorough knowledge of the Bible may truly be called educated, and no other learning, or culture, no matter how extensive or elegant can among Europeans or Americans form a proper substitute."

But with this basic training in the Supernatural should be added the related background of the Natural for all was created by God for our use and His glory.

The question now arises in the student's mind—where shall I receive this education? The Bible School offers the ministerial student a grasp of the fundamental Bible truths in a minimum of time and with a minumum of academic preparation. The College offers a grasp of the fundamental Bible truths and their relation to the natural studies in the languages, sciences, philosophy, history, etc. The Theological Seminary offers a thorough knowledge of Bible truth and its relation to theology, philosophy, church history, the ministry, and missions. It is the writer's opinion that any ministerial student does well to attend all three schools, or at least, if at all possible, the latter two. In these days of indifference and loose teaching of God's word, the Placement Committee can assist our students in their selection of schools which are sound in the Faith, acceptable to Mennonite standards, and scholarly.

Practical Experience

Practical experience has a two-fold advantage for the ministerial student. It offers opportunities to apply what he has learned, thus again impressing it on his mind, and it adds wisdom in evaluating his further education.

There comes a time in the education of every ministerial student—often too soon—when his head tires of tedious study and his heart yearns to march into the world of action. This is a healthy condition if applied correctly. The summer vacation is an ideal time for practical ministerial experience. Some of the larger churches have ministerial internes or assistants for the summer months. This is an ideal situation affording both opportunity and guidance to the young minister. After the first summer such a young man might relieve the regular pastor for a few weeks or serve a vacant pulpit as a supply pastor. It would be well if the Placement Committee would at all times keep in contact with the students and plan such opportunities as the summer arrives.

Finally, as the close of the student's formal education approaches, the Placement Committee should have definite suggestions or opportunities of full-time service for the student.

Counseling

There is no greater help the Placement Committee can give a young ministerial student faced with hard decisions and intellectual problems than to let him know that they are constantly waiting to help him. By personal correspondence or periodic interviews these student problems and the fatherly advice of experienced ministers may be exchanged with mutual benefit. Perhaps, the committee may suggest worthy books, share experiences in problems of faith and ethics, or help plan schedules of study.

A great problem itself is to establish and maintain contact between the students and the committee. This will take the full cooperation of the local conferences, (the Educational Committee, if they have such) local pastors, and above all, the student himself.

The Placement Committee deserves credit for the fine work already accomplished. The writer and other students are deeply grateful for the help it has freely offered. The committee can be of even wider influence if our people clearly understand its purpose, support its program, and above all pray that it might be guided by the Holy Spirit through the Word.

Today when the world is ravaged by unbelief, war, vice, and sins of all shapes and sizes, the Church of Jesus Christ should be spreading further abroad its message of Redemption, but where are the messengers? Must Our Lord again remind us, "the harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his Harvest."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Eleanor Schmidt to be Ordained

The Lord willing, Sister Eleanor Schmidt of Reedley, California is to be ordained as a missionary nurse for India on September 10, in her home church. (Not as at first planned on September 3.)

All mission friends are invited to a prayerful participation in this service. We have no right to send missionaries to the front on the firing line, unless we support them and back them up with our prayers.

Sister Schmidt is to go along with Sister Augusta Schmidt who is ready to return to India as soon as passage can be obtained. Brother and Sister P. A. Wenger the same. The Wengers might be on the way to India now, if it were not for the recent attack on the route by a torpedo boat upon a ship.

India needs help greatly. There is an awakening now, so that Brother Moyer writes that they have not enough instructors for those who are waiting for baptism.

In the name of the Board,
P. H. Richert, Sec.

Rev. P. H. Richert
Newton, Kansas

Dear Brother Richert:

Received yesterday the following letter from Marie:

"Dear Ones:

Happy! Letter came! Busy for Thanksgiving, Christmas. All real needs supplied. Sunny hospital room for two. Fine roommate. Health excellent. Greet Bates. Loving. Date, November 25, 1943. (Prayers)"

With Greetings, John Regier

Letter from Alida Schrag

Landour, U. P.
June 25, 1944

Dearly Beloved in the Lord:

Greetings in the name of our dear Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ! Yesterday we lived in the clouds practically all day, with a little rain at intervals. During the night it rained several times, and just now it is pouring. May God pour out His Spirit upon His own this day that we may be roused to deeper spiritual lives and that many who are yet lost in sin may see Christ living in us to such an extent that they will be drawn to Him!

This morning my soul rejoices in the Lord because of the fact that He has in His lovingkindness forgiven me for having lived such a wasteful life in the past (for indeed there were millions of times where the Lord gave me opportunity to witness for Him and I would not. I was ashamed of Jesus. As I look back now I deeply regret the fact that countless number of times I was a stumbling block to many a soul instead of being an example, simply because I would not in my stubborness and pride let the Lord control my life. Oh, how I must have grieved the Holy Spirit and caused my Lord untold agony because I would not give Him the place He so desired to have!). Thanks be to God that because of His wonderful love for me He would not let me go on in my blindness but rather showed me my sinful self, sent me to my knees in deep contrition, graciously forgave me, and came into my soul with power as soon as I said, "I surrender all." As God flooded my soul with His love, I became very much troubled about the fact that so many many people on this earth are still without a Saviour, not only that, but also the fact that there is a definite coldness and worldliness in the church all over this world. Where and how have we as children of God been spending our time, our money, and on what have we set our affections? Let us pray very earnestly that God might purge and sanctify us wholly—that we might live the separated lives, yes, that we might not live our own lives but the life of Jesus Christ no matter what the cost. If we let Christ live in us, truly let Him, without reserve, it must follow that from within us shall flow rivers of living water, that we will be victorious, fruitbearing people, and that God will glorify Himself through us in our every manner of life, for Christ cannot fail.

This morning, in Bible class we continued our study of the Christian walk according to the Book of Ephesians. God has spoken very loudly to me through that study and shown me how far short I have come of living the Christ life—at the same time my soul rejoices that there is no need of despair, but rather of praising the Lord that He has so abundantly supplied food to nourish my inner being and weapons to fight the spiritual warfare. All He asks me to do is to let Him feed me with His Word as I study the same, let Him cleanse me of all selfishness, pride, and anything that is displeasing to Him so that He can fill me with His Spirit to overflowing. He simply cannot glorify Himself through my life unless I let Him take control. Every ıe I try to tell Him how to lead me, I'm bound suffer spiritually, and what's more I might cause ıers to stumble. Not only that, but I grieve my rd's loving heart. Full surrender may mean mak- ; confessions which can only be made by the grace God, but it pays abundantly. This I say from ›erience. We cannot afford, as true children of d, to let anything come between our souls and : Saviour. As the minister said this morning in : services, "Nothing, save sin, can separate us from d." Oh! the pride which often rules our hearts l prevents us from entering into the fullness of the e of God! Getting face to face with our Lord :ns our spiritual eyes and enables us to see that have nothing, nothing to be proud of in ourselves. leed our righteousness is as filthy rags. Let us ach "Christ and Him crucified" by word and d daily, hourly, yes every moment for the days dark and the world needs the light of life sorely.

Yours in Him,
Alida Schrag

. May God glorify Himself through all that is l and done at the General Conference session in wton this coming August is my sincere desire. y His Spirit have full control in every part of session. Let me extend to all of you my hearty ank you" for the prayers you have and are utter- in my behalf. Let us never cease to remember h other before the throne of grace. God is still the throne and His ears are ever open to the cries His children as well as to the cries of a contrite ıer. Praise be to Him who hears and answers yer.

Bible Institute and Visitation Program

By A. J. Neuenschwander, Chairman

No doubt, you have read the background, purpose, and program that has been outlined. We earnestly solicit your prayers and interest on behalf of this large and far-reaching program. Ultimate success depends entirely on the Lord's guidance and benediction in this undertaking. More than a dozen men need to leave home churches and pulpits for from five to six weeks, and a few men may have to work even longer in order to complete the work of contacting every C.P.S. Camp, Unit, and each home congregation. Many men will have to serve as substitutes in different home pulpits while the minister is engaged as Bible Institute and Visitation Program leader.

We wish to express our thanks to the churches where the councils and congregations have already given permission for their shepherd to be away and to give his best efforts to this program.

To Unify and Solidify the Thinking

In order to direct the thinking of everyone toward one end and goal, the Committee has selected Acts chapters 1-10 as Biblical basis. These chapters cluster around the thought of the New Testament Christian church. Problems today, as well as then, need to be solved under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. In order to do this, we need to familiarize ourselves anew with the scripture. During World War I there were a number of instances where the boys in the camps and the home folks grew apart, and as a result many difficulties arose. To avoid a repetition we hope to direct the thinking of the boys in camps and units and the people of the home churches along similar lines.

Personal Counselling

How many problems have been solved when a pastor and a young man could sit down and talk things over in a frank manner! Surely with more than 500 General Conference young men in camp, units, etc., many problems have come up in their hearts and minds. Many of these young men are too far removed from home to be able to confer with the home pastor effectively. For this reason it is the plan of the committee that ample time be given so that every young man who has any problems can discuss them with an experienced pastor who is glad to be of help.

Personal problems solved in a sympathetic way, along Biblical lines, are sure to bring glory and honor to the Lord Jesus Christ and untold blessings to the Church.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

J. Herbert Fretz, Lansdale, Pennsylvania

AUGUST 20—And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him and did let none of his words fall to the ground. I Sam. 3:19. Read the Sunday School lesson. Samuel was dedicated to God before he was born. No wonder he had a God-filled life. When a man can honestly say, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth," then in turn his own words do not "fall to the ground," but become as swift arrows piercing the hard hearts of men. No wonder "all Israel from Dan to Beersheba" knew Samuel was God's prophet. We do well to read the inspiring lives of modern Samuels like Huss, Savonarola, and Whitefield, or in our own denomination, Menno Simons, Christian Krehbiel, S. F. Sprunger, and others. Our Father, teach us to honestly say, "Speak, Lord for thy servant heareth." Amen.

AUGUST 21—The sword of the Spirit which is the word of God. Eph. 6:17. Read Eph. 6:10-24. John Bunyan in his famous book Pilgrims Progress pictured the struggle between Christian and Apollyn as centered around the sword of the Spirit. He was right, for that sword is our only offensive weapon. We as Mennonite Christians believe the use of the carnal sword is wrong. But there are no non-combatants in the spiritual warfare. The armor of God will protect, but without the sword of the Spirit, we can strike no blow for Christ. Too many Christians today are, "on the guard," rather than, "in the battle." Menno Simons once wrote, "We teach and confess that we know of no sword . . . other than the sharp sword of the Spirit, God's word, as is abundantly shown in our writings, which is sharper and more piercing than any two-edged sword." O Lord make us to be conscientious objectors because of Thy word and conscientious projectors of Thy word. Amen.

AUGUST 22—My cup runneth over. Ps. 23:5. Read Ps. 23. There is not a Christian anywhere who ought not every day to make that sentence his own. No sickness, no sorrow, no calamity, nothing can compare with the abundance of blessing in Christ Jesus. If you doubt this read the lives of the Christian martyrs in, Martyrs Mirror. "My cup runneth over," is always true of the soul who walks with the Lord.

AUGUST 23—Behold, bless ye the Lord all ye se vants of the Lord, which by night stand in the hou of the Lord. Ps. 134:1. Read Ps. 134. Much is writt about the necessity of morning prayer and rightly s But night also has its peculiar appropriateness f prayer. Our Lord, often drew aside in the dusk to pra and rest after a day of stress. One of the most hallow experiences of the Christian is to be alone with Go when the day's work is done. Then too in the dea of some sleepless night we found God, "giving us son in the night." There is no better antidote for insor nia than to turn these restless moments into a tin of prayer and fellowship with the Lord.

AUGUST 24—Fear thou not: for I am with thee: not dismayed; for I am thy God. Isa. 41:10. Rea Rom. 8:31-39. Here are two precious promises cannot fail to grasp. First of all let us rememb that not one of us is ever alone. It matters not ho far we are from other human beings. It matters n how deep our grief, there is still that voice from abo "I am with thee." The second thought is this: We a on God's side. Friends, can there be a greater sour of strength than this? To know that despite, fina cial losses, deaths, persecutions, famines, or sicknes we are on the winning side is thrilling. We are mo than conquerors through Jesus Christ, who has ove come the world for us.

AUGUST 25—And he brought him to Jesus. Jo 1:42. Read John 1:35-42. Andrew was not a gre disciple, but his brother Peter was. When we reali that Andrew is the subject of this sentence and is Peter who is brought to Jesus, we catch a differe light. Whose Are We?

Paul, the great apostle, once had a visit from an angel when he was in grave peril. In relating his experience he spoke of the angel as belonging to the Lord, "whose I am and whom I serve."

In these days of conscription and war, we are claimed as being the property of the government. This raises the question in our hearts, "Whose are we?" In John 15:16 Jesus tells us that He has chosen us and appointed us for service unto Him. Whoever has accepted Christ's election of Himself belongs to Him. Would Paul have allowed hims to be conscripted into Caesar's army? He allow himself to be arrested. He spent years of his precio life in prison. He did not refuse to die for Chri But he refused to be owned by his government order that he should help to take any human li Dare we do otherwise and still be sure of our electi by Christ? Annual Report of the Y.P. Committee of the Pacific District Conference 1944

We are happy to report to the Pacific District that by the grace and help of God, the young people's work has again gone forward this past year. We also realize that there are much greater possibilities in this work and pray that He, whom we love and humbly endeavor to serve, will help us to go forward in the Y. P. work. This is after all the Lord's work, and so we count it a privilege to be "workers together with Him."

The following are some of the projects which we have undertaken this past year:

1. A copy of the devotional booklet The Quiet Hour has been sent to each of our boys in the service. Two years ago we had a mailing list of 53—this year our mailing list totalled about 190. Two copies of The Quiet Hour and The Upper Room have been sent to each of our C.P.S. camp libraries in our Pacific District. Also $5.00 have been sent to each of these libraries to be used for some religious periodical of their own choice.

2. The sponsoring of visits by pastors or groups of young people to the C.P.S. Camps has been definitely encouraged and has been carried out quite successfully this past year. Each state was made responsible for its own camp. Each state was also asked to start a fund for C.P.S. needs—this has been done by some of the groups.

3. During the month of August a subscription drive was held by all of our Y. P. societies for either The Mennonite or The Bundesbote. Someone was appointed from each society to be responsible for the drive in their own church. A great many new subscriptions to our church papers were made through this drive.

4. It has also been the privilege of our young people to help our Canadian Mennonite people with the purchasing of the Rosthern Experimental Farm in Canada which will be used for D.V.B.S. work, retreats, etc. Our Y. P. contributed $100 towards this fund.

5. Our Y. P. are also helping to support a D.V.B.S. worker in Canada.

6. We have again had as one of our projects the sending of $50.00 to Ernst Harder, who is at the present time attending Bethel College, preparing for missionary work among the Mennonite people in South America.

7. The publishing of a Y. P. church paper by each Y. P. group in our district has been definitely encouraged by the Y. P. Committee. We are happy to report that at the present time there are about half of the churches in our district who have a Y. P. or church paper. Perhaps there are some being published which have not been reported to us yet—at any rate we hope that within another year, each church will be having a paper of this kind. They are a definite help and blessing to our members. During this past year, those who have published papers have exchanged them with other churches and this has also helped in uniting our youth.

8. Two splendid retreats were held last summer—one in California and one in Idaho. God is using these retreats for His glory.

We as a young people's Committee, wish to take this opportunity of thanking all of you who have helped in this work during the past year. Without your help we could not have carried on. The cooperation from the various Y. P. groups has been most encouraging, and we do appreciate all that you have done. We believe that this Y. P. work is important, and covet your prayers in its behalf.

Two Faucets

By Louise Duerksen

This year spring has again abundantly produced vegetable gardens; however the heat has caused some to shrivel and shrink. This brought to mind that we too are often as vegetables—using lettuce as an example. Heat or hot water will shrivel and shrink lettuce. In turn when we emerge the lettuce in cold water it will wriggle and try to smile. So our mind has two faucets. When we turn on the heat of self-pity, anger, envy, resentment, spite, revenge, or hate, our souls shrivel and pucker. Unkind words come to our lips and bring unhappiness to us and those around us. Or we may turn on refreshing thoughts of love, duty, honor, sharing, kindness, and bring laughter and joy to those near us and to ourselves. The faucet of either hot or cold water is in our power to turn on or off. Which do we turn on the most? Don't wilt yourself, turn on the right faucet. Be what God intended you to be.

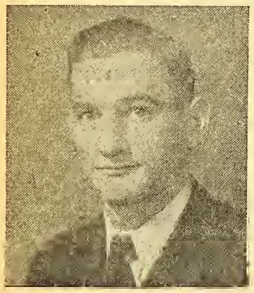
YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Five young people belonging to the Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa, solicited church members for gifts to Bluffton College and secured $182.

—Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska: A goodly number of the young men in C.P.S. used their furloughs for helping with the harvest and earning some money.

—Buhler, Kansas: The C.E. of the Buhler Church went to Burrton on August 13 and gave a C.E. program to the Burrton Mennonite Church.

—Twenty-one young people from the large Eden Church near Moundridge attended the retreat at Camp Wood. This was the second largest attendance from any church. The retreaters gave a report at the regular C.E. meeting, August 13. Ruth Wedel, nurse for the C.P.S. camp at Terry, Montana, is spending some time at home with her parents, having been granted a leave of absence.



Orlando Goering, a member of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, has enrolled at Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois. There he will continue his preparation for the ministry. Recently he received from Selective Service his IV-D classification, which enables him to continue his studies in school.

—The General C. E. of the Tabor Mennonite Church, Newton, had Willard Wiebe, of Aberdeen, Idaho, as its guest speaker on July 23. Mr. Wiebe, who is a ministerial student at Bethel College, spoke on "The Hope of the Christian." The Intermediate C.E. had an open-air meeting in the church park on July 2. Rev. H. B. Schmidt reported on his visit to a C.P.S. camp. The group also enjoyed an hour of playing "Tenessee" and visiting. After this they met in the church auditorium where Orie Lehrman showed slides of C.P.S. life.

—"The Value of Sacred Music" was the theme of a recent C.E. program of the First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota.

—Forty C.O.'s have volunteered to undergo a two-month pneumonia research experiment.

—"Science and the Bible" was the theme of the C.E. program given by the Young People's C.E. of the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, on July 30. From the Beacon we glean, "If you would like to experience the best vacation you have ever had, you must attend the Retreat. No vacation anywhere could be more enjoyable."

—Dr. George A. Buttrick, pastor of the large Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York City spent two days at Denison, Iowa, C.P.S. camp not so long ago. From his own church over 500 men are in the armed forces and twelve in C.P.S. Two of his own three sons are in C.P.S., and the third one will also go there if the war continues another year. Dr. Buttrick taught the "mass" Sunday School class at camp and then gave the sermon. The evening service was held in the Methodist Church in Denison. This came about because of the urgent invitation of some pastors from Denison. The camp chorus furnished the music for the evening service. All in all this service was a distinct "milestone" for the Denison camp.

—Gerhard R. Buhr, member of the First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, is bookkeeper and assistant to the business manager at the Denison C.P.S. camp. Arnold F. Friesen, a member of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, is a "Denisonality" who plays an important part as aide in the district office of the Soil Conservation Service.

—Edward L. Neuenschwander, a member of the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, is another "Denisonality" who has had a very active part in the camp's social and religious activities.

—Edwin J. Schrag of Moundridge, Kansas, is also at Denison. His list of camp positions shows that the fellows esteem him very highly.

—Rev. Elbert Koontz and Miss Esther Ruth Schroeder were united in marriage on August 9 at the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota. Rev. Koontz is pastor of the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska.

—The Fellowship Garden of the Mennonite Churches at Beatrice, Nebraska, has produced 100 quarts beans; 87 quarts beets; 62 quarts carrots; 45 quarts corn; and 41 quarts tomatoes. Donated without canning 2 bushels beans; 10 bushels corn. Practically all of this goes to C.P.S. camps. The young people have had a lot of fine fellowship producing these vegetables.

—Victor Buller, who has been serving in the mental hospital at Ypsilanti, Michigan, will go to Puerto Rico to serve in the unit there, according to word just received. Whether Mrs. Buller will accompany him is not known at present. She has also been serving at Ypsilanti.

—Hoffnungsau C.E. Broadcast is the name of an interesting three-page paper sent to the men in service by the C.E. of the Hoffnungsau Church. Inman. Items and facts from it are: There are about 155 men in the Colorado Springs C.P.S. camp. At this camp they plan to can between 600 to 700 quarts of cherries and about as many quarts of beans. These facts are reported by Edwin J. Schmidt who is a camper there. Richard Epp was recently inducted into the camp at North Fork. Cornelia Franz, Linda Ediger, and Amanda Ediger plan to attend Bethel this year. Marie Ediger is home from Belton, Montana. Sixteen young people attended Camp Wood. Rosella Dyck was a cabin director. Elmer Voth is editor of the C.E. Broadcast.

—Swift Current, Saskatchewan: Summer Bible on a beautiful Saturday morning. Rev. Hans Dyck school teachers assembled in the Emmaus Church led in the opening. Prayer followed. Then some children were called in, and various teachers demonstrated how to teach various parts of the Bible school program. Ladies of the sewing society served a noon meal in the basement. In the afternoon the teachers were assigned schools, and more demonstrations and a discussion followed. A lunch was again served in the basement after the meet-

EMPHASIZING THE WHEAT

There is nothing that we can support that is perfect, not even a church. Must we then cut ourselves away from everything? That would be a sure way of burying our influence. On the other hand let us see the good in everything. In the parable of the wheat among the tares, Christ illustrates this. By trying to eradicate the wheat from the tares the sower would have lost even the good. We must do as Christ said—overcome evil with good—if we try to kill the evil we lose the good which was ours to begin with. The best way to break a bad habit is not to say repeatedly "Today I won't do it." This will continually impress the subconscious mind with a negative fact; rather supplant the bad habit with something better which helps to loose yourself and to forget the bad habit. Christ asked us to do good and to shun the evil. He didn't say to kill the evil. That is war. By warring we lose even the good we had and find ourselves at a complete loss.

—Florence Auernheimer

FROM ONE IN C.P.S.

"When all the young folks come back to the home communities and churches which we all pray will be soon, there will be a period of adjustment for both the ones that have been gone and the ones who have stayed at home . . . the closer we can keep in contact with one another the easier it will be to make this adjustment.

"We who are giving our time to our government don't want any pity from the folks back at home, but rather their support, both material and spiritual. We hate to feel that it is an extra burden for churches to carry."

The Patient in Room Number 4

Betsy sat cross-legged in the middle of the bed, a sweet, rather wistful child, wondering if this were such a good idea after all. She had walked staunchly up the hospital stairs, rosy and warm with importance, but the friendliness of the nurse's smile, and the gentleness of her hands, could not entirely shield the six-year-old from her worry. The funny nightgown-thing came apart in back, like a Chinese shirt on backwards; the bed was so high, so high, and the sounds and smells were frightening because of their very difference. It was so early in the morning, and she had had no breakfast. Mommy came in to sit by her, but that didn't take all the strangeness away. It helped when the nurse came back; she was so much at home in this queer, white world. Nothing could go very wrong while she was around.

Look! Here she came again, bringing with her an older lady in a uniform of blue and white.

"I know," said Betsy, "It's red."

"You'll let me see, too, won't you?" Sister smiled, "It'll just be like pricking your finger with a pin."

The nurse came around to the other side of the bed to hold Betsy's hand. Sister took the other, curved the tiny fingers up. A bright dart of silver, a quiver of surprise, and it was all over. The dot of red on the finger grew, and fell onto a plate of glass. Sister went to the window to watch it, while the nurse brought a wisp of cotton for Betsy to hold on the prick. She held on very hard while the nurse tucked a thermometer under her tongue; then for a minute she was very busy keeping her mouth tightly closed, and pressing the cotton on her finger, until the nurse took both cotton and thermometer away.

Things began happening thick and fast as a dream: the nurse coming back and forth through it all like a thread of reassurance. A picture book to look at, the bed bending in the middle when a crank was turned by the nurse (or Mother, who had to do it several times), the fast, hard jab in Betsy's arm that the nurse called "having a shot," and then the coming of the doctor himself. The nurse stood by, watching and listening, while the doctor listened to Betsy's heart, and then sat on the edge of the bed.

"Betsy, we'll be ready to take out your tonsils in just a few minutes. You'll put on your slippers and bathrobe, and come walking into the operating room with your nurse and your mother. I'll be there, and sister and another nurse; we'll have on long white gowns and white caps on our heads so that you won't know us at all. Your nurse will help you onto the table—it's like a hard, narrow bed, but it won't be too hard to sleep, or too light in the room. Sister will put a towel across your eyes and a things over your nose and mouth. For a minute or two you'll breathe a funny-smelling stuff. You'll go round and round like the fastest, biggest, brightest merry- round in the world—then you'll be asleep and drea ing.

"It will be afternoon when you wake up again. first you'll be thirsty, but you can't have any wa right at first; it wouldn't be good for you. Afte while you can have water; then you'll be all wal up. The nurse will wash your hands and face, co out your curls and put a ribbon in your hair. A then comes the party, Betsy—ice cream!"

It happened just like the doctor said: the walk the operating room, one hand holding tightly to mother, the other secure in the nurse's hand. Th were brilliant lights, and odd, heavy smell, and long deep sleep.

Betsy's mother and the nurse kept guard toget over the sleeping child, back in her room. Occasi ally Betsy stirred or pulled at the light blanket. O she whimpered a little. Every few minutes the nu felt Betsy's wrist for the firm pulse.

"How long will she be like this?" the mother ask

"Not long now. Pretty soon she'll respond w you speak her name."

"She's really all right? She looks so hot and comfortable. Couldn't we take the cover off?"

"Oh, no. She could catch cold very easily ri now, and she's much too deeply asleep to feel hot all."

Betsy turned in the bed; the nurse pulled the co over her again, and again felt for her pulse.

"You've been so good to Betsy," the mother w on, "I've marvelled at how quickly and complet she liked you. Once or twice I was a bit afraid t she was going to get upset, but you came in, an could almost see the confidence come back to h

"I suppose that if anything goes wrong you can ways call the doctor."

"Yes, and one of the most important and diffi parts of our training is learning when the docto needed. Sometimes we know ourselves what mus done. If Betsy is restless this afternoon we will her aspirin, as her doctor ordered; we wouldn't r to call him for that."

eaching out of the Overflow

By Russell L. Mast

iam L. Stidger, in an article addressed to ers, uses the apt phrase, "Preaching out of erflow." There are three types of preaching, s, as there are three types of oil wells. There dry hole, the well that has to be pumped, here is the overflow well, which, after long of deep drilling, will strike a subterranean iat will overflow the pipe and shoot up as high

Three Types of Teaching leads one to observe that there are likewise ypes of teaching. There are the dry holes, imped wells, and the overflow wells. The number of teachers belong to the middle Their teaching is sustained by what may be a hand to mouth existence. What is written ecomes their only weapon against the horrible of the dry hole. But the really effective teach-any Sunday School are the "overflow teachvho have many sources to draw from and have many more ideas that they can use. They draw from that subterranean pool of ideas, convictions, and experiences which makes their teaching both vivid and effective. Or, to change the figure, they have a storehouse of teaching materials from which they can select only that which is best and which most effectively meets the need.

Building the Storehouse

How does one builds such a storehouse of teaching material? What are the sources? First, there is the Bible. Every teacher should have his mind and heart saturated with the Bible. It should be approached as the book of life. It should be studied with the attitude: what is God's will for my life and the life of the world? This does not mean merely to be able to quote chapter and verse ad infinitum. Nor does it mean to be able to evolve fantastic doctrinal theories which have little or no relevance to the Christian life. A statement by Dr. Robert Friedman deserves our wider reading. In speaking of the Anabaptists, he says, "A simple untheological biblicism prevailed and gave solid foundation. The brethren did not speak much about salvation or justification by faith (although they believed in both, their primary concern was the keeping of the commands of Christ, or to say it in one word, obedience."

The second source of our storehouse of teaching material is our own observation of life and its problems. Every teacher has the opportunity to explore this field. Through the daily contacts of their chosen work, through conversations with people of all kinds, through the innumerable experiences of life, they can make the well become a never-ending stream. These observations need to be put on paper that they may be preserved for future use. How many valuable insights and observations are lost, because the teacher did not put them down! This is a practice which does not require much extra time, only a bit of self-discipline.

A third source is that of general reading. Teachers ought to read more than they do. So many fine books are pouring off the press which can add new dimensions to one's understanding of life. It makes it possible for the teacher to present something new and fresh every Sunday and avoids the ancient habit of beating the same path Sunday after Sunday. Here, too, one should keep notes and records of the fruits of his reading. For the memory fails one when it is needed most.

Let teachers make use of these sources of teaching material. Let this become a growing experience and in time the well will not have to be pumped, but will overflow with the words of life.

LOVE AND LIFE

"To Love is to live and to live is to love" do you believe it? How much happier we would be if we would believe it with all our heart and mind. Life—real life is to be found in that. When life did not bring us much of joy and gladness it was because we did not love as we should. In the pursuit of life we have gone astray and sought life in some other way. Christ's way of love is the way of true life. "Love one another as I have loved you"—that alone is life and life eternal.—Rev. H. T. Unruh

Swiss Speaker at Berne

Prof. Rodolfo Olgiati, who has lived in Berne, Switzerland, since 1919, traveled widely in Europe, taught and did relief work, and who is now working for the Swiss Red Cross, spoke to a large audience in the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, on August 2. Prof. Olgiati is in this country to acquaint himself with relief work as done by the Mennonites, Quakers, and others. Dr. M. C. Lehman arranged for his visit to Berne.

Some highlights of his talk were: Swiss neutrality has kept them out of the war. The Swiss are limited to 25 per cent of pre-war fuel. The normal coal supply from Germany no longer exists. Families live in one room to keep warm. Everything is rationed. Lawns have been converted into potato fields, as have also many pasture lands. Spuds are more essential than cows. Meat, therefore, is not plentiful. The Swiss gladly endure these hardships if they can keep out of war. After his description of Switzerland in the Swiss language, Prof. Olgiati talked of relief work in English.

Points brought out were: Greece is perhaps suffering most from lack of food. Destruction of cities horrible, but that is nothing compared to destruction of spiritual values.

In answering questions he pointed out that: Nazism is strongest among Germans twenty to thirty-five. Large German cities have suffered from one-fourth to nearly total destruction. Millions are wandering. German surrender would come more quickly if terms of surrender were more definitely defined. If peace after the war is to have a chance, nations must repent of their sins. There must be no finger pointing at the peace table.—The above is taken from an article in the Berne, Witness.

JOTTINGS

—G. Enns writing in the Mennonitische Rundschau of Canada states that one Mennonite Church has struck the non-resistant principle out of its confession of faith and permits its members to choose any kind of military service. Another church, he says, excommunicates all those who choose active service, with the exception of those who join the medical corps. A third church, he reports, excommunicates any member as soon as he dons a military uniform.

den Chronicles, Eden Mennonite Church, Mound-ge, Kansas: "May we call your attention to the work of the Mennonite Bible Academy at North Newton. The aim of the school is . . . "to equip its students with a knowledge of the scriptures, to encourage sincere Christian living, to train workers in the service for Jesus Christ, and to make it possible to acquire a high school education with Bible Training." "Several students from our congregation again plan to enroll. Others are encouraged to do the same." ". . . this year a course in Bible is being offered at the local high school. The course will be taught by Rev. W. F. Unruh . . . We urge our young people to make this course a part of their year's work" Brother H. J. Schrag has a complete record of each member's contributions towards C.P.S. work. Thus each member can ascertain whether he is up in his giving. A Sunday School picnic is to be held on August 22. The Juniors are to give a program. Each family is to bring its lunch basket. The picnic is an opportunity for the more than 700 members to fellowship in an informal way.

—Echoes of the Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska: This church contributed about 7,000 lbs. of canned goods to C.P.S. last year. The church is again sponsoring a canning project. The pastor's wife, Mrs. A. W. Friesen is now at the home of her son, Dr. Harold Friesen, Yutan, Nebraska, after having undergone a thyroid operation. Mrs. M. C. Lehman spoke to the church on August 15 in the interest of relief work. A total of $570.30 was given for C.P.S. during July.

—Graduation Exercises for the 1944 class of the Nurses' Training School of Bethel Hospital will be held on August 18, with Rev. Arnold Funk as speaker. The exercises will be held in the evening at the First Mennonite Church, Newton.

—The Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa, is cooperating with other churches in Sunday evening union services. Twenty minutes of sacred music precede each service. Some new records were recently purchased for this part of the service. Rev. H. E. Nunemaker thanks the church for the offer of a vacation but states that he will not accept it now because of travel restrictions and the fact that he will be gone during October.

—Complete copies of Gerald Stucky's Scrapbook may be had by writing to Box 98, North Newton, Kansas. The cost is $1.00.

—Rev. Paul Shelly, who has joined the faculty of Bluffton College to teach courses in Bible and religious education, stated in his letter of acceptance, "I have become more and more convinced that secular education is not adequate to maintain the Christian way of life. I have become more and more convinced that the Christian college has a unique place in the Mennonite church. I feel that our Mennonite colleges should in a real sense be new pioneers in stressing both our heritage as Mennonites and as Children of God through Jesus Christ, and also in discovering new methods to perpetuate this way of life. Our colleges must do more than reflect their constituencies. I feel that our colleges should produce a certain type of leadership that would in time produce a new and united Mennonite Church based firmly and deeply upon the basic Christian doctrines and our Mennonite heritage."

—Bluffton College has employed Frank J. Batterson to teach Spanish this fall. "Mr. Batterson has his Master's degree from Ohio State University in Spanish and has spent a number of years in educational work in South America. The course is being introduced at this time because of the trend toward greater cooperation and increased mutual friendship between countries of the western hemisphere."

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

Retreat—The Seventeenth Annual Retreat of the Conference was a great success. Yes, we praise God for the forty-one conversions. To these forty-one young people, the theme "Drawing Near to God" was a personal experience. The attendance was very good. A total of 103 attended the High School Retreat. 110 Juniors attended the Junior Retreat and close to 100 attended the Senior Young People's Retreat.

First Quarterly Conference—The first Conference meeting of the 1944-'45 Conference year was held in the Flatland Meetinghouse, July 31. The treasurer reported that Bowmansville and Richfield have already met their quota to the Conference Budget, and that the total amount received toward the Budget since May is $717.67. The message of the evening was delivered by the Rev. J. N. Smucker, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio. He spoke on the theme "Perils and Pearls of a Preacher." The meetings were well attended. The next quarterly conference will be held in the Upper Milford Church, November 6.

Springfield—The congregation witnessed a beautiful scene several weeks ago when a mother and father, the former a Greek Orthodox and the latter a Methodist, brought their small child to the services to be dedicated to the Lord. We hope this will be a case of "A little child shall lead them." The mother and child have attended frequently for some time. The exterior of the church has been painted, and several new window frames installed, which add to the beauty of the completed stone pointing. Total cost of over $500.00 was paid with the interest which had accumulated from the trust funds of the Burial Grounds. The Truth Seeker's Class paid for all the painting.

Bethel, Perkasie—Rev. Linford Rotenberger of Quakertown, conducted a Bible Study during the C. E. service Sunday evening, July 16. September 10, will be "Join the Church Sunday." The pastor, the Rev. Ward Shelly, spoke at the Retreat Camp Fire service, Thursday evening, July 20. Rev. and Mrs. Shelly spent July 27, visiting the guests of the Home at Frederick, Pa.

Zion, Souderton—The Rev. J. N. Smucker preached the sermon, Sunday, July 30. The pastor elect, the Rev. Ellis Graber, will be installed Sunday, September 17, by Rev. Russell L. Mast, Conference President and Dr. J. E. Hartzler, who supplied the congregation for about six months. During the month of August the pulpit will be supplied by ministerial students from Ursinus College.

The Church Messenger published monthly by the Swamp Mennonite Charge, the Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, pastor, has a picture on the cover page of the July issue, of the members received into the Flatland Church, May 28. The second Union C. E. meeting was held in the West Swamp Church, Sunday evening, July 30. Rev. Smucker, of Bluffton, Ohio, spoke on "Love, Courtship and Marriage." The third meeting will be held in the Flatland Church, August 27, and Miss Eileen Mann, student at Grace Bible Institute, Omaha, Nebraska, will speak on the subject, "How to Meet a Crisis." This will also be a retreat echo meeting. The pastor of the charge held two Communion services, Sunday afternoon and evening, July 9, with the C.P.S. men and their wives, at the Marlboro State Hospital, Marlboro, N.J. Between forty and forty-five partook of the sacrament.

Suggestions for Observance of Christian Education Sunday

ORSHIP SERVICE: A special sermon stressing place and importance of Christian education in life of the individual, in the program of the rch, and in our nation.

pecial prayer for our church schools and for those ut to enter upon a year of school work. Ask 's guidance for those who have in their charge destinies of the school.

equest and stress continued prayer throughout year for education and for those being educated.

HE SUNDAY SCHOOL: A special program for opening exercises of the Sunday School might be nged, stressing the importance of Christian edu- on.

pecial decorations for the day can be arranged, uding flowers, posters, and pictures. Catalogs picture bulletins could be on display.

here could be a farewell service for those going y to school. Our young people need the interest prayers of the church and need to feel the in- st which the church has in them.

Special programs could be arranged in the junior, primary, and intermediate departments for those about to begin another year in public schools. Pupils should be led to appreciate the privilege of education and to see its importance. The relation of education to Christian living and to opportunities for service could be stressed.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETINGS: Evening young people's societies could select a special discussion topic dealing with the need for and difficulties of Christian education in such a day as this. The need for education of Mennonites in the principles of the church could well be stressed. Information could be given regarding the provisions Mennonites have made for the education of their children.

IN THE HOME: Education Sunday is to be essentially a day of prayer for our educational institutions and for guidance for all connected with them, either as students or as staff members. Parents can give due recognition during family worship to the importance of Christian education.

Christian Education Sunday

ugust 27 is the day set aside by our Conference he day of prayer for Christian Education in our ches. If ever it was important that we give e attention to Christian Education, it is now. stian faith and life will grow properly only as stian people read and study the word of God develop an inner strength sufficient to meet asks and resist the evils of our day. Conversion e first and a necessary step, but after the new there must be a continuous process of nurture growth in the Christian life.

e Board of Education of our Conference presents following material pertaining to our Sunday ols, our Young People's work, our Academies, our schools of higher education, as well as sug- ons for the observance of Christian Education lay.

r young people are the hope of the future of hurch. We commit to your interest and prayer various activities and institutions of our Confer- especially concerned with the Christian nurture r young people. The Board of Education would lad to hear how the day is observed in various ches in the hope that some of these suggestions be used in the future.

SUNDAY SCHOOL AND TEACHER TRAINING

This report is given with the consciousness that if the director in this field had not been a novice at his task and a very busy pastor at the same time, more could and would have been accomplished.

Besides the effort of gaining a general acquaintance with the problems in this field and writing an occasional article for The Mennonite, the main project undertaken was a questionnaire survey of the status of our Sunday Schools. Of 206 questionnaires sent out only 101 were returned. The questionnaires to Canada were sent out late for which apology is made, but the poor response from Sunday Schools in the United States cannot be thus explained.

Though the results of this questionnaire do not give a complete picture, they do reveal basic conditions and trends. All percentages given in this report are based on the replies received.

I. Organization. (1) Sixty-nine per cent of our Sunday Schools are graded. Most of them are divided into three, four, or five departments. (2) The average size of Sunday School classes is sixteen pupils. (3) Forty-six per cent have a Cradle Roll. Nineteen per cent have a Home Department. (4) Fifty-nine per cent cooperate in community Sunday School organizations. Seventy-seven per cent cooperate with district Sunday School organizations where they exist. Only forty-two per cent have Workers' Conferences.

Comments. (1) Our schools should consider the values of a Cradle Roll and a Home Department to bring benefits to pre-school children and to shut-ins and aged persons. (2) Workers' Conferences should be held much more frequently to promote interest in the coordination of Sunday School activities.

II. Enrollment and Attendance. (1) Thirty-five per cent of our schools report a decrease of enrollment since the previous year (539 pupils less). Thirty-one per cent report an increase (510 pupils more). Thirty-two per cent report the same enrollment. (2) The total average attendance is seventy per cent of the enrollment. (3) In only forty-three per cent of the schools is the Sunday School enrollment larger than the church membership.

Comments. (1) Less than one-third of our schools are growing, about one third are holding their own and more than one third are losing ground. The total decrease is greater than the total increase. Other denominations report similar trends. War conditions are partly responsible, but this does not excuse us. (2) The total average attendance of seventy per cent could be improved. Two schools reported about one hundred per cent average attendance. That should be the goal of every school. (3) If Sunday School enrollments exceed church membership there is good prospect for growth in that church. If the condition is reversed, a future decline is probable. Schools whose enrollment is smaller than the church membership should make special effort to reach out and bring in the unchurched of the community. Sunday Schools must practice evangelism if they would grow.

III. Curriculum Materials. Materials used in our schools come from about twenty different publishing houses. (2) The variety of materials used is greatest among the lower age groups. (3) Where our own General Conference materials are used they seem to be much appreciated. Some, however, plead for graded materials and others ask for more "gospel" in the Senior-Adult Quarterly. (4) Seventy-two per cent of the schools report regular instruction on temperance; fifty-eight per cent on missions, and only forty-five per cent on peace.

Comments. (1) How can we have unity of faith in our conference when we have such a variety of materials used in our Sunday Schools? One reason for this condition is that we do not yet produce our own materials for all departments. (2) In the interest of more uniformity, the Board of Education recommends: For primary department—Old Mennonite materials; for junior department—our own Junior Quarterly; for intermediate department—Old Mennonite materials; for young people and adult department—Mennonite Senior-Adult Quarterly and our own German Quarterly. Teacher's quarterlies and other German materials, at present, will have to be secured from other sources than our own conference. (3) Our schools are encouraged to incorporate regular instruction on temperance, missions, and especially on peace in these confusing times.

IV. Teacher Training. (1) Only thirty-six per cent of our schools have teachers' meetings of any kind Only eight per cent have a teacher training course of their own. Thirteen per cent cooperate in community teacher training projects. (2) During the past triennium the Board of Education issued thirty-nine teacher training diplomas to such who had completed requirements. Only two churches requested them.

Comments. (1) This appears to be the weakest point in our Sunday School set-up. (2) The Board of Education in former years has approved the following teacher training courses: Oliver, Preparation for Teaching; the Western District Conference Plan for the Training of Church Workers; The Evangelical Training Course; and The International Council of Religious Education Training Course. (3) Upon request, the Board of Education grants diplomas to those who have completed an accredited course.

V. Finances. (1) Sixty-five per cent of the schools report an increase in financial contributions over the previous year. Only ten per cent report a decrease (2) In the distribution of funds, some schools tend to neglect Conference causes, but the great majority are cooperating in Conference enterprises.

Comment. We remind our schools that our Conference needs should have a primary consideration in the disbursement of their funds.

"And let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Gal. 6:9.

Respectfully submitted,
Erland Waltner, Director of Sunday School and Teacher Training

The Young People's Union

The officers of the Young People's Union at present are Ted E. Claassen, President; Arthur Wenger, Vice President; Dorothy Dietz, Secretary.

Miss Dietz deserves a lot of credit for the way she undertook to carry out resolutions and meet possibilities. She was active in at least seven areas. (1) She rather successfully promoted the use of Fellowship Prayer Calendars. (2) The value of the use of Standards for Young People's Societies was urged. (3) The exchange of District Publications was encouraged. (4) Young people were asked to use the series of booklets on Mennonites and Their Heritage for study courses. (5) It was advocated that young people should correspond with men in service, whether in Civilian Public Service or in the Military Service of the country. Arrangements were also made in this connection to supply all men in service with helpful devotional literature. (6) The Canadian Youth Organization was encouraged through financial, moral and spiritual support in their efforts to establish their work on a more permanent basis. They were encouraged to buy the Rosthern Experimental Farm and to send our workers into needy fields, mostly far removed from the larger communities. The young people of three District Conferences responded. Others may have been hindered by the report that purchase of this valuable piece of property was merely for Retreat grounds. (7) Much has been done to interest young people in the value of Retreats. There has been a considerable intermingling of speakers. There have been visits of young people of other areas.

Much of what was done is necessarily intangible in nature. The results cannot be fully reported because so much of the work was in the nature of sowing good seed.

Yours in the Master's Service,
J. H. Langenwalter, Counsellor for the Young People's Union

Our Academies

In some areas of our Conference there is, due in rt to the war, a new interest in church academies. ports of schools below college level are herewith corporated in an abbreviated form.

(a) Mennonite Bible Academy, Beatrice, Nebraska. nce "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of sdom" (Prov. 9:10), our two Beatrice Mennonite ngregations continue to feel a need for a definitely ristian Bible Academy. Our parochial school ben in 1886 with Rev. J. K. Penner as instructor. r school building was erected near the First Mennite Church in 1889, and continues to serve its purse. It provides two years, ninth and tenth grades, balanced instruction: We offer five courses of idy, namely, one in Bible, one in music, and three sic accredited academic subjects which alternate meet the needs of students.

Miss Violet Miller, a 1943 graduate of Bethel Cole with a major in Bible and music, served as tructor during the past year. Eleven students re enrolled, however we expect an increased enlment when school opens this fall. We wish to courage other congregations in a renewed interest the establishment and support of Bible Academies. t us reply on God's unerring Word which presents with both, our duty and reward: "Train up a ld in the way he should go, and when he is old, will not depart from it." (Prov. 22:6)—Henry Epp.

) The Oklahoma Bible Academy, Meno, Oklama. With much praise to God for His abiding thfulness, we report something of that which the rd has wrought in the past. During each of the ee school years a number of students have found Jesus Christ the answer to their soul's cry for iverance from the penalty and power of sin, and ve gone out from the school to their homes, ne churches and communities, as well as to se who have never heard the Gospel before, ecially in the Ozarks of eastern Oklahoma and ssouri.

ince our last report advances have been made in course of study, in the teaching force, and in the ilable equipment. The latter, however, is still the st needy of the above three factors. As to course study, we offer a four-year state-accredited high ool course, with a total enrollment during the past year of sixty-six students. Additions have been made in music, home economics and typing. An enlarged Bible course also has been offered since September 1943 to make possible more adequate preparation for the teaching of Sunday School classes, week-day Bible classes, or Daily Vacation Bible Schools. The enrollment in the Bible course during the past year was thirteen. The total combined enrollment for the past year reached the high mark of seventy-nine students.

Our school, for the past three years, has been a member of the Evangelical Teacher Training Association in Chicago which seeks to train church-school teachers as thoroughly as the public school teachers. Three students have earned the diploma of this Association during the past year. Through the faithful and sacrificial work of our Alumni, a completely renovated and remodeled two-story house with full basement now serves as the superintendent's residence on the first floor and the boys' dormitory on the second floor. Plans have also been made to complete the present school building as soon as possible. Additional classroom space is sorely needed for an increased curriculum and the enlarged student body. Pray with us that this school may be used by the Lord for our young people.—Lubin Jantzen, Principal.

(c) Mennonite Bible Academy. North Newton, Kansas. As a result of the expressed desires of the constituency and the action of the Board of Directors of Bethel College, the Mennonite Bible Academy opened its doors on September 3, 1943. During the year forty-six students were enrolled in the school.

The Academy is offering a full four-year high school course, meeting the requirements of the Kansas State Board of Education, and in addition is requiring each student to take one course in Bible each year. Home economics, commerce, industrial arts, Mennonite history and music are also offered.

The student body represented fourteen churches located in five different states. We also had a refugee from Belgium as one of our students. With the interest shown by our constituency and the help of the Lord, we feel confident of a better and stronger school in the future. —Theodore Schmidt, Principal.

Our Schools of Higher Education

Jotable progress has been made at Freeman Col. For this we are most grateful to our Heavenly her. While the enrollment in the college has e down, it is encouraging that the academy enment has gone up. Totals for the last three rs are: 1942, 146; 1943, 126; 1944; 108.

Ve have continued our efforts to make our curlum in both the academy and college more in ping with our constituent needs. Since most of academy graduates do not go on to college we emphasizing a more practical high school course. recent changes have received the commendation he State Department of Education. The normal ning course continues to be most popular in the ege.

taff changes have been few. The total number faculty members has varied between nine and eleven. Through the years our faculty members have rendered real sacrificial service to the school and community.

On September 1, 1941, the total debt of the college was $42,645.57. Since that date this has been completely wiped out and the college will close its fiscal year on August 31, 1944 with a handsome balance for the next school year. For this happy turn we are most grateful to our Heavenly Father and the many friends who made this possible.

The college service station continued to operate and in the past year the net earnings yielded $100 monthly to the college.

The college continues to enjoy an increasing spirit of cooperation on the part of the more than 30 churches in its constituency. We aim to work hand in hand with the churches in what we believe to be a common task, namely that of helping our young people to know what they believe and why, and to enable them to see the absolute necessity of a definite correlation between that belief and their walk. To this end we solicit the prayers of our many friends.

GERMAN ENGLISH ACADEMY, ROSTHERN, SASKATCHEWAN

The school term of 1943-44 closed with 129 students attending; nine students coming from the Mennonite Brethern church, seven from non-Mennonite families and one hundred thirteen from General Conference homes.

Instruction was given in all the subjects required by the Department of Education in Regina. Because of the war the majority of the students were girls. From this we judge that in the future the teaching profession among our people in Saskatchewan will be filled with young women.

At the final examinations last June almost all of our Grade XII students passed in their government examinations. Twenty-two students of the University of Saskatchewan, majority of them Mennonites, had to discontinue their studies because they refused to sign the following waiver: "In consideration of being granted the status of a student... I hereby waive for the duration of the existing war all claims as a Mennonite, Doukhobor or conscientious objector in any way." This also tends to give girls a better chance to acquire a higher education than boys.

Our schools had been in financial difficulties for a number of years, but the debt has now been paid and with some further gifts we will again be able to give prospective students the same type of education that was given in previous years. More room and better equipment are needed badly, but we hope we will not be forced to go into debt again.

The majority of our students come from Mennonite families that arrived in Canada in the years 1923 to 1930. This shows the possibility of educational development with the help of the newcomers. May the Lord guide us in our efforts to give our young people a good training in religious as well as in secular subjects.

Respectfully submitted,

MENNONITE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE GRETNA, MANITOBA

We are glad to report that the Lord has been with us in our work during the past years. The total number of students has risen to one hundred forty. This is considerably more than should be accommodated in a school of our size, but we were reluctant to send back Mennonite students who intended to get their education in our Institute.

A few of our men students were compelled to leave for other duties because of conscription, thus the number of students now stands at one hundred thirty-five. The majority of our students are still boys. This, however, might be changed next year as seems to be indicated by the incoming applications for the next school term.

The Mennonite communities in Manitoba and, to some extent in the other provinces, are at work now collect a fund for the building of a new and larger ilding. Whether we shall succeed in building this ar is, however, questionable. But we cherish the pe that we shall have the new building by Sep- mber 1945. Friends and supporters of Mennonite ucation who contribute financially to the realiza- on of this enterprise will thereby earn the sincere anks and appreciation of everybody connected with e work of Mennonite education in the province of anitoba. The sooner we build our new school, the eater will be our chances to protect our Mennonite uth against undesirable influences of those hools in which the Christian doctrines are discar- d and atheistic theories are advanced.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE, BLUFFTON, OHIO

War has struck with telling force at the colleges. uffton has suffered along with the rest. The total rollment for the year is about fifty per cent of at of three years ago. While our enrollment has ne down, our percentage of Mennonite students s increased.

Increasing support on the part of individuals and urch groups has made steady financial progress ssible. A balanced budget for the fifth consecu- ve year seems assured. In addition, a current fund ficit of several thousand dollars has been com- etely wiped out, and the bonded indebtedness has en further reduced. The college is in the best nancial condition in many years.

There are, however, many needs of a material na- re. The college is in the midst of a campaign to raise $50,000 in addition to the funds needed for current operating expenses to further improve the financial condition of the college, and to make needed repairs and replacements. For example, the main building completed in 1900, is to be repaired and remodeled, this being made possible through a special gift from A. C. Ramseyer.

The last year marked the death of the outstanding contributor to the college in recent years, Mr. C. H. Musselman, of Biglerville, Pennsylvania. He and his wife, over a fifteen year period, have given a total of $135,000 to the college. Included in these gifts were the Musselman Library and an endowment for its support.

Our staff has automatically been reduced. In one way this is fortunate, since a reduced student body would have made reductions necessary. However, it means that we must find a number of young men ready to take their places when the war ends. The future of the college depends largely on our ability to find individuals who will fit into the work of the church is this way, and who will be willing to make the work of Christian education their life's mission.

To be a member of the college staff continues to require real sacrifice. Salaries, already very low, have not been increased to an amount at all commensurate with the increase in living costs. Comparable sacrifices on the part of others will mean much to our educational institutions.

A new course has been worked out in cooperation with the Mennonite Hospital, Bloomington, Illinois, leading to a B. S. degree in nursing after specified work at the college and hospital has been completed. Plans have been made for granting the B. S. in other areas as well, in instances where that degree seems better suited to the student's needs than the A. B. requirements. An Institutional Study is in progress for the purpose of finding other areas where changes are necessary in our program and practices to meet post-war needs and to increase the service which the college can render to its constituency.

The purposes of the college are and must remain essentially the purposes of the church. It exists and must continue to exist that young people may prepare either for full time religious work or for employment in the so-called secular fields with the best possible opportunity to enter into their fields of service with reborn souls, deeply committed to the will of God, with the Spirit of Christ controlling their lives. Continued prayers are requested, that those who direct the course of the college may be led aright, that students may be led to a fuller realization of the power of Christ in their lives, and that the school may receive the support both spiritual and material which it requires for its continued usefulness to the church.

BETHEL COLLEGE, NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS

These recent years have been difficult ones. The Lord's promise, "As thy need so shall thy strength be," becomes increasingly precious in such times.

1. Students. The high mark in enrollment for Bethel College was reached three years ago in the school year 1939-40 when the total was 527 of whom 324 were Mennonites representing 76 congregations. By 1942-43 the total enrollment had dropped to 332 with 252 Mennonites from 59 congregations. For the past year the figures are even smaller. The greater decrease is, of course, with men students.

2. Faculty. The faculty and staff also has been greatly reduced. Some accepted other teaching or preaching positions, others were drafted, others joined the Red Cross, others are working for the Mennonite Central Committee doing research or relief work while still others are on leave of absenc for health reasons.

3. Finances. As our missions and other conferenc treasuries, so also Bethel College has not been forgotten by those who believe in the work of Christian education. The total contributions during th last three years amounted on an average to $83,955.6 per year and have come from an average of 2,57 different persons per year. The total net worth o the school according to the last auditor's report i $993,314.77 which is an increase of $246,638.84 ove what it was three years ago. For all of this we ar grateful. However, at this writing, our debt is stil not quite paid.

4. Other Developments. In recent years our ministerial students have greatly increased. Last year w had more than twenty, nine of whom were married Our Student Volunteers for Christian service numbered over forty. This phase of the work has alway been considered of greatest importance to our Boar and faculty. The ministerial training course ha been extended and with the help of the brethre H. A. Fast, C. E. Krehbiel, P. A. Penner, and D. C Wedel, the teaching personnel in this area has als been strengthened.

The work program which once was in great demand has been considerably reduced due to shortag of labor. It will only be with great difficulty tha it can be kept intact so as to again serve the young people upon their return in larger numbers afte the war.

The C.P.S. program is greatly affecting our college, not only in that many of our students an staff members are at present in C.P.S., but also i that we believe C.P.S. has a permanent and grea contribution to make to Mennonite higher educatio after the war in the direction of making it a mor practical, vital and Christ-centered experience.

Colleges must change. Bethel has a standing Research Committee at work and before long i should be ready to recommend changes that w believe will be of far reaching effect for both th ool and its constituency. The tendency is toward ser conference affiliation, more recognition of the e genius of our people, and the long range con- ution they can make to the Church and Christ's igdom by preserving, refining and building our tiny on our God-given heritage. With Jesus rist as the foundation, the school moves on into next half century.

Quiet Service of Consecration

The Young Christian Workers' Institute, planned for young men in C.P.S. camps and young people in colleges seriously considering full time direct Christian service and other young men and women recently appointed to a field of service, met on the Bethel College campus August 13-16.

At a joint meeting of General Conference boards in April, the matter was taken up and it was decided that the various boards would finance the transportation costs for C.P.S. boys and the Board of Education should be responsible for the program and other arrangements. About fifty young people attended the institute.

Thoughts on Money and Stewardship

Money is not only a standard of value and an instrument of power.

Money is the lever of all good enterprises. By itself, no amount of money can save a soul, or build a character, or evangelize a city, or make a college effective, and yet it is a factor without which none of these results is accomplished.

The United States Government frees from tax fifteen per cent of one's taxable income. The Canadian Government also allows tax exemption on donations given to charity and benevolence. This government practice of exempting donations from income tax points directly at the principle of tithing taught in the Bible.

Stewardship is that law by which one gives a part of his living self to others and yet is himself the richer for it. The highest use of property and profit is to honor the Lord with it. Anyone who has given himself to God wants to honor God with his substance. Therefore, as he purposes in his heart so let him give.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By J. Herbert Fretz, Lansdale, Pennsylvania

AUGUST 26—Even so, come, Lord Jesus. Rev. 22:20. Read Rev. 22. The second coming of Our Lord is a glorious thought! Even though this stupendous truth has suffered the inflations of man's wild schemes and deflations of his cold precautions, yet it has been, "the blessed hope," of the Redeemed through the ages. Today when ruthless warfare is being waged and the hearts of men fail them, there remains yet this great cry of invitation. Think of it Brethren, if the hope, itself is so glorious, what shall it be like on that great day, when Christ returns to judge the quick and the dead. Then can we say for the first time that realization is far better than expectation. O God, let us not forget that, "he that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself even as He is pure." Amen.

AUGUST 27—But the children of Belial said, How shall this man (Saul) save us? And they despised him and brought him no presents, But he held his peace. I Sam. 10:27. Read the Sunday School lesson. Saul was a farm boy who, "made good." We often know only the moody and quick-tempered Saul of middle age. But here we find the youthful, gracious Saul, just off the farm, unspoiled by the artificialities and pomp of the court. We admire his self-control. Oft times a man's quality is revealed by the way he reacts towards his critics, even though they are as worthless as the "children of Belial." Self-Control is not the control by self but the control of self by the Spirit of God.

AUGUST 28—And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony. Rev. 12:11. Read Phil. 3:7-14. There is a great truth here. A believer who testifies constantly becomes irrevocably committed to Christ's cause. There is a story told of a village braggart, who boasted at length about, "his," horse, even though he owned none, till one day quite unconsciously he walked into a store and bought a saddle for it. Naturally we are not to tell untruths, but the story does illustrate the power of repeated testimony. Of course, the great victory is already won through the blood of the Lamb. But is it possible to live the over-coming life apart from definite witness? O Father, teach us to overcome, by daily laying hold of that, for which also Christ Jesus has laid hold of us. Amen.

AUGUST 29—Verily, I say unto you, they have their reward. Matt. 6:5. Read Matt. 6:1-13. Jesus here was speaking about the hypocrites who love to display their false piety. Does Our Lord say they shall be criticized and shunned? No, rather they will receive their heart's desire—the plaudits of men. How often we forget this. No wonder we feel that God is not just when we see the evil world prosper. T world desires only the lust of the flesh, the lust the eyes and the pride of life, and they get it.] the Christian should desire far more than this wo can offer. When he fails to seek first the Kingd of God and His righteousness, then he is in gr danger of running competition with the world in mad scramble, and is always sure to lose.

AUGUST 30—Come ye blessed of my Father, inh the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation the world, for I was an hungered and ye gave meat, I was thirsty . . . etc. Matt. 25:34, 35. R Matt. 25:34-46. What a scene that Last Judgm will be! Horror and shock will fill the hearts many who thought they were Christians. How c tious we should be in our own claims, lest we too "Lord, Lord!" But O, the joy of those whose ro have been washed white in the blood of the Lan who shall hear those glorious words of their Lo How we should endeavor to feed, clothe, and k our less-fortunate brethren, in body and soul. D Lord, teach us to live confidently as children Grace, and humbly as sinners saved by Grace. Am AUGUST 31—And these shall go away into everl ing punishment: but the righteous into life eter Matt. 25:46. Read Rev. 21. Never did Our L speak in plainer language. It's hard to keep sh and goats together forever. The doctrine of everl ing punishment is indeed a "hard saying". So stumble on it and lose faith; others tactfully ign it. But if we believe the teachings of our Lord cannot escape it. "The exposition of future puni ment in God's Word is not to be regarded as a thr but as a merciful declaration. In the ocean of l to chart down the rocks and shoals is not cruel merciful." Lord, teach us what it means to h passed from death unto life. Amen.

Oklahoma Retreat Proves Great Blessing

The second Oklahoma Young People's Retreat now belongs to history, and only eternity will fully reveal to us what all it has meant to the many young people who attended. Below we shall endeavor to give our many readers an account of this retreat.

The date for this retreat was set for August 9 to 13 and the place Meno, on the grounds of the Oklahoma Bible Academy. About 3 p.m., on the first day, one car after another began to drive in front of the girl's dormitory, where the registration of all retreaters was to take place at 4 o'clock. Our first meeting was in the dining hall where our very efficient cooks, under the direction of Mrs. August Schmidt, served a good meal. At 7 p.m. we met on the lawn of the school grounds for the first vesper service when Brother Schmidt spoke on the subject of "The Why and How of Private Devotions." At 8 o'clock all retreaters and their leaders met for "The Ice-breaker." This was in charge of Rev. Henry Hege. Needless to say, we soon got acquainted, and at 8:30 we were all on our way to the church where Rev. Olin Krehbiel brought the first message.

The classes on the forenoons were well attended, and the messages by our teachers were very good. Brother Miller, as well as all the others, Rev. Sam Goering, Olin Krehbiel, and Henry Hege, in his own way brought very inspiring messages on the Epistle to the Philippians. He has a special way of impressing different truths upon the hearers. He uses simple, but practical chalk illustrations which help him to make the points clear. Brother Goering spoke on the subject of missions. His many illustrations from life and experiences on the field and on the journey made his messages doubly interesting. The class on "The Mennonite View Point" by Olin Krehbiel was especially practical. The boys and girls appreciated them as they often spoke about them when gathered on the sidewalks or porches. On three afternoons Brother Hege spoke to the boys on problems of teen-age boys. Those messages were also very practical and helpful.

Our records show that ninety-eight people were registered. There were represented eighteen churches, retreaters from three states, Oklahoma, Kansas, South Dakota, and Retreat leaders from four, Pennsylvania, Kansas, California, and Oklahoma. Three denominations: Mennonite, Methodist, and Mennonite Brethren. Eleven ministers were registered, of these seven were pastors of Oklahoma Churches.

The spirit of the retreat was very gratifying, the messages were inspirational, educational, and evangelistic. At the last services on Saturday some eight young people consecrated themselves for Christian work. Among these was a Methodist girl who had come to the Mennonite retreat for the second time. The high light of the retreat was a communion service held at the Mennonite Church Sunday morning at 6 o'clock. The members of the Retreat Committee officiated; Rudolf Schmidt, Lubin Jantzen and H. N. Harder.

Yours in His service,
—H. N. Harder, Sec.
Church Worker's Committee

Eastern District C.E. Union

The young people of the Eastern District have had the happy privilege of attending the seventeenth annual retreat. The theme being, "Drawing Near to God." We who have gone with open hearts and receptive minds surely were drawn nearer to God. Given to us were examples of relationship to God through the forgotten men of the Old Testament. We heard about the Chinese relations with Christian religion and God from which we can take many a lesson in faith and patience. In the course "Problems of Christian Life" we heard that if we feed our faith and starve our doubts it will take us a long way in solving our problems. Another help is a better relationship with God, such as thinking of God as our Father, a better prayer life, (not asking but listening), and patience to wait on divine guidance. Our faith and Christian activities will show what sort of relationship we have with God.

As we sat about the camp fire and heard the messages from God's Word, one could feel the presence of God draw nigh as we were surrounded by his majestic beauty. To me and many others, the hymn sings are one of the most enjoyable times at retreat. The meals were a most popular course, and no wonder—such good meals.

May we not just be nearer to God for retreat time, but may we live the whole year through nearer to God, then we will truly be safe in the hollow of his hand.—Mianna R. Geissinger, C.E. Union Corr.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Burrton, Kansas: A special feature of the Senior C. E. program of August 20 was a testimony hour.

—Eldon Unruh, ministerial student from Newport, Washington, brought the morning message to the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, on August 13.

—Lind, Washington: The young people's C. E. is having a series of discussions on the theme, "How Jesus Met Life's Questions."

—Burrton, Kansas: The C. E. is putting out a paper called "Burrton C. E. Echo." Its five mimeographed pages are chuck full of news.

—Miss Emma Ruth spoke to the Young People's Society of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, on the evening of August 20.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Mueller are the new sponsors of the Senior C. E. of the Bethel College Mennonite Church. Young people in the last three years of high school make up this C. E.

—Hoffnungsfeld C. E., Moundridge, Kansas: This C. E. meets every two weeks, with the exception of July and August when the church participates in union services. From thirty to forty are enrolled as members of this C. E. Occasionally roll is called. Members work hard to prepare themes and musical numbers. Sam Stucky is C. E. president.

—Hutchinson, Kansas: Since there are so few young people in the church there may not be any young people's C. E. this coming fall. At the present the C. E. unites in union programs with the C. E. groups of some other churches.

—A Sunday School class of twenty boys recently visited the Kauffman Museum, North Newton, Kansas, on a week-day. The boys and their teacher, Mr. George Duerksen, were from the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church. The group was also shown through other buildings on the Bethel campus.

—The Helping Hands missionary society, from the Hebron Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, expects to visit the Kauffman Museum on August 24. This society is composed of girls.

—About fifty young men attended the Christian Worker's Conference that was recently held on the Bethel College campus.

They Need Each Other

"The old people won't let us run it our way," "This is for young people."—"Oh, he's young and inexperienced." "We ought to have an older person for that." Too frequently there is conflict between young and old when there ought to be mutual assistance.

Youth is sometimes tempted not to honor and obey parents and older people. Picnics, dates, C. E. programs are planned without consulting those who are older. Youth looks upon them as incapable, unsympathetic, and out of touch with things as they ought to be. No thought is given to the fact that adults have gone through these same situations in life. Tongues remain tied and adults are not asked questions about important matters.

On the other hand, adults provoke youth to anger. They are impatient with them. They expect them to know how to do things when youth has never had an adequate opportunity to become proficient in those very things. They expect adult perfection without having provided for the conditions that make such perfection possible. They point to youth's inexperience and refuse to admit that there may be a native, latent ability which if developed would be equal to the skill of those now older and might surpass it. They are unwilling to give youth the responsibility and teaching that is needed for development.

Youth needs to learn from adults. It must not be too cliquish or self-sufficient to tap the experience of those older. Youth needs to continue some of the "Why's" that it was full of when age three and four. In this way it can stand to benefit from the experiences of those older. In this way it will honor and obey parents, and honor other older people. Older people must expect great things from youth. They need to give youth a chance to express itself in responsibility; they must ask it to play the piano and at the same time teach it the best technique. They must honor the latent abilities in youth. They must not look upon youth as usurpers but as co-workers. They must have deep patience when youth because of inexperience fails to measure up to the standards of those who have had the opportunity of many, many more experiences. They must remember that it is possible for an alert youth to be more experienced than an adult who never has had his eyes and ears wide open to the lessons of life. They must see in youth what it can and will be.

God made the world so that there would be young and old people at the same time. He did not intend that they should live in conflict. He expects mutual helpfulness of them.—rw.

YOUTH PRAYS FOR PEACE

"Lord, we are the Youth of every land today,
Pleading for peace;
We are the ones who will be sacrificed
Unless wars cease;
We are the ones elected, Lord, to pay
A price too high.
You gave us life, and it is not your will
That we should die.
Open the blind eyes of our leaders, Lord,
In every land;
Open their hearts and minds and make them wise
To understand
That war is sad, and horrible, and wrong,
And useless quite;
That we, the clean strong Youth of earth,
Have the good right
To life and love and happiness and peace;
We would not be
Killers of men—we want to walk the earth
Clean-handed, free
From war with all its horrors, lust, and greed,
Its dark despair.
Lord, may there never be another war—
This is our prayer."

—Grace Noll Crowell

"Art Thou the Christ?"

By Mrs. Orlando Goering

The question is recorded several times in the New Testament. It was asked by the high priest at the time of the trial. The Samaritan woman summoned her friends and inquired, "Is not this the Christ?" John the Baptist sent his disciples to ask Jesus, "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?"

These were vital questions. Only he who could ead them to God and to abundant life was worthy of the name "Christ". The Christ was to be God-With-Man; God treading the earth in human form; the hope of Israel; the hope of humanity.

"Art thou the Christ?" It was only natural that the high priest and the council should question Jesus thus. The Nazarene had been identified for them by the traitor's kiss. They had seized him. They desired to condemn him. They had many witnesses, but their witness did not agree. They were in need—in desperate need if their selfish, bigoted desires were to be acquiesced. They were in need of some charge against Jesus that under the pretense of this charge they might make a cloak of the law for the carrying out of their base purposes. And so they put this simple question to Jesus, not that they might know the truth, but that they might make a charge; hat they might scoff and ridicule.

We have the high priest and those of the council with us today. They are those who have closed their hearts and their minds to the Christ. They are those who point to the human limitations of Jesus and est that anyone should think him God. They are hose who pounce upon the imperfections of the Church and lay them to the charge of its founder. They are those who look upon this troubled world and point to its troubles as proof that he who professed to come for its salvation was an imposter. They are hose to whom Christ has become a stumbling-block in the perusal of the whims of Self, and so they attempt to throw him out, only to find that they have hrown themselves out.

It is not strange that the Samaritan woman, seeking confirmation of her own opinion, asked her friends, "Is not this the Christ?" He had told her things of her life which she thought no one knew. He had spoken as a prophet. He had called himself the Messiah.

We have the Samaritan woman with us today. She is those who have come to realize the baseness of their own selves and the excellency of Jesus, and noting the contrast, cannot help but feel his divinity. She is those who, lost in wonder at the power and knowledge of Christ, declare that he must be the Son of God, as did the Roman soldier at the cross. She is the world, coming to poignant realization of the emptiness of its own life, the fullness of a life with God; and realizing, marvels.

But it has always seemed strange to me that John the Baptist, who at the time of Christ's baptism had seemed so sure of the mission of Jesus, was troubled. But his teachings—well, we don't really know if they are practical for you."

"Art thou the Christ? Or look we to Mars?"

Have we forgotten that the wise man and the foolish man differed only in this: one heard the sayings of Jesus and did them; the other heard the sayings of Jesus and did them not? Dare we overlook the fact that in 2000 years the only man who ever fully understood and dared to carry out the teachings of Jesus has influenced the world more than all else? The church has accepted Jesus as the Christ for the individual soul: it has lacked faith to fully accept him as the Christ for those very realistic problems of national and international scope.

When will we cease to ask for wonders and signs? When will we see Christ and our salvation in the healing of the blind; the cleansing of the leper? When will we learn that God is at work in the commonplace and in the common man? Faith is belief that influences action. "Art thou the Christ?" How will we answer this vital question? Dare we believe it? Dare we live it? We cannot afford not to!

"Lyric Religion"

Hymn singing is vital to Protestant worship. Luther wrote hymns for his people, that God might speak irectly to them in His Word and that they might irectly answer Him through their hymns.

Congregational singing is showing signs of weakening today. We have acquired the habit of listening ather than singing. Sometimes the choir is asked to do the singing that the congregation should do.

H. Augustine Smith in his book, Lyric Religion, ays, "The hymn itself must be elevated to a high lace in worship through reverent and thoughtful nging at all times. It should be lifted off the floor here conventions, conferences, and social gatherings, Sunday night popular services, and evangelistic song-leader tricks have all but tossed it through their singing anything, anytime, anywhere, amidst confusion, jollification, the inauspicious entrance of late comers, and last minute errands, making it something of a sporting mania. . . "

Lyric Religion, by H. Augustine Smith is in our library. Anyone who would like to know some of our hymns more intimately, would do well to consult this book. It presents one hundred and fifty hymns as studies, interpretations, and so on.

Lest We Let Them Slip

"Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip." Hebrews 2:1.

Let a foundation slip out from under a house, and it will sag. Let the legs of a skater slip out from under him, and he will fall, frequently with very painful results. Let the legs of a mountain climber slip from under him, and he may fall to destruction in the valley below. We must have strong and solid support to uphold the weight of life.

Rightful thoughts—God given thoughts—enable us to stay on the heights of victorious, courageous living. In one form of insanity, the patients change from periods of high exhilaration and joy to periods of deep depression and despair. Normal persons are subject to something similar. Periods of joyful, courageous living are followed by moods of discouragement and insecurity. God would help us to stay on a high plane of living. His thoughts as revealed in the Bible are the means.

As we keep God's thoughts in mind and heart, we live abundantly. The body of our living rests upon these thoughts, and we stand upright on the heights. But there is a constant downward pull by Satan. Let God's thoughts slip away from under our living, and we plunge down into distress and despair. How important it is that we don't let our support slip out from under us. We have experienced the power in God's Word. If we only continue to hold on to it, we will be sustained and kept from falling into sin and defeated living. What a privilege it is to hold on to that which we have read and heard!—rw.

Will Continue Messages

"Continue the Daily Devotional Messages" is the mandate that came from over 70 per cent of the readers who wrote in to answer the question, "Shall we continue the messages?"

The following are some excerpts from the stack of answers that came in: Sister Frieda Kaufman wrote and said, "... I personally always read them carefully and appreciate them especially for the purpose of learning to know our ministers. The longer articles written by our ministers are valuable, but I often do not find time to read them. These short expositions have a way of revealing not only the truth of the Word, but also the man who writes them. I have often wished that someone would have time to find the gems among these contributions ... and assemble them in some form of study or devotional booklet for use in our homes." A retired pastor says, "... We have appreciated them very much and read them every morning ... I enjoy the messages from those I know and also from those I do not know. It is ... a fellowship ... by reading." A reader in South Dakota says, "We are very much in favor of the daily devotional messages and feel they should be kept up." A Minnesota reader: "I use them daily." A Kansas reader: "We use the Daily Devotional Messages every morning and prefer them above others because they are written with the Mennonite point of view." Walton, Kansas: "We use them for our morning family devotions." Henderson, Nebraska: "I read it, but only as other material, in order to know the writer of the part." Paso Robles, California: "We use them daily, after which we tear out the page and place them in a binder to be kept for further meditation." Hillsboro, Kansas: "The messages are good; only I felt sometimes they were too short. I think a little booklet is handier ..." This reader goes on to suggest that some devotional booklets bring material opposed to Mennonite teachings and that therefore our conference ought to put out its own devotional booklet. Cleveland, Kansas: "New Testament can't be beat for devotional exercises. Space could be used to better advantage by articles of educational character." A Texas reader says, "Why discontinue one of the finest opportunities to preach the Kingdom of God?" Freeman, South Dakota: "We like to have more Bible and use it almost exclusively. Have often wondered why space couldn't be used more practically. But can easily tolerate this page if others can and do use it." A Pennsylvania reader writes, "For the most part they are full of 'meat' and helpful. I believe we like to feel the contacts between those that prepare them just as if these men were to come and speak from our pulpit once in a while. The newcomers are helped by your short introductions and sooner or later the readers or many of them will meet these folks." Reedley, California: "I find it a fine basis for a daily concentrated study of the Bible ..." Elbing, Kansas: "We are using them in our devotions." Fort Cobb, Oklahoma: "We do not make daily use of the Daily Devotional Messages ... I often read them through." Goshen, Indiana: "I like the Daily Messages and read them." Beatrice, Nebraska; "We are in favor of discontinuing the Daily Devotiona Messages." Ontario, California: "I am in favor o continuing the messages."

We heartily thank all the readers who wrote in Your suggestions have been helpful. At present w are asking the contributors of messages to write fo two weeks instead of four. Thus we shall be abl to present another times as many writers as before If plans work out, native Christians from India wil contribute the messages for April, 1945. Any furthe suggestions in regard to the Daily Devotional Messages or any other section of the paper will be appreciated.—rw.

In Memoriam

In the death of Sister Frieda a life of love changed om earth to heaven. We mourn her departure but joice in her reward. Her life was great because was one of loving, Christlike service. Her work d love continue on earth. She requested "no owers," but she desired the welfare of the deaconess ork. We can honor her by praying for this work. Faithful deaconesses are carrying on the work that e began. Sister Lena Mae, Sister-in-Charge of the ethel Hospital, bears great responsibility, and so es Sister Sarah, Sister-in-Charge of the Deaconess ospital at Beatrice, Nebraska. In different hospi- ls faithful Sisters are living lives of sacrificial ser- ce. It was the desire of Sister Frieda that we re- ember that work in prayer.—rw.

M.C.C. NEWS NOTES

RELIEF

"England Notes"

The above is the title of a news letter initiated the Mennonite relief workers in England. The per will appear monthly and is similar to Rio La ata, the Puerto Rico news letter. Writing editori- y in the first issue, Glen Miller says, England tes came into being when it was felt that we need 'tie in' more closely with the larger work. It not intended to give a complete picture of our rk in England. We share with you some of our periences, hopes, and visions . . ."

Farming in Puerto Rico

The following account is taken from the July ue of Rio La Plata: "In May the prolonged dry ll was finally broken. Rains again came and istened the ground so that the old oxen could atch a plow through it . . . Theodore, our seventy- r-old, bare-footed, and bewhiskered friend, help- us. In spite of his age, he is as well built and d working as can be found among the people La Plata. Due to the close quarters and frequent ning required, I was needed to guide the team. s I did by walking in front of it, carrying a k and shouting back at the two long-horned faces ind me. My patience (and voice, too) were soon austed when the hungry oxen continually stop- to grab mouthfuls of weeds as they plodded ng . . . After plowing, a big job was to level garden down by hand with a big Puerto Rican and to remove the weeds and roots from the :."

he Church of the Brethern has been raising hei- for foreign relief to be shipped abroad as soon var conditions permit. This project came to the ntion of the public recently when a score of the ers were sent to Puerto Rico. TIME magazine, 24, carried a full-page article, stating that the thren Service Committee hopes to send a ship- it to Spain and France by fall.

Nurse and Cook Leave for England

arewell services for Mabel Cressman, R.N., hener, Ontario, and Vernon Toews, Altona, Mani- , were held August 7 at Akron Headquarters. Both workers are now alert at shipside, expecting to leave within the next few days. Sister Cressman, who will leave first, will serve as nurse at "Woodlands", the home for aged evacuees. Brother Toews will serve as cook for the evacuee boys at the convalescent home at Taxal Edge.

Relief Clothing Report

The Ephrata Clothing Depot reports that during the period March, April, and May of this year, 19,512 pounds of clothing for relief were received. This amount is considerably greater than amounts received during the same period in previous years. An increase of interest in this relief activity is encouraging, especially during the spring and summer months when shipments to the Depot seem to decrease.

Clothing Appreciated in England

The following statements are taken from an article written by John Coffman, who is in charge of distributing relief clothing at London:

"How is the clothing received?—With much gratitude from every quarter. I wish you could read the many letters which we receive from the mothers and even from the children. Some of the letters are very pathetic and touch one's affections deeply . . . A mother wrote saying that in her despair she began to ask, 'Is there really a God, and does He care?', when the clothing came for herself and her children, and it seemed like a direct answer from heaven . . . The matron of a hostel for homeless and friendless girls in a very dingy and dirty part of a large English city wrote about some quilts which we had supplied for their beds: 'I do wish there were some way we could get across to the very kind friends who made the quilts, what their brightness and freshness does to a bombed building in a very devastated area, where there are no gardens, trees or flowers at all, and where the only bright spot in the neighborhood is the Settlement's window-boxes, or flowers in the house, and rooms brightened by gay quilts or curtains. Do tell the Canadian and American friends that all the thought expressed in the beautiful designs; the labor and the money spent on lovely materials, is very much appreciated and enjoyed, and we are most grateful to them for their work and gifts.' "

C.P.S.

C.P.S. Men to Leave for Puerto Rico

The quota of C.P.S. men for the present unit at La Plata, as set by Selective Service, is twenty-five. Seven C.P.S. men to fill this quota will leave during the month of August, according to present plans. The names of the men, including the camp which they will leave, and the work assignment in Puerto Rico, are given below:

Royal Snyder, Akron Headquarters, Laundryman; Wyman Sundheimer, Howard, Rhode Island, Hospital Orderly; Victor Buller, Ypsilanti, Michigan, Educational Department; Clarence Unruh, Beltsville, Maryland, Laundryman; Harry Weirich, Mulberry, Florida, Cook; Roland Kaufman, Mulberry, Florida, Recreation Director; Hugh Hostetler, Mulberry, Florida, Laboratory Technician.

Men in M. C. C.-C. P. S. Camps According to State

A recent survey (80 percent complete) of men in Mennonite camps reveals the following breakdown as of March 15, 1944:

State	No. of Men
Kansas	348
Pennsylvania	280
Ohio	278
Indiana	219
Illinois	144
California	139
Iowa	134
Oklahoma	128
Nebraska	71
Oregon	70
Michigan	62
Minnesota	43
South Dakota	42

C.P.S. Canning Report for 1943

While the 1944 canning program for the C. P. S. camps is getting under way, a complete report on the amount of food processed in 1943 is being released. The food prepared totaled 215 tons, and was valued at $36,054.04. The breakdown of this amount is as follows:

Fruits and vegetables	202,549 quarts
Jams, butter, and spreads	3,243 quarts
Dried fruits and vegetables	14,143 pounds
Meats and fats	3,459 pounds

Farm Units to Open in Nebraska

The "Hagerstown" type of C.P.S. camp, in which a small unit of approximately thirty campers engage in Soil Conservation Service and at the same time live on and operate a farm, has proved to be quite successful. This type of setup provides an opportunity for men interested in farming to express their talents, and also to receive instruction in farm and community living.

Two farms in the vicinity of Lincoln, Nebraska, have recently been purchased and will be set up on the Hagerstown pattern. Plans are being made to conduct a farm and community school in connection with these units.

One of the farms was purchased by the Peace Problems Committee of the Mennonite (Old) group. This farm will be the first unit to be established and administered by the Peace Problems Committee.

C.O.'s in Canada

Some idea of the number of Canadian C.O.'s and the types of service they are placed in may be secured from the May, 1944, issue of the periodical, Canada at War:

"Up to March 31, 1944, deferments were given to 8,932 conscientious objectors, of whom 245 subsequently offered their services to the armed forces and 122 as non-combatants in the medical and dental corps. Of the others (8,565), 3,188 were placed in agriculture and 1,295 in other employment, many in hospitals."

The same periodical lists the number of men in the Armed Forces of the Dominion at 910,129. According to these figures, the number of Canadian C.O.'s is one per 107 inductees; the ratio for the United States is one per 260 inductees.

Breakdown of Discharges from M.C.C.-C.P.S.

From the beginning of the Mennonite C.P.S. program, May, 1941, until June, 1944, 759 men were discharged from Mennonite camps. The breakdown as to cause of discharge is given below:

Physical disability	335
Request for military service	219
Occupational deferment	82
Desertion	29
C.P.S. Reserve and over 38	34
Over 28 (Discharged in fall of 1941 and never recalled)	23
Dependency deferment	20
Death	6
Expired Prison parole	5
Ministerial	3
Returned to Prison	1
Previous army experience	1
Erroneous Induction	1

JOTTINGS

—Rev. A. E. Kreider ordained the Rev. and Mrs. Gerald Stucky as Elder and missionary respectively in the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, August 13. Rev. Stucky had already been ordained as missionary on May 30, 1943. Rev. Kreider also spoke at the evening service in the First Church.

—First Mennonite Church, Monroe, Washington: We have had a rather cool summer. Our small group is busy canning for C.P.S. Rev. Esau was in our midst on the evening of August 1. We are all greatly blessed. On August 6 we had an all-day outing at a park. We had Sunday School and service in the morning and a mission offering and short program after lunch. We also had an offering for the remodelling of our church and the construction of a basement under it. Everyone enjoyed the outing in spite of the cool weather, and I am sure received a great blessing.—Mary Stucky, Corr.

—Missionary H. J. Brown recently visited the churches in North Dakota.

—First Mennonite Church, Ransom, Kansas: "Last Sunday, August 6, the church had a reception for the new pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. John W. Boehr, in the form of a basket dinner. After the meal the Sunday School superintendent, Orville Klitzke, gave a speech of welcome, and the pastor responded. On this same day we were honored by the presence of Rev. Gerhard Friesen of Newton, who is traveling in the interest of the conference work. He gave an inspiring talk at an afternoon meeting called especially for that purpose at 2 o'clock. This church is also cooperating in the Sunday evening union services, conducted by the churches of the community."

—First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas: A special offering was held on August 20 to help defray the expenses of the institute for prospective ministers from C.P.S. camps. Conference Sunday was also appropriately observed. The prayer chorus, "Let the Beauty of Jesus Be Seen in Me" was used in the morning service. A Bethel College poster on the bulletin board reveals that this church was second highest in the Western District in per member gifts for Bethel College since August, 1943. A large, new pulpit Bible, donated by the Junior High School Boys S. S. Class and Mr. Aldo Heidebrecht, was dedicated on July 16.

—Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington: On Conference Sunday, members of the congregation gave reports on the activities of the General Conference for the past three years, and the pastor gave a short, appropriate message.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: On the evening of August 3 we gathered on the church awn to celebrate Rev. Regier's birthday. After a short program refreshments were served, after which everyone enjoyed a social hour. Rev. J. M. Regier has now served our church faithfully for ive years.—Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: "Quite a number from the Women's Missionary Society have volunteered to can a number of quarts of fruit or the C.P.S. camps."

—Dr. J. H. Langenwalter brought the morning mes-age to the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, on August 6. His subject was: "What Love Can Help Men Do," Mark 12:28-34.

—The present address of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Langenwalter is Box 96, North Newton, Kansas.

—A complete copy of Gerald Stucky's Scrapbook may e gotten by writing to Box 98, North Newton, Kansas, and enclosing $1.00.

—West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The pastor recently invited the church board and he leaders of all church organizations to a meeting or planning together the work and the program of he coming winter.

—Dr and Mrs. John R. Schmidt in Paraguay are the arents of a baby boy.

—Arlington Mennonite Church, Arlington, Kansas: Dr. A. J. Regier, Professor of Education at Bethel College, spoke to the adult Sunday School classes n the morning of August 13. On August 20 Prof. Willis Rich of Bethel College brought the morning message to the congregation. Brother George Kop-er is pastor of this church and Brother P. R. Lin-cheid Sunday School superintendent. The group is mall. There are two adult Sunday School classes, ne German and one English, besides the children's asses.

Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska: rother Alfred Regier, a member of this church, as ordained as a minister of the gospel on August .

Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, Cali-rnia: Rev. Gerald Stucky spoke on July 2. The verage attendance of Bible school one week was 6. Decisions for Christ were made in this Bible hool. The Women's Missionary Society is encour-ging the canning of fruit for C.P.S. Recently the ociety had its monthly meeting on Thursday morn-g at 10 o'clock. In place of the customary lunch, ey served pot luck instead, and each lady was ked to bring a casserole dish and a salad. Dessert as furnished by the committee. "Thought for the eek," as given in the bulletin of July 30, "We are ved by faith and not by works, but we are saved the kind of faith that works"—Torrey. Herbert roeker has been killed in action in France. The urch council has voted to pay the registration fee any Mennonite retreat that the men in service ght find it possible to attend.

An average Sunday attendance of forty to fifty! So reports Rev. Roland Goering, pastor of the Mennonite group which worships in McPherson, Kansas.

—Burrton Mennonite Church, Burrton, Kansas: Rev. Paul Kuhlman brought the message on August 13 and also spoke in the interest of G. B. I. Rev. and Mrs. Arnold A. Epp are spending a vacation of two weeks in Nebraska visiting their parents. Rev. H. T. Neufeld of Enid, Oklahoma, and Rev. Reynold Weinbrenner will serve the pulpit during their absence. Four young people attended the retreat at Camp Wood.—Evelyn Regier —Zoar Mennonite Church, Goltry, Oklahoma: August 6, was a blessed day. We had farewell services for Missionaries Marvin and Mrs. Eck, who plan to sail for Africa, the Lord willing, the latter part of this month. Our church, of which Brother Eck is a member, has undertaken to support him. This amounts to $84.00 a month. Another church is assisting in her support. During the farewell services an offering was taken which amounted to $172.00. This was given to Brother and Sister Eck to complete their outfits.

—First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana: On Sunday evening, August 13, Clarence Jones, Director of Radio Station HCJB, Quito, Educador, S.A., "The Voice of the Andes," and his family were guests of the C. E. societies of the church. Mr. Jones gave an excellent address on "How to Know the Will of God," which was followed by a recital of his own leading in the matter of opening up and conducting his ministry by radio, known as "World Radio Missionary Fellowship." His wife and two daughters were also present and sang, accompanied by Mr. Jones on his trombone. This service proved a rich spiritual feast to all present.—Corr.

PLAN HOME FOR THE AGED

The Mennonite churches of Freeman, Marion, Bridgewater, and Dolton, South Dakota, and of the surrounding communities are considering a home for the aged. To facilitate the project, tentative by-laws for a Salem Mennonite Home for the Aged, Freeman, South Dakota, have been printed and distributed. " . . . not less than $10,000 will be needed. The present plans are to purchase a suitable house and then expand as the demands arise. It is to be understood, however, that no plans will materialize unless sufficient money is collected to pay for the entire project . . . Each church is to canvass its own constituency. Local pastors and committees will have charge . . . Membership and voting right is based upon amount of contributions of $25.00 or more. Each $50.00 contributed will entitle to one vote with one additional vote for each additional $50.00 up to $500.00 for the total amount. $25.00 entitle to one-half vote. Smaller donations will be gladly accepted. It is hoped that many will become members of the corporation with full voting rights. Pledges made are payable by September 1, 1944. After sufficient money has accumulated, a Board of Directors shall be elected by members of the corporation. They shall have authority to purchase the "home" and proceed with other necessary matters. Should the plan fail to materialize because of insufficient funds, all sums paid will be refunded to the donors. Since this is to be a non-profit institution, it has been further agreed that a special fund shall be created whereby needy persons may be aided."

Ordination of Alfred Regier

The Home Mission Board and Calvary Mennonite Church, Mechanics Grove, Pa. have agreed to jointly call Brother Alfred Regier to serve as leader of the church. After prayful consideration the call was accepted. On Sunday, July 30, Brother Regier preached at Calvary Church. On August 3, he was graduated from Moody Bible Institute from the pastor's course. Mrs. Regier graduated on the same day from the Bible Course.

The ordination to the gospel ministry took place Sunday, August 20, in the home church, Bethesda, Henderson, Nebraska. Rev. A. W. Friesen, Elder of the Church, had charge of the service.

Let us all join together to seek the Lord's blessing on this ordination and that the Great Shepherd of all souls might guide as the young couple take up their new field of labor.

Faithfully in Christ,
A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.
Board of Home Mission

Several years ago Sister Hillegonda van der Smissen presented to her grand-nephews, Paul and Carl Andreas, Beatrice, Nebraska, a silver spoon and an etching of their five times great-grandfather, Johann Decknatel, the noted Mennonite minister who was born in Norden, East Friesland, in 1698. The initials "J. D." are carved on the handmade spoon and the picture shows him wearing a wig and a Prince Albert coat. Although of poor parentage, Decknatel secured a good education, became well to do in the silk business, and founded a theological seminary in Amsterdam. The story is told that the brethern in Switzerland learned that Decknatel was wearing a "seidenen Rock" (silk coat) and consequently sent a delegation to Holland to warn him against pride. Decknatel was washing when they arrived, and, after quickly wiping his hands on his silk coat, extended to them a most hearty welcome. After several days the delegates went back home again without telling Decknatel what they came for.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

East Swamp—Sunday afternoon, August 6, the congregation conducted a service at the Home for the Aged at Frederick, Pa., and then according to a custom for many years served the evening meal. A total of 140 partook of the meal, including the guests of the home. Dorothy Landis is looking forward to entering her second year at Grace Bible Institute at Omaha, Nebraska, and Marie Krigor will accompany her to enroll as a first year student.

Zion, Souderton—Esther and Stanley Bohn were visitors in the services several weeks ago. They also attended Retreat at Men-O-Lan. During the month of August, the pulpit is being supplied by students from Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa.

Fairfield—Ruth Burkhard, Lois Musselman and Orie Baer attended the Senior Retreat at Men-O-Lan. The pastor, the Rev. George S. Stoneback, was one of the leaders at the High School Retreat. The Church recently organized "The Friendly Society of the Fairfield Mennonite Church." The objective of this new organization is to share in a material way in the joys and sorrows, through an organized channel, of the members and close friends of the congregation. A person can become a member of the organization by paying $4.00 and then agree to pay the sum of $1.50 upon the receipt of notice of the death of a member of the congregation, $1.00 upon receipt of notice of a marriage in the congregation, and 40 cents upon notice of a birth in any family in the congregation. Then the society agrees to pay the equivalent of $1.50 for each member of the society to any family in the congregation visited by death, the equivalent of $1.00 for each member of the society to each newly married couple, either member of which belongs to the congregation, the equivalent of 40 cents for each member of the society when a child is born into any family represented by membership in the congregation and also the purchasing of modest floral offerings to the sick, bereaved, etc. The executive secretary will receive voluntary gifts to keep the flower fund supplied. If such gifts do not provide enough to replace the $1.10 per month set aside for that purpose, an assessment for the fund will be made of each member before the fund is entirely empty.

Grace, Lansdale—One of the young people in the armed forces is tithing and sent to the church three money orders since the beginning of the year amounting to $130.00. This is a wonderful spirit. Mr. Herbert Fretz occupied the pulpit while the pastor was in Canada and at Men-O-Lan. During August, while the pastor is in Oklahoma, the following were engaged to supply the pulpit: Rev. Reed F. Landis, August 6; Rev. G. M. Robb, August 13, and Rev. John Unruh, August 20.—Conf. Corr.

Hope to Leave for South America Next Week

Our five missionaries to South America hope to leave the United States the beginning of September. According to present (August 26) plans Rev. and Mrs. Gerald Stucky and baby, Miss Janet Soldner R.N., Miss Mary Becker, and Rev. LaVerne Rutschman will eave by plane for South America, possibly the first full week in September. As this is written Miss Mary Becker already has her passport, and Rev. Gerald Stucky is in Washington with good hopes of getting he other passports in time for leaving the beginning of September. The new workers had originally planned to leave August 25. The group will not begin active mission work in South America right away. They will engage in language study for a year or more and will enter school for that purpose. The American Mission to Lepers will help finance the mission work. The work will center around untainted children from a large leper colony.

Herewith we present a report of ordination services as recently held for Miss Soldner and Rev. and Mrs. Stucky at the First Mennonite Church, Berne.

ORDINATION SERVICES AT BERNE, INDIANA

On Sunday morning, July 23, Miss Janet Soldner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Soldner of Berne, Indiana was ordained as missionary to South America. Miss Soldner is a graduate nurse, having been trained at the Bethel Deaconess Hospital, Newton, Kansas. She will accompany the Gerald Stucky's, Miss Mary Becker, and Mr. Rutschman to the new field at Bogota, Colombia, South America. Rev. D. J. Unruh, member of the Foreign Mission Board, performed the rite of ordination and preached the ordination sermon.

Taking part in the service also were Rev. J. P. Suderman, temporary pastor of the church, Dr. C. H. Suckau, former pastor, and Gerald Stucky. Two musical numbers by the Men's Chorus were rendered, "Send out Thy Light" and "Hast Du Jesu Ruf Vernommen?" Miss Soldner gave an excellent response, expressing a deep consecration to her Lord and to the work unto which she has been called.

On Sunday morning, August 13, Gerald Stucky was ordained as Elder, having previously been ordained as missionary. Rev. A. E. Kreider of Goshen, Indiana, and member of the Foreign Mission Board, officiated and preached the ordination sermon. Mrs. Stucky was ordained as missionary, and their infant daughter was dedicated at this same service, all of which was very impressive. Mr. and Mrs. Stucky both responded beautifully with brief remarks after the ordination. The Men's Chorus also sang at this service.—Correspondent

Rev. J. J. Esau Returned Home

After spending almost eight weeks in Alberta and British Columbia, Canada, visiting the many General Conference Churches and assisting in the Young People's Retreat at Rosthern, Saskatchewan, Rev. Esau returned to Bluffton. Ohio, August 8. In this time he visited thirty churches and groups of worshippers.

He reports further that there were a good number of decisions for Christ, and others consecrated themselves to the Lord for more wholehearted service to Him. For all these blessings we praise the Lord.

THE CHURCH AND EVANGELISM

Mennonite ministers often wonder how they might lead their congregations in fruitful evangelistic efforts. Some may already be making plans for next fall. During the Bethel College Bible Week, Dr. Henry of Wichita, Kansas, outlined a method of parish evangelism which might well be used in Mennonite communities. We submit his plan to our pastors for study and consideration. The plan calls for the help of the laity, and that is a strong point in its favor.

The pastor with the help of the church should keep what has been called a "Responsibility Roll," that is, a list of all those people in the community who should be reached for Christ. Every person who is not committed to Christ should be placed on this list. Unless a real community survey is made the pastor may not know by 50 per cent how many really are non-professing people, Dr. Henry thinks.

This "Responsibility Roll" should be divided into three lists:

1. In one list put the names of those people who are favorable to Christianity and approachable, those who are good prospects to be won to the Lord.

2. In a second list put the names of those people who need to be cultivated through friendship for an appeal to accept the Lord.

3. In a third list place the names of those folk who are cool and remote, those who at the time seem quite unapproachable.

When these lists have been made let the pastor enlist the help of lay people of the church to assist in winning these non-professing people to the Lord. The church members who are willing to assist should be divided into two groups.

1. In one group place those men and women who are willing to serve as "visitors." Their task will be to cultivate the friendship and confidence of those people who need to be won for the Lord by visiting them, perhaps, once a month.

2. In the second group place those workers who are willing to go with the pastor to call on the approachable people and ask them for a decision to accept the Lord Jesus Christ. This group need not be large. It must be carefully chosen and well prepared through prayer and consecration.

In visiting the people who are to be won it will be of advantage to assume that they are interested in Christ and believe in the fundamentals of the faith. It will be well to assume that they want to be Christians and are interested in learning how to become saved. This attitude will keep both parties more sympathetic towards each other.

This type of parish evangelism might well be adopted to supplement other types of evangelistic efforts of the church. It will help to meet the need which church revival meetings are no longer able to meet. People, especially in cities, do not come to revival meetings even though they are specially invited. They do not oppose such meetings, they simply ignore them. The gospel message must be carried to them since they will not come to church.

The church should assume the responsibility of bringing the gospel appeal to every member of the community. The church should aim at what the Apostle Paul set as his aim, namely, to proclaim Christ "admonishing every man and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ, whereunto I labor also, striving according to his working, which worketh in me mightily." The pastor will need to take the responsibility of directing his people in such soul-winning efforts. He need not expect his church people to do what he himself does not do, for very few church members go ahead of the pastor. The Master's command, "Go ye and make disciples" still stands.

Non-Resident Members and Interest

"They no longer show any interest in our church." One frequently hears such a complaint about non-resident members, of which most of our churches have many on the roll. Many of these non-resident members show little or no interest. However, one might well ask, "Does the church show any interest n them?" The church can hardly expect much interest from these members without first showing interest n them. The very nature of the church makes this rue.

A church can show interest in its non-resident members by regular personal letters, by sending them church news letters and (or) the weekly bulletin, and the church year book, and by sending to each non-resident family one of our conference papers, either the Bundesbote or The Mennonite. The last-named step helps to keep non-resident members inormed about the activities of the conference to which hey belong and which they should support in prayer and giving. It also suggests that the home church s sufficiently interested in them to spend $1.25 a year to provide them with a Christian magazine that brings news, inspiration, and instruction.

Providing one of our conference papers for non-esident members or families is significant piece of ome mission work that home churches can do. To win back those who are slipping away may not be as ppealing as winning a new convert, but who can say hat it is not important. The 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan is a practical way of providing every amily in the church with a church paper, non-resident amilies included. What interest will your church how in non-resident members in 1945?

Just this week a card came to us from Kentucky. The message on it read, "We wish to thank you or whoever is making it possible for you to send us a copy f The Mennonite every week. We do greatly apreciate it and look forward to its arrival. May our emonstration be one that ever stands on the Rock Christ Jesus." Judging from the name of the signer nd the place from where it came, it seems that the riter may be a non-resident member of some church hat has the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan and hereby provides a paper for its non-resident members. might be well for every church with the 100 Per ent Plan to send its non-resident members a letter, xplaining that the church is providing them with a onference paper. Non-resident members particurly need the weekly contact of a church paper.—rw.

WE WELCOME MORE SUCH USE

Conference boards and committees seem to be aking more and more use of this paper for the proulgation of their work. The Foreign Mission Board has long provided weekly material and two mission numbers a year, the latter in conjunction with the Home Mission Board. The latter board also provides material from time to time for the weekly issues. The last issue you received was utilized by the Board of Education for a "Christian Education Number." The recent article by J. Herbert Fretz on "Assisting Young Ministers" was written for the Placement Committee, which is running a series of such articles. The Young People's Union is interested in more space. Such utilization of the paper promotes our conference work. We welcome such use. May all the boards and committees make greater use of this paper, submitting well-written, interesting, and instructive articles weekly and periodically.—rw.

SCHOOL DAYS

School days are here again. Soon children and young people will again attend college, high school and grade school. There they will spend a large part of their waking time. Their lives will be packed with experiences. What kind will they be?

The experience of Mennonite students in our own colleges will, to a large extent, be a reflection of their former experiences in high school, church, community and home. This mixture of former experiences will very largely make up the soup of behavior in the bowl of college life. There will be some distasteful ingredients in that soup, and there will also be some very good taste in it. The professors will stir and season and boil, but the ingredients that went into the soup will give it its characteristic flavor.

Mennonite students in public high schools composed of mostly non-Mennonite students will have to be non-conformists in many instances if they will want to be true to the faith of their fathers. The deeply spiritual students of all Christian faiths will hardly be the ones to give the tone to high school life. The majority will undoubtedly rule. The clouds of militarism will hang low and heavy in classroom and assembly. Some Mennonite parents will safeguard their children by sending them to Mennonite Academies.

Grade school children too will experience schooling in a world at war. The things that will be written upon their impressionable minds should concern any parent. How fortunate the community that has for its teacher a staunch Christian educated in our Mennonite schools.

Paul admonished the Ephesian fathers to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Should any child or youth have to spend a lot of time in a school where there is little or no nurture and admonition of the Lord? —rw.

Review China Mission Work

Fifteen former China missionaries and the executive members of the Foreign Mission Board met at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Sam Goering on the evening of August 17 and the following day. They prayed for the work in China and discussed its present status and its future posibilities.

Work Continues

Although greatly handicapped by Japanese occupation our mission work in China continues. All of the General Conference field lies in occupied territory. Most of the mission churches and buildings are used by the Japanese. A Chinese Christian says that the Japanese have "gone to the sixes and sevens" with these buildings. This expression of sixes and sevens means "topsy-turvy" in our language, states Missionary Sam Goering, who had received a letter from a Chinese Christian worker. In spite of all of this. faithful Christian leaders keep on with the work. Invited to help in the relief program being set up, one of them asked what would happen to his field of labor if he would leave it.

Province Is Famine-stricken

Honan Province, in which our mission field lies, is stricken with famine. Drought and flood have done great damage. Students, laborers, teachers, and Christian leaders from our field have left this province and have gone to west China. The productive province in which Chungking is located has had a harvest large enough for two years supply. This rich province did not care to have the government come in with its heavy taxes and all, relates Mr. Goering. However, the abundant food of this province cannot be gotten to Honan a thousand miles away because of a lack of railroads and trucks and roads. So those of our 2,000 Christians that remain in Honan Province face a serious situation.

Dr. S. F. Pannabecker to China

The threads of this mission work will be gathered together by Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, China Relief Director for the M.C.C. Dr. Pannabecker was to sail by ship for India as soon as passage was available after August 25. From there he is to fly by plane into China. Dr. Pannabecker first went to China as missionary in 1923. So he is well-acquainted with the field.

It is hoped that during the course of his service Dr. Pannabecker (1) may find out how many of our Chinese Christians now are in West China, (2) may help many to go back to Honan when conditions permit, (3) may investigate the possibility of furnishing relief to those still in Honan, and (4) may lay the foundation for continued work in China by our missionaries.

Members of the executive Committee in charge of the meeting were: Dr. P. P. Wedel and Dr. P. H. Richert. Former China missionaries present were: Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Boehr, Pandora, Ohio; Dr. and Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker, Bluffton, Ohio; Miss Aganetha Fast and Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf; Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. G. Kaufman, and Rev. and Mrs. S. J. Goering, all of North Newton; Rev. and Mrs. August Ewert, Mountain Lake, Minn., and Mrs. W. C. Voth, Newton. Rev. W. C. Voth could not be present because of a visit to the Hill City, South Dakota, CPS camp. He had gone there after serving as one of the instructors at the Young People's retreat in California.

From Marie Fast in Egypt

Under the date of August 3, 1944, a letter has been received from Marie Fast who is now in Egypt. The letter contains the following news:

"We are out at an UNRRA training camp not far from Maadi . . . supposedly to get rested from the trip, get acclimated, and used to food, etc. Tomorrow, I am scheduled to go to El Shatt at 6:00 p. m. to help relieve a very acute situation, I am told.

"Saturday, Delvin Kirchhofer was in the city on business and by chance heard that one of the Mennonites had arrived, so he came out to camp for lunch . . . . Our trip across was very pleasant, if not too comfortable and rapid. In only a few hours over one week, after we left Washington, we arrived at Headquarters here."

India Missionaries Enjoy Food and Fellowship

It was the seventeenth day of August. The slanting rays of the sun were falling through the leaves of the trees of the park of Newton, Kansas. The evening before a rain, accompanied by heavy lightning and thunder, had come down. Now the heat was broken, and nature and men rejoiced. It was a good evening for fellowship and supper in God's great out-of-doors.

The India missionaries had planned for a get-together for this evening at the park. At a somewhat earlier hour the General Conference group gathered. There were the veteran missionaries, P. A. Penners and P. J. Wienses, both families now living in Newton; Missionary W. F. Unruhs, now serving the West Zion Church at Moundridge, Kansas; Dr.'s Harvey and Ella Bauman with four of their children, come from the East; Miss Eva Pauls lately come home, Missionary Paul Wengers, and Augusta Schmidt about to leave for India again; also Harold and Arthur Thiessen and their sister Eleanor, the two boys both working in CPS on the hookworm project in Florida. A few friends had the privilege of being with the group, and Rev. P P. Wedel and Rev. P. H. Richert dropped in for a few minutes. There were glad greetings, friendly conversation, the feel of India through songs in Hindu, and bits of talk in the native tongue of the land, and the joy of being together

For supper there came the Old Mennonite missionaries Weavers, Mrs. Brenneman, and Mrs. Herschberger, who once taught in the school at Darjeeling, India, also Mrs. M. C. Lehman, who is Mrs. Weaver's mother and who had spoken to the women at the college on our relief work in the afternoon. Supper —such a supper—rice with curry and dall, lots of it. And it took lots to satisfy the appetites of these people with the beloved food of their adopted country. Some of the younger ones used the approved, fashionable way of eating the food native style. The platters were all emptied. Some had refills. And then watermelon and doughnuts for dessert. The meal had added to the feeling of "India, dear India, we will love thee all our days."

Another hour was spent together. Talk naturally drifted to India and the work there. Other personal interests too were shared. Then the closing hymn and prayer. It was time to leave. But someone somewhere started to sing, "Let the beauty of Jesus. be seen in me." A hush fell over the group as their hearts and minds united in this song which they had been using in India at Conference time and which now gave expression to their heart's desire. It was a beautiful close to "the end of a perfect day."

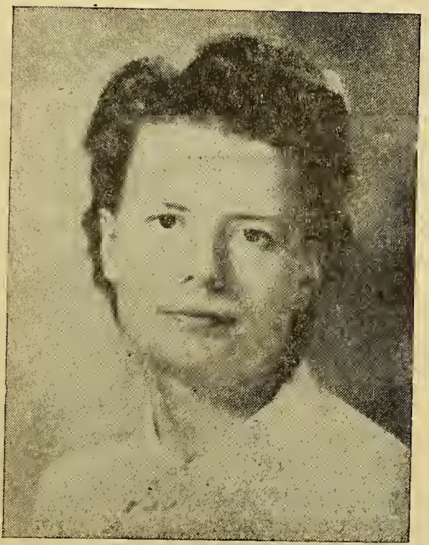
"Lift Up Your Eyes, And Look"

By Mary Becker

"Do you see that, O son of man?" (Ezekiel 8:17, Moffatt) This or its equivalent is the question Jehoah asks of Ezekiel four times in chapter 8. Ezekiel had a vision; the Lord showed him at four different places in the temple of God the reat abominations and sins committed there by God's people, asking Ezekiel each time, "Do you ee this?"

Ezekiel might have shrugged his houlders and said, "What concern is that of mine? I'm not doing those things. I'm living a ean life." And he might even perhaps have straightened up with elf-satisfaction to say, "My life a testimony for Thee; what ore can I do." But it would eem as if Jehovah wants Ezekiel see and feel his responsibility r these conditions.

And so the question comes to today: "Do you see?" The ord as it were, is taking us, as e did Ezekiel, to the gate of the ord's house, yes, even into the ner court, telling us to lift up ur eyes and see what is being done in some of r churches and by some of our so-called Christians the name of religion. And we might add that He ould also like to point out some of the things that e being left undone. The Church—and our Mennite church is not excluded—needs a new outpouring the Spirit of God; and let us pray that He will nd it, beginning with us. And after showing us e need in the church, the Lord says to us, "Do you e this, O son of man?"



Miss Mary Becker

And He takes us into our communities, among the ople of our neighborhood, and shows us how many ere are who are still living without Christ, and no e seems to care. They live in the midst of churches, the midst of Christians, but no one takes enough interest to invite them. The children are running around on the streets on Sunday morning, growing up without any religious instruction; and the Lord says, "Do you see this?"

He then takes us into the large cities of "Christian" America, where the poor and unfortunates are crowded together in the slum districts in rickety, dark tenement houses, where there is nothing to look forward to or to brighten the pitiful existence, where children grow up without any chance whatsoever, while only a few blocks away the wealthy live in luxury and ease, lavishing their wealth upon trifles. And again the Lord asks us, "Do you see this?"

Next we go with Him among the migrants of our country to see the thousands who travel with the crops and thus live a nomadic life, having no place that they might call their own. We know what the effect would be upon the people and especially upon the children. The need for mission work here is being recognized more and more, and some day perhaps our Conference will consider this as one of its mission fields. It is encouraging to note that the Women's Missionary Association of the General Conference in cooperation with two other associations has seen the need of this field and is taking steps to study the possibilities. They have placed a temporary worker during the summer and perhaps will place a permanent worker this fall. If this work is begun, it will also require our whole-hearted financial and prayerful support. Again the Lord asks, "Do you see?"

We go with Him in our imagination to the pagan countries of the world, where by far the largest percentage of the people bow down to idols made by their own hands. We who have had the blessing of a Christian home, where from our earliest days our Christian parents have pointed us to the Christ as our Savior and have taught us the way of salvation, encouraging us to yield our lives to Him, cannot even begin to imagine what it must be to live in heathen darkness. And because of our greater privileges and blessings ours is also the greater responsibility, and so the Lord would point out to us the great need of these people—of India, China, Africa, the islands of the seas, South America, our American Indians. Their souls are longing for peace, but they do not know where to find it. He shows us the millions of Mohammedans, traveling in endless procession to Mecca to find peace, but who return unsatisfied; the millions of India, who make long pilgrimages to Benares to bathe in the Ganges River, believing that their sins can be washed away. But they return, still bearing the load of their sins. And again the Lord asks us who know the One who said, "I am the Way," the question: "Do you see?" And He might add to that the words He spake when His conversation with the Samaritan woman had brought such rich results: "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, that they are white already unto harvest." (John 4:35b).

Do you see? If you do, there are two courses that you can take: (1) You can close your eyes to what you see and try to shut out the sight, disregard the need, and do nothing about it. Or can you? Many do just this. Or, (2) you can find your place, the place which you can fill in taking care of this need. You, as a true child of God, must take this latter course. The Lord asks each one, "What will you do?" Together with Him decide what you can do. Can you go out to one or the other of the fields He has pointed out? If so, tell Him, "Here am I; send me."

But if not, perhaps the Lord has entrusted some of His wealth to you to be given back to Him for these needy causes. Most of us can give, some more, others less. But even if you can give very little, you can pray. And let us not minimize that, for it is an enormous power that the Lord has given us. The Lord needs those who can go; He needs those who are willing to give; but neither of these can avail anything without the effectual, fervent prayer of His people. The faithful prayer warriors have a very vital part in doing His work upon earth.

The question comes, "Do you see?" and the challenge follows, "What will you do about it?"

Once during the time of Elisha when the army of Syria was besieging the city of Samaria, there was great famine in the city. The famine was so great that mothers even sacrificed their children for food (II Kings 6 and 7). At the gate of the city sat four lepers, who because of death staring in their faces, reasoned thus: If we go into the city, we'll die of the famine. If we stay here, we'll also die. If we go to the Syrian army, they may kill us, but they might save us alive. So they went toward the Syrian camp; and when they got there, they found that it was deserted. The Lord had caused the army to hear the noise of a mighty army and chariots, so that in fear they had fled, leaving all of their provisions. The lepers entered the first tent "and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver and gold, and raiment, and went and hid it; and they came back and entered into another tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it" (II Kings 7:8).

All of a sudden they came to an abrupt halt. The thought had come to them: "We do not well; this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace . . . Now, therefore, come, let us go and tell the king's household."

And so today the many peoples of this world are starving spiritually; they are longing for salvation and peace. We have found the only source of supply for this starving world. We, too, must therefore call a halt in our self-satisfied, smug life and like the lepers tell ourselves, "We do not well; this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace . . Come, let us go and tell . . ."

Miss Elsa E. Grantland Recovering

For some months Miss Elsa E. Grantland, Paint Rock, North Carolina, has felt the need of some special medical care. Through friends arrangements were made that she go to the Lankanau Hospital in Philadelphia (an institution under the direction of the Lutheran Church) for a thorough examination. The specialist found things that caused the trouble, and an operation of major proportions was performed. Rev. John J. Plenert, member of the Home Mission Board, visited her several times, and on July 18 the Secretary made a trip to the city to visit her.

At this time she has recovered sufficiently to enjoy a week of quiet and rest at the shore with her friends. Recently she wrote to the Secretary: "I never knew until I came home how near I was to being transferred above, but He let me return for further use to Him, for which I praise Him."

Miss Grantland is convinced that prayer was the great factor in her recovery. She hopes to return to her work at Paint Rock after September 5.

CONFERENCE SUNDAY AT THE FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH, NEWTON, KANSAS

Today was "Conference Sunday," and what a day of blessing it was for our church!

Upon entering the church a bulletin was handed me by the usher, glancing at it, the heading "Conference Sunday" fell into my eyes, and raised a feeling of expectation that was not disappointed. The hearty congregational singing of the Conference song used at Upland, "O Have You Not Heard of That Beautiful Stream," brought back memories of those blessed days.

The sermon by the pastor and Elder of the church, Rev. J. E. Entz, gave a real conference atmosphere o the day. As a basis for a heart-searching sermon on faithfulness he used the parable of the talents as found in Matt. 24. He reviewed for us briefly the history of our General Conference, bringing to our attention that eighty-four years have passed since a small group of godly men who were deeply convinced that God had revealed and entrusted to the Mennonite Church a very precious treasure worthy o be preserved: privileges and responsibilities, talents—for the use of which the Lord will some day all for an account.

The priniciple incentive for that first conference was a union of the then small but promising scattered churches, and to promote the cause of missions. On the program of that first conference were our of the most important phases of work afterwards undertaken by the General Conference. Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Publication and Education. Using the reports as given in The Mennonite by the various secretaries, he showed how ie talents had been used.

Great is the work entrusted to our conference and is our duty unitedly and devotely to rise to the task that God has committed to us. He pled that we might be faithful stewards doing all we can to elp faithfully, using every opportunity that the ord presents to us.

In the Kingdom of God everything depends upon aithfulness.

A second congregational song used much at the onference in Souderton, Pa., "O Power of Love" alled to mind the busy days of conference there. he morning service was closed by the congregation nging the General Conference song used at Saskatoon—"The Work is Thine, O Christ, Our Lord."

Just the singing of these songs would have brought blessing to my heart.

But that was not all of Conference Sunday. In ie afternoon four young men (one of whom is a member of our church), representing a very import- nt work of our conference , the Civilian Public Service, rendered a splendid program of song. This quartet was from the CPS unit at Lincoln, Nebraska, nd although the hour for the program was early very fine audience greeted the young men. Their testimony in song and word thrilled our hearts. A deep feeling of gratitude to our Heavenly Father, our national government and our General Conference for the opportunity and support of the Civilian Public Service, came over us.

Still there was more. The program committees of both Christian Endeavor Societies had planned a joint meeting. They had also invited the young people of the Bethel College Church to observe Conference Sunday at C. E. The church was full. Three workers of the Conference were asked to speak. Miss Emma Ruth, young people' director of the Pacific Conference, challenged the young people to magnify Christ in life and death. She warned against limiting God in our giving and in our loving, pleading for a full surrender of all young people to Christ.

Esko Loewen brought before us the picture of the Mennonite Central Committee in its origin, composition, locality, in its work at present, and its plans for the future. His talk was a vivid picture of vital work done in the administration of CPS, Relief, and Rehabilitation by the MC.C.

Dr. Harvey Bauman, missionary to India on furlough, brought the closing message, showing the need of missionary doctors and of a revival among Christians as a whole.

He represented a very important phase of our conference work and in the closing prayer he prayed that we as individuals, churches, and as a conference may be cleansed so that our service may be rendered to Christ in purity of heart.

So ended Conference Sunday in our church. May God add his blessing to all the blessings of this day.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
Hutchinson, Kansas

Greetings to al that love the Lord and His Church. Time does pass on as a shadow and changes come about and still this world has not come to an understanding of the love of God. The time for General Conference session is past, and sad to say we could not have it, and just because of worldly strife among the nations. But thanks be to God, He has not vanished out of the picture for those that love Him and His soon coming. Our church observed August 20 as Conference Sunday. The offering for the CPS Institute amounted to $96.71.

Next Sunday, August 27, there will be baptism and reception of members to our church. So far this year our increase numbers twenty-seven. To God only be the praise and glory for such wonderful growth. Just last week another one of our brethren, Elmer Schmidt, had to leave for CPS camp. He had to leave his wife and two small children. Also worthy of note is that Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Dirks are the happy parents of a baby boy.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By La Verne Rutschman

SEPTEMBER 1—"God is a spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." John 4:24. The query, "What is God?", has long challenged the mind of man. Even the Christian meets confusion by endeavoring to ascribe to God that which is not in the realm of the spirit. Only a Scriptural knowledge of God's nature affords an adequate basis for intelligent worship. A spirit is by nature a personality, i.e., a being characterized by self-consciousness and self-determination. We, too, are spirits with the limitation of a physical body. Consider the practical aspect of this teaching of Christ: As a Spirit God is not limited by a physical body and this very lack of limitation enables Him to exercise complete control over all.

SEPTEMBER 2—"Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?" Psalm 139:7. God, as a spirit, is infinite. Every point in the universe is in God's immediate presence. Nothing is hidden from Him. "All things are opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do." Those who in the Tribulation period call for the mountains and rocks to fall on them to hide them from the "face of Him that sitteth on the throne" call in vain That secret sin is not hidden from God. Surely the Scriptural teaching of God's infinity should prompt us to pure living. What a challenge to prayer! We are at all times immediately in His presence.

September 3—"Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." Psalm 90:2. As a spirit God is eternal. When we see smoke, we insist that there is a fire. We see the effect, our minds demand a cause. When we contemplate the universe in its precision, we insist that there is a Creator. Again our minds demand a cause for the effect which is so evident. God to us is the First Cause, the Being who transcends our law of cause and effect. As the Cause for all that is, we can trust Him with complete confidence knowing conclusively that His eternal purpose cannot fail, that some day all things will be united in Christ.

SEPTEMBER 4—"And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands; They shall perish; but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; And as a vesture shalt thou fold them, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail." Hebrews 1:10-12. As a spirit God is unchangeable. His eternal plan cannot be altered. His attitude toward sin is constant, but His attitude toward the sinner changes as the individual sinner changes his attitude toward God by receiving the new nature freely offered to all in Christ. What confidence is implanted within our hearts by the conviction that God has an unchangeable plan for us as individuals, a plan which is accomplished as we yield our all to Him.

SEPTEMBER 5—O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! Romans 11:33. There is no event past, present, or future which is not included in His all-embracing wisdom. He knows the inner-most thoughts of the mind of man. Yet despite this infinite knowledge, man's responsibility remains for God has ordained it so. For the Christian this wisdom guarantees security and freedom from anxiety. The conviction that God knows our future enables us to pray intelligently. He knows all about that loved one so far away for whom we are praying. Because of such far-reaching knowledge, "Before we pray, He will answer." Infinite wisdom presupposes an infinite plan.

SEPTEMBER 6—Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh; is there anything too hard for me? Jeremiah 32:27. Man today is endeavoring to limit God's power. A want of faith has caused him to take things into his own hands. As Christians we must not lose sight of God's omnipotence. The future of Christianity does not depend upon an Allied military victory. The future of Christianity depends solely upon the power of God. History reveals that the Gospel of Christ, which is a Gospel of peace, has never been propagated successfully by the sword. It is successfully propagated only by those whose lives are emptied of self and filled with the fullness of God's Spirit. Every Christian should be a powerful Christian.

Young People's Retreats Are a Great Blessing

The wide-spread interest in Young People's re-reats suggests that they are a great blessing. This ear around a dozen retreats were held throughout ur conference.

This is in contrast to the first two retreats held n our conference. These took place on the campuses f Bethel College and Bluffton College in 1925. That /as the beginning. Both were reasonably well at-ended. The next year the Bluffton retreat had a rge atendance as the picture in this section shows. 'he Bethel retreat was considerably smaller.

In 1928 four retreats were held. They convened at ireen Lane, Pa., Almota, Washington; Bluffton, hio, and Newton, Kansas. The combined attend-nce was near three hundred. The secretary of the oard of Education visited three of these four re-reats, the Board of Education being much inter-sted in them.

The years have brought changes. The young eople of the Western District no longer meet at Bethel but at Camp Wood. In the Middle District the retreat went from Buuffton to Lake Shipshewana. Now it is Camp Mack. The Eastern District has its own grounds, Men-O-Lan. The California young people go to Camp Gaines at Lake Sequoia. Because of the great distances involved several retreats are held throughout the Pacific and Northern Districts. There is also an Iowa young people's retreat. The Canadian young people also have their retreats.

Perhaps, sometime someone will do some research and present to us a complete picture of all retreats now being held. We invite such a presentation. Furthermore, some English or history students at Bethel, Bluffton, or Freeman this year, might like to go through old copies of The Mennonite and the Mennonite Year Book and write an interesting history of the retreat movement in our General Conference.—rw.

Aberdeen Y. P. Retreat

By Wilma Harder

In the Idaho mountains, above Lava Hot Springs 'here the birch and pine trees grow, there is a clear-ng known as Weston's Ranch. Here we, the young eople of the Aberdeen Mennonite Church came for ur annual retreat on the week end of July 21-23. 'e had as our guests the young people of the M.B.C. nd the Old Mennonite churches from Filer and win Falls, Idoha.

Two trucks and a pick-up loaded down with young eople, bed rolls, and huge cartons of food, left berdeen in the heat of day. The long ride through esert and farm lands was hot and windy. Leaving ava Hot Springs, our cavalcade left civilization ehind and took a dirt road into the mountains. ow hanging branches dragged across the truck beds. Duck" meant just that, if you wanted to keep your ead on. Radiators boiled dry, so we started a tea up brigade to fill them. Then a poorly bridged tch near the beaver dam gave way and left truck umber one, "sitting tight." It looked so hopeless that he impatient ones decided to walk the rest of the ay. As we puffed around the last curve, the trucks came chugging behind us! There was Beaver Lodge, and across the stream was Weston's cabin with the latch string out. Close by is a bunk house, and up the slope aways is an outdoor fireplace and a long table with benches on either side. It was supper time, so everyone naturally flocked together at that place. Soon weiners were roasting in the campfire and hunger was satisfied for a while.

Then bed rolls were spread in cabins or under the open sky,—anyplace where there were a few feet of level ground.

While the sun was setting, we gathered around the camp fire for a "Sing" led by our song leader, Mrs. R. F. Merrill. Then there was a time of testimonies, and our souls were inspired as we listened to the glorious things which our God hath wrought in the lives of our young people. Then, closing moments, and bed hunting in the dark, long hours of talking, and wondering why there were so many bumps in our beds.

Almost everyone rolled out of bed before the buglers were up, and shivered though a washing in the icy stream. There was only one hot place in the camp, and that was the stove. However, the cooks needed every available space for cooking breakfast, and there was a danger of being put on K.P. before your turn arrived if you hung around that place.

Suddenly the camp became quiet, and up and down the hillside on log or stone, were "Retreaters" with their Bibles, keeping the "Morning Watch." Then the gong sounded and it was time for breakfast—then devotions—and clean-up. During our Bible Hour, Rev. P. A. Wedel gave us some points on "Personal Evangelism."

With hikes and games the afternoon was gone almost before it began. To top it off, it began to rain. Rev. V. K. Snyder, a Bible teacher, and a real man of God, was our guest speaker. "Looking unto Jesus" was the main theme of our retreat, with three main messages given by Rev. Snyder. "Looking unto Jesus for Salvation," "Looking unto Jesus for Joy in the Christian Life," and "Looking unto Jesus for His Coming Again." That evening the clouds were banking in the west again. A rain that night might dissolve the retreat. The group met in prayer—the clouds melted away—and night came on clear and still. God had heard and answered our prayer!

Sunday morning brought more retreaters from Aberdeen and from the CPS camp at Downey, Idaho. In our Green Cathedral, with rough logs for pews, we gathered for Sunday School and morning worship. Mrs. R. F. Merrill was our Sunday School teacher, and Rev. Snyder served as pastor.

Dinner was delicious, and much to the "Food Committee's" relief, there was enough for everyone. The mountain air does things to young people's appetites, you know.

In the afternoon there was a special Bible study led by Rev. Snyder for those who did not care to hike. After an Open Forum discussion, led by Randolph Moser, we had our last meal together. Once more we gathered together for our closing service. Then the retreat was over. A last minute check-up, a mad scramble for trucks, and we hit the trail for home. We watched the sunset, and the mountains fade away in the gathering twilight. We had been on the mountain top with God. Now we must go back into the valley where He has work for us. We had learned again that we could look unto Jesus, not only for salvation, joy, and His coming again—but for everything.

Soon we were back in the valley and home again. Up in the mountains where we had been—a storm was raging—the storm that for our sake had been withheld for twenty-four hours.

Large Attendance at Camp Mack This Year

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

This year's all-Mennonite Retreat held at Camp Mack, Indiana, wil go down as one of the largest in its history. However, we were reminded of the present situation in that the girls outnumbered the boys better than three to one.

A well-chosen faculty, headed by Harry Yoder, camp director, offered a variety of courses from which to choose.

"Studies In Mark," taught by Rev. A. E. Kreider, was a survey of the Gospel to gain a fresh vision of the Central Figure, Jesus Christ, and to draw from Him power and light for daily living.

In the course "Mastering Our Personalities," personal problems were considered in a spirit of frankness and sincerity. Led by Rev. Forrest Musser, problems in boy and girl relationships, social customs, and religious life were thought through, bringing the Spirit of Christ to bear upon every phase of life.

"Open Doors In The Rural Field" had the goal of attempting to create an appreciation for rural life through a study of its community life—recreational, social, and religious. Mr. Esko Loewen, of the M.C.C., led us in this course.

Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, representing "The Challenge Of China" aimed to bring a better understanding of China and her people, especially the Christians.

In the course "Our Mennonite Heritage" Robert Kreider helped us to a fuller and deeper appreciation of Mennonitism and of Christian love, non-resistance, and service taught by Christ.

Prof. Russel Lantz in his "Music Appreciation" class discussed the great hymns of the Church and rounded out the discussion by having all participate in hymn singing.

During the activity period a class on "Etiquette" was taught by Mrs. Forrest Musser, who sought to present to us the ideals of Christian courtesy.

Another group studied pencil sketching and clay modeling, while the chorus and orchestra, two very active organizations, worked hard and presented a program of their own with solo and ensemble work.

A third group published The Wawbee Sun, our camp daily paper, carrying all the camp gossip.

To Robert Hartzler, of Goshen, Indiana, goes the credit for arranging a splendid schedule.

The new day always began with a Morning Watch period held at the lake shore, where our Camp Pastor, Rev. Don Smucker, led us in our devotional meditation. Following breakfast were three class periods and a chapel service in which the Camp Pastor spoke on some very timely phase of Christian life.

After the noon meal came a Rest Period during which the campers gathered at their respective cabins to read the Bible, meditate, study, write letters, etc. Then came the fourth class period during which rafts, chorus, the camp paper, and several other lasses met. Two hours were used as a recreational eriod supervised by Don Bowen when retreaters wam, played ball, went boating and enjoyed other ecreational activities.

Following the evening meal, the Sunset Service vhich was held by the lake, always proved to be of piritual inspiration. Next came the evening meetngs of various types. These meetings were all ifferent, one being a "get acquainted" meeting, ne a musical program, one a stunt program by etreaters, one on the subject of Bluffton college, etc.

Our Campfire Circle was usually of the entertaining nature closing with one of the faculty members speaking to us on some thought or quotation from the Bible. The day was closed with cabin devotions in which all retreaters took part.

Climaxing the week was the Galilean Consecration Service in which our Camp Pastor spoke to us from a boat on the lake. This was to remind us of our Master when He spoke to the multitudes. In this connection a candlelight service was held where each retreater dedicated himself to a deeper spiritual commitment. —Bob Amstutz in the Vine Press

Pioneer Retreaters at Bethel College

Retreating with God

By Olin Krehbiel

The writer had the privilege of being at three retreaters this summer, and all were mountain-top experiences which he desires to share with the readers of The Mennonite. Camp Thayendangea. This camp which is located on the Grand River near Paris, Ontario, was rented from June 27 to July 3 by the Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church at Kitchener, Ontario, for their young people's retreats. The theme of the retreat was "Crusading with Christ." The unique feature of this undertaking is that one church, under the leadership of their live-wire pastor, Rev. Andrew R. Shelly, is carrying on this camp which provides wholesome recreation and spiritual inspiration for their own young people. It is a real venture of faith costing several hundred dollars. The 114 campers, together with a dozen leaders, had a blessed time together in spite of the roar of air planes overhead. Men-O-Lan. This place, which is owned, built, and run by our Eastern District Conference, has become holy ground to many young people because they have met God there. A total of 312 retreaters, ranging in age from nine years on up, attended the three retreats from July 20 to 30. The theme of the retreat was, "Draw Near to God." There were forty-one Juniors who made a profession of faith in Christ their Saviour. We hope they really meant it, and may God bless them in this step. The Spirit of God was moving among us, and we all did some deep thinking. Those who have had a part in the "Men-O-Lan" retreat ground development see the hand of the Lord in this project and believe that God has begun to pay off spiritual dividends. There is much that could be said about "Men-O-Lan" camp and the meals which have received much praise but that is a story in itself. Meno, Oklahoma. The Oklahoma Bible Academy was the scene of the Oklahoma Retreat from August 9 to 13. Although this retreat is handicapped in that they have no shady camp to which they can withdraw to gain relief from the heat of the sun, never-the-less showers of blessing came to those in attendance. The theme of the retreat was, "Christ our Anchor." The young people were very attentive in the classes, and there appears to be a spirit of harmony among the ministers. The Oklahoma people deserve our prayers and encouragement in this new retreat project of their own. One of the high lights of this retreat came on the last evening after the outing by the creek. Rain threatened to spoil the meeting, and it was too hot to stay inside the school building, so the group sang and prayed the clouds away. It was marvelous how God turned what appeared would be a defeat into a glorious victory and at the meeting on the lawn seven girls consecrated their lives to Christ. Many of the ninety-seven retreaters and leaders expressed regret that the retreat was over so soon.

To my mind the dozen or so retreats which are conducted over the land are contributing much to the future welfare of the Mennonite church.

Retreat at Twin Rocks, Oregon

The Third Annual Retreat of the Oregon Mennonite Churches was held at Twin Rocks, Oregon, July 24-31. The camp grounds are located within two blocks of the shore of the mighty Pacific.

Viewing this great body of water with its sonorous umble of rolling, tumbling waves and breakers, we ood in amazement and marvelled at the majestic andiwork of God. We were reminded of the words David of Old, "The Lord on high is mightier an the noise of many waters, yea, than the mighty aves of the sea." It truly was an ideal setting for young people's camp—causing many to realize ew the greatness of our God.

We began each day with a quiet hour in our own oms, followed by chapel which was in charge of oups from the various churches. The remainder the morning was devoted to classes as follows:

nowing Christ in Every Day Life" (Gen. Assem-y) conducted by Rev. Herman Wiebe, Portland.

Course in Soul-Winning" (College Age) taught J. R. Turnbull, Pratum.

he Christian Life" (High School) by Miss Rosella avs; Omaha, Nebraska.

Study of Missions" (Gen. Assembly) by Rev. A. Kliewer, Albany, and others.

hese various classes were most interesting and oved profitable to all. Following these there was short period of chorus singing conducted by Mrs. F. Larsen.

fter dinner and a period of rest, the remainder the afternoon was devoted to recreation which nsisted of boating, swimming, and canoeing.

hese various activities created good appetites ich were always appeased with a generous amount delicious food. (The cooks were Mrs. Art Dalke, atum; Mrs. Balzer, and Mrs. Duerksen, Dallas.)

s the evening gong sounded the retreaters gath-d for Vespers which was always a time of in-ration—special musical numbers, testimonies, l inspiring talks were given at this time.

hen last, but not least, we had a devotional per-. During this time heart-to-heart talks were giv- decisions were made, and hearts were lifted to Lord in praise and adoration to Him who alone worthy.

hus a week was spent, the climax coming on nday evening when after a heart-searching mess- given on "The Christian Athlete" by Rev. Turn-, more than twenty young people surrendered r lives to the Lord, and the only unsaved one in np was saved that night.

e feel that the retreat was a great spiritual cess and each one who was there felt it was good have been there.

North Dakota Youth Conference

By Evelyn Bartel, Secretary

We had a blessed time at our Youth Conference held at Rosehill M. B. Church, June 4-5, 1944. The Youth Conference is an organization consisting of all the young people of the Rosehill M. B. Church of Munich, the Swiss Mennonite Church of Alsen, the Salem Mennonite Church of Munich, and the Bethel Mennonite Church of Langdon.

Our guest speakers were Rev. B. J. Braum of Delft, Minn., and the Rev. Franklin Duerre, of Viking, Minn.

The theme of the Conference was; "Youth of To-day", Eccl. 12:1, with the sub-topics "Youth's Privileges" and "Youth's Dangers", discussed by the Rev. Mr. Duerre, Sunday afternon and Monday morning, and "Youth's Obligations" discussed by the Rev. Mr. Braum on Monday afternoon.

Sunday morning, the purpose of the conference—"Saved and Victorious Youth" was given by the Rev. Waldo Flickinger of Alsen, N. D., and by the Rev. Mr. Braum. Both evening sessions were evangelistic, with the Rev. Mr. Braum in charge.

All the musical numbers and the general singing with which each session opened were in charge of the young people from the four churches.

Sunday and Monday noon, from one to one-thirty we had a general prayer meeting thanking the Lord for all His blessings and asking His Holy Spirit to undertake for us during the Conference.

For the children we had a special session in the church basement Sunday and Monday afternoons in charge of Miss Marie Eitzen. They sang choruses, told Bible stories and gave object lessons.

We could feel the presence of the Holy Spirit and our souls were touched and inspired to be wholly enlisted in God's work.. . .The theme song of the conference contains the general thought of the gathering:

'I've enlisted for Jesus to go all the way,
Until the victory's won.
I'm determined to be what He wants me to be Until the race is run.
I shall love Him forever for He loved me so,
Praise His Holy Name."

The money that was taken in the offerings shall be used to support one native worker in the Sudan Interior Mission, the Bethany Bible School at Munich, the Civilian Public Service Camps, and relief.

Oklahoma Bible Academy Opens Sept. 4

On September 4, the doors of the Oklahoma Bible Academy will again be opened for students, as the school opens its twenty-seventh year. From present indications a large number of fine young people expect to make the most of this opportunity.

A number of improvements and changes have been made during the summer. A cement tennis court, located northeast of the Alumni Hall, has been completed and is ready for use. A cement sidewalk connecting Alumni Hall with the other buildings has also been built. This adds much to the neatness of the campus. Remodeling has been carried on in the school library, where the book shelves have been arranged more compactly than formerly in order to give better and faster service to students. The woodwork in the girls' dormitory, as well as the floors, has been made new through revarnishing. Renovation of the dormitory kitchen is still in progress. This will make it completely modern.

Five former teachers will be returning to their work. They are to be assisted by Rev. Homer Sperling in the field of Bible and Christian Education. The courses in music and home economics have been made more extensive, and other courses in typing will be continued as last year. Thus a student may take all the regular academic work plus a good deal of vocational work, all right in a Bible-centered and Christ-centered school.

We invite any of you, who have not yet been planning to come, and who are interested in real study in a Bible school, to plan to attend this fall. Pray for the Lord's blessing to rest upon the work of the new school year.

—L. W. Jantzen, Supt.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Oklahoma Convention of the General Conference Mennonite Churches expects to hold its annual sessions at the Herold Church near Bessie, Oklahoma, on September 16, 17, and 18. Let us be much in prayer so that we may enjoy God's blessing during the convention sessions and that His will may be done. These are days that demand greater consecration and effort.

—H. P. Fast, President

JOTTINGS

—Prof. Otto T. Hirschler gave an organ concert in the Bethel College chapel on August 22. Prof. Hirschler is Minister of Music and Organist at the Wilshire Christian Church, Los Angeles. The First Mennonite Church, Newton, is planning on building a Sunday School addition when mater-s again become available. The addition is to be ded to the southwest corner of the present church ilding. It is to have a full basement. A special nday School offering on the third Sunday of each nth goes for this addition. The Sunday School nic this year brought out this bit of humor. As ual there was ice-cream. . . When one little fellow, o came for another helping, was told to wait for second helping until all had been served once, he d, "This is not my second time, it's my sixth!"
fred Suderman, one of the members of the First urch, has cause to remember July 4 of this year.
. . on that day thirty of his friends and neighbors,
o knew he could not harvest the many acres yet cut of his eighty-acre wheat field, came with comes and trucks and in a very short time had it en care of. The first tractor went into the field about 1:30 and by 4:30 the wheat had been hauled the Newton Elevator for storage." This was h good tonic for Alfred, who had been sick, that n thereafter he was able to attend church.

rother Harry Martens, who was formerly CPS ector of the Rocky Mountain area, is now direc-of the Eastern area. While Brother Martens was l serving in the West, Mrs. Martens visited the es of married campers in this area. Over fifty es were visited in one camp vicinity alone. Mrs.
rtens tells of one couple whose parents are both osed to the C. O. stand. The wife has tuberosis. She has received some treatment. But her dition is very serious and she has insufficient ds. Yes, some endure for Christ's sake today.
Martens recently came to Kansas for his wife son. They will soon leave for Akron, Pa., where y will live in the same house in which Mr. and . Winfield Fretz live.

rother Albert Gaeddert, General Director of nnonite CPS camps, was also present at North vton recently for the Young Christian Worker's titute, the Cultural Conference, and the Education-Directors' Conference.

hurch worker, have you tried filing all copies of Mennonite for reference purposes?

ev. Clyde Dirks will leave on August 30 for Aberdeen, Idaho, where he will conduct a week of special services. Brother Dirks plans to return to Hutchinson on September 9.

—Gift subscriptions to "Mennonite" given to teachers: The First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas shows its appreciation to the teachers of its daily vacation Bible school by giving each of them a year's subscription to The Mennonite.

—Rev. Freeman Swartz and Miss Nora D. Moyer united in marriage: On Wednesday morning, August 9, the little historical Mennonite Meeting House in Germantown, erected in the year 1770, became the scene of an interesting as well as pretty occasion. The Pastor Howard T. Landes, assisted by Rev. Russel Mast of the Deep Run Mennonite Church, had the pleasure of uniting in marriage Rev. Freeman H. Swartz and Miss Nora D. Moyer. The pulpit was banked with palms, ferns, and gladiolas. In the foreground stood the table upon which the first protest against slavery was signed. The couple was attended by Mrs. L. D. Stever, sister of the bride, and John Knudsen, friend of the groom. Rev. Swartz is Pastor of the Eden Mennonite Church of Schwenksville, Pa. He has served this Congregation for twenty-three years. Miss Moyer is the daughter of the late Levi Moyer, who served as a Deacon in the Deep Run Church for years. Both bride and groom grew up in the Deep Run Church as did one of the officiating ministers, Howard T. Landes, and were privileged to enjoy the ministry of the late Rev. A. M. Fretz. Rev. Mast is now pastor of that charge. About fifty guests witnessed the ceremony.

—First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: Sunday, August 13, was an outstanding day. One of the things that made the day great was the presence of Missionaries Rev. and Mrs. Paul A. Wenger. These missionaries are making preparations to return in the near future to India. To give their beloved missionaries a farewell, the congregation arranged a fellowship dinner in their behalf, following the morning church service. Rev. Hershey, a visiting Methodist pastor of Ocean Park, California, brought the message at the worship service. After the fellowship dinner, served in the basement of the church, the congregation and friends gathered in the church auditorium for a farewell program. Rev. Phil A. Wedel, pastor of the church, presided at the program. Willard Wiebe conducted the devotional part. Rev. and Mrs. Wenger both spoke to the audience. The program was interspersed with a solo and male quartet numbers. The Wengers were showered with many farewells and best wishes and God bless you's.

—Note in the bulletin of the First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas: "You can now get The Mennonite, with its interesting and helpful articles, pictures, and information for $1.25 (to new subscribers) a year. It comes every week. Don't miss this means of getting information about our conference work."

—Upland, California: On August 20 Rev. Earl Salzman preached a sermon which was in conformity with Conference Sunday.

—Rev. and Mrs. Willard Claassen and Barbara Ann recently visited relatives and friends in Nebraska and Kansas. While in Newton, Rev. Claassen attended part of the Cultural Conference.

—Rev. Elbert Koontz and Esther Schroeder were married on August 9, in Mountain Lake, Minnesota. After a short honeymoon at Lake Okoboji in Iowa, they came to Beatrice, Nebraska, where Rev. Koontz is pastor of the Second Mennonite Church. Their address is 1200 Grant Street.

—The First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, held an offering on August 13, for the Young Christian Worker's Institute that was held at North Newton, August 13 to 16. On that day Dr. P. A. Penner brought the morning message. The Rev. D. J. Unruh family is expected to move to Newton the last week in August. Their address will be 507 East Fourth Street.

—First Mennonite Church, Geary, Oklahoma: "The Rural Church Today" was the subject of Rev. E. F. Nolte, who spoke to the Men's Brotherhood on August 14.

—"Bluffton College has a very excellent Mennonite History library containing some rare and highly prized documents, as well as copies of most of the printed papers and books dealing with the Mennonite church and its development. The bulk of this library is comprised of the Grubb and Smith collections, both of which were donated to the school. The library is an excellent source of information concerning the history of the church and contains the basic documents useful in research work. In fact, practically all of the material for the research done by Dr. Pannabecker for his doctorate was done in this library. An attempt is being made to constantly add to this library any materials which are significant to the history of the church, past as well as contemporary. Without doubt there are many documents in the hands of individuals, or stored away in trunks in attics, which would be valuable additions. Any who have materials of this sort which they would be wiling to donate to the college, such as old prayer books, Bibles, conference programs, records dealing with the life of early Mennonite settlers, or materials relating to Mennonite institutions such as hospitals, old people's homes, orphanages, missions, and the like, are invited to correspond with Dr. C. Henry Smith, who is in charge of the collection to discover whether the materials have real worth from a historical standpoint."

—Inman Mennonite Church News: Guest speakers in our church within recent months include the following: Missionaries H. J. Brown, P. A. Penner, and W. C. Voth; Rev. and Mrs. George Neufeld, and Rev. August Schmidt. We heartily thank all these visitors, for their messages were a great blessing to us. Relatives and friends gathered at the church to help Mr. and Mrs. David Edigar celebrate their Golden Wedding Anniversary on May 28. Our Annual S. S. picnic was enjoyed Memorial Day in the Grade School Park. A Children's Day program was rendered on the evening of June 11. Our church took an active part in the Community Vacation Bible school as well as in the Sunday evening union services. Our Young People's C. E. rendered a return program at the Hoffnungsau Church May 28. Several of our young people attended the retreat at Camp Wood. The ladies of our church have been busy canning fruit and vegetables for CPS camps. To date approximately 350 quarts have been canne in our church basement. Much credit is due th committee in charge, which has labored faithfully. The men, too, have been busy redecorating th church walls and refinishing floors. Marked im provements have been made. On Sunday, August 20 seven young people joined our church throug baptizm and one through the right hand of fellow ship. Our pastor, Rev. J. E. Kaufman, officiated a the impressive service.

"Thy Righteousness Is Like The Great Mountains"

In The Cleft Of The Rock

By Joanna S. Andres

Across the chancel of our small community church, built on the slope of a mountain, are written the words of the Psalmist "Thy righteousness is like the great mountains."

Anyone, in the habit of weaving the threads of daily living into the loom of the spirit's experience, will find this same truth echoing as an eternal song where mountains lift their jagged heights against the skies.

To the pilgrim of the plains, the first view of the mountains is a breath-taking experience. His soul recalls the words of David when once he stood beneath the heavens in an hour when the moon looked down on him and the stars flickered like many lighted candles in the dark: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him!" Though he returns again and again to the same regions, though he learns to know the canyon paths with their spruce growth, tall and heavy, silver-fringed, where in some clearing he turns to stand still in awe of the wonders stretched out before him—his thought is ever the same: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him?"

Man crumbles, as it were, in the presence of power, strong in its beauty. It is as though, suddenly, the sails of his self-life lay tattered at his feet, torn by a gale that blew across his drifting soul.

It was a lovely afternoon. We had waited for the rain to cease. Now the clouds had parted, and the earth lay before us fresh and clean. The cones of our pine tree which had closed up tightly during the pouring rain, were slowly opening again as the sun rested warmly upon them This was our sign to go.

We started on our walk into the canyon. The raindrops still hung at the edges of leaves and small bushes still bent beneath the burden of the rain they had caught. The scent of blooming clover, growing wild along the pathway, gave a pungency to the cleared air we breathed. As a writer expressed it: if only the soul of man could be washed from its sin and could stand again so quickly and so easily in a freshness, free from all dust! If only it could!

We followed the gravel trail until a brook, some rocks, and a tangled leaf-dome overhead, tempted a longer stay. The dampness of the heavy foliage through which the sunshine reached but sparingly down to us, threw a chill over all. A fire of sticks and spicy cones soon warmed us again. We roasted our supper there, sang free-heartedly, and when the sun began to set, started homeward again. It was then, standing there in the clearing—the children having gone ahead—that I stopped in the way. If we would but stop more often in the way of our daily living, in the midst of tasks that seem so endless, so ever the same, how much richer our lives would be I only lifted my eyes to the hills from whence cometh . . . . How can the heart hold all that comes to it when the Almighty begins to touch the soul with his love!

Before me lay the mountains that surround smal Manitou, which rests in their midst as a child tha needs to be cradled in their arms The sun was chang ing the pattern of light and color as though in my hand, slowly turning, I held a child's kaleidoscope Looking far across, watching the changing scenes like Alice in Wonderland, I found myself dwindling dwindling, dwindling. "What is man that thou ar mindful of him?" How quickly in the presenc of Him whose power speaks from the heights, i the soul ungarbed of its robes so carefully spun fo itself, of its righteousness garments so beautifully fitted! How quickly, too, are the secret chambers so firmly locked and guarded, thrown open and laid bare when the hand of the Almighty springs the lock when His eyes search out the soul!

So I stood before Him naked and bare. Hi righteousness? Great as the mountains! This knew. My righteousness? . . . What else could do but fall at His feet, trembling as tremble th leaves of the Aspen e'en when the softest breez steals through its branches. What else! when th breeze of His righteousness stirs through my soul . . . I must flee! "I must flee like a bird to th mountain," to the Rock that was cleft for me There, still trembling, my wings shall come to rest, shall be gently covered, too, and the hidden chambers where darkness had dwelt, shall receive their ligh

"Thy righteousness is like the great mountains . . . . How shall it be when this, my pilgrim sou shall stand translated in Thy presence? How sha it be? I shall not stand there trembling, nor shall fear, for my soul shall still be hidden in the Clef in the Rock of the Ages shall it be.

The Love of God in Us

"We love him, because he first loved us." I John :19. This verse reminds us of the precious blood iat was shed upon Calvary for the remission of our ns. There is power, wonder-working power in that ood.

But what happens when someone knows little or othing of that love! Can there be a great return ve? Is it not true that there are some who care tle about being Christ-like because they care little nothing about Christ? "Love never faileth." Love ust be in the heart if there is to be Christ-like living. How necessary it is that the love of God as re- aled in the atoning death of Christ be published r and wide in such a way as to grip the hearts of en until these hearts respond with love. Men need be made aware of "Christ Crucified."

Much can be accomplished by preaching to the lost d by getting them to read the Bible. However, in ite of preaching and Bible reading some hearts may nain cold and unresponsive to the love of God. But ere is another way in which these hearts can be proached and the love of God made clear and com- lling. That way is the way of love personified in individual Christian. Let the beauty and love Jesus be seen in an individual and it will draw. od is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in d, and God in him." Such a person is winsome.

Many a time had the old sailor talked to the young- one about the welfare of his soul. But the heart the young man remained cold. One day the ship s wrecked. There was not sufficient room in the boats to take all men off the ship. Lots were t. It fell against the young man. He stood white- ed. Suddenly the old sailor grasped him and put 1 into one of the life boats, while saying something this: "Now you turn to God; I am saved." The sailor sank beneath the waves, and the young man ied to God and His love. He started his own res- mission in a large city and afterwards was want ay, "Two have died for me." Preaching had not ught home the love of Christ to this young sailor. the Christ-like love of the sailor helped him to the love of Christ and to respond to it.

he thing that is needed when hearts remain cold unresponsive is love and more love—incarnate . ". . .let us not love in word, neither in tongue; in deed and in truth." I John 3:18. We are to ch the love of God but first of all we are to be d with it. That is important.

ven when saved we are greatly helped by true and t love in another individual. It makes us see st more clearly. As it does so we find hearts onding with a greater love for Christ and His dom.

Dr. Temple of Manchester, England, has said, "Remember that the converting power of the Church does not depend chiefly on the eloquence of its preachers, or the perfectness of its organizations. It depends on the degree in which men see in the lives of Christians the evidence of the power of the love of Christ."

SEEING CLEARLY

During times of war certain rulers are made to appear as fiends. Undoubtedly, war does bring out the worst in men; war is a grand opportunity for the devil to express himself through men. So certain rulers are guilty of great sins, but there are also some other facts. In the last war the Kaiser was pictured as a vertible devil. Living peacefully in Holland the last years of his life, he seemed something very different. Also before the war he gave a different impression. A news release from London on November 19, 1907, stated: "Before leaving Windsor Castle for Highcliffe Castle, Kaiser Wilhelm left no less a sum then $10,000 to be divided as tips among the servants at the castles. On his previous trip to Windsor, in 1891, the imperial tip was $2,500." That does not sound like a Kaiser who sought to suck the blood out of non-Germans. But in time of war he did head a mighty killing machine, and so did other national leaders.

All of this also suggests something about the soldiers in war. Many parents with a son or sons in the armed forces feel that there are a lot of fine men in military service. That is right, but these men are not being asked to do fine, Christ-like things. A Mennonite who had traveled a long distance on ship with a large number of English officers, told one of them when saying goodbye that it had been his privilege to meet some fine men. To that the English officer replied that he was not so sure at all, however, that these men were out to do some fine and noble things. Fine men in many respects, yes! But they will do terrible things—things that blacken the soul. War is hell and not heaven. Boys from Mennonite homes are in the armed forces. They are dear, dear sons and brothers. But war is hell and in it God's will is not done upon earth as it is in heaven. Let us look at all factors in the picture and not only at one. —rw.

A Condition

"And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us: And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him." I John 5:14,15.

Our Mission Work In China

Mission friends are asking repeatedly, whether any mission money can now be sent to China. While we have to tell them that we cannot send money to our field in China at present, we wish to explain, that we are setting aside a Mission Fund for China, which is to be used as soon as the door to China is again open. We hear that the windows on our station are all broken, and the furniture largely also, or taken away. The surgical instruments are also gone, which cost much. This will cost much money in repairs on top of the other regular expenses for workers that are to be sent. So we are glad to receive gifts for this fund. Even now Missionary Pannabecker intends to take along a few thousand dollars, when he goes as relief worker under the MCC very soon, to direct this work there. While his salary and expenses are paid by the MCC, the mission work he may be able to do incidentally by helping fugitive students, etc. will be paid from our treasury.

The China missionaries, you see, have not forgotten their field, but are much concerned about its future. Recently they met in Newton for a conference to discuss and make plans for keeping the China needs before our churches. They will very likely write about this in our papers themselves. Please, keep your eyes open for what they have to say. Among themselves they have already agreed to consider their group as a prayer circle, which is to remember the China mission field in a special way every Wednesday night in prayer.

The missionaries that now live in Newton have already for some time met once a week as a prayer circle for missions. Why could not all mission friends join these two prayer circles in spirit? The native workers, who carry on the work in China as best they can, need our support in prayer very much, and all mission work needs it on all our fields.

A former missionary in India, Ferguson, thought so much of prayer, that he published his conviction, saying, if all mission friends would double their prayers, that would be in effect equal to doubling the number of missionaries on the field. Well, what the heathen world needs, is both, and the home mission field the same.

The five missionaries for Colombia expect to leave on September 5 from Miami, Florida, by airship, if the promised passes come in time. And the four missionaries that are ready to go to India soon, wait only for a ship to take them. May the Lord speed them all.

A Princess For A Palace

By O. A. Waltner

Rambatti, I always feel, is one who could well b a queen or princess in some magnificent Indian palace She is very attractive and carries herself with dignified grace and poise. But Rambatti doesn't live in palace—she is a patient in the Bethesda Leper Hom and Hospital.

"I've been married four years, but they haven been pleasant years," she told me one day when asked her about her home life. After a pause sh continued, speaking slowly as though she were tryin to recall something she had removed from her lif Looking far out on the horizon she said, "I wante to give my husband a son, but—." Her voice faltere and her eyes shifted onto a flower immediately b fore. I instantly visualized the rest of the story.

"It hurt me to think that my husband wouldn have a son, but it hurt more when he began to abu me because of it." As she spoke a steely gli appeared in her eyes. Her face was tense and I cou almost hear her breath as her bosom heaved. B her voice was calm and steady.

I knew now what she wanted to forget. "Ho old are you?" I asked in an attempt to help her.

"I'm twenty-two, I think."

"You are still young," I replied. "I'm sure G led you here, for He wants you to have joy a happiness in your youth. True joy is possible o when Jesus takes possession of one's life. Here y will have the opportunity to learn about Jesus, a as you will learn about Him you will come to lo Him. And He will give you the happiness you ha missed so far."

She spoke again—slowly this time. "Force could keep me at home, but I already see that Chris love will keep me here. Some day He'll have pos sion of my life." Her voice was pitched low and way she said it convinced me that she meant it.

She kept her word. Two days ago Rambatti c fessed the Lord Jesus as her personal Savior. So day she'll be a princess in the magnificient N Jerusalem. It is worth our prayers and efforts.

Treasures Within Reach

By Lloyd L. Ramseyer

We often fail to realize in speaking to or teaching ildren and young people that their experiences ve been far less extensive than our own, and words d thoughts which have meaning to us may either k meaning or be greatly misunderstood by them. recall as a child that when a minister spoke of utting off the old man" I had a far different idea what he meant than he intended. You have prob- ly had similar experiences. There are many stories gross misunderstandings which children have of rds and phrases. For example, a young cousin of ne heard the song, "How beautiful to walk in the ps of the Saviour." Now it happened that they d a horse named Beauty, and she could not under- nd why Beauty should be stepping in the light.

My Mother often used to sing a song as she work- the words of which ran,

Put those cookies on the lower shelf
Where the children all can reach
For you know, my brother, how it is yourself Whom the Lord has called to preach.

e Christian religion holds many treasures. Are putting them within the reach of the child, or we placing them where they are inaccessible to 1? If we are to teach children the treasures of Kingdom, we must be sure that they not only r but also understand. There are several methods ich may be used in securing this understanding.

Selection of Material

. One may secure understanding by selection of terial. This would mean spending the greater por- 1 of time on ideas within the experiences of the ple with whom one is dealing. This would involve nding much more time on concrete situations than abstractions. Christianity has doctrines which n experienced adults do not fully understand. How we expect children, with much less experience in to secure a full comprehension of them? Chris- ity also has much relation to everyday life, to ng one's parents, obedience, kindness, honesty and like. These fall within the everyday experiences hildren, and can be more easily understood.

ne cannot, however, meet the problem by selection naterial alone, for Christianity includes important hs which do not fall within one's immediate ex- ences and without some knowledge of these the d would have a very inadequate understanding of ion. One must, therefore, find some way to get e less tangible truths within the reach of the d.

Simple Illustrations and Comparisons

When Jesus wanted to teach a truth which was within the experience of his hearers he used ole illustrations and comparisons which were with- he limits of their understanding. For example, they had no experience with a spiritual kingdom, so he drew illustrations from ordinary life to explain what he meant by the Kingdom of Heaven. When he wanted to illustrate that rewards would not be limited by length of service, he used the illustration of the employer who hired helpers at different times of day, then in the evening gave them all the same pay. Illustrations in which he used the sower and the shepherd presented ideas outside the experiences of his hearers in terms with which they were familiar.

This method can be effectively used with children, but one must remember that some things which the common folks in Palestine understood have little meaning even to a rural child in our country. Furthermore, illustrations which may be perfectly clear to an adult may be entirely outside the experience of a child. Then too, the illustration must not be far fetched. Sometimes we use illustrations which have so little relation to the thing being illustrated that the transfer is never made.

It is important to remember another point, that is that the thing which we want to have children remember is not the illustration but the truth which we are trying to teach. Frequently we remember a fine list of stories, but completely forget the truths which they were supposed to illustrate.

Object lessons are closely related to illustrations, but they may be confusing, far fetched, fail to make the point, or seem absurd to an intelligent child. For example, a teacher used green one day to represent growth, the next day to represent envy. The child became confused.

Pictures, Objects and Models

3. Pictures, objects, and models often help make a truth clearer. They help the child to realize that Bible stories concerned actual people living at actual places on earth at some specific time. Too many children and young people have a sort of "once upon a time" feeling concerning Bible literature, rather than thinking of it as concerned with actual happenings with actual people, who thought, felt, and reacted to things much as we do today. Visual materials will help to overcome this feeling of unrealness.

These visual methods will be helpful both with the Bible stories themselves and in teaching the working program of the present-day church. Pictures, maps, and models of mission stations and fields will help the child to understand the reality of the things which he hears. Specimens from the mission field will also be helpful. Such materials will help substitute for the actual experiences which the child lacks, thus helping to put religious truth within his reach.

4. Another teaching method which aids understanding is in some way to get the child himself to become an active participant in the learning process. Someone has said that education is not so much a process of filling up as it is one of drawing out. When a child can be stimulated to find out things for himself, rather than having things told to him as a passive recipient, he is much more likely to learn. This means that he must have a purpose in his learning. He must in some way be inspired to want to learn, to seek for himself. For example, the child who finds out the details about the tabernacle in order to get the information needed to build a replica of it, is much more likely to learn these details than one who is merely told about them.

Christian religious education is of extreme importance and merits the best methods which have been discovered. There are great truths which must in some way be taught to children. Too often they are given in such a way that the child, lacking experience and maturity, cannot grasp them. We must give attention to placing these at a level where the child can reach them.

LOST

The thought of being lost fills a soul with horror; and well might it. The word "lost" as used by Jesus in Luke 15, however, carries a note of hope. A lost person is not as yet a condemned and ruined soul. The lost sheep was lost and out of touch with the good shepherd, but it was not hurt or killed. The lost coin was out of circulation and useless, but it was not defaced or destroyed. It was still fit for the king's use. The lost son was away living in sin, but he was still a boy with all the possibilities of a happy family fellowship. A lost person is one who has lost his direction, who is out of touch with the Good Shepherd, out of fellowship with God's people, useless for service and out of tune with the Father. But as long as he is alive he may yet be found and saved.

When, however, we remember what Jesus has to say about the eternal tragedy of those who are lost and do not find their way back we are deeply stirred. Jesus portrays the end of a lost person as going "into eternal punishment," "into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels." (Matt. 25: 41, 46)

Do we stop to think that such will be the end of neighbors whom we may respect as neighbors, but who regard not God, who despise the fellowship of God's people, who go on in acknowledged sin? Unless they are found and brought back to God their end will be very bitter. This thought is one of the motives which drives us on to do missionary work. This thought should also drive us on to more faithful efforts to win the lost of the community back to Christ. "For the Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lost."

BIBLE INSTITUTE AND VISITATION PROGRAM

By Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Chairman

Every Home Church to be Visited

It is the plan of the Committee made up of members from the Relief Board, and the Peace Committee, that every home church be visited by the selected Bible teachers.

Every home church is to have a two-day session. It is anticipated that every local church will cooperate readily and put forth her best efforts to make these meetings a period of inspiration and consecration with a widening of interests.

The men who have been asked to do this great work are first to visit all the CPS Camps, the Hospital Units, and farm groups so that they can bring back to the home churches the experiences they have had with these men, some of whom have been in camps for more than three years. One can readily appreciate that these men have had many an opportunity to do some deep thinking on things religious as they relate themselves to personal life and the Christian life in the home church. At this writing it is impossible to give the exact time when this visitation work of the home churches will take place but it will likely be the later part of October and early November.

Strengthening the Home Base

The Mennonite Heritage as we have received i from our forefathers is to be emphasized from Biblical viewpoint. The Bible is to be made the on and only guide book. Acts chapters 1-10 have bee chosen as the foundation material on which the me will build their messages to the men in the camps an for the home churches. The two outstanding point in this portion of Scripture are: The Church, an the work and power of the Holy Spirit. The placin of these two facts clearly before our people wi tend to strengthen us in our devotion to God an in our devotion to God and in performing our task thus strengthening our home base.

Peace Principles To Be Emphasized

Renewed emphasis is to be given to the Biblic peace principles that our forefathers held at su cost. Often they suffered persecution, but the endured it without complaint because they felt co vinced these principles were God-given in Scriptu Today we have had an easier way. Will we lose wh has meant so much to them? Let us turn to t Word and study it afresh and follow in the Way clearly laid down.

A PRIVILEGE

The Apostle Paul repeatedly insists "Man is saved by grace, through faith in Christ Jesus." Such faith is a matter of the heart. If I have such faith in my heart then I must speak of Christ.

A child of God will ever be willing at the opportune time to unfurl the banner of truth before friend and foe. He will never hesitate to state that there is salvation in none other. Matters of the soul are so vital to him and his own peace of mind and so important for the true happiness of others that he must speak about them.

It may not be easy for me at times to make such a confession. It may mean ridicule and suffering, but a true believer ever counts it a privilege to confess the name of Him who made him a child of God and who can, and is willing to, do the same for all others.—Leonard Metzker

Mrs. M. C. Lehman Visits Mid-West

In the interest of women's relief activities, such as clothing, soap-making, canning for CPS, Mrs. M. C. Lehman is visiting a number of Mennonite communities in the Middle-West. Sister Lehman, who is in charge of the clothing depot at Ephrata, will also investigate the possibility of setting up another clothing depot in the Mid-West. The expansion of the clothing work would seem to indicate that probably another depot should be opened closer to the large Mennonite comunities in the Mid-West.

Brother Miller returned from Paraguay on the evening of August 12. In his six-weeks absence from Akron, he contacted the Mennonite groups in the Chaco, was present at the dedication of the Mennonite center in Asuncion, and stopped off for a two-day conference in Puerto Rico on his return trip.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By LaVerne Rutschman, Whitewater, Kansas

SEPTEMBER 7—But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Romans 5:8. God's infinite justice affords no compromise. "The wages of sin is death." Thank God, as Christians we can look back to Calvary and envision there a finished work! God's holiness is vindicated; God's justice is satisfied. The substitutionary death of Christ, His supreme demonstration of love has removed the death penalty for all who by faith have accepted it. We need make no apology for our faith in this profound gospel truth, for it represents the essence of God's revelation to man. Admit the supernatural, and the plan of salvation becomes most reasonable. Have you by faith accepted Christ's death as your death? His resurrection as your assurance of eternal life?

SEPTEMBER 8—"And I sought for a man among them that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it; but I found none." Ezekiel 22:30. A spiritual truth of Old Testament coinage extremely modern in its application. Countless thousands are pouring over the precipice of uncertainty daily without the assurance of eternal salvation in Christ. Many have never heard. God today is seeking those who are willing "to make up the hedge and stand in the gap" that they might point the multitudes away from the abyss of sin and destruction to the mountain top of salvation and life. There is a gap to be filled in every community. Missionary work is not confined to the foreign field. God is seeking you and me, right where we are, to be missionaries for Him.

SEPTEMBER 9—"Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me." Isaiah 6:8. Someone, in the light of present day conditions on the mission field, has paraphrased this verse: "Lord, here am I; send my sister." Surely God needs both men and women on His firing line. Our forces are now unbalanced. Mature Christians must be faithful in presenting the challenge of preparation for Christian service to the young in our midst. The responsibility is real. Because William Ellery Channing's father failed to utilize his opportunity to point his son to Christ, New England Unitarianism, the basis of our present day Protestant lethargy, thrived and blinded, and is still blinding, the spiritual vision of America. Parents, have you pointed your own children to the Saviour?

SEPTEMBER 10—"Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12. Are the heathen lost? Upon our answer to this question rests our whole attitude toward missions. If they are not lost, the cost in effort, money, and life is too great. However, Scripture knows of only one way of salvation, the way which demands a saving knowledge of the sacrifice of Christ. Are not His words conclusive? "I am the way . . . No man cometh unto the father but by me." It is a sad commentary upon the attitude of the church toward missions that despite nearly twenty centuries of missionary endeavor, the world is yet unevangelized. We dare not lose ground! The Gospel, the hope of the world, must be propagated!

SEPTEMBER 11—"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Mark 16:15. Beyond the conviction that without Christ men are lost, there is a motive more commanding which instills within our hearts a desire to fulfill this grea commission. The "constraining love of Christ" i basic. We stand in awe as we see Christ gazing ove Jerusalem offering its children His peace. We know that this offer was not limited to Jerusalem. Th same compassion is evidenced today. "We love, be cause He first loved us." This love, prompted by desire to perform His demand, through us applies t the unsaved everywhere.

SEPTEMBER 12—"But ye shall receive power, a ter that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and shall be witnesses unto me . . . " Acts 1:8. Th spiritual warfare of the Christian differs from th carnal warfare of this earth. The power to win th battle emanates from a source outside of self. Th power is the most dynamic force in the universe. is the power which raised our Lord Jesus from th dead. For the Christian one condition must be m before the fulness of the personality of the Ho Spirit enters. That is yieldedness in its continui character. It demands a crucifixion of self and exaltation of Christ. Unless we labor in His pow we labor in vain.

SEPTEMBER 13—"For as we have many memb in one body, and all members have not the same fice: So we, being many, are one body in Chr and every one members one of another." Rom. 12:4 The interdependence of the members of the body Christ is a challenging reality. Regardless of position as members of this invisible body, we playing an important role. Gifts differ, but respo ibilitiy applies to all. In the body of Christ ther no room for jealousy or strife. For some the posit in this body is on the foreign field. For the g majority it is at home. As missionaries we are representing self. We are representing Christ those of His body who make missionary acti possible. As our position in His body is revealed, us be diligent in filling it as unto Him.

C. P. S. And My Future Life

By Aaron J. Epp

It might be rather difficult to contemplate what ıy attitudes and behaviorisms would be, had I not een in CPS,—but of these things I'm certain,— ıat my faith in God has increased, my trust in Him
; more real. This is a command of Christ recorded ı Matthew 11:22. Have faith in God; I believe defi-itely, that the church in maintaining its non-re-ıstant attitude is in full accord with God's word;
m more aware and appreciative of our Mennonite ˈeritage; and I've never been sorry to have chosen 'PS in serving my country. In all this I give Christ ıe praise and pray that through these more firmly nplanted beliefs I might serve Him better in the ears to come.

Our obligations loom all the larger before us
'hen we stop to realize that others have no future t all. The other day I overheard a conversation on ıe bus. A mother had lost her son across the seas ı battle. Throughout the years she had been send-ıg him letters and packages. The last package she ent, came back. Her boy was dead! What a shock!
hat man finished his course, but I must strive on.

No doubt CPS will have a varied influence upon s members. Some may become resentful towards ıe church; some may return home careless and ıdifferent, but I like to think that the majority the men will return home more willing, more ıpable to serve the church and humanity. I like think that CPS has put something in me that othing else could have, something that will make e a better servant.

CPS has enabled me to comprehend in part the ımensity of the Mennonite church and to become quainted, familiarized, and appreciateive of other nominations. I've learned to appreciate more ılly what our forefathers did, and for what they ere willing to suffer. When one thinks of their nvictions, one trembles with reverence for their ncerity, and a breath of prayer is automatically pelled that I too may leave something behind.
s they have passed their ideals, their beliefs the Scriptures on to our generation, so much ore, I believe, it is my duty to live more closely to e will of God, so that generations to come may nefit from my life.

CPS has allowed me to believe more firmly that att. 6:33 is practical and true. When one works from year to year and must realize that money and world honor mean so little in terms of eternal value—"Seek ye first the kingdom of heaven" seems all the more logical. I trust that in later life money and vain glory may always be a minor problem.

The contact and fellowship with other people will have a direct bearing on my future standards and ideals. The value gained by mingling with people of like faith or of no faith can never be taken from me. Coming in contact with people whom we think less fortunate than ourselves, brings to prominence the importance of living a clean pure life, brings to prominence the value of Christian training in the home. Because of my experiences here at the hospital I shall always stress vigorously that parents train and take care of their children carefully when they are young so that Pro. 22:6 might be fulfilled to God's glory.

Through CPS I have learned to observe the dire need in this world for practical Christian living. The non-believer is always observant. I believe that CPS has brought about a certain alertness, a certain desire to live for Christ, has fixed my mind more firmly to reach out for those things that moth and rust do not corrupt. —CPS Unit No. 93, Harrisburg, Pa. Fall Rally and Project

The new executive committee of the Eastern District C. E. Union had their first business meeting at the home of the Vice-President, John Moser, Bechtelsville, Tuesday evening, August 8. We opened with a beautiful song service. Scripture reading and prayer led by our pastor counsellor, Rev. Howard G. Nyce. Plans have been made for an interesting Fall Rally to be held at Souderton, October 29. Our Fall Project will be $200.00 for the Napier bungalow improvements, which is part of the year's project. Let us meet the goal. Our President, Grace Moyer, urges each Christian worker to do his best to make this, our fiftieth year of C.E. work, an outstanding year in the Lord's work. May we support it by our prayers.—Mianna R. Geissinger, C.E. Union Corr.

Our Early (Anabaptist) Faith

By Harley Stucky

Introduction

The article on "Our early (Anabaptist) Faith" purports to be no work of scholarship, or to cover new ground, but rather it is an apology of (our) Anabaptist faith as seen from the viewpoint of an early sixteenth century Anabaptist and as such an individual might have written it. The material, herein presented is duplicated in many sources on Anabaptism, but even so it has the merit of being written in a very personal form using the first person, rather than the usual impersonal third person. In this article the writer has identified himself with the movement, and it is his aim to have the reader enter the movement and identify himself with it. The facts enumerated here are few and designed only to lead and guide the imagination of the reader.

Carried Reformation to Its Logical Conclusion

We are among those who accompanied Martin Luther's reformation in the sixteenth century. We carried the reformation to its logical conclusion. We are significant to the modern world because we made "the first plain announcement . . . of the programme for a new type of Christian society which the modern world, especially America and England, has been slowly realizing—an absolutely free and independent religious society and a State in which every man counts as a man and has his share in shaping both church and state." We "flung out ideals which have been guiding stars ever since." In view of this fact it is not surprising to find the eminent authority Dr. Adolph Harnack speak of us as being born three hundred years ahead of our time.

Origin of Term "Anabaptist"

We were named "anabaptist" which mean rebaptizer, by our enemies. This name was given to us because we required all who came over to our faith who had been baptized in infancy—Catholics, Lutherans and Calvinists to be rebaptized on confession of faith. In general our name "anabaptist" was applied to all Christians who took the Scriptures as their guide, contended for a converted church membership, rejected infant baptism, held to the baptism of believers and accepted and practiced non-resistance.

Our Origin

We began as a separate religious body in Zurich, Switzerland, as the radical wing of Zwinglianism. In Zwingli's second disputation with the city council of Zurich held on October 23-28, 1523, Conrad Grebel and Simon Stumpf,—(at that time we were still young Zwinglians), demanded the establishment of a free church composed of voluntary believers and insisted upon the immediate abolition of the Mass. Zwingli rejected our request. In the following years there developed greater and greater tension between ourselves and Zwingli. The issues of contention became so pronounced that we finally engaged Zwingli in a public debate in January 1525. The speakers, who represented us in this debate were Conrad Grebel, Felix Manz, and Wilhelm Reublin. On January 18, 1525, the city council of Zurich met and decided against us and issued a decree against us and threatened to exile those of us who refused to have our infants baptized. On January 21, 1525, the City Council forbade us to hold prayer and Bible study meetings. This decree forced us to decide whether we were going to abandon or continue, and so about fifteen of us, including Conrad Grebel, Felix Manz and other, gathered together for guidance and prayer. We found that there was among us a common agreement in faith, and so we resolved "henceforth to serve God in all godliness of holy Christian life and to be steadfast in affliction to the end." In this assembly, anxiety came over us and we fell upon our knees before God and called upon Him to grant us peace and grace to do His divine Will. During prayer, our hearts were touched, and when we arose, George Blaurock asked Conrad Grebel to baptize him. After he was baptized, those of us who were present asked George Blaurock to baptize us which he did. In that act we adopted baptism as the sign and seal of our faith and our membership in the Church of Christ.

Thousands Baptized

After this event, we went about preaching, teaching, and establishing churches principally in the Swiss cantons of Bern and Basel, in Austria, South Germany, and the Netherlands. Our course was so swift that our doctrines spread over the whole land and we had a large following, baptizing thousands and drawing many hearts unto us. We were particularly successful among the common people, the poor, the disinherited classes, and the exploited masses; however, occassionally we succeeded in winning followers from the privileged classes.

Our leaders had a keen humanitarian spirit and a passionate love for the oppressed, the heavy laden, and the indifferent Christians. Because of this factor our message was at once political, social, economic, and religious. In its social aspects, our message was individualistic and democratic. However, in telling the story of our work I shall limit myself to its religious aspect.

Our Leaders

Who were our leaders? Our first leaders were young Swiss scholars who knew Zwingli intimately and who had worked with him during the earlier stages of his reform. The best known names among those of us who came from the Swiss group are: Conrad Grebel, Felix Manz, George Blaurock, Simon Stumpf and Wilhelm Reublin. If any one of these can be called "father" of our faith it is Conrad Grebel.

Another scholar, professor, and priest who joined our group in preaching against infant baptism in 1525 was Balthasar Hubmaier. Others who labored with Hubmaier in South Germany were Hans Denck the mystic, whom some have called the "Anabaptist Pope," Michael Sattler who was instrumental in drawing up our earliest confession of faith, and Jacob Hutter who later went to Moravia where he organized some of our Brethren into Christian Communism. This group was later known as the Hutterites.

The Role of Menno Simons

In Holland we were led by such men as Melchior

Ioffman, who was a tanner by profession, and Jan Iatthys, who preached a militant type of millenarian- m and who lead the Muenster tragedy. Both of iese men preached a radical chiliastic gospel which d many astray. Adam Pastor and Sebastian Frank ere the theological radicals in the group. Dirk and bbe Phillipps were the brothers of the most signifi- int influence. They were well versed in Latin and reek and were among the closest co-laborers with 'enno Simons. Our greatest and most reknowned ader in Holland was Menno Simons (1496-1561). 'hen he was forty he renounced the Catholic faith, id for the next twenty-five years he worked among , preaching the Gospel, organizing new congrega- ons, reviving old ones and writing in defense of our ith. Menno Simons was not our founder, but rather e man who organized us for action—for at that ne we were composed of many scattered and con- sed groups.

Hold Unique Retreat

'On August 17, the young people of the Halstead, insas, Mennonite Church gathered at Springdale · their annual one-day retreat. The C. E. Society ain sponsored the retreat and planned the pro- am. The day began with registration at 9:30, lowing which the retreat's special speaker led · morning worship and the instruction period. the afternoon after settling a large picnic dinner playing catch, ping pong, and loafing, Rev. Wedel the group in singing several negro spirituals. en all present were divided into two large "com- tees," with an adult leader in charge of each up. The one discussed what sort of programs wished to have in the coming year, including ious suggestions for special speakers and other ys of stimulating a greater interest among the mbers. The other group discussed the various jects and parties to be undertaken. The two ups then again assembled on the lawn for a per- of fun songs. The remainder of the afternoon ; spent in playing group games, ping pong, and ball. After the evening meal and song service, day was closed by an inspiring message by the eat speaker. Judging from the attendance and iusiasm shown, this project has become definitely blished as an annual affair."

itor's note: As far as we know no other young ple's group in the General Conference conducts a one-day retreat as described above. Perhaps, r C. E. societies might also find such a retreat excellent means of planning and improving the . activities of the year. Last year it was our ilege to be present at the first such retreat held he group; its possibilities impressed us very h.—rw.)

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—The Northern Light is the young people's paper of the Northern District Conference. Miss Hermie Preheim, a busy school teacher and active church worker, is the editor. In answer to some questions, she writes the following about The Northern Light: "The paper is sent to the various leaders of the young people's work of the General Conference, to missionaries, and others interested in the work of the Northern District, and to the young and 'old' people of the churches. They pay either individually or by mass subscription. The latter means the young people's organizations of the various churches pay for the subscriptions. In our church, the Salem (South) Church, our Y. P. C. E. sends the paper to the twenty-seven boys in CPS and the regular military camps. Out of nineteen churches that have reported eleven have adopted the mass plan, and eight have the individual plan. Our circulation now is 580. The paper is published four times a year... The Pine Hill Printery, located only two miles from my home, does the printing job."

—Rev. Harold Gross brought the morning message to the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, on August 20. Rev. Gross is planning to continue his graduate work in theology and philosophy at the University of Iowa, where he attended last year. After graduation from seminary, he taught at Freeman Junior College. He is a member of the Bethany Mennonite Church, Freeman.

—From Hill City (Black Hills) Camp, Vernon Ratzlaff (Mt. Lake, Minn.) writes: "Our camp is located in one of the most beautiful spots in the United States. It is located in the heart of the Black Hills. Around here is good fishing, good hiking, beautiful scenery. Here in the Black Hills one sees the beauty of God in nature. We live, one might say, in a world of our own. Hill City is about eight miles from camp. We find things with which to occupy ourselves despite our distance from any community. We have a chorus of about twenty members. There are several kitten-ball teams in camp that play several times a week. Ping Pong is also a favorite game among many of the campers. The project, we believe is a very worthwhile one. It is now running in two shifts. The truck drivers are competing among themselves to se who can haul the most clay which will make up the core of the dam."

The Northern Light

—Butterfield, Minnesota: At their May meeting the young people decided to take care of the church lawn. So lawn mowers whirred before the next prayer meeting. In June the Young People's Fellowship group had a picnic at the Henry Penner Creek.

—On Conference Sunday the Newton Menonite C. E. invited the Bethel College Young Paople to share with them an evening of fellowship. Much inspiration was received from the three speakers. Miss Emma Ruth of the Pacific District Conference spoke on "The challenge of the Christian Church to Young People." Esko Loewen told of the M.C.C. and its activities. The program was concluded by Dr. Bauman's message on "The Relationship of Christian Faith to Health and Sickness."—reported by Marjorie Linscheid.

—Thirty-one churches from Kansas, Oklahoma, and Nebraska, were represented at the Western District Retreat this year.

—The Young People's Choir of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, gave a program of eleven numbers on the evening of August 13.

—A concert of sacred music was given by the joint choirs of the First and Second Mennonite Churches of Beatrice, Nebraska, on the evening of August 24. Miss Anna Wiebe directed.

—Members of the First Mennonite Church, Lehigh, Kansas, who are in CPS are: Roland Duerksen, Colorado Springs; Arnold Krause, Vineland, New Jersey; William Hiebert, Mt. Pleasant, owa; and Elmer Janzen, Harrisburg, Pa.

—Acording to a recent issue of the Church Messenger of the Eden Mennonite Church, Schwenksville, Pa., none of the young men are in CPS.

Selected Responsive Reading:

Leader: What vision of unity among men of east, west, north, and south came to the prophet of old?

Group: Isa. 2:2,3,4

Leader: And what vision of brotherhood came to Peter?

Group: Acts 10:28

Leader: What did Paul say about brotherhood?

Group: Acts 17: 24-28

Leader: What did John say about those who did not practice brotherhood?

Group: I John 4:20

Leader: And what was the commandment of Jesus?

Group: Matt: 5:23,24

Prayer: On brotherhood

Remarks: A short time after Pearl Harbor the War Department issued orders to evacuate all persons of Japanese ancestry, both citizens and aliens, from California, Oregon, Washington, and parts of Arizona. This was the first time in the history of America that there had been such a sweeping order for mass evacuation. It meant that thousands of families were hurriedly moved from their homes, churches, and jobs to relocation centers located inland. They suddenly found themselves in crude and primitive quarters. Two types of Japanese make up the group: first, the Japanese-Americans, native-born and holding United States citizenship, who are known as Nisei; second, those born in Japan, and therefore ineligible for American citizenship who are called Issei. Since the Nisei are American citizens, plans were eventually made to release 70,000 of those who are considered loyal, and to relocate them in areas over the continent where they are welcomed and can find jobs or attend schools. Before allowed to leave the relocation camp, each person is thoroughly investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. About 15,000 Japanese considered to be disloyal are being held in a single center where they are under guard.

Questions and Discussion

WHAT SHOULD BE THE CHRISTIAN TREATMENT OF MINORITIES? Clarence Dykstra former head of the Selective Service has said that the difference between democracy and dictatorship is in the treatment of racial, political, and religious minorities. Couldn't it also be said that the difference between Christian and pagan ethics is the treatment of enemies? For example, the Japanese-American, for the most part, is one or two generations removed from our political enemy, Japan. But, contrary to popular opinion the majority of these folks are thoroughly American in speech, taste, customs, clothing. In Wadsworth, Ohio, last winter the high school had a chapel program presented by four Japanese-American students of Oberlin College. All were American citizens, born in California and Washington. If the Wadsworth students hac closed their eyes they would have thought tha speaking to them were four typical American coeds. They were serious, but full of fun and immensel human. They had three concerns (1) That the relocation camps would become permanent like ou Indian Reservations (2) That they would be sen back to Japan, a nation foreign to them (3) Tha Americans would be more hostile to having them relocate in new communities after the war. All fou of these students were members of a Christia church. Over half of these Japanese-Americans ar Christians. Churches of all denominations are a present conducting successful Christian preachin missions in the Relocation Centers. Despite the deep feeling of hurt the gospel of Christ present a compelling ray of hope, the light from Calvary' Cross is always the hope of lost humanity.

WHAT IS THE SPECIAL ROLE OF MENN NITES IN THIS PROBLEM? What if a youn Mennonite boy or girl whose forefathers were bor in Russia were told to return to that country? Hi plight would be similar to that of the Japanes American who is told to return to Japan. Bot would find these "old countries" alien and foreig o them. The same point could be made in terms f Germany, Holland, Poland and France, the nations of Mennonite emigration. Therefore, doesn't t particularly behoove a religious minority like Mennonites to show profound Christian sympathy or these 70,000 people who have been denied the undamental liberties our people actually enjoy this ery minute in America? To ask the question is to nswer it.

WHAT CAN BE DONE?

- Send gifts or write letters to young people in the Centers. Addresses may be received from either the American Friends Service Committee, 20 South 12th St., Philadelphia, Pa., or the Brethren Service Committee, Elgin, Ill.
- If it is possible to relocate a family in your community write the War Relocations Authority, Washington, D. C., for complete details.
- Pray for these unfortunate victims and bear no prejudice or hatred toward them in your own hearts. Apply the story of the Good Samaritan.
- Support with renewed vigor the missionary activity of the church which provides the only basic answer to a strife-torn world.
- Pray that God may lead some Mennonite agency into a direct ministry to the Japanese-Americans.

—Barbara C. Smucker

EPTEMBER 14—"And hereby we do know that e know him, if we keep his commandments. He at saith, I know him, and keepeth not his comandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." John 2:3,4. Am I a Christian? The test is simple. o I keep His commandments as I am motivated ' his love? The Apostle John invariably identifies e keeping of His commandments with the posssion of His love. The Beloved Disciple has itten that we might know that we have eternal life. ır conduct is not the basis of this salvation, but it the basis of this knowledge. Irrevocably connect- with the commandments of Christ is the Great mmission, for in its fulfillment the love of God iches its fruition as we thus hasten His return.

PTEMBER 15—"Finally, brethren pray for us, it the word of the Lord may have free course, and glorified, even as it is with you." II Thess. 3:1. meone has said, "The secret of all our failure is ' failure in secret prayer." Prayer, to be effectual, st always be altruistic in attitude; it dare not selfish. If the Apostle Paul, the foremost of missnaries, with all of his innate ability and spiritual ver valued the prayers of other believers, surely se of us engaged in this new work depend upon the ercession of Christians at the home base. Through yer we share our efforts, our responsibilities, and successes. May God bless you as you pray!

Pneumonia "Guinea-Pig Unit

The CPS men who were at Pinehurst, North Carolina, for the past two months, serving as human guinea pigs for medical research in atypical pneumonia, have disbanded for a two-weeks recuperation period, or longer if there are any ill effects. Said Dr. Abernethy, "Well, it's over now, boys, school is out. No more blood lettings or daily catechisms, no more throat cultures on an empty stomach . . . I don't know where we could have found a finer and more cooperative group of men anywhere." A second group of men have now arrived and will serve for a two months period. Forty-five men are in the group, fifteen of which are from Mennonite camps.

RELIEF

Clothing Shipment to France

Negotiations have been completed to send five tons of clothing to France. The shipment will consist mostly of women's and children's apparel, and will be distributed in the war devastated areas in the province of Normandy. It is hoped that two of the Mennonite workers in England will accompany this shipment to France and supervise its distribution.

Refugee Work in Switzerland

Because Switzerland is a neutral country in the heart of a war-torn continent, large groups of refugees have flocked there for a haven. By January 1, 1944, there were 70,500 foreign refugees in Switzerland. While the Swiss themselves are giving great assistance to these refugees, a considerable amount of help is needed from the outside. Through recent contacts with Fritz Gerber, a Swiss Mennonite pastor at Langnau, plans have been worked out whereby the Mennonites in America will send $500 per month for six months to assist in the refugee work there.

C.P.S. Men to Puerto Rico

Four CPS men have left Miama for Puerto Rico within the past week, and two more will leave in the coming wek. Harry Weirich, Hugh Hostetler, Roland Kauffman left on the morning of August 14; Victor Buler left on August 17; Clarence Uuruh will leave August 19; Royal Snyder, August 24.

Carol Diler, R. N., Pandora Ohio, who will serve as an educational nurse at the La Plata Hospital, will also leave Miama on the morning of August 19.

JOTTINGS

—Missionary H. J. Brown has been asked to serve the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, during the month of October, while Rev. Erland Waltner is on leave of absence for the church and camp visitation program.

—Rev. and Mrs. Albert Claassen will carry on the Indian mission work at Clinton, Oklahoma, while Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Ediger go on furlough. The Foreign Mission Board has called Brother and Sister Claassen to serve for a period of six months. They are to begin October 1. About thirty years ago Brother and Sister Claassen served eight years as missionaries to the Indians of Oklahoma. During that time they began language study. So going to Clinton will, in many respects, seem to them like a home-coming. Brother and Sister Claassen are now at home in Beatrice, Nebraska, where they served the Second Mennonite Church for the past several years.

—Seventy years ago the Russian Mennonites settled on the plains of Kansas.

—Dr. J. H. Langenwalter brought the morning message to the Bethel College Mennonite Church on Au gust 27, Education Sunday. His subject was "Christian Discipleship Tomorrow."

—Herald Mennonite Church, Bessie, Oklahoma: Fi teen persons were baptized and received into th church on August 6. This was the largest numbe baptized in any one year in the history of the church Mrs. C. B. Friesen, who was operated on in Moun tain Lake, Minnesota, last spring, is regaining nor mal health but until now has not been strong enoug to make the return trip to Oklahoma. Present pro spects are that she may be able to go home soon Rev. C. B. Friesen is pastor of the Herald Church —The Bergtal Church, Corn, Oklahoma, celebrate its fiftieth anniversary on August 27.

—The Waldo Harders of Oraibi, Arizona, hav announced the arrival of little Carolina Ruth.

—The Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington, observed Conference Sunday by having various members report on the work of the different conference boards and committees. August 27 was observed as "Back to School Day."

—The First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas, observed "Education Sunday". Dr. H. A. Fast of Bethel College brought the message on Sept. 3.

—The editor had the privilege of bringing the morning message to the Burrton Mennonite Church on August 27. Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Epp were gone on vacation.

—Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: A collection was held on August 13 for The Christian Workers' Institute, which was recently held at North Newton. The church also observed "Education Sunday" recently.

—Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas: A mission festival is to be held in October. In the morning the pastor, Henry Franzen, is to be installed as elder. A musical program is to be given in the evening. Addresses by outside speakers will be given on the afternoon program. At a recent church meeting, committee was authorized to purchase a parsonage.

—Churches are acquiring parsonages. The church at Wolf Point, Montana, dedicated one not very long ago. The Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, has purchased one. The Deer Creek, Oklahoma, Church is working on a parsonage deal, as well as he Buhler Church mentioned above. Undoubtedly here are others that do not come to our mind right ow.

—First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: A service of appreciation was held recently for Rev. H. E. Wiens and Rev. I. J. Dick. Rev. Wiens filled the pulpit while Rev. and Mrs. Dick took a trip of over 5,000 miles. They made ten stopovers in five states. After enjoying the hospitality and fellowship of many Christian friends, Rev. and Mrs. Dick returned home and to their work in the First Church. Rev. Dick related experiences of the recent trip at the service mentioned above.

—"At Hoffnungsau, Inman, Kansas, Conference Sunday proved to be an interesting day. Special services in the forenoon included "The Status of our Conference Today" by Rev. C. H. Voth and "Our Conference Future" by Rev. Albert M. Gaeddert. An educational sermon was presented by Rev. A. J. Dyck, local pastor, on August 27. A special offering for Bethel College was taken on that day. The two church mission societies, called the "Happy Hour Circle," and "Sr. Ladies' Aid Society are busy with the CPS canning project and are getting ready for the annual mission "sale" in November. A third mission society has been partly organized this month with a senior sponsor, Martha Unruh Regier. This group includes high school girls up to approximately the age of twenty. Lavina Ediger is the president and Bertha Neufeld, the secretary-treasurer.

Two social gatherings within the last several weeks have been the Young People's League picnic, and the Christian Endeavor social. Since the Hoffnungsau Church has been taking part in community union services, the C. E. had been disbanded for the summer months. The picnic brought a large audience to the first fall meeting. An informal panel discussion was given by the fifteen "retreat" girls who attended the Camp Wood Mennonite Retreat. Bertha Fern Regier was the director of the discussion. Also Anna Adrian reported on the popular book, "Humiliation With Honor" by Vere Brittain.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 11

Bluffton College will open for the new academic year on Monday, September 11. The first few days will be given to registration, freshmen testing, and orientation. The first chapel service will be held Wednesday morning, at which time President Remseyer will speak to the students. Classes will meet for the first sessions on Thursday.

The faculty will meet for a devotional meeting on Sunday afternoon, September 10. The discussion will center around what the college ought to be doing during the coming year to improve the spiritual life of the campus. Following are the topics to be discussed and the discussion leaders.

"What ought the college be doing to cultivate the finest tastes and manners?" —Russel Lantz

"What ought the college be doing to bring students to a sane and vital interest in God and the work of the church?" —Rev. J. N. Smucker

"What ought the college be doing to meet the needs of the home church communities?"
—Rev. Forrest Musser

"What ought the college be doing in relation to the peace testimony of the church?"
—Edna Remseyer

"What ought the college be doing to stimulate interest in missions?" —Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker

It is hoped that this discussion will lead to practical suggestions which will enrich the life of the campus and inspire students to a higher type of Christian living.

After the discussion meeting the faculty members and their wives will have a pot luck supper in the Ropp Hall dining room.

New faculty members include Rev. Paul Shelly, who will take over the work of the Bible department. He is about to complete work on his doctorate in religious education at Columbia University. Rev. Frank J. Batterson will teach Spanish and likely also a course in Latin American history. He has had many years experience on the mission field in South America. Carl Smucker will teach some courses in sociology, among which will be a course entitled "Introduction to the Field of Social Work." Mr. Smucker has been on the staff of the State Welfare Department for a number of years and so is admirably fitted both by training and experience for this work.

Enrollment figures are difficult to forcaste, due to the general unsettled conditions. Young people are uncertain in days like this. Many are putting off their education who will later regret that they have not taken advantage of opportunities to prepare themselves for greater usefulness. It is likely that the total enrollment will be slightly lower than that of last year.

A Meditation

By Erland Waltner

"Be not deceived, God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Gal. 6:7

Talmage C. Johnson in a recent periodical relates how someone once asked Dr. S. Parks Cadman for the meaning of the above verse. He replied, "The text simply means: Don't kid yourself; you can't make a fool out of the Almighty."

This indeed is wise counsel. To imagine that we can live in sin without suffering its consequences is imply to kid ourselves. To suppose that it does not really matter whether we believe in Christ as our peronal Saviour—when God has said this is of first mportance—is to kid ourselves. To think that we can sow "wild oats" and then reap good fruit is to kid ourselves.

Why should we keep on kidding ourselves? As ong as we refuse to take God seriously in those maters He has shown us His way we are still trying to make a fool out of God." This we can never do. n such an attempt there is but one fool and that is ot God.

The housewife recognizes that it does make a differnce as to what ingredients she puts into her cake. The farmer knows that it makes a difference as to what kind of seed he sows. The chemist knows it makes a difference as to what he puts into his test ube. Yes, and the Christian has discovered that it makes a tremendous difference as to what a man akes into his life.

To kid God is impossible. To kid others is unind. But to kid ourselves is unpardonable. Let us top "kidding ourselves."

The Open Window

"His windows being open in his chamber toward erusalem." Daniel 6:10.

There is nothing remarkable in opening a window. is one of the common acts which we do without thought. Yet every time that Daniel opened that ttice it spoke of a heart that was traveling to Jerusam. Daniel was a man that was true to his God nd proved it in his every day life. Daniel was in re distress. A crises had come to his people and him that drove him on his knees to God. Men were forbidden to pray for thirty days, save alone in the name of Darius. Daniel realized the peril in which he was and he went into his house to pray, his windows being open toward Jerusalem.

When Daniel opened his window, as his custom was, it was not Babylon that he desired to see; his heart was far away in his own country. Just as the emigrant dreams of the mountains and moors where he was born, so Daniel in exile, heartsick if not homesick, craved for the land and the Temple that he loved. He could not see them; they were beyond his vision. It would bring them no nearer to fling wide the lattice. Yet an instinct that everyone can understand moved him to open the window toward Jerusalem. And as he was on his knees before God the life of Babylon became a heavy burden on his heart, a burden that he could not bear alone but had to take to God.

We too are living in a time of crisis. Is our window open towards the Heavenly Jerusalem? Daniel could never think of going back to Jerusalem, while we have the assurance that some day we shall reach that city. Let us not grow weary in waiting but daily open our window towards that city and in that way become acquainted with the Heavenly Jerusalem from afar.—Rev. H. B. Schmidt

SEEDS

Ah, who shall say
What vast expansions shall be ours that day?
What transformations of this house of clay,
To fit the heavenly mansions and the light of day?
Ah, who shall say?

But this we know—
We drop a seed into the ground,
A tiny, shapeless thing, shrivelled and dry,
And, in the fulness of its time, is seen
A form of peerless beauty, robed and crowned
Beyond the pride of any earthly queen,
Instinct with loveliness, and sweet and rare
The perfect emblem of its Maker's care.

This from a shrivelled seed?—
Then may man hope indeed!

A Glimpse into Hopi Land

By Anna Baerg

It was my privilege this summer to teach in the different daily vacation Bible schools on our mission field in Arizona. I assisted Waldo Harders, Daniel Shirmers, and Fred Johnsons. Harders are taking Rev. Suderman's place, while they serve in the church at Berne, Indiana. The Shirmers and Johnsons are our native missionaries. The Harders are stationed at Oraibi, the Shirmers at Hotevilla, and the Johnsons at Moencopi.

I arrived on the mission field on June 6. The Shirmers came to get me from Winslow which is the closest town, or should I say railroad station, and still it is seventy-eight miles away. During the seventy-eight mile ride we got acquainted, and we soon felt that we were truly brothers and sisters in Christ. They also taught me my first Hopi sentence, so that I could greet the Harders in Hopi when I got there. The sentence was "Asqali Ne Beto." This may not be spelled right, but some friends who know the Hopi may be able to guess that it means "Thank you, I've come."

We all worked very hard for the course we taught in our Bible schools, but I think we feel that it was worth the effort. We taught a course called God's Clock of the Ages. The lessons were divided into nine parts. We took up Creation, The Fall, The Birth of Jesus, The Crucifixion, Why Jesus Died, The Resurrection, The Ascension, Serving Jesus, and The Second Coming of Christ. There were three very fine lessons in this course for giving the boys and girls a chance to accept the Lord Jesus as their personal Saviour. Quite a few made the decision, and we are praying that they will grow to be strong Christians.

We made our own workbooks which required considerable time. We prepared for 300 students, however, we had only 278 enrolled. Of course, they didn't all come everyday, but we did have a fine attendance. At lower Oraibi four of my students learned thirty-five verses in nine days, and some made the decision to take the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour.

The missionary's Sunday is a busy one. This is a typical Sunday at Oraibi: Sunday morning church service begins at 10:30, however, the Harders have to be there by 10:00 to ring the bell. Then they have forty-five minutes song service. The Hopis sing well and they love to "make a joyful noise unto the Lord." (They know so many choruses at Oraibi that we had a hard time finding new ones for the children to learn in Bible school.) After that, Sunday School classes are held and then a preaching service. We were seldom back home before 1 p.m. Then we hurriedly ate dinner and after that we went to upper Oraibi for Sunday School there. After the service there we had street meeting. By then it was time to go home to do chores and eat supper. Now Mr. Harder has an instruction class immediately after street meeting for those who so recently accepted Christ. Usually we couldn't stop to wash the dishes, because it was time for the evening service. Again we had a generous part of the evening devoted to singing, then some Bible questions (they know the answers), and a preaching service. By 11:00 p.m. we had reached the mission home. Won't you pray for these missionaries as they labor in the Lord's vineyard?

(Written for The Mennonite by Anna Baerg)

A street meeting in Old Oraibi: On Sunday afternoons the Oraibi Christians together with their missionary go into the village of Oraibi to preach to the Hopis there. After the singing of several songs, both in Hopi and in English, two or three of the Christians preach the Word of God. Often they will re-preach the Sunday School lesson or the sermon which they heard from the missionary in the morning service. In the picture above you see some of the village children listening to the Bible story as Mrs. Suderman tells it from a Sunday School chart. At such street meetings we enjoy only an invisible audience. Usually some of the village people wil sit behind the door or around the corner of the house. Of late a few dare to sit outside of their house to hear the Word of God preached.

The house to the left is the home of the village chief, Tawaqwaptewa. He is the chief of Old Oraibi and of Moencopi. The house as you see it is built of rock and plastered over with adobe. The one to the right belongs to a Hopi, named Don Talayesva. A few years ago he was paid to write a diary of his life. This diary was printed under the auspices of a professor from Yale University. The title of the book was called "Sun Chief." It portrays in detail the evil life of a Hopi Indian and under God's Holy light comes under God's verdict as He gives it to us in Romans, chapter I. —Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Suderman.

CHRISTIANITY SHOULD MEAN:

Christ the origin of my life. Christ the essence of my life. Christ the model of my life. Christ the aim of my life. Christ the reward of my life. The preaching of Christ the business of my life. The presence of Christ the cheer of my life. The love of Christ the power of my life. The will of Christ the law of my life. CHRIST IS MY LIFE!

On Confessing

"Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed." James 5:16. It is not easy to confess our faults. We like to hide them and "save face." It is much more pleasant to our ego to point out the lack of spirituality in someone else and to confess his many faults. The latter tends to make us feel exalted and thankful that we are not as other men. To bolster our ego we may even be driven to find fault where there is none. For the same reason we may be led to "pass the buck" when confronted with spiritual failure in joint responsibility, such as exists between home and church and church and school. But all of this is unhealthy. A rotten spot on an apple can be covered with tape, but that will not remove the rottenness and its deteriorating effects.

Confessing our faults one to another has a mutual cleansing effect. Confession by one Christian is such an inviting, winsome example that it is easier than otherwise for the listener to begin confessing his own faults. Relief comes as we uncover that about which we have been ashamed—but silent. Frankly facing our faults we become more ready and willing to let God operate on us and make us whole. Once confessed, faults can be prayed about. The need for surrender to God becomes evident to us. And as it does, God can do something with us. Confession—diagnosis—comes before the healing that we all desire.

How blessed it is to have a friend so true and loving that faults can be confessed! This hunger has driven the members of a certain religious movement to make much of confession. Perhaps, they have overdone it. Though not belonging to this group, we too face the need for confession—"confession is good for the soul." We need in the Christian Church friends to whom we can confess our faults—for who is faultless?—rw.

A Retreat for Ministers

A retreat for the ministers of our conference would undoubtedly facilitate spiritual growth in all participating. Such a retreat could be an opportunity for the ministers "to get together." In it they could learn to know each other and share insights. Eating, sleeping, working, playing, studying, and praying together there could be a "give and take" that would make for "wholeness" on the part of all concerned. From work camps for young people and ashrams, ideas can be gotten for conducting such a retreat. The difficulty of getting all active pastors together is a big one. Yet, perhaps, this should be tackled in view of the Pentecostal experience that such a retreat might be part of the pastor's vacation could possibly be spent in such a retreat. As it is some of our pastors have met each other. District minister's conferences are a move in right direction, but in some cases they seem to be too unrestricted and too brief for the help that many look for.—rw.

Our Church Papers and Their Influence

N. B. Grubb, founder of The Mennonite, once made this statement relative to the influence of the church papers: ". . . ask a minister who serves a congregation, among whose families the church papers and other church literature is widely diffused, as to his experience and he will tell you that his people are wide awake and active, and that no proper appeal for any just cause is made in vain; that he can depend on them to stand by him, bearing the full share of their burdens; that it affords him pleasure to bring before them the general interests of the church, because it always brings a sympathetic response. He will tell you that his people delight to hear of the progress of missions, and of the growth of the church's literary and charitable institutions. He will assure you of the constant increase in contributions to the Lord's treasury . . . Some time ago, I asked a pastor who were his most active workers and the most liberal and cheerful supporters of the cause of the church, and this was his reply: 'The people of my congregation that work and give cheerfully and liberally are those who carefully and regularly read our church papers and manifest a deep interest in all our church literature.' "

You Can Help

The work of our conference can always be improved. Our boards and committees are aware of that and welcome helpful suggestions. Such suggestions have recently come to a board and a committee from a group of men who are very much interested in the work of our conference. Although the members of this group do not hold offices on boards and committees, they have already made some very valuable suggestions. These suggestions have come out of analytical discussions of problems facing our conference. The group pointed out specifically wherein they felt the work of the board and the committees to be weak. But their discussions have also led to suggested remedies. So following their statement of the points of weakness, they listed specific remedial steps that might be undertaken. Thus they refrained from baffling conference officers with mere negative criticism but went on to suggest something positive. There is an encouraging note about such helpfulness. It gives conference officers the benefit of the thinking and praying of those not in office. Too frequently a great deal of negative criticism is heaped upon men in positions of great responsibility. Such men need definite, positive suggestions, given in a spirit of love. By contributing the latter you can help the work of your conference.—rw.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Latest Word From India

(From a letter by Dr. H. E. Dester)

August 5, 1944

Dear Dr. Richert:

On my way to Pendra Road to attend a Board meeting, I stopped off at Champa. Arriving here, I find Brother P. W. Penner suffering a great deal because of a carbuncle. His condition is serious, although he has a chance to recover. He knows well that he may not recover, and I think is fully resigned to whatever may be the Lord's will. It will, no doubt, be hard for him not to be concerned about the Secretary-Treasury work, which is no small matter.

The Penners had been in Mauhadih. He had several small pimples. This one to the left side on his back increased in size, became very painful, and finally compelled him to remain in bed. They left Mauhadi then. Waltner and Ratzlaff were able to bring them in most of the way by auto. They were considering sending him to Bilaspur, when they received my letter that I was coming. We are much in prayer, hoping that the Lord will see fit to heal him.

We plan to spend September and October in the hills. Have hopes of getting an Indian doctor soon for Jagdeeshpur. The other missionaries are quite well, except we hear that Mr. Isaac is suffering from scitica. Mr. Jantzen seems to have improved much in the hills. I guess I should become a little more a dictator in ordering missionaries to get their rest. The Jantzens have a very difficult field.

With Sincere Greetings,

H. E. Dester

Note:

The above report calls for intercessory prayer for the recovery of Brother P. W. Penner. Sciatica also can become serious, and may we also remember Brother Isaac who does relief work, and thank the Lord for the improved health of Brother Jantzen. Let us especially remember the hard field at Korba, where the Jantzens are stationed, and where the enemy is very busy. The devil is afraid of prayers in Jesus' name.

P. H. Richert, Sec.

CORRECTION

This correcton is for the article "Review China Mission Work" on page four of The Mennonite of August 29. Wherever the term "Honan Province" appears in this article substitute the right term "Hopei Province." Our China mission work lies in Hopei Province and not in Honan Province.—rw.

What of the Evangelistic Work?

Results in evangelistic work are hard to tabulate. Spiritual impact on lives refuses to be pigeonholed. Yet as we look back over the past three years, we find a number of things to encourage us.

Baptisms numbered 536 during this time. No doubt, there could have been more and should have been more. Three couples graduated from our Bible School in Janjgir and are now in the work as responsible leaders. We expect to have five students in school this year.

The Samelan (sort of a District conference) continues to function binding our Phuljhar churches into one whole. There is a printed constitution, in line with the larger conference constitution, which has been a big help in stabilizing the work.

For the Samelan budget of 1939 the Mission gave a grant of one rupee for every rupee given by the churches. The plan was to decrease the proportion of the grant by two annas every year. A rupee contains 16 annas. This past year the mission gave only 6 annas to the rupee given by the churches. But the budget has increased so that this six annas to the rupee given this year was a larger sum than the rupee per rupee in 1939.

Until last year all the church groups of this area were represented at the annual Hindustani conference as one and went as "the Jagdishpur church." Churches out in the district with a membership of more than a hundred resented being anonymous but there seemed no way out. With changes in the rules of the church representation at the annual Hindustani church conference a solution to the problem was found. The whole district has been divided into six areas, and all the church groups, big and little, have been organized into one church. The plan met with an enthusiastic reception and church names were chosen by the groups. They are as follows: Bethel (Jagdishpur as center), Eden (including Sukhri where our work started), Antioch (where the first Christians in Phuljhar state were found), Salem, Bethany, and Emmanuel. These six organized churches were welcomed into the Hindustani conference in January and later a group of conference officers visited each church in the name of the conference.

It remains true that our old enemy, the Devil, wants a hand in the running of the churches. Recently, as the missionary went to different villages he seemed to find nothing but trouble and overwhelming problems everywhere. The depression became so great that he prayed the Lord to send him some encouragment. And He did, in the form of the business meeting of the Emmanuel church. This church has over 300 members, but as they live in a number of villages they cannot all come but send representatives. Forty-five people came together for the meeting on a hot day and stayed all day to consider the needs of the church and to find solutions to some of the difficult problems they were facing. As they prayerfully worked together they experienced the Spirit's leading and things were accomplished. Of course, not everything went smoothly all the time. Now and then one or the other got a "bit warm under the collar." In spite of this being the hot season and the meeting out under the trees, yet at two o'clock they had energy enough to sing one song after another. Of the forty-five men out, only five were mission paid. The others had left their work at a sacrifice on the Lord's work. Is it not encouraging? We ask for your continued intercession for the work here. We definitely believe it to be the Lord's work, and we want to glorify Him in all things.

Christ of the C. P. S. Road

By Harry Martens

Recently there came off the press a book entitled, "Christ of the American Road," by E. Stanley Jones. As part of this larger road there is a Christ of the C. P. S. road. Jones tells us of a Chinese Christian girl who on the eve of landing in America spent the night in prayer to be made worthy to land on and live in a Christian land. She soon met up with disappointments and disillusionment. Some C. P. S. men could tell a similar story. There is not much that remains but a hope when we look at "Christ of the American Road." And, too, there are things that remain to be hoped for as we look at the Christ of the C. P. S. road. However, let us look at the other side as well. On the American road we find freedom of worship and respect for conscience. On this American road we find it possible to have a Christ of he C. P. S. road. We thank God for that. Christ of the C. P. S. road, what do we mean? On July 31, 1944, 7,281 American men were walking on the C. P. S. road in at least thirty-three states, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and Alaska.

In Genesis 2:15 we read, "And the Lord God took he man and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and keep it." In other words, man is a teward, a care-taker of God's handiwork,—God's reation. This we try to do even in this hour of detruction. On this C. P. S. road somewhat over 2,100 men are working to preserve and to foster the Amerian forests and parks—God's creation. There are early 2,000 men working at jobs to conserve the oil and promote irrigation projects to bring about a reater water and food supply, also in behalf of God's reation. Then, also, we find nearly 800 men on this C.P.S. read working at various types of farm service n order that God's highest creation—man, may have ood.

Jesus taught us to love our brother, be willing to erve and minister unto him. Jesus said of himself, The Son of man came not to be ministered unto but minister. . " (Matt. 20:28). We are to minister the sick and the needy. More than 150 en on the C.P.S. road have given their bodies to be perimented upon. They are subjected to various pes of diseases so that science may experiment with ntrols and cures in order that others may live. On is C.P.S. road we have more than 1,900 ministering the mentally and physically ill as well as 100 others orking at various other types of health projects. "For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward." (Mark 9:41). And, too, we remember Jesus' words when he said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matt. 25:40).

In other words, on this C. P. S. road there are working these American men trying to live as Christ taught them. They are taking Christ's teachings not as an ideal but as something to be lived right here and now. Men of the world hate war. They are looking for another "way of life." The men on the C.P.S. road say this other way must be the Jesus Christ way.

You say we need action, now. We need to make our stand known. Shout it from roof-tops, street-corners, through the newspaper, et cetera. I say we are making it known; however, can it not be done without the shouting? Let's say we do a little more living.

Don't you think if it could be said of these 7,281 American men working at various tasks in thirty-three states and several American possessions, they are truly filled with the spirit found in Jesus, and living by his spirit daily, that would be enough said? What do you think 7,281 American men working as missionaries for the cause of love and peace could mean for our cause of Christ on the American road? Let us present and live as nearly as possible the true Christ on the road of Civilian Public Service.

My Life and I

By Rev. H. Albert Claassen

(The following is the message given by Rev. H. Albert Claassen at the commencement of the 1944 class of the Mennonite Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska.)

To graduate is an honor among men. To face life at commencement means to scan life from the vantage point of an elevation, reached after a strenuous climb. Here we look over life's opportunities and the soul cries out, "Which way shall I take?"

The heart of a Christian may well reflect on the great fact: I have a life and what shall I do therewith? It has been laid into my hand to do therewith what seemeth good to me. I am profoundly conscious that my life is a gift to me. A gift most wonderful and full of meaning, for I know that I am fearfully and wonderfully made. My life is presenting me with beauty, pleasure, and power, to be, to enjoy, to choose. Deep down in my soul I know that the author and giver of my life can be none less than God Almighty. "To Him I owe life my all and all the things I have."

Beyond this I am fearfully conscious that my life is irreplaceable. It is fragile and delicate. It is in the province of my choice to spoil, ruin, break, forfeit, or criminally neglect my life. It is Satan who boasts, "All that a man hath will he give for his life." But it is Jesus who pleadingly warns me: "What shall a man give in exchange for his life?"

The Christian's inquiring heart will therefore at such important junctions on life's way specially inquire at the highest source of information, "Which way shall I take?" How shall I invest my life? In Psalm 16:11 there is remarkable testimony of one whom God inspired to write for you and me

"Thou wilt show me the path of life;
in thy presence is fulness of joy;
at thy right hand are pleasures for ever more.'

Is it not marvelous that amid the confusion of our day on the most vital questions of life the Holy Spirit testifies that God Himself stands ready to show to all who will humbly inquire, the path of life. Through all the biographies and promises of the Scriptures He portrays and reveals the working operation of His counsel, "Commit thy way unto the Lord: trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass."

The human heart craves joy. The Lord made us so. In His presence is found the fullness of joy. Your training has been for the ministry among the sad suffering, and dying. Your mind is stored with knowledge. Your hands are trained with skill for positive light, and soothing touch, to administer relief and healing to disease and pain-ridden bodies. Sin, sorrow, and pain are agencies which rob human beings of joy and pleasure. The presence of the Lord always ministers joy with the attending results of comfort and healing to all who will believe on Christ.

You are to be congratulated because of your choice to minister to the sick and dying. That is a most worthy and noble calling. Your faith in Christ and His word has led you to a deaconess hospital for training. Here you have received instruction on how to minister to the sick, relief and healing in their physical distress, and how to draw and attract them unto Him at whose right hand are pleasures for evermore. Use then well your life to invest the same in a ministry which is not centered upon temporal relief of pain only; but which seeks the comfort and healing of the soul by bringing the patient into the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ, the only healer of soul and body.

One little life,
'twill soon be past,
Only what's done in Christ will last.

The Mennonite Deaconess Hospital of Beatrice, Nebraska, is offering a two-year course in bedside nursing to young women between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five. Its aim is the training of women who possess the nursing temperament in a Christian environment. High school graduation is not required for entrance. An allowance of $30.00 a month is paid during the first eight months of the training period, $35.00 during the ninth to sixteenth months, and $40.00 during the last period of eight months. Students for the fall class should register before September 20. Classes will begin on October 3. For further information, write

La Plata Hospital Opened and Dedicated

Sunday, August 13, the 26-bed, Mennonite hospital n Puerto Rico was dedicated to serve the people of he La Plata Valley, and was officially opened. CPS men had worked since May changing the shell of an abandoned tobacco fertilizer warehouse into a hospital. The hospital is equipped with standard hospital beds, X-ray and laboratory equipment, and has a fully equipped operating room. CPS men ssisted in making much of the equipment such as tables and chairs. P. C. Hiebert, M.C.C. Chairman, was in Puerto Rico at the time of the dedication nd spoke at the occasion.

Puerto Rico News

M.C.C. Chairman, P. C. Hiebert, has returned from Puerto Rico and arrived in Akron August 19. He was present at the dedication of the new 26-bed ospital at LaPlata. This hospital was built by the CPS men connected with the unit.

Wyman Sundheimer, the last of the contingent of seven Mennonite CPS men to be assigned to Puerto Rico, recently, will leave Miami on Saturday, August 26. Mrs. Victor Buller, Newton, Kansas, will also leave in the near future. She will join Carol lick as a member of the teaching staff at the arranquitas, Baptist Academy.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Oh That Men Would Praise Jehovah for His Loving Kindness"

Greetings from the First Mennonite Church, Newton

In a church, as in the individual, the threads of joy and sorrow weave their purposed pattern. Sometimes they weave each their own separate shuttles—patches of light—patches of dark; sometimes their threads become so mingled, so one—weaving a varied pattern—so varied at times.

Light is always brighter when it looms from out the dark; joy holds a deeper throb when trial or testing, or sorrow has preceded it.

As a church, we have gone through months of testing, seeking, waiting. We needed an added shepherd for the sheep. Other events took place in our midst—many events—some glad, some sad. Great events there were that stirred our hearts: the passing of loved ones into the higher service for the King—the ordaining of gifted workers for the farther fields—for the ministry in other churches. What of our own beloved church? Where is the worker that would come to us? We prayed, we sought, we waited.

Overwhelming, at times, is the realization of God's outpouring love upon his struggling, sinful children! When, suddenly, into our midst He set the answer to our prayer—our hearts could scarcely grasp His love!

Rev. D. J. Unruh of Pandora, Ohio, answered our call to serve us in a joint ministry with Rev. J. E. Entz. We welcomed him and his family officially on Sunday morning, September 3, and "socially" the following evening.

The keynote of the Sunday morning welcome was one that resounded in all of our hearts. Rev. Entz had selected the marginal reading of Joel 2:23.

> "Be glad then, ye children of Zion and rejoice in the Lord your God: for he hath given you a teacher of righteousness."

Yes, at times the human heart must break forth in its joy for the goodness of God is great toward the children of men!

It is a joy to send forth workers into other fields—yes, even to send them, where they serve around the Master's feet—'tis joyous, too, to take them to our midst, to watch them in their toil, and thank.

—The correspondent.

A PRAYER FOR ALL ENGAGED IN AGRICULTURE

Almighty God, Lord of Heaven and Earth, in Whom we live and move and have our being; hear Thy people who call upon Thee; bless and prosper the labors of all who toil in the cultivation of the land, and grant that in due season we may gather in an abundant harvest, giving thanks unto Thee, to Whom the earth belongeth; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.—Industrial Christian Fellowship, London

Harold Herbert Gross, Freeman, South Dakota

SEPTEMBER 17—"And having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; ....whether things in earth or things above." Col. 1:20. Read Gal. 2:16-21. All reconciliation begins with God. At the heart of the gospel is the seeking God who has taken the iniative in reconciliation. The "blood of his cross" is the extreme to which God goes in re-establishing fellowship between himself and his creation. Paul says reconciliation is a cosmic affair—all of creation is involved in the need for it. Who today will not admit that nature—including the implements of science—is in travail and in need of reconciliation? But nature is human-centric, and its implements are in human hands, controlled by men estranged from God. Hence, reconciliation is fundamentally a concern between God and man.

SEPTEMBER 18—"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Ps. 133:1. Read I Cor. 13. Unity is the human counterpart of Divine-human reconciliation. The circuit of clear-channel human fellowship is rendered possible only as it is "filtered" by passing through the heart of God. The atonement reconciles man with man as it brings together God and man. Human relations cannot at best be legislated nor founded upon organization alone—they are too dynamic for that. They are a personal affair and not merely mechanical. Good relations originate in good wills: in wills made free by Christ. Man sees the life of his brother correctly only in terms of the life of God. Here alone lies hope for world peace!

SEPTEMBER 19—"He that is slow to wrath is of great understanding; but he that is hasty of spirit exalteth folly." Prov. 14:29. Read Prov. 15:1-14. Reconciliation with God is the dynamic beginning. But the Christian will need the constant exercise of enlightened judgment and keen discernment. As Paul says, he must "work out" his "salvation with fear and trembling." Being Christian is a serious and, at best, difficult occupation. It demands diligence sixty minutes in the hour, and twenty-four hours in the day. Man's hope lies in the fact that the Christian life is a living out of the life of God within him. The Christian life is the calm and well-ordered life: and hasty judgments are not becoming to it. Understanding is a God-given quality.

SEPTEMBER 20—"......but the Lord was not in the wind ..... the Lord was not in the earthquake ..... the Lord was not in the fire: and after the fire a still small voice." I Kings 19:11b, 12b. Read Isa. 30:8-15. God will not be found in the noise of windy argumentation; nor in the earthquake-like devisiveness of sectarian schisms; nor in the flaming hurry-scurry of activity. And yet, this has been the spirit of our age. Our theologies of "activism" and "scientism"— though pertinent in their places—need to learn that "in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." The Word which God utters may well be heard in the midst of the chaos of crisis. But as there is complete calmness in the very center of a cyclone funnel, where its center of power resides; likewise the Christian's power is found as he listens to God in the calmness of his own soul, where the "still small voice" speaks.

SEPTEMBER 21—". . . thou art careful and troubled about many things: But one thing is needful." Luke 10:41b, 42a. Read Matt. 7:24-34. Martha was the "activist" whose main concern was with things. Hence she was distracted and harried. She typifies our modern civilization of materialism which, like the "rich fool," is in danger of losing its soul. Mary was the calm, integrated individual, who had found that the needful thing is that of seeking first the kingdom of God—sitting at the feet of Christ. The needful thing today is for all individuals—and leaders of nations—to sit at the feet of Christ: to drink in Truth about themselves and about the only eternal kingdom.

SEPTEMBER 22—"Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out? And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief. If ye have faith . . . nothing shall be impossible unto you." Matt. 17:20. Read Luke 18:1-8. (We must remember that Christ was here speaking to his disciples and not to non-believers.) Is the message of the Kingdom and Christ too good to be true? Does it appear to be an impossibility? That is actually what a majority of churchmen say today. They say, in effect, that we must declare a moratorium on Christian principles while we fight the devil with his own kind of weapons. That is a brand of unbelief. It comes from what they call "realism" which amounts to centering main attention on the chaotic world while the Kingdom fades into unreality. "This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting"—focusing our minds and hearts on the God of the Kingdom.

SEPTEMBER 23—"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." Romans 1:16. Read Rom. 1:16-32. The Gospel is dynamite!—for the Greek word (dunamis) which is here translated "power" comes from the same root as our word for that terrific explosive. But one would never suspect that the Gospel is of such explosive proportions, were one to depend on the witness of the church today which places its sole confidence in the power of powder and nitro-glycerin. It adulterates the gospel dynamite until it loses its explosive quality. Unbelief is a compromise which always produces shame! The early church (with Paul) was not ashamed of the Dynamic Gospel, and it captured the world.

Christian Service

By Marjorie Linscheid

Self-Life or Christ-Life—this is the choice we all must make. If we choose self-life we choose lower-life, a life that is transient because it changes with every circumstance. But if we choose Christ-Life we choose a life that is higher, a life in which we will find ourselves in true relation to God and man.

We will then say with the Apostle Paul, "Forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the High Calling of God in Christ Jesus."

If we press toward this mark our lives will manifest themselves in some nature of Christian service. Truly the greatest contribution we can make to mankind is a useful life in Christ Jesus.

The best place to start this Christian service is in our daily living. This phase of Christian service is often overlooked because it seems to lack importance.

But it is in our every-day dealings with others, our conversations, our relationships with the family where most of us will have opportunities to witness for Christ. If we discipline our thoughts, words, and actions, we will truly be performing a Christian service. The world is looking for evidence that the Christ way of life works. It is up to us to present that evidence in our daily living.

There are those who strive for the high calling of God in Christ Jesus by devoting their lives to some phase of mission work. It has been said "Love towards God can best be shown by love toward fellowmen." If we have this love for our fellowmen we will want to share the gospel and the love of Christ with them. The mission field is a challenge to young people for Christian service.

Because of this war there is and will continue to be an untold amount of suffering. It is another challenge for us to help. This Christian service will need consecrated young people who will be willing to sacrifice some of their own comforts to go forth to aid these people physically and spiritually.

Prayer is another channel of Christian service in which all can partake. When done sincerely, prayer will bring great blessings on others as well as on ourselves. Prayer not only brings blessings, but it is also a Christian Service of unlimited power.

Whatever phase of Christian service we, as young people partake in—the important thing to remember is that we should leave a trail of light as evidence to the Christ way of life.

WHY?

It was Monday night at Camp Grottoes, Virginia. The clouds were hanging low. The lightning flashed and the thunder grumbled. Rain was falling steadily. At the sound of a telephone the lights went on and a man entered. "We have a call that a child is lost and they want about eight men to oin in the search," he said. Eight men dressed nd left. Soon it was dawn and the campers were agerly watching the road for the return of the men. The men returned, but no luck. All project men joined the search. Sympathy was with the rantic parents and the child. The men returned, oaking wet, torn clothing, scratched and weary. Once more the firm expression on their faces meant o luck. Some where in the mountain brush in the ain was little Doris Dean, hungry, alone, and afraid. The community was excited. Each day more and more people joined, hoping to rescue the child. Every ravine, brush and thicket was searched and ombed. After several days people began wondering if the child was still alive. Could a three and ne-half year old child stand eight inches of rainy weather, lightly clad, with nothing to eat for five days? People gathered from far and wide. Thousands took part. This child must be found—dead or alive! The parents were almost insane. Where is our Doris?—hungry, maybe wounded, perhaps dead? Saturday hundreds of students and people from far-away towns took part in the organized and reorganized search. A larger territory was undertaken. Even the most impossible parts were searched. But not a trace of the little girl. If they could just find Doris even if she were dead, even that would ease and calm her parents. Further up the mountain and further away from her home went the searching groups. Could it be that the child could wander almost seven miles up the mountains without food for five, yes six, days? But everything nearer the home was searched and researched. Determindly the men walked on with less hope each day. Many a prayer was uttered and the thought that the suffering child could still be alive led the men on. Walking near the mountain top, a searcher stopped instantly. Something moved near a brush a few feet away. Could it be Doris! A little head raised a few inches. "Doris—and still alive!" Thank God! The child was found. The parents were overjoyed. Yes, it cost hundreds of dollars, hundreds of gallons of gas, and thousands of man hours. But what of that? —She was found.

This was a misfortune. The child had wandered away. It was not planned, and it was worth every effort and penny spent. But over there billions and billions of dollars are spent in long and careful planning to build the planes and train men that guide the planes and aim the bombs that mean death and destruction. It puts not only one, but thousands upon thousands of men, women, and children in Doris Dean's lost condition. The home that sheltered the children in Mother's tender care, is now in ruins and the few life's provisions with it. Perhaps, one or more of the family is under the wreckage in pain and agony. Maybe a child escaped death and is frantic, hunting and crying for a Mother that is no more. Hungry, cold, alone, and afraid the child wanders on. The neighbor's house that stood there yesterday is shattered, and perhaps the boys of that house are wondering where Daddy is. The homes that stand in the distance may have something to eat, and some fire to warm them. But here comes another wave of planes, the trained men carefully guiding them and aiming the bombs. With the explosion there is DEATH. Perhaps some of the victims are pinned in the wreckage, screaming for help. How many are dead, no one knows until the ruins are cleared. Daddy is away from home. Maybe he is flying one of these planes, or aiming and dropping the deathly bombs. Or perhaps he is in the trench watching wave after wave of planes disappear in the distance, wondering whether his home still remains, or if one of those planes has shattered it, killing his wife and family. The survivors are homeless, without food and clothing. They move on, searching for shelter and things to satisfy their pangs of hunger.

Why do thousands of people spend money, gas, and time to rescue one little child that wandered away from home, while at the same time nations are spending billions of dollars and years of fighting, making millions of people, young and old, lost? Pronouncing their sentences death. What is to be won in this man-slaughter? Where are our freedoms? Is greed, selfishness, the love of money, the love of power and fame so monstrous that it is worth sacrificing millions of human lives to make personal gains? Or do the rulers of today not have the mental capacity to solve the problems as they arise? Are they at wits end, with killing waiting as the only answer?

Are we not all alike in the eyes of God? Don't other people breathe the same air as you and I? Are not their bones and body tissues built of the same material as yours, and mine and their blood as ours? Are not other people entitled to the same type of living, the same kinds of homes, the same opportunities as we would like to have for ourselves?

For thousands of years, nations have been trying to make and hold peace by arms and force: destroying civilizations, killing the strength of nations and finest of youth, producing weaker races, lowering moral standards, increasing the percentage of crimes, and leaving physically and mentally unfit men to carry on the races—then we call them civilized.

Despite history, we find the world in war today, still using the same old methods of force, arms, and destruction. Yet these nations call themselves Christian: Denying, violating, and refusing to accept Christ's principle—the peace of love. Love thy neighbor as thyself and do unto others first, as you would want them to do unto you. Nations claim to be civilized, Christian, yet millions of innocent men, women, and children are sentenced to die by the deadly weapons of war, and by way of starvation. But worst of all is the forcing of men to kill against their own conscience and better judgment. Why?

Friend, can you explain WHY? —Tom Kaufman in the Marsh Valley Echo, the camp paper of the C. P. S. camp at Downey, Idaho.

From One at Estes

(Below we reprint a letter which was written earlier this summer. However, it gives information which may be of interest to other young people who would like to spend a summer in cool, beautiful Estes.—rw.)

Dear Friends:

Greetings from Colorado where the mountains and the cool weather keep us in tip-top shape.

I thought you might be interested in knowing something about the camp. The camp is about four and one half miles from the Estes village and is owned and operated by the Y.M.C.A. Most of the employees, who number about sixty, are either college students or graduates. Most of the employees are Kansans and three are graduates of McPherson College. One of these girls is going to teach in Buhler next year.

My job as waitress in the dining room is very interesting, and I do enjoy it. Our largest crowds are in the evening when we serve about sixty and on Sunday noons when we serve seventy to eighty people. The rush season will start about July 22 and last until the middle of August during which time the lodge which holds about eighty people and the 125 cabins on the grounds will be filled.

You might be interested in knowing that regular Sunday morning services are conducted here, which the employees plan. Enough ministers vacation here so that one is available each Sunday. It is very interesting to hear the various points of views expressed.

Also a part of the camp program is the employees' Seminar which Dr. Roger Hazelton of the Colorado State College is in charge of. The theme of the Seminar is "Faith." Thus far we have discussed the meaning and methods of faith. At the beginning of the course we took religious concept tests and I

California Retreat

The eighteenth annual California Young People's Retreat was held at Lake Sequoia from August 12-19. The retreat theme was, "Christ the Foundation." I Cor. 3:11. "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

As our instructors, we were especially privileged to have Rev. Voth, one of our China missionaries; Rev. Edgar Toevs from Idaho; and Rev. W. A. Regier from Los Angeles. Mr. Lyman Sprunger served as our dean. In spite of traveling difficulties, we had the largest attendance of all years, a total enrollment of 153 people.

Let us pray that our Retreat may not only grow in attendance, but also spiritually.

Respectfully submitted,

Our Early Faith

By Harley Stucky

The spirit of the time was against our democratic and individualistic message and therefore we were subjected to a severe persecution. In those early years, we wrote our history in blood and tears. "No other movement for spiritual freedom in the history of the Church has had such an enormous martyrology."

The first one of our brethren to suffer martyrdom was Felix Manz who was drowned on January 5, 1527. In 1529 the Diet of Spires provided that all Anabaptists should be executed without trial. In nany cases the civilian authorities dispatched solliers to find us, to exterminate us and to seize our roperty. At first they directed this persecution nly against our leaders, but in time it came to inlude all of us. Some of us were torn to pieces n the rack, some of us were burned to ashes and owder, some of us were roasted on pillars, some f us were torn with red hot pincers, some of us vere shut in houses and burned, some of us were anged on trees, some of us executed, some of us vere drowned, some of us were starved, some of us vere allowed to rot in filthy prisons. Like sheep nd lambs we were led away to be slaughtered. And hose of us who escaped persecution lived like owls, iding ourselves in rocks, caves, pits, and in the vilds of the forest, being chased from one place to nother and yet never daring to come out of hiding n broad daylight.

In view of later religious freedom and liberty of onscience it seems almost incredible that we were ut to death for no greater offense than the desire o worship God according to our own convictions. he fanatical persecution which was directed against s must be interpreted in the light of the spirit of he age in which we were born.

This persecution succeeded in killing our leaders, gradually exterminating the movement which we had begun, and scattering those of us who remained in all directions. It also caused many of our members to make an apocalyptic interpretation of events. The radical fanaticism of the Munster tragedy which was led by Jan Matthys was largely the result of persecution.

So much for the historical background. Now let us consider what our (Anabaptist) faith is? Our earliest creed was written in 1527 and it is referred to as the "Seven Articles of Schleitheim" and was largely written by Michal Sattler. This creed, which included articles on baptism, the ban (discipline), the Lord's supper, separation from the world, pastors, non-resistance, and the oath, is really a statement of doctrine in which we were at variance with the rest of the Christian world. In general, however, not a creed writing church. We believed that character and creed, belief and conduct, doctrine and duty are the same and always go hand in hand. We believe that doctrine and life are two inseparable hemispheres of one sphere. The law and the gospel are one, and an individual can move from one to the other. With us, religion is not mere adherence to a certain dogma; it is dogma plus a corresponding life.

In general we share our Christian faith with other Protestant evangelical groups. They, like us, believe in God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. We hold in common with Christendom the faith set forth in the Apostles' Creed.

We accept the "Formula" of the Protestant reformation; namely, the absolute authority of the Scriptures. No other people of the reformation know their Bibles like we did. We are known as the "Biblicists." True, there are other groups which rely on Scripture, but none do so as exclusively and as devotedly as we do. To us, the Bible is the "open book" that must be read, studied, and interpreted by every individual. Whenever any question arises as to the interpretation of any Christian doctrine, we cast the sole responsibility for rendering the correct interpretation upon every individual who himself must interpret the Scripture. However, we always recognize the opinion of those in our group who because of age, training or experience are qualified to speak with authority and wisdom.

While it is true that we hold the entire Bible as the revelation of God, nevertheless the New Testament alone is considered authoritative for the Christian's faith and practice. And in the New Testament the words of Jesus are the most significant. The Old Testament is only preliminary and preparatory to the New Testament. The highest revelation and the only revelation binding upon the Christian is that which was revealed by Jesus Christ—for that reason we appeal to the Sermon on the Mount as the authoritative guide for Christians.

At many other points, we stand in sharp contrast with other reformers and therein we give to the world our unique and original contribution. We "differ widely with the great Protestant reformers—in their theory of the Christian Church, and in the view of the Christian life."

—The Reformed Church, in a recent conference session, voted unanimously for voluntary contributions for the financial support of its conscientious objectors in C.P.S. camps. Eleven of its youths are in such camps, while one is in prison.

—Deer Creek Mennonite Church, Deer Creek, Oklahoma: Seven girls attended the retreat at Camp Wood. Seven other girls attended the Oklahoma retreat at Meno, making a total of fourteen retreaters. "One of the girls said to her mother that she wants to be a better Christian now since she has been to Camp Wood."

—Leland Weinbrenner, who has served as song leader for the Sunday School of the Reedley Mennonite Church and also as director of the C.E. and S.S. orchestra, was inducted into the Belton, Montana, C.P.S. camp on September 1. Mrs. Weinbrenner is the former Lorene Friesen of Reedley.

—Hill City, South Dakota, C.P.S. Camp: Several swimming classes have been conducted by qualified instructors. On August 4th the men took a seven-mile, moonlight hike to Flag Mountain. Previous to this the men enjoyed an evening of group singing. New arrivals at camp include Richard J. Schrock of Rantoul, Illinois, and Merlin O. Boese of Springfield, South Dakota.

—General Conference Mennonites at Camp Downey, Idaho, are: Benjamin H. Duerksen, Delft, Minnesota; Leo A. Dyck, Ritzville, Washington; Paul J. Enns, Hillsboro, Kansas; Walter H. Friesen, Reedley, California; Herman M. Liechty, Berne, Indiana; Gordon Neuenschwander, McPherson, Kansas; Paul B. Strausz, Moundridge, Kansas.

—The Relief Training Unit at the Denison, Iowa, C.P.S. camp recently organized and elected Edwin Schrag of Moundridge, Kansas, as Chairman; John Martin of Columbiana, Ohio, Vice-chairman; and Gerhard Buhr of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, as Secretary. Roy Umble, the Educational Director, is the leader of the group.

—Elda Duerksen of the Inman Mennonite Church spent the summer at Estes Park, Colorado, working as a waitress at the Association Conference Grounds. She was able to take in various religious conferences and classes. See Miss Duerksen's letter in this issue. Miss Ruth Smith of the Bergtal Church, Pawnee Rock, Kansas, also spent the summer at Estes working and taking in activities.

—Paul Schmidt of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, is the new Educational Director at the Colorado Springs C.P.S. Camp.

Do It for Christ

Dr. C. F. Reisner, New York City says, "I once called on Will Rogers, the clean minded funny man, and asked him to speak at a church meeting. He refused promptly and positively. I backed up against the door and said, "Do you owe anything to the good God for your life and success?" He immediately answered in the affirmative. Then I said, "I am asking you to do this for Him. Surely under those circumstances you will not refuse." He then gladly agreed to come, and paid a wonderful tribute to the influence of religion in his life.—Never ask any man to do church work for the pastor or for an individual, but always put him into partnership with Christ." Doing it for Christ will remove the drudgery from all of our church work. The Sunday School Class, the choir, the Christian Endeavor will take on a different hue; they will be avenues through which we can serve Him.—Rev. H. E. Nunemaker was very surprised to find that the majority of the employees were pacifists, however, in a different sense than in which we are.

Besides this we've had four large conferences here and have four more scheduled for the summer. Most of these are church conferences.

Something tells me I have rambled on long enough. Hearing from you personally would suit me just fine, and I promise to try to answer your letters. You may even ask me lots of questions if you like. Some of the girls' mothers have sent them whole pages of questions to answer since they don't give the right information in their letters. You have the same privilege.

Sincerely,
Elda Duerksen

Conference for Mental Hospital Leaders

Two concerns of the brethren responsible for the administration of the CPS mental hospital units are: how to meet the spiritual, social, and educational needs of the CPS men, and, how CPS men serving in mental institutions can contribute to the well-being of the patients and hospitals they serve. These concerns among others, will be discussed at the conference of eastern, hospital unit leaders, to be held at the Sideling Hill camp, September 10 to 13.

"Dietitian's Handbook"

Before leaving for relief service in the Middle East, Mary Emma Showalter placed in permanent form her suggestions for camp dietitians. The result was a "Dietitian's Handbook," which is based upon her experience as a camp dietitian and also her wider experience as traveling dietitian to Mennonite camps. While these handbooks have been printed primarily for camp dietitians, a limited number may be secured for thirty cents per copy by ordering from the CPS Headquarters, Akron, Pennsylvania. The book will probably be of interest to others responsible for institutional meal planning and food preparation.

Arts and Crafts Exhibit

Throughout the summer months an arts and crafts exhibit, prepared under the direction of Arthur Sprunger of Goshen College, has been sent from camp to camp. The exhibit not only displays finished products but also illustrates various skills and art processes. The exhibit was sent to encourage the interest of a large number of campers in various skills such as weaving, knitting, block printing, modeling, etc.

CPS Briefs

Wilhelmina Kuyf, returned Mennonite missionary from China, recently visited the hospital units at Macedonian, Ohio, and Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and gave a number of talks on China.

F. Junior Steiner has been appointed as business manager for the camp at Three Rivers, California.

The campers at North Fork, California, during their spare time, have assisted a local Presbyterian mission among the Indians in a number of projects. They repaired the power line to the church, repaired the mission truck, and built a fire line around the mission grounds. At present they are sawing and splitting wood for the stoves of the mission.

Some urch member writes the letter, while the pastor its the other page. On August 20 the congrega-on met in the basement of its new church building r the first time. Upstairs the floor has been id, and the plastering is done. However, the finish-g work remains. The church began its Bible Study our and Choir Practice at the home of Rev. Ronald n Riesen on September 6. Church members are nning for C.P.S. The Missionary Society has been ven the responsibility of selecting the light fixtures r the main auditorium of the new church building. e church council suggests that parents and chil-en try the practice of sitting together on Sunday rning. The congregation of seventy members ve set out to raise a goal of $1,000 by October . This drive for the church building fund will confined to the membership. Brother Willard ruh, Educational Director of the C.P.S. camp at lton, Montana, brought the message on the Con-ence Sunday.

Rev. John T. Neufeld of the Mennonite Bible Mis-n, Chicago, writes, "Recently I had the privilege to it the Civilian Public Service Union at Grove Wis-nsin. The Southern Wisconsin Colony and aining School is located here. It is an stitution for the care of the Feeble mind-. Here we see the unfortunate of all types, both children and grownups. Many of them are helpless and have to be fed. Some are badly misformed. The state has set up a very fine institution in the midst of beautiful surroundings. This adds a little ray of light to the condition of the hopeless. A group of thirty-five young men and women has been assigned to help take care of the inmates. They have considered this a Christian opportunity of service and have already brought great blessings to the inmates. While making a tour of the buildings and grounds with one of the assignees, John Ewert, I repeatedly heard the inmates greetings him, "Hello John". Also heard a group of girls singing the chorus "Wide Wide, as the ocean-etc. is my Savior's love for me." A sign of the Kingdom."

—Dr. Bauman of Bluffton College is taking a leave of absence this year. In his work for the State Welfare Department he will have charge of the work with the blind in the northwestern part of Ohio. Dr. Bauman is convinced that in addition to giving him a needed change, this work will help him to get an insight into the work of the Welfare Department which will be very useful to him when he returns to his campus duties.

—"The Herald Church, near Bessie, Oklahoma, herewith cordially invites the Oklahoma Churches and other friends who wish to come to the Oklahoma Convention, which will be held in the convention tent on the church grounds, beginning September 15 and continuing through the 16th and 17th. Coffee and hot water will be furnished at the Church."—C. B. Friesen, Pastor; J. A. Harms, Sec.

—Dr. R. C. Kauffman, who is awaiting his visa to go as relief worker to India, has been visiting Mennonite C.P.S. units in Eastern mental hospitals. His talks have been very well received. He has now been asked to visit Brethren and Friends units in the East. Dr. Kauffman is on the leave of absence from his teaching duties at Bethel College, where he was Professor of Psychology.

—The Mennonite Bible Academy at Beatrice, Nebr. opened September 5 with Mrs. Elbert Koontz and Mrs. Richard Wiebe as temporary teachers. They wish to be released as soon as possible, but will serve until a permanent teacher is found. Mrs. Koontz will teach Bible and English, and Mrs. Wiebe will teach science and mathematics, and both will share in the music periods.

—Rev. Verney Unruh recently completed his work as interne and assistant of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska. He has now enrolled at Bethel College.

—Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, writes, "In one of the issues of your paper you request that we inform you of the way in which Conference Sunday was observed in our church. We made it a point to sing conference songs. We read the scripture from John 12:20-26 which refers to the dying of the seed as the basis for life. We divided the morning worship period so as to give opportunity for reports on various phases of our conference work. At the close we also asked for brief reports by representatives of our three Christian Endeavorers who attended the Western District Convention. We brought in incidents of the origin of our General Conference and points of interest from several of the conference sessions. We found that quite a number, at one time or another, had already attended General Conference, Brother Cornelius Penner having attended five or six of the sessions. In our worship service we made special intercession for our mission representatives in the various parts of the world and our conference boards and committees. Personally, I feel it would be well to set on Sunday a year aside for the purposes of bringing information, inspiration, and intercession into our worship for our conference work."

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

Fairfield—The congregation had a fellowship dinner at the Benner Farm after the morning service Sunday, August 13. Prof. Samuel Burkhard was the guest preacher August 20. He spoke on "The Church at the Crossroads."

Springfield—Members of the church conducted a service at the Mennonite Home for the Aged at Frederick, Sunday afternoon, August 20th. The pastor and wife visited Lancaster, Akron, and Ephrata on August 14. The congregation held its Harvest Home Service on September 3.

Perkasie—The members of the Gospel Chapel in Plumsteadville presented a gospel service Sunday evening, August 20. The members of the church will conduct a service at the Mennonite Home on October 1st instead of September 17th as announced on the Schedule of Service List of the Home for the Aged.

East Swamp—Rev. Abraham Unruh of Kentucky conducted the services August 27 in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Harold D. Burkholder. The offering for Grace Bible Institute held August 20 amounted to $527.17. A third member of the church, Walter Barndt, has enrolled as a student at the Institute for the fall.

Lansdale—The pastor, the Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel who was an instructor at the Oklahoma Retreat, returned and occupied the pulpit August 27. The general theme for the union lawn services for this summer was "Old Beliefs for New Times." The three churches that cooperated in these services were Evangelical, Schwenfelder, and Mennonite.

Schwenksville—The pastor, the Rev. Freeman H. Swartz and Miss Nora D. Moyer, member of the Deep Run congregation, were united in holy matrimony in the historic Germantown Mennonite Meetinghouse, August 9 with Rev. Howard T. Landes, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Russell L. Mast. The former communion set has been given to the Conference for use at the retreat programs and at the Home for the Aged.

Souderton—The congregation is looking forward the installation service for Rev. Graber, the new pastor, September 17. This service will be in charge of the Conference President, the Rev. Russell L. Mast and Dr. J. E. Hartzler. Brother Graber was ordained as a minister and elder in his home congregation, Salem-Zion Mennonite church by Dr. J. E. Hartzler on June 18. He took charge of his new work September 1 and preached his first sermon the first Sunday in September. In the afternoon an informal reception was held in the Sunday School auditorium.

West Swamp—On Sunday August 13 the Sunday School and worship services were held at Men-O-Lan. After the worship service everyone enjoyed a fellowship dinner. At 2:00 o'clock, the cabin built by our church was dedicated. The cabin was named "Harv-ella" in honor of Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman who have served as medical missionaries in India since 1925. Two songs, "O Zion Haste" and "Who will follow Jesus" were sung and several individuals offered prayers at the service of dedication. This summer a total of seventy young people from our church attended the retreats. Twenty-one attended the Junior retreat, thirty-four attended the Intermediate retreat, and fifteen attended the Senior retreat. —West Swamp Corr.

Allentown—At a recent meeting of the Sunday School Workers Association it was decided to give $25.00 to Grace Bible Institute at Omaha, Nebraska, and that we contribute $15.00 every quarter to be added to the quarterly college envelope contributions.

The Annual Sunday School Convention of the Eastern District Conference will be held in the Allentown Church, Saturday, September 30, with afternoon and evening sessions. —Conf. Corr.

Emergency Collection of Relief Clothing

The rapid progress of the war in Europe has opened, and will no doubt continue to open, large areas in which many people are in need of food, clothing, and other necessities. Throughout the coming weeks and months there will be, we believe, unprecedented opportunity to bring succor to war sufferers.

Clothing Drive

In light of these developments the Mennonite Central Committee has prepared to collect and process large amounts of clothing for relief in the immediate weeks and months ahead. A new collection center has been opened at Newton, Kansas, and with the other two depots at Ephrata and Kitchener, plans have been made to take care of eleven to twelve tons of clothing per month, or more. Shoes, soap, kits, and other items will also be processed. We believe Mennonite and Brethren in Christ churches will want to do their part in contributing clothing for relief, and, we believe, they will prefer to give through their own church agencies.

United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA) and other relief organizations will also conduct drives in the immediate future. Particularly during the week of September 24 a drive will be made by UNRRA throughout the churches to collect usable wearing apparel for liberated areas in Europe. While some of our people may desire to contribute to UNRRA and other organizations, the Mennonite Central Committee is prepared to handle all the clothing that our churches will be able to give.

Clothing Depot in Kansas

The depot at Newton has been set up as a result of the feeling that a collection center should be located in the Mid-West to more efficiently process the clothing from the Mennonite communities in that area. The depot in Kitchener, Ontario, has been set up to serve the Canadian groups. While the general flow of relief clothing will be toward the East, and clothing may be sent to either the Newton or Akron depots, the collection centers have been set up to serve in a general way the areas in which they are located.

The depot at Newton will be in charge of Elma Esau. Sister Esau became acquainted with the work of processing and packing relief clothing during her six months of work at the Akron depot. She also assisted in the opening of the Kitchener depot. She will be qualified to give the clothing the necessary processing and packing that will be required. The address of the Newton Clothing Depot is: 220 Main Street, Newton, Kansas.

A SUGGESTION

Through air, papers, and in many other ways we read and hear and talk of the DAY WHEN THE WAR WILL BE OVER. Plans are made by our government and other concerns for that day and days following. What will the church do? Shall we fail to have any plan for the day when the glad news will come? The Peace Committee had in its recommendations to the General Conference to have met in August a request for that event. The Conference has not met and so we come with a suggestion to our churches through The Mennonite. When that hour will come there will be those who will mourn for a loved one never to return and others will rejoice for a loved one to return. Why not have the church doors open that day for those who wish to go their for meditation and prayer. Further we suggest that the very evening or as soon as possible our people gather in the church for a praise and thanksgiving service. The two wars may not end at the same time—is it too much to have two services? Let each church work out its own plan or program but let us be truly thankful, confessing our sins, that the end of such strife has come. There will be a great deal of noise and rejoicing everywhere but what will the Peace Churches do?

"Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not afer Christ. For in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." Col. 2: 8, 9.

The Enemies of Christ

By Ward W. Shelly

For many walk, of whom I have told you often that they are the enemies of the Cross of Christ. Phil. 3:18.

It has been estimated that there are 682,000,000 Christians in the world. Someone has rightly asked, “Where are they? “The world is still waiting to see Christ-ianity in action. There is nothing it despises more than half-hearted Christianity. A certain woman in a village in Ontario picked up a tract published by the American Association of Atheists. She then wrote a letter to the president of that organization, giving no arguments, but a clear-cut testimony of what Jesus Christ meant to her in personal experience. The president wrote back and said, “I wish I had your Christ.” The experience of many Christians is too much the fairy stories we read in childhood. “Once upon a time, long, long” they learned to know Christ as Savior but have long since forgotten his reality. If our Christianity does not change our lives completely—make us new creatures in desires, ambitions, hopes, and aims, then our religion does not work. Jehovah’s Witnesses say, “Religion is a farce.” And so it is without Jesus Christ. Saint Paul charged the Galatians to walk according to the Gospel and challenged those who walked not straightforwardly.

Did you ever think of Christ being bewildered? He was bewildered at those who professed allegience to Him and yet refused to obey. In the distress of his bewilderment He cried out, “Why call ye me Lord, Lord and do not the things which I say”? Their professed love for Christ was like static-signifying nothing. If Christ is to be Lord at all, He must be Lord of all our lives. He is bewildered that such is often not the case. He is perplexed that we spend so much time on the vanities of life, and neglect our deepest need—the spiritual things. The world too is puzzled. Our testimony is shattered. There is still a difference between believers and mere church members. If the Christian can do all the world can do why profess to serve Christ at all. The Scriptures reveal that Christ dealt very gently with those who admitted their sinfulness, but He was very severe with the church-goers, the Pharisees. He called them white-walled sepulchers. They preached one thing and lived the opposite.

An elderly retired Anglican minister told me he boarded a crowded street-car in Toronto one day—barely getting inside the door. The car moved on a number of blocks and stopped. It happened to be the minister’s destination. The doors opened and he stepped out without having paid his fare. As he considered the matter the car moved on. A few hours later he went to the office of the transit company and there paid his fare, explaining what had happened. The astonished clerk said no one else would have brought the money in. But the man said, “I am a minister.” “Say, where do you preach,” was the response. “I preach anywhere” the minister replied and right there spoke to the clerk about Christ and Salvation. It was a very suitable time to talk about Christ, for he had first of all let his light shine. One reason Christ’s teaching and preaching was so powerful was because it was backed up by thirty years of unquestionable living. The world takes its conception of Christianity not from the Bible, not from Christ—but from your life and mine. Some of us like to judge and compare our life with the average Christian; but the life of the average Christian is none too good now a days. It is better to come to Christ and ask, “what lack I yet.” We can only put Christianity into action by having Christ live in us and allow His beauty to shine through us. We need more of the religion of Moses—“the religion of the shining face.”

When an inventor prepares to give a demonstration of a new invention he first of all makes certain that it works perfectly. You and I have been commissioned to demonstrate the Gospel to the world. Let us see that it works in our life. It will make the demonstration much more effective. Alexander Maclaren says, “It is you people who say your sins are forgiven and yet live on the same old way who are hindering the Kingdom of God.” More converts are won to Christ by a Christ-like church than by many a sermon.

Because we do not live out our Christianity in everyday life our faith is sometimes shaken. If we continually practice our religion, our life will be stable, and our trust and faith unwavering. To live rightly involves a close walk with God—a walk separated from the world. We are to “shine as lights in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation.” For us it should not be a burden to live in these dark and troublous times. It should be a privilege—remembering that the darker the day, the brighter our testimony will shine; and the darker the day the more people will be groping for “the Light.”

The Conservationist’s Creed

Stop killing and start creating. Stop cutting and start planting. Stop wasting and start saving. Stop hunting and start watching. Stop hating and start loving. These are the Ten Commandments of conservation for each of us within his own dooryard and neighborhood, over his own ranch and farm, a sower of seeds, a planter of trees, a nourisher of life, where heretofore we have each plucked and buried and slaughtered. —Dallas Lore Sharp

Emergency Collection of Relief Clothing

The "United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration has announced plans for an emergency collection of used clothing to be distributed in liberated areas of Europe." So reads a news release from the M.C.C., which goes on to say,"This drive will be conducted throughout the 'churches, parishes, and synagogues of the country."

The UNRRA is depending upon local religious organizations to put on a vigorous one-week campaign for the collection of used clothing. The week of September 24 has been designated for this campaign. It is hoped that at least 15,000,000 pounds of usable wearing apparel can be gathered in the very near future. This early church-wide drive is to be succeeded by a nation-wide drive in early winter.

The M.C.C. statement further states, "The M.C.C. is also aware of the doors for distribution of relief clothing which are opening as a result of the rapid progress of the war. Provisions have been made to collect and process large amounts of clothing—all that our folks can give, we believe. Our people will be eager to do their part in contributing clothing for relief, and, we believe, they would prefer to give through their own church agencies."

We are sorry that we could not bring this news release sooner. However, if ministers, women's organizations, and other responsible groups make plans immediately, much undoubtedly can be accomplished during the week of September 24.—rw.

Could It Be a Beam

The United States is again engaged in a war that is supposed to save the world and improve conditions everywhere. One begins to wonder about these high aims when one is told that in twelve years the New Deal has not improved the living conditions of the people of Puerto Rico and when one reads the followng report of Oswald Garrison Villard, who recently oured this possession. Mr. Villard says, "The insular government in San Juan confesses that three-fourths of the Puerto Ricans under its care do not have enough to eat, enough to wear, or a decent place o live. . . .More than 250,000 persons live in constantly growing slums. Many of these slums are built over marshes. . .all of them are without sewerage, anitation, or garbage disposal of any kind. They are, n fact, human cesspools under the American flag. . .Americans do not need to go to India to see how amine works; they need only to fly to San Juan. . . ts situation is politically worse than it was under the Spaniards."

How can we explain this? Is it untrue what Mr. Villard says, or has strong, rich, idealistic America neglected a tremendous beam in its own eye?—rw.

The Task before Us

In a few days the presidents of Mennonite colleges will meet in Chicago in order to consider the problem of offering further educational opportunities to young men who are serving the Government under the direction of the Mennonite Central Committee.

According to a survey of March 1, 1944, it was found that 21 per cent of all men in the Civilian Public Service are asking for such opportunities. They feel the need for further training and, having served for some time without pay, are confronted with the serious problem of finding a way to go to school after their return.

The college presidents are facing a real problem on behalf of these young men, but it is not their problem alone. It is the problem of the churches, of the young people who are free to go to school, and of all the rest of us who are interested in the future work of the Kingdom of God.

A number of the men in Civilian Public Service work are looking forward to full time Christian service. Their present experience is a type of training which can make them very effective workers. That is not enough to meet the responsibilities of the future. They need more definite training for the work they are to do.

They are asking their churches first. They are making no demands. The churches will need them. They have an opportunity to take an encouraging attitude toward those upon whose service they will need to depend before many years. We dare not throw the whole burden of this problem upon the men who have demonstrated their willingness to sacrifice. The opportunity is open for the churches to do the same more unitedly and more fully than in the past. They will be benefited by the service that these young men can render to the rising generation. The best training that we can give them will be none too good for our children.

The Board of Education has long faced the problem of how to coordinate our educational work better. They have felt that the work of the Board of Publication is also educational in the broader sense of the word. The two Boards have considered this problem together. The result has been the appointment by the Board of Education, with the assistance of the Board of Publication, of a Minister-at-Large to give his whole time to the educational problems of the General Conference. Again, this is the task of the whole Conference and not of one man. It is an experiment which calls for the best that we can do together.

Your Minister-at-large began his school visitations, according to resolution No. 38 of the General Conference sessions held in 1941, on September 17, at Freeman, South Dakota. He is to help in the Bible Institute and Visitation Program sponsored by the Home Mission Board. This will occupy him during most of October and November. After that he will be free to serve other schools, churches, and camps as time permits.

The task before us may seem a bit confusing at first but consecrated hard work on the part of all who are interested always helps to clear up difficulties.

Yours in the Spirit of the Master,

J. H. Langenwalter, Minister-at-Large

"The Church of the Brethren and War"

A Book Review

By H. A. Fast

The Church of the Brethren and War by Dr. Rufus Bowman, Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, Illinois, Price $2.50.

The appearance of this book during this period of wartime pressure and confusion must seem exceedingly opportune to the Church of the Brethren. A similar book on the Mennonite Church and War would be of incalculable value to us.

However, this book should be of keen interest also to Mennonites, (1) because it deals with an issue that has been extremely vital to us throughout our history; (2) because the Church of the Brethren is one of the Historic Peace Churches which holds dear many of the values treasured by Mennonites. Their experience with the principle of non-resistance runs parallel at many points with that of Mennonites partly because of similarities in historical background and outlook and partly because they frequently lived side by side with Mennonites in the same community and thus faced the same problems. This record of their experience gives Mennonites an excellent opportunity to examine their own attitudes and reactions to the same or similar problems; (3) because the author, Dr. Bowman, is not only a recognized leader of his church but is also widely known and respected among Mennonites; (4) because the book contains in convenient compass and in historical setting priceless documentary material which affected Mennonites no less than Brethren and often is entirely inaccessible to the ordinary reader.

The author sketches briefly the beginnings of the movement in Schwarzenau, Germany, 1708, when Alexander Mack, his wife and six others "covenanted together to walk in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord." Reacting strongly against the formalized creeds and church life of the time this new Christian fellowship decided to "put away all creeds" and to make the New Testament their only creed. They wanted to be a New Testament church rather than a theological church based upon an unyielding creed." Their emphasis on the New Testament led them to a New Testament conception of the church as a voluntary fellowship of believers. It led them also to one of their fundamental first principles, "no exercise of force in religion" which of course at once disallowed Christian participation in methods of violence and war. Matthew 18 became for them the standard and model for the peaceful settling of disputes.

Persecution caused them to seek a new home in 1719 in the State of Pennsylvania where they lived side by side with Friends and Mennonites and in general made common cause with them in matters relating to their jointly held convictions regarding non-resistance. The author proceeds to analyze further the situation and the issues the Brethren faced in Colonial America and during the Revolutionary War and what their answer was.

The Civil War brought increased pressure against religious objectors to participation in war and this led the Brethren to serious re-thinking of their attitude to war and their concept of patriotism. They had to find a satisfactory answer to Romans 13 and I Peter 2:13,14, to the question of voting, to service when it involved paying for a substitute, and to the question of disciplining of young men participating in war and military training in disregard of the clearly expressed position of the church.

The years between the Civil War and World War I brought about profound changes in the church marked by decreased isolation and larger participation in community life, by increased interest in schools and education, and by a greater spirit of tolerance. But, the author comments, "No adequate peace educational program (was) carried on for Brethren youth."

World War I found the Brethren like other churches quite unprepared to face the issues. Divided opinion and confusion characterized both its leadership and its drafted young men especially on the question of non-combatant service. Somewhat late the church announced its official opposition to non-combatant service, but "the functioning position (of the church) was in favor of it" the author comments.

The experience of World War I led to a rather vigorous peace education and peace action program including a growing service of relief. The story of this post-war activity up to the beginnings of World War II and of the present C.P.S. program furnishes another very interesting analysis of the changes and of the deepening of insight which the intervening years brought about in Brethren viewpoints and philosophy on the whole question of war, patriotism, and citizenship.

Mennonites reading this book will again and again find themselves examining with humility Mennonite attitudes and reactions in similar situations and crises. But they will also be led to a deeper understanding of and a more wholehearted commitment to the great Christian principle of love and non-resistance to which our fathers were, so deeply committed.

Mennonites and Dunkards

By C. Henry Smith

We read a great deal these days in our church papers about the historic peace churches—Quakers, Brethren or Dunkards, and Mennonites. Of these three, the Dunkards and Mennonites have most in common. In fact, in fundamental doctrines and principles of faith, in their religious practice, and even in their religious experiences, and especially in their contacts with government authorities in their attempt to maintain their non-resistant faith, they have had so much in common that it is difficult to find enough difference except in a few minor details to differentiate them into two distinct religious groups. Coming on the scene in Europe two hundred years later than the Mennonites, the Dunkards escaped the terrific persecutions of the early Reformation period in the sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries. They have no Book of Martyrs.

But in America, arriving in Germantown soon after the Mennonites, and often found together in the same pioneer settlements in the westward expansion of the colonial population, the two shared not only the hardships common to pioneer life, but also their struggle with the state for their civil rights and the recognition of their peace principles.

During the Revolutionary War, in 1775, the two churches sent a joint petition to the Pennsylvania General Assembly explaining their position toward war and asking that they be released from active participation in the military effort. In the Civil War, too, especially in Virginia where both denominaions had large settlements, their experiences were dentical.

Like the Mennonites, also, the Dunkards, were aught unaware, and unprepared in the First World War, and shared with the former all the unfortunate esults of that neglect. And like the Mennonites they earned their lesson. Soon after the peace treaty both f the churches, profiting from their war experiences, egan to re-examine and re-appraise their peace prinples in the light of the new demands that would kely be made in the case of another war. They oined the Quakers in a combined campaign of educaon both among their own members and governmental ficials, clearly stating and defining their non-resisant beliefs and principles, thus fortifying the conctions of their own members and at the same time reparing he way for a better appreciation among the overnment officials of the peace principles of the storic peace churches. Frequent interviews by joint mmittees were held with President Roosevelt, offials of the War Department, and influential Conessmen in the interests of their peace principles whatever legislation might be passed in case of another war, as well as in case of a universal conscription act. These interviews and activities by these joint committees were responsible, undoubtedly, to a large measure, for the rather liberal terms in the present Selective Service Act in behalf of the Conscientious Objectors.

This whole story of the attitude of the Dunkards toward war, and their experience in war time, as well as these joint activities of more recent times is well told in a new book called The Church of The Brethren and War—1709-1941, written by Dr. Rufus D. Bowman, President of the Bethany Biblical Seminary, and published by the Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, Illinois.

Dr. Bowman is especially well fitted to write such a book. A thorough scholar, and at the same time thoroughly devoted to the principles of his church, he was for some time pastor of a Brethren church in Washington, D. C., and so in a favorable position to represent his church in their contacts with government officials. He was a members of most of the joint committees which represented the peace churches in their campaign for exemption in the conscription law. He thus speaks from a rich personal experience on the recent problems of his denomination as well as a ripe scholarship on her earlier history.

Mennonites can learn much from this story of the struggles of a sister denomination in defense of the faith once delivered to the fathers. The book should be read by every Mennonite who is concerned for the preservation of the traditional doctrines and principles of his own church, which today are being threatened as never before in all her history. Discharge the Peace Committee

BY L. J. Horsch

(Note: The following article by Brother Horsch is a personal an not an official expression. The term, "General Conference" in the article means the permanent organization when capitalized, and when not capitalized it refers to the triennial session.—rw.)

The major share of the work done by the GENERAL CONFERENCE is accomplished through a dozen or so Boards and Committees, each one of which was established to promote a particular aspect of the CONFERENCE program. Conferences meet and adjourn, local congregations hold Sunday services and then go home to await another Sunday, but the work of the CONFERENCE must go on. And it does, through the faithful labors of those agencies created to care for missions, the publications, education, doctrine, and other vital interests of the CONFERENCE.

The Peace Committee owes its inception to World War I. The General Conference which convened in Reedley, California, in 1917 "appointed a committee of seven to cooperate with the district committees and similar organizations of the other branches of the church to present to the government a united statement of Mennonite peace principles, as well as to aid young men in the service, and appear in their behalf before military authorities." Later "A special Peace Committee was added to the other committees of the Conference, which has done effective service for the cause in the way of publishing peace tracts, holding peace meetings, furnishing regular peace lessons for the Sunday School quarterlies, and cooperating with other non-resistant groups." To this statement may be added that the legal provision for CPS was due in a large measure to the late Dr. E. L. Harshbarger of Bethel College, acting in the capacity of Chairman of the Peace Committee.

Since 1939 the Peace Committee has endeavored to carry out the functions summarized above. In addition with CPS actually established it assumed the burden of raising the necessary funds. The actual administration and operation of CPS camps, however, is entirely in the hands of the Mennonite Central Committee. All of the money which the Peace Committee obtains through the contributions of churches and other organizations, and from interested individuals for CPS, is transmitted to the MCC.

Strangely enough the opening of CPS marks the end of the usefulness to the CONFERENCE of the Peace Committee. CPS is such an important and significant project that every Board, or most of them, became interested in the success of the project and the welfare of the men in CPS. And so it is that that at every turn the Peace Committee finds other Boards reaching in and taking over functions which it was thought or assumed were to be handled by the Peace Committee, leaving to it the one job of raising the funds which fulfill the obligation of the GENERAL CONFERENCE to the MCC in the operation of CPS. And the Boards of other Committees act with complete legitimacy, for the absolute field within which a particular Board or Committee is to function has never been clearly defined by the GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Note following quotations taken from the reports of the various Boards and Committees as published in The Mennonite of August 1. (The same reports also appear in the Bundesbote of the same date.) From the Boards of Education, "Material for the Senior-Adult Quarterly is being supplied by this Board---. Miss Erna Fast is being encouraged to produce a three month's course for juniors on the history and teachings of the Mennonite Church." More significantly from the report of the Doctrine and Conduct Committee, "As time goes on some doctrines stand in need of more attention, others less. That is to say, for example, the second World War has demonstrated the need for a more thorough education and conviction on our historic peace principles. This need our Committee has tried to take note of." From the report of the Emergency Relief Board "Since the meting of the several boards and committees of the Conference this spring, we have undertaken to make monthly payments where necessary to the dependents of our CPS men." From the Home Mission Board, "Visitation work in CPS Camps and Units and Colonization work: This large task was delegated to Rev. William H. Stauffer.—The camp visitation brought forth many other good things."

These statements eloquently testify, first, that GENERAL CONFERENCE Boards and Committees, like Topsy, "just growed" with the result that there is duplication and overlaping of work (if not even at times considerable confusion) and second, that certain functions which were assumed to be within the province of the Peace Committee actually are within areas legitimately cared for by other Boards. Education for peace logically belongs to the work of the Board of Education; the promotion of the principles of non-resistance is the duty of the Committee on Doctrine and Conduct; the care of CPS dependents and the rehabilitation of the men now in CPS is the obligation of the Emergency Relief Board (incidentally why not drop the term Emergency); camp visitation and spiritual guidance of men in CPS naturally falls to the Home Mission Board. Finally since the treasury of the Peace Committee has been transferred to Headquarters Office in Newton, Kansas, and since congregations are now in the habit of giving for the cause, there seems to be no necessity of maintaining a Committee merely to remind churches now and then that funds for CPS are still needed. It seems obvious that the Peace Committee can be discharged with no loss to any phase of the work of the GENERAL CONFERENCE.

It might also be suggested that perhaps the time has arrived when Boards could well increase their efficiency by departmentalization. For example, the Board of Education might have a "Department of Schools and Colleges," another on "Sunday School Literature," a third, "The Seminary Department." (This might, and doubtless would involve the absorption of the present Bible School and Seminary Board, a relatively easy matter since the present personnel of both Boards is practically indentical.) Again, the Relief Board might very well have a "European Department," a "Department of the Far East and India," and a "CPS Department." The Home Mission Board might well consider departmentalizing into "The Department of City Missions," "The Department of Rural Missions," "The Department of Evangelism." Similar departments or divisions could be created within Boards not specifically mentioned. This would seem to be a wiser procedure than to create a new Board or appoint an additional Committee when a Conference session is confronted with a sudden or unusual need for action n some area heretofore neglected.

The growth of the several boards and committees ince World War I and their influence upon the life of he GENERAL CONFERENCE is evidence that hey exist primarily to serve the best interests of the CONFERENCE and bring God's kingdom nearer. The Boards are trying honestly and sincerely to do heir best. We can well be proud of the Foreign Mission Board in courageously planning to open a ew field in South America. That is an act of vision nd of faith. Likewise the introduction of inter-oard cooperation, a process inaugurated at the joint meetings of the boards at North Newton, Kansas, ast April augurs well for the future, in particular the ost-war future. The CONFERENCE may well look t the work of the Boards with gratitude.

A Tribute to Senator Norris

Senator Norris of Nebraska is dead, but some ings he has done or said in life can not be "interred ith his bones."

Before we entered World War I, Senator Norris as one of the few senators who voted against our try into that war.

Senator Norris was sympathetic to the conscientious jectors in World War I. In a circular published by heo. H. Lunde, father of a conscientious objector ho was sentenced to the disciplinary barracks at avenworth along with a number of Mennonite ys, the following unsolicited testimonial appears:

A TESTIMONIAL

Senator Norris of Nebraska said to me: "Lunde, e Mennonites are the best people on Earth; they are much better han you or I. There is a colony of them in my former Judicial district, (I was a judge before I became a senator) but I have never seen one of them before the bar, or known any of them to be entangled in litigation, though they deal with the outside world as you and I—if everybody were as good as they, there would be no need of Courts and Prisons."

While the above testimonial was given primarily in behalf of the Hutterish Mennonites, it involves the entire Mennonite Church, and may God grant that all who are members of the Mennonite denomination may be found worthy of such testimonials given by others.

Speaking further of the treatment given the Hutterian Brethren in World War I, two of whom died from the effects of the brutalities, Mr. Lunde writes from Chicago in February, 1919, "The case of these Hutterisch Mennonites is one of peculiar severity; but hundreds of Mennonites and other non-resistants have suffered similar indignities and cruelties in the camp guard houses and military prisions. If anyone has the nerve to call these men "cowards," let him do so! At any rate they are living examples of what harmless religious people have to suffer in this enlightened day, because their views and convictions do not correspond with the rest."

They are slaves who will not choose Hatred, scoffing and abuse
Rather than in silence shrink
From the truth they needs must think;
They are slaves who dare not be
In the right with two or three. —Lowell.

MONEY AND ERRING

"But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." I Tim. 6:9,10.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

Harold Herbert Gross, Iowa City, Iowa

SEPTEMBER 24—"In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." John 1:1

Words are symbolic means for conveying sentiments or thoughts. The prophets had been conveying God's deepest sentiments to men for centuries—to a race of men who needed desparately a word of succour from the only Being who could save them from their desperate plight. But words are limitations of thoughts as well as being necessary to their expression. The thought is greater than its symbols. Words can easily be misinterpreted or ignored. This is the sad story of the prophets. But finally God spoke His mind in a single Word—a Life, His Son. If actions speak louder than words, then here God has truly spoken in this single act in Christ.

SEPTEMBER 25—"The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?" Jer. 17:9.

The very idea of the sinfulness of the human heart is an offense to the modern mind. Modern sophisticates have blamed the world's wickedness on wrong education and have attributed evil to purely historical (accidental) sources—forgetting that civilization and education are products of human planning and willing. Some wise prophets of our time—returning to Biblical religion—are discovering that man is a paradoxical mixture of good and evil, and not the simple, good being upon which fantastic theories of progress have been built. Indeed, perversion of the good itself in man is evil at its worst, and exemplifies the deceitfulness of the heart.

SEPTEMBER 26—"There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." Romans 8:1

Chapters 6, 7 and 8 of Romans constitute in a real sense the spiritual autobiography of Paul. In chapter 6 the word sin and its equivalent is used nineteen times. In chapter 8 the word spirit is used nineteen times. This latter chapter is the epitome of victory —life in the Spirit. Most of us can sign our own names to chapters 6 and 7. But are we living on the Spiritual plane of chapter 8? Few people today understand the real meaning of Religion—they confuse it with ethics or living by code. Religion (in Christ) is living by communion and surrender.

SEPTEMBER 27—"The foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men." I Cor. 1:25.

Our age has come to believe that all truth must be logical and "scientifically respectable"—anything else is not truth. But some of Christianity's most profound truths defy the laws of logic and transcend (not necessarily contradict) scientific analysis. The Incarnation and divine revelation are examples. Who can explain logically and account for the power of the Cross and the Christ—who by dying gave Life to men? How can a man save his life by losing it? It isn't logical, but it is true!

SEPTEMBER 28—"If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established." Isa. 7:9.

An age that is sure of nothing, which postpones believing until all the evidence is in, and which is afraid to assert convictions about anything for fear of being called "dogmatic," is on shaky foundations—if, indeed, it has any. Science itself is no more sure of many (most) of its basic assumptions than is religion: it must start somewhere, so it launches out upon axiomatic convictions. We are in need today of some real convictions: concerning God, Christ, revelation, salvation, Scripture, etc. Jesus might well have said: according to your convictions be it unto you. Be established!

SEPTEMBER 29—"A double minded man is unstable in all his ways." James 1:8.

One of the saddest kinds of insanity is schizophrenia—"split-personality." It comes from building up an unreal world inside one's self—as a sort of compromise to facing the real world outside. But almost as sad is the man who tries to live on two contradictory levels or by two opposing standards. Spiritual schizophrenia is very common: in people who find it difficult or impossible to be Christian in such a world as ours, and who try to live by the principles and standards of two worlds, building a world of their own which doesn't really exist. But man dare not divide his loyalties!

SEPTEMBER 30—"And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb of God." Rev. 22:1.

If men are to live in such a day as ours, they must learn to live on resources not their own. When man loses his faith in God he loses his faith in abiding values, and life becomes only a temporary affair for him. The next step is to a low evaluation of human life itself. A felt need for God and His life-giving energies is what our civilization lacks. Men have felt self-sufficient too long! The only real and abiding hope for our world is a return to the resources of God as found in Christ—only then are men strong.

"Our Lord, whose way is perfect, help us, we pray thee, always to trust in thy goodness; that, walking with thee and following thee in all simplicity, we may posses quiet and contented minds, and may cast all our care upon thee, for thou carest for us; for the sake of Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen."

SUPPLEMENT TO

The Mennonite

VOLUME LVII NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, SEPTEMBER 19, 1944 NUMBER 37

"ONE MORE DAY'S WORK FOR JESUS"

It was during the week for witnessing when a group of us went on our trailer-cart to Jeeradubri. We took along some pictures to tell the Easter story and some bhajan song books. On the way I told each woman what I wanted her to do.

At the first place where we stopped, the people were busy weaving. They hardly had time to give us their complete attention. So they listened with divided attention. We sang a couple of songs and then told them the Easter story. First we told about His suffering and death and then Dukhi was supposed to explain the Easter story. But she had it all mixed up in her mind. Padmani and I then tried to fill in the gap. But I was so shocked because Dukhi has attended our mission school for years.

At the next place we found a very large crowd, rather noisy, but they at least were willing to listen. In broken fashion we again attempted to tell the Easter story. Before leaving we sang several more songs and explained them. When we left I thought, "Well, I do not think anybody will be converted today from our preaching."

On the way home I told Dukhi to read the whole chapter of Matt. 28 to get the account of the Easter story.

My disappointment and depression because of Dukhi's failure in telling the Easter story, was turned to appreciation and joy when the following conversation took place. While we were travelling along the women began to talk about their children —Dukhi said that her oldest boy had been punished when he misbehaved in school. They would not give him any food until he had begged pardon and fixed things up.

I was glad to hear that they had discipline in their home. Most of the Indian parents spoil their oldest sons and do not try to correct them. Their misguided love often spells the ruin of the boy. If there is any trouble between teacher and child, then many parents put all the blame on the teacher. This makes it hard for the teacher and spoils the child. So knowing all this, I was glad to see that Dukhi had taken the side of the teacher and reprimanded her child.

As our trailer cart slowly travelled along, I felt that even though Dukhi had failed in telling the Easter story, still she had passed with honor in her course on child training.

WOULD YOU THINK IT?

1. Upon making my visit to the girls' boarding school, the other day, I asked, "How are all the girls?" The matron said, "El is sick." When I asked how it was, then said that this girl was not used to eating 2 meals of rice a day, and so the change had made her sick. She was used to eating very little food at home. But the matron said, "She will be all right after 2 or 3 days. Many others have had the same experience."

2. In our part of India, the wood is cut by wood sawers. Two men have the log between them, and then pull the ends of the saw back and forth. In Basna I was surprised one day to see a woman pulling one end of the saw. Upon inquiry I found out that she often saws with her husband, and also seems equal to the task. She smiled and said "Salam" when I went by.

3. Last year we had a lot of stealing of clothes in our boys' boarding. So this year we tried to check up to find some of the reasons. One cause was the carelessness of the boys when they washed and dried their clothes. Another reason was—when they hung up their clothes to dry on the wall, then the para (village) people passing by would just take them most of these are Christians, but they have no compunction about taking other people's clothes. They feel the school children have so many clothes and they have so few, so it seems legitimate for them to help themselves.

SNAKES, SNAKES, SNAKES

It is usually a new missionary who is impressed with the danger of poisonous snakes. One who has been in India twenty years has become so used to this that he is usually not conscious of the danger. But this year snakes have forced themselves on our consciousness. I have written in other articles that two of our boarding boys have been killed by poisonous snakes. After the second boy was killed systematic snake hunting was started. The room in which the second boy was killed was plastered shut airtight; and the exhaust of an engine was put in; thus pumping the room full of carbon monoxide gas. About two hours later a large Krait was found and killed in the next room. (The two common deadly snakes in India are the cobra and the krait). The tin roof was lifted, and another krait was found. A day or so later another krait was found right in front of the primary school building. Again very shortly after that a real large krait was found on the porch of the middle school building when the boys went to sleep. The following day our leading teached killed a krait in front of his house, which is near the school. Then again after a few days one boy went into the boarding house woodshed to get firewood. He lifted a piece of wood and saw a snake under it. He dropped the wood and made alarm. A hundred boys and teachers gathered around. The whole pile of wood was thrown out; and there at last the snake came out—a cobra over three feet long, of the most deadly kind as our doctor pronounced. That same week we dug out some roots and stumps near the school house, and found another cobra and one more krait. All this makes us snake conscious; and before I get up in the morning I look under the bed before I put my feet out whether there might be a snake ready to strike me. Ps. 91:13 has become rather meaningful to us: because we are literally surrounded by these death-dealing reptiles.—John Thiessen

DOING THINGS BY WAVES IN INDIA

In America the word Waves is likely understood to mean a certain womens' organization connected with the present war. But in this short article we shall mean brief upsurgings or spells. India lives by such spells. Even chickens lay their eggs by spells. In our home we do not have enough chickens to supply us the needed eggs, so we have to buy. Some days so many are brought to the home that we are overloaded, and then again for a number of days we cannot get any. Now in the month of March the wedding spell or wave is on. Even among Christians the weddings are so numerous that three elders here in the Basna area can hardly catch up with the demand. Non-Christian wedding drums go day and night. People are also religious by waves. During some parts of the year for weeks on end there is no religious observance, no regular day of special worship like the Christian Sunday. Then all of a sudden there are a long string of days of religious observation. There is even an annual wave of profanity. Only last week such special time was observed. People throw dust at each other, and unload their pent-up feelings against each other in the ugliest words they can think of. I should say here in this connection though that profanity in India is something different than it is (or I hope was) in America when I knew something of the "every day" vocabulary of people. In America profanity was taking the name of God in a most disrespectful manner. Profanity in India takes more the form of cursing the other persons forefathers several generations, and pronouncing various forms of doom on the other's posterity. Women pronounce on each other that their children will be crippled, or will be born blind, or even be born dead. Men pronounce over each other that worms will eat out their eyes; or that their work animals will die, or that their children will fail in school, etc. etc. But among and in this spell ridden social life comes the gospel of Christ Jesus and demands regular and daily worship, and "walking with the Lord". That many of our new Christians find it hard and "against the grain," to keep Sunday regularly and keep it holy, is not surprising. But we believe that discipleship with Christ is not a matter of spells or waves; but a persistent daily warfare against all the approaches of evil. Please remember us in your prayers in connection with our teaching duties in India.

I WANTED TO STAND ALONE

Recently when I travelled on the train again were noticed at each station according to the custom of the railway several red buckets suspended filled with water. These buckets have round bottoms, cannot be standing on the ground. These are to be ever-ready for emergency when fire breaks out.

I have seen these buckets hundreds of times without any further notice, however, this time an incident came into my recollection. Years ago a very gifted and promising young man came to my office with a heavy heart, confessiong a serious fall. Upon inquiry how that actually had come to pass, he related the incident thus:

"I became a successful leader in the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor, enjoyed the work immensely. One day suddenly I forgot the dependence upon God and stood alone. I realized as a young robust character it would not hurt to play hide-and-seek with sin. Just after a short time my awful fall occurred unawares before really noticing the significance of the sin, all had happened, my life was spoiled. Now this is my condition for which I am exceedingly sorry!"

All such would not have happened—yes, could not have happened—had he like the buckets depended upon the support from above and be filled with the Spirit for any emergency in his life. "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed he falls!"

Champa, C. P., India, July 17th 1944.

A week ago both of us travelled to Mauhadei from Champa on a buffalo cart to look after the station for several weeks. Surprisingly how this news spreads without a wireless over the entire area. The new Christians and also the older ones came in to greet us. Of course, so-to-say each had some striking report, both encouraging and depressing, connected with a petition, because they were exceedingly poor. All day long these attentions kept us unprecedented busy to satisfy them in some way.

On Saturday afternoon the quarterly church meeting convened in an amiable manner for which we highly felt to rejoice. In the morning one man brought his wife for baptism. She was baptized. On Sunday morning a couple brought their 12-year-old daughter whom they had finally snatched from their non-Christian friends' home for baptism. Upon a very clear confession of faith, repeating the Apostle's Creed she was baptized. Thereafter the Communion services were observed. A nice audience, larger than we expected after the young people had left for school, others living far away, 70 took part. It was indeed a blessed gathering. Most of these are extremely poor on account of the after-effects of the three-years crop failures.

Today we are opening the Bible Course with the group from Tal Deorie and those here on the station. For those across the Mahanadi River the course will be held later after the monsoon has subsided. This is done this year thus to save expenses and loss of time for the workers to travel back and forth now. This year the books Zachariah and Revelation are studied.

Yours,
—P. W. and Mathilde Penner

LETTERS FROM DUERKSENS

Jagdeeshpur, Via Raipur, C. P., India
February 9, 1944

Dear Brethern of the Foreign Mission Board,

A brief, general report of the evangelistic work in the Jagdeeshpur area for 1943 will perhaps be in order. We are thankful that the Lord has again added to the Church "those who were saved." During the year one hundred and seventy took Jesus as their personal Savior and confessed Him before men in baptism. May it be true of them as we read in Acts 4:33, "and great grace was upon them all."

One of the most important changes in this area this year was the re-organization of our churches. You will remember that during the last five years we have been reporting that there were eighteen churches in this area. They were united by an organization which we call in Hindi, "Sammelan." This is really a local Conference which meets twice annually. These eighteen small congregations, even though organized as stated above, did not seem to fit into the Indian Church Conference which takes in all the churches of our mission. So now from eighteen small churches we have organized six larger ones which resemble our rural churches in America. The members of one of these churches live in twenty three different villages but within a radius of about six miles so that Christian families at opposite extremes live about twelve miles apart. The Sunday worship services and other meetings such as weekly womens' meetings and prayer meetings as well as daily evening worship are still held separately in different villages but every three months a general meeting of the whole church is held in one place. This is partly a business meeting.

The advantage in having larger congregations is that it opens the way for fully ordained Indian Pastors who can eventually be supported by their respective churches. Moreover, experience shows that n smaller congregations, especially when composed of new Christians, discipline is difficult. With many villages being united in one church the Christians of the different villages check upon each other and the pressure of public opinion becomes a strict disciplinarian.

It will interest you to know by what names these churches are called. They chose their own names from the Bible. The church of which Jagdeeshpur s the center is from now on called the Bethel Church. Northwest of this is the Eden Church and to the south west is the Emmanuel Church; again to the north is the Bethany Church while to the east and south east is the Salem Church and yet farther east, farthest distant, is the Antioch Church. Bethel Church has 406 members, Eden 145. Emmanuel 345, Bethany 235, Salem 209, Antioch 280. Only the Bethany Church has a fully ordained Indian pastor. The others have ordained ministers who have not yet been ordained as Elders. For baptism and for the Lord's Supper and for weddings they call the pastor from the Bethany church or else they call one of the three missionaries, Dr. Dester, Rev. Thiessen or myself.

We believe that these churches will "consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works" and that they will more and more become witnessing churches so that real evangelism may be carried on by them under the direction of the Holy Spirit.

Yours in the Lord's service,
—J. R. Duerksen

THE GROWING HOSPITAL WORK IN INDIA

by Dr. H. E. Dester

(While this is a report to the Board, it is so full of interesting things that I take the liberty to publish it, although late. P. H. Richert, Sec.)

Dear Friends and Co-Workers,

"Hitherto" the Lord has helped, and in His way and time, provided. For some days I have been almost burdened with the duty of writing a report.

The past year has presented difficulties. Dr. Roy's leaving for the army was a shock. We are still looking and praying for some one to take his place. Most of the essential medicines can be obtained although the prices may be very high. Drugs have to be ordered days and months in advance. Some which I ordered over two months ago have not yet been sent from Bombay. In ordering dangerous drugs it often takes weeks and months of correspondence before the premission can be obtained. It is no small task to keep ahead in providing the necessary drugs and supplies.

Another difficulty is to keep pace with the growing demands for wards. It almost gives me the "shivers" to go out at night with the temperature around 50 degrees, and see patients sleeping on the verandas, under the trees, and often on the floor with little or no bedding. It would take quite an outlay of money to provide every patient with a comfortable bed. It would also require much more help, but it ought to be done. Are there no nurses to come and help? The past week we have been having 60 to 70 inpatients daily.

There is a definite need for an additional hospital building, as well as more wards. We consider it wise to gather materials for such a building even though it may not be built until after our return form furlough, which is almost due. All available space in our hospital is being used to capacity. At times it almost requires a traffic cop to keep the doctor from being overcome by the mob, and it takes a good measure of religion too. For some years we have been asking for another doctor.

We have treated and helped many serious cases the past months. There has been much malaria, and many dysentery cases. A boy of eight years came in very anemic. His body puffed up like a toad's, his tissues were saturated with water, and his blood thin. Upon seeing him Joe Duerksen said, "You could see through him." God's grace and specific drugs, such as we have for amebic dysentery, put him on his feet. Fracture cases are not uncommon. Even older women climb up trees for jungle fruits, fall and fracture their limbs. Recently we had such a case with about a third of the scalp torn off.

The statistics of our two hospitals and the dispensaries at Mauhadih and Janjgir, show an increase of about 50 per cent in the income of 1943, as compared with 1942; also an increase of about 30 per cent in the number of inpatients.

The work at the Leper Home continues as a part of the "Ministry of Healing" by which the Spirit of Christ is exemplified. Through it the attention of the non-christian communities in India have been called to the needs of these suffering people, of which there are over a million. In response to this challenge the Government of India has done much to help the missions in this work, and it has also done much, directly, in helping the leper.

Such trail blazing has been one of the accomplishments of missions. This is true in the case of the anti-tuberculosis work. Missions have made a beginning, others follow in battling this plague. Preventative medicine is one of the great fields of endeavor in which missions have an opportunity.

At Champa Mrs. Ratzlaff, with the help of Dr. Matthai and the other hospital workers, is carrying on valiantly. Now with a big little daughter to help, she will no doubt accomplish more. At Janjgir Mrs. Moyer is doing much to help the non-Christians as well as the Christian community. She has a partially trained, faithful worker to help. In Hauhadih there is a trained compounder who is rendering valuable service to the people of that area.

One stands in awe at the patient suffering of the masses in India. It may be a toothache for many months. Sore and extremely painful eye conditions are very, very common, as well as blindness. Many have itch, and have probably had it for years. Comparatively little has been done to prevent death and relieve suffering at child birth. If you were to make a survey in the average village you would hear many, many mothers say, "I had six (it may be eight or ten) children and only one is living." Very often none are living. Bishop Picket reports that the fact of being a Christian adds very definitely to the side of good health in the individual and community. I am convinced that he is right.

Pray the Lord of the harvest that He send forth workers. To what extent are WE willing to send and be sent? Even before the war we were calling for a doctor and nurses for the work here. When will this need be met?

TARRYING BEFORE THE LORD

Our topic leads our thoughts to the words of Jesus in Luke 24:49: "Tarry ye in the city, until ye be clothed with the power from on high."

We find the words tarry and tarrying about fifty times in our Bible. The dictionary says the word means delay, wait, to wait for, to stay in expectation. In the passages in the Bible we find that sometimes tarry means an inactive stay as in Gen. 19:2: "Behold my lords, turn aside, I pray you, unto your servants house and tarry all night etc." But more often it means an active waiting. In I Cor. 16:7-9 we read: "I do not wish to see you now by the way; for I hope to tarry a while with you, if the Lord permit. But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost; for a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries". And in I Tim. 1:3, 21: "I exhorted thee to tarry at Ephesus, when I was going into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge certain men not to teach not a different doctrine" etc.

The apostles had the privilege of being with Jesus for about three years before the crucifixion in preparation for their work. At evening on the resurrection day we find them behind locked doors for fear of the Jews and not understanding the literal meaning of the plain words of Jesus.

After the resurrection these apostles had the blessed privilege of being with Jesus again, who "showed himself alive after his passion by many proofs, appearing unto them by the space of forty days, and speaking the things concerning the Kingdom of God." Forty days ago they were cast down because Jesus was crucified and "they hoped He would redeem Israel" (Luke 24:21). Now after Jesus parted from them they "returned to Jerusalem with great joy and were continually in the temple, praising God" (Luke 24;52, 53) or as we read in Acts chapter one: "Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount—and when they were come in they went up into the upper chamber where they were abiding—all with one accord continued steadfastly in prayer." They literally and gladly obeyed the command of Jesus this time when he said: Tarry ye in the city until ye be clothed with power from on high."

A great change in forty days. But they were not ready yet to go out on the great work assigned to them but were told to tarry. This power, the Holy Spirit, which was promised them by Jesus just before he left and for which they were waiting came after ten days of tarrying, active tarrying, and filled them, completed the preparation to be witnesses for their Lord and Master" in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8). The fear for the Jews was gone. They got up and began to speak as the Spirit gave them utterance. Their experiences before had not been in vain. The Holy Spirit made use of the three years, of the 40 days, and last but not least of the ten days of tarrying before the Lord.

When we read Acts chapter 2 we easily recognize how the Holy Spirit made use of Peter's years and days of fellowship with Jesus and the the tarrying before the Lord. All other preparation was helpful but this season of prayer, contemplation and consecration was necessary to be able to receive the Holy Spirit in the full measure and to witness for the Lord with the power they did.

I leave the practical applications for the discussion.—J. B. Ediger (Note: The above paper was read before the Oklahoma Workers' Conference in 1935, and as I attended this conference, a copy was handed me, but not for publication. I found it recently, and the general complaint of lack of power in the church today, calls for such a meditation—P. H. Richert, Sec.

THERE WERE A FEW!

Some time ago an unmarried man whose parents had died, then being forsaken by the other family members, felt his lonely condition painfully. He came in contact with the Christian group, and beheld the close fellowship. He then began to yearn to become himself a member of such a group. The instruction immediately opened, soon he offered himself for baptism. His name was Jaibol (Victorious strength).

Immediately upon embracing the new faith, his ace overstreamed with joy unspeakable. In a rude manner he expressed the newly dawned inward life. Whatever help he could render, he gladly proffered. Alas, not many months after that he ell sick, medicines were administered. In spite of ll his condition became serious. One of the Indian eader's wife having being alone for weeks, called he Christian men of her circle for consultation. aibol had been cared for several weeks in her ome, she noticed his condition became worse. She inally asked the men what should be done.

These Christians originated from different castes, ut feeling they being brethren in Christ to Jaibol, hen said, "The rainy season is in swing, all the ields, the ravines, the one-mile wide rivers are filled o overflowing." Again the clouds are threatening nother heavy downpour; the distance to the mission tation is more than fifteen miles, no oxcart can ossibly go. Above all our fields need attention, evertheless we shall look for rope, bamboos, get basket, or some kind of a bed. Brother Jaibol will be carried by us four to the mission dispensary or treatment!" This thought unexpectedly quickly materialized. When our Bible Class for that day was finished at Mauhadei, these brethren arrived nd deposited their load with joyfilled faces after toilsome effort to save a fellow-brother's life. hey said, "This our brother is unable to walk, we ope the Lord will in His grace restore him soon!"

Brother Jaibol passed on into the Lord's presence oon. These brethren never regretted having helped he lonely saint of Christ. These four brethren certainly set an excellent example to help our fellow-saints in spite of other quite pressing obligations waiting; besides that various adverse situations prevailing. This affair reminded us of the four men in cripture who with much painstaking brought the an to Christ for attention. Where have I been so arnest in my service for the Master?

TWO EFFECTIVE CHAINS

The Lord during one of the last interviews with His followers ordered them to go out to the multitudes, yes, told them, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me!" Had this been ignored by the followers, the church could not have been spread until now almost over the entire world. Of course, the spreading should have been done infinitely more energetically, and presently be exercised with greater zeal. Here are a few evidences that such testimony is true of His witnesses, whereas they are unlearned and frail at that.

Firstly, an elderly widowed mother had at some distance from her a nephew residing. He heard from an ordinary Christian Christ's Gospel. One day he felt an inward craving to enter the Christian fold, make the contents of this teaching His own. He requested his aunt to take him to a pastor for baptism. They walked to the nearest church about seven miles away. The pastor was absent, so the widow took him another 25 miles. The entire distance led them through watery rice fields, and across a one-mile-wide river, covered more than 30 miles in all. At the same time this aunt was seriously affected with the after-effects of malaria. The lad was baptised shortly after arriving at the end of their tiresome journey. On their return journey both were singing and praising the Lord; illiterate they were, the hearts bubbled over with joy unspeakable.

When on his return he entered the home, his widowed mother met the saved son with a deluge of abusive language, he was shoved out of the room onto the veranda. She would not any longer dine with the son. However, she ate and distributed the son's rice, even sold a portion of his fields and spent the money selfishly. The son in the meanwhile got married. The struggle continued unabated, but the son and the young newly converted wife bore the cross patiently.

One day not many months hence the son Dharmsingh (born of salvation) appeared on the mission station with his mother, the faces overstreaming with joy, asking that the mother should be baptized the next morning This baptism happened. The work continued. Not long hence this young man, the mother, and aunt came with another middle-aged couple and two children over 30 miles for the baptism of the parents and the blessing of the children.

That same village has now several other candidates under instruction. This unlearned couple with the mother, and the newly won couple instruct them. How is this done, the reader may ask? I hardly know what to say, but here is the Holy Spirit active. The relatives of these candidates, knowing what happened aforetime, are now watching them with greatest vigilance. But, for certain, some night the enquirers shall break away for baptism. They will!

Secondly, in another village a lone man had been baptized some years ago. His own wife and relatives made it exceedingly unpleasant for him. He felt the loneliness, also the strain to be unbearable, ultimately he contemplated to rejoin caste. One day suddenly it came to him strongly, "Try to win your wife for Christ!" He immediately shouldered this responsibility boldly; soon the wife was brought for baptism. This couple now won their daughter and her husband. This latter couple returned to their village after much reproach won the husband's parents and several young men. The above lone man with his wife in their village went after and won other families. Thus both villages show the rich fruits of real testimony. "Let us diligently testify, He honors the testimony of the simplest to His followers!"

A LETTER WRITTEN FOR THE REPORT FOR THE CONFERENCE

Jagdeeshpore, via Raipore, C. P. India
June 8, 1944

Rev. P. A. Penner
Newton, Kansas

Dear Brother:

Today only a short airmail letter with a few items which you perhaps can use partially in your report to the General Conference. Your two letters, the last one of March 17 have arrived. The last one came just yesterday. The reply to your letters will be somewhat longer, D.V., and will come by ordinary mail. Thank you for both letters.

Christ Jesus our Saviour said, "I will build my church." We believe Jesus leads on and leads on the various phases of this building of His church. One of these phases of building is the work with the youth and the children. This is, our special task and joy in India. We have been in this phase of work in India now for 20 years. By the grace of God we have learned to know India's youth. It is with India's youth as it is with youth all over the world; viz., their first and primary need is Christ the Saviour. This great need we have tried our youth to answer by leading them to Him who loved all. We have striven to point them to the Saviour in our daily scripture courses, in our contact with them in the boarding homes, and on the playground, and also in physical work. Through the years we have found that it is very necessary that children and youth receive practice in following Christ in the daily problems of life. If a boy does a dishonest job on the farm, it is pointed out to him, that Jesus would not approve of that. If a girl sews a garment in a shoddy way, when she herself knows that she can do better, we show her that it is a matter of disrespect to our Lord. If a boy takes his chance of carefully writing a one before his cents (annas in our case) in his bank book, thinking that in that way he will be one dollar (one rupee) ahead, a rather big case is made out of it, lest the roots of Christlessness in such a case of dishonesty, take hold of the soul. Such, many more similar incidents, fill our days. But the results? Thank God we can say that they are as good as anywhere in the world as far as we can observe. Not perfect results, no, not at all. But this last year 44 young people, mainly students in our school, dedicated themselves to our Lord making promise to be His and only His. Most of them have been consistent in their choice and resolution. Just one case I wish to mention. Lalhee, a boy of about 16 years of age, began to sow wild oats rather heavily, a little over a year ago. Matters became so bad with him that it seemed to us that we would have to expel him from school. No warnings or advice or prayers seemed to help. Then a Christian brother showed slides of the prodigal son one evening, and that took a hold on Lalhoo. He turned, and in the words of the apostle Paul, became a new creature. This took place nine months ago, and since then Lalhoo has walked in the way of Jesus consistently. So we can be sure by now that his conversion was not merely a passing emotion, but that it took place in his inmost being. He, the prodigal, really came back to the Father.

I should yet make brief mention of the Normal Training Department in our school. As most members of the conference know, in the Phuljhar or Basna area we have Christians in over 80 different villages; altogether nearly 3000 souls, including unbaptized children. Because of being so scattered, many of these Christians and their children do not receive the Christian nurture they should have. So in our Normal school we aim to build up workers during the two year's course, who are prepared to go out and settle in villages where Christians are, and teach their children, and lead the adults in further knowing and understanding and following Christ Jesus. This means that these Normal School students are prepared to preach the gospel and lead the group in daily worship. As a special scripture basis for this preparation I study with them during the two years the Gospel of Mark for which our during the two year's course, who are prepared to Then we study the Acts of the Apostles in order to appreciate the beginnings of the Christian church. And then we study three of Paul's letters, namely the Galatians and the two Corinthian letters. In these letters, especially in the Corinthian letters, we have almost exactly the picture of our young churches in India,—full of troubles and divisions and quarrels and immorality; yet their direction is toward Christ. Such was the Corinthian church, too, and Paul called them saints. Let us also keep on believing in the young church, and working with her and praying for her.

Yours for Christ in India

"IF MOTHER HAD DIED LONG AGO"

Thus spoke Christopher, a fine young man, honoured in the church and a member of the local church council. I was amazed, and asked him what provoked such hard words from him. Then the following story came. His father had died many ears ago. His mother married again, and had one ttle daughter. Mother and stepfather lived in a ar away village where this little girl had no opportu- ity to go to school nor to form friendships with ther children of Christian homes and with other outh. Christopher begged his mother to let little otimani (name of the girl), stay in his home and o to school. He lives near the mission school. The other let her come for a few months, and then rcefully took her home because she was so lone- me without the girl. So Jotimani never even nished one complete grade in school. The girl ew up to young womanhood. But she learned othing, and had no contact with other youth. Just ross the street lived a rogue of a man who chased s own wife from his home. One night Jotimani sappears with this villian. The news soon came to hristopher, and he was so distressed crushed in ame for his little sister, because she is barely xteen that the above statement came out of his outh.

I bethought myself. Are we parents actually some- nes such a hindrance to our children that it were tter if we were dead? This mother loved this tle girl to whom she had given birth in her old e. Her lonesomeness for the girl was natural. Yet is affection seems to have been the direct cause of e girl's ruin. At least her own son thinks so.

MAATA DAI DEVI

The above are three Hindi words, which mean nallpox mother goddess." Generally speaking, lia's non-Christian people, i.e., the Hindus, feel that knesses are brought by evil spirits or gods. Small- x is a dread disease; when it takes a hold of a nmunity, people do all they can not to anger the ldess who brings these pox, lest she reek ven- nce in a terrible manner. Government enforces cination, but as a whole not much faith is put that by the general public. One way of pleasing goddess is not to publish her activity.

Many of our Christians are still very close to ndu thinking, especially when it comes to domestic ubles. The old devices are then very often re- ed to. Right here in our Jagdishpore area we all a sudden had a case of smallpox. The afflicted was Saribai, who is often in our home. So we w it at once and did all we could to check the ase and make it as bearable as possible for our istian sister. She got better, and we were glad to hear of any new cases. So we thought all over. But we noticed that several people did come to church or other public meetings. So hance I went to the homes and insisted on greet- every family member. There I found several s of terrible smallpox. I was shocked and dis- ed and said, "Why in the world don't you notify the hospital." No answer was given. I called the local evangelist, and asked him why medical aid was not sought. His reply was: "Fear; they fear the wrath of Maata Dai Devi." Here we are with our poor young Christians, fearing Maata Dai Devi instead of fearing God. Please pray for us that we may not be discouraged when the "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little," goes very slow indeed.

WHEN THE BOYS COME BACK

That will be a great day in present world history when the boys will come back from the world wide battlefields. With us locally it is always a great day too when our boys come back to our school. At the end of April they left, scattering far and wide, even to other mission areas. By the beginning of June, preparations are made in Jagdeeshpore for the boys when they will come back. By the middle of June there is great hustle and bustle, because the boys may start coming in at any time. Then on the fifteenth the first boys arrive, on the sixteenth more, and on the seventeenth there is a swarming around. The boys have come, the whole Basna area, from dozens of villages. They have come from Mauhadih, from Champa, from Janjgir, and from Korba and beyond, just about a hundred miles. A few have even come from Baitalpore in the Evangelical mission way over a hundred miles away. Then come the "hello's," "are you well?" "how did you spend the hot season?" and scores of other questions. But the housefather of our boarding and I are rather quiet. Over a hundred boys and a number of girls are delivered into our care—all young and formative in character. How will we be able to help them so that their characters may be established in Christ? Will any child drift farther away from Christ because of us? May God forbid. Especially one boy is a real challenge to us. He is not so young. He has just accepted Christ and has received terrible beatings from his family members because of it. Here he is in a "Christian Boarding School." Will he be disappointed? Will he see too much which is not Christlike? One trembles. Indeed, we need the intercession of everyone who reads this and of others too. Please remember us before the throne of grace.

"YOU GIVE TO ME; AND THEN I WILL GIVE TO GOD"

It was Thanksgiving Day morning. Several brethren casually came to our house for a little chat. I asked them what they were going to give to God today on this special day of thanksgiving. One of them said, Missionary, you give us something and then we will give that to God." I told them the real value of an offering consisted in it being a real sacrifice of what one had earned. I asked them whether they didn't have some chickens in the home; or, since they were weavers, whether it wouldn't be nice to offer a yard of cloth, or a dish of country beans, etc. It was soon revealed that these brethren had something of all these things I had enumerated, and they went home to make ready. When church meeting time came they came with their hands full of offerings for God's work, and their faces shone as they presented their gifts. All they needed was a suggestion. That is so very often the case. One of the big functions of the missionary is to make suggestions and give encouragement. We would implore our home churches to pray for us that we might always have the power of the Spirit to make the right suggestions, spiritually and materially.

From Gerald Stucky's Scrapbook

San Joso, Costa Rica

I don't think you'd like our hotel room here very much—nor do I. It's as expensive as the one in Guatemala City, but it is very, very poor. The only thing between us and the street is a wooden screen. We hear everything that passes. Being in the heart of the city, we hear plenty. But no use complaining, it is the best thing we could get. We and about 1000 ants share the same room. It's very warm here. I'm tempted to call it hot.

This city is very much like East Side (lower) New York City. Hotels, shops, people, streets, are slummy. No big stores, no up-to-date things. No street cars. The taxies are wonderful, however—2 horse-drawn carriages. They are great fun. There are a couple of quite nice parks.

I think mission work is very needy here, but I think it would be hard. Certainly it isn't a very desirable place to live. We visited the CAM and Baptist work here. The CAM has a baptized membership in Nicaragua of about 1000, the Moravians about 13,000, and the Baptists possibly about the size of the CAM. The ratio of Christians here may be 1-130. Northeast and northwest parts of this country are still open territories—up there it is very hilly, about 1500 feet above sea level, and a scattered population. At present we are not investigating it further.

There are primarily two classes of people, with a trace of a middle class. To wear a coat here is a mark of dignity and culture. But it is so very hot here, I lowered the standards and wore a sport shirt. Very few have culture here anyway.

It appears thus far as if Mexico is by far the neediest place of the places that we have visited. Though Central America is certainly not evangelized in any sense of the term, yet the facilities seem to be here and progress is definitely being made. The work in Guatemala is a progressive work. In the other Central American countries possibly less so. Nicaragua seemed to be a slow and difficult work, with an indifferent, lower type of people. As Dr. Strachan says, Costa Rica is too small to begin new work. Mexico never used to appeal very much to me, but after having visited it, and having met some of the very fine missionary personnel that is there at present, and after having seen at least a little of its need, I think that it could be a very desirable place to work with great opportunity. The openness and closedness of Mexico seems not so much to lie with the government as it does with the vision of the particular missionaries. We have seen various kinds of them. Some seem to fold up and think that there is not much that can be done in that country because of the attitude of the government. So, piously they sit back and work under their "dreadful" handicaps, and even feel that the present attitude of the government has been a very great blessing to the church in Mexico, for it has made the missionary take a secondary place and has been an effective step in making the church indigenous. Men like Captain Taylor, Mr. Townsend, Mr. Dale, and others seem to be doing a very, very fine work—the former two in complete cooperation with the government. As I say, the work there seems to be a matter of vision and willingness to endure red tape for a season.

I was certainly glad to get out of hot Managua—it is a mighty stuffy place, and as I said, dirty. Costa Rica is much better, and the climate far more agreeable. We haven't seen too much of the city as yet, but thus far my vote still goes to Guatemala City—what a place that is!

MARRED FOR US

There was once a lady who was very beautifu except for her hands, which were misshapen an marred. For many a long day her little daughter ha wondered what was the meaning of those repulsiv hands. At last she said to her, "Mother, I love you face, and I love your eyes and your hair, they ar so beautiful. But I cannot love your hands, they ar so ugly."

Then the mother told her about her hands: ho ten years ago the house had taken fire, and how th nursery upstairs was in a blaze, and how she ha rushed to the cradle and snatched the baby from i and how her hands from that hour had been deformed. The baby saved was her listening daughter. An then the daughter kissed the shapeless hands she use to shrink from.

"But He was wounded for our transgressions, H was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we a healed." Isaiah 53:5.—Rev. P. K. Regier

Utah State Training School

By Arlo Sonnenberg

(In this Training School fifteen C.P.S. men under M.C.C., are serving as attendants, supervisors, etc., giving their testimony of constructive service in a ime of war. —C.P.S. Headquarters)

Northeast of American Fork, on a ridge overooking that sidestreeted town of three thousand, here rises a group of tan brick buildings—a home or nearly six hundred boys and girls. Here they work and eat and sleep. More than a hundred men and women supervise the activities of these children. All together they farm nearly five hundred acres of irrigated land, milk forty cows, harvest and can thousands of bushels of fruit and vegetables each year, make brushes and brooms, do all of the aundry, and help to prepare and serve all food. n addition they carry on varied activities of group inging, Sunday School, and a regular schedule of chool classes for those of school age and ability.

In age our big family varies literally from seven o seventy. Some are in cribs; some shovel coal. Many cannot write their name, but some can sing, play the piano, execute intricate steps on skates, r iron a shirt much better than you or I.

The older boys and girls help the younger—elp feed and dress them. The well lead the helpless. They interpret each other's wants. One boy ust picks up papers. Green grass grows, and trees nd shrubs, and the children join in to make it home.

In a little more than a decade since the school egan, almost 400 boys and girls have been discharged, and nearly 300 are on parole. Some of his number are married—often as a result of romances which began at the school. A great many f them are working, at least enough to make their wn living. A few earn up to a dollar an hour.

The boys and girls here will always require some supervision because their judgment will never ecome very mature. They will never become doctors or teachers or stenographers or even good armers. The School does not intend for them to e. But a great many can be taught to do much seful work faithfully and well. The School can elp them in learning to be neat and clean, to work with others, and to be good and useful citizens. The chool can often take the burden from the child's amily, it can offer protection to the child, and for many, it can offer a haven from criticism, teasing, nd a world of cruel competition. Not all of the oys and girls can go out to take their place in society, but they have a right to life and love—our love! Most of them in their playing or working are about as happy as you and I. God gives life and takes it away, and after all, He only knows its value.

C.P.S. Searching Party

By Claude Miller

C.P.S. Camp No. 107, Three Rivers, California

"There is a man lost and twelve men are needed to make up searching parties to look for him." Such were the words, spoken over the loudspeaker that woke the camp at 5:00 a.m. Sunday, June 4. The group of twelve was picked and, after an early breakfast, left for the Ranger Station at Ash Mt. for instructions. The Rangers informed us that the lost man was a fisherman and was lost on the Kaweah River below Hospital Rock. We were divided into four groups and each given a section of the river to search in the vicinity where he had last been seen. There was a Ranger in charge of each group of three, each of which was equipped with climbing ropes, as some of the terrain was very rough. One group, after scaling the wall of a box canyon which was about seventy-five feet high and searching on down-stream for another hour, finally found the man. He had fallen about seventy feet and was lying near the edge of the water. He had been killed by the fall. Ranger Hansen gave several gunshots as a signal and started back to the road with one man. The parties reunited and then began cutting a trail with brush-hooks to the river so that the man could be brought out on a stretcher. A fresh group of fellows arrived from camp to help in making the trail and carrying the stretcher. We arrived back at camp about noon after a memorable morning.

Fresh news items from your C.E. society. Do you have interesting and worthwhile activities? Let us hear about them. Every C. E. society ought to have a reporter that sends in news for the "Youth Jottings" of The Mennonite.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Delmar Wedel to go to Near East as relief worker: According to the M.C.C. news release in this issue, Delmar Wedel is to do relief work in the Near East under the M.C.C. sponsorship through UNRRA. Delmar is a member of the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho. For the past several years he has been attending theological seminary in California. He is a graduate of Bethel College.

—The C.E. societies of the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, recently held a fellowship supper on the church lawn in honor of Elenore Schmidt, who is leaving for India as missionary.

—Miss Lenore Friesen, who did mission work among migrants this past sumer, told of her experiences to the Women's Missionary Society of the Bethel College Church at a recent meeting.

—The choir of the First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, recently had a social at the parsonage after one of their evening practices.

—Florence Wiebe of Aberdeen, Idaho, and Titus Nickel of Salem, Oregon, were married by Rev. Phil. A. Wedel on August 31, 1944. The young couple is planning to do missionary work in Peru, South America, under the Wycliff Linguistic School.

—The C.E. of the Burrton Mennonite Church, Burrton, Kansas, had a time of fellowship and ice cream, cake, and cookies after one of their recent programs.

C.P.S. SEARCHING PARTY

—Elmer Ediger is Educational Secretary for the Mennonite Central Committee and is in charge of the educational program in the forty or so M.C.C. administered C.P.S. camps and units. Elmer comes from Buhler, Kansas, and is a member of the Mennonite Church in Buhler. His father is Rev. D. J. Ediger, who served as minister in Western Kansas for some time. Missionary J. B. Ediger of Clinton, Oklahoma, is an uncle. After graduating from Bethel College in 1940, Elmer taught for a year. He first entered C.P.S. in 1942, when he was inducted into the Colorado Springs C.P.S. camp. After a few months there, he went to Weeping Water, Nebraska, where he served as Educational Director until his call to Akron. He took up his present work in April, 1943. His main work is the organization of special schools in C.P.S. and the arranging of speakers for camps. He also gathers materials and suggestions for use in the classes held in C.P.S. camps and units. Elmer plans to continue his education after C.P.S. and then enter the ministry. His wife is the former Mildred Gerbrand of Buhler, Kansas. She is a registered nurse and is now serving in that capacity at Ephrata, Pa., where the Edigers are at home. When asked by the editor about his convictions relative to the welfare of young people, Mr. Ediger made the following statements:

1. "It seems to me that in C.P.S. we have learned that when we have been in our home communities most of our life we tend to be unaware of the great worth of our solid church communities and those things which we as a distinct Christian group have to do to fulfill our individual and group Christian mission."

2. "There is a big difference as to whether or not we attend our own Christian schools."

3. "I believe that it is for the high school age group that we need a more unapologetic Christian education, more in the high school itself and also a more careful Bible and Christian doctrine follow-up in the church after we have joined the church."

4. "Regardless of how strong a minister we have in our church, we as individuals must learn to use the Bible more meaningfully in our personal and family life."

5. "Even if we don't have C.P.S. after the war, is it not our duty as disciples of Christ to give at least one full year of Christian service? I believe our church should provide such opportunities for such service for individuals between the ages of 18 and 25 perhaps in Puerto Rico, in the south, in some of our own or other rural communities where the church needs bolstering, or in some large city. The war has made some of us choose to render such a Christian service. Will we not choose voluntarily to do good, to serve Christ?"

Our Early Christian Faith

By Harley Stucky

In the sphere of Christian living we aim to receive the New Testament ideal; secondly, to practice love and brotherhood; thirdly, to refuse the oath; and fourthly, to give the world a new interpretation of the significance of Christian life.

We aim to translate the gospel into life. Our goal is to revive New Testament Christianity. Our ideal is the Sermon on the Mount. Diligently we strive to follow the footsteps of the Church of the first centuries nd renew unadulterated original Christianity. "We btained much instruction from various writings of uther, Zwingli, and others. . . Yet we recognized a reat lack in regards to repentance, conversion and ne true Christian life. . . .The minister had much to ay of amendment of life, of giving to the poor, loving ne another, and abstaining, from evil. But. . .the octrine which was preached. . .was not carried out." hen God sent his messengers to us we established congregation in which repentance and life as reveal- l in Christ was in evidence. Undoubtedly, we will ver be able to bring this real life, this pure life, this ly life to the mass of people living in our day, ut wherever there are men and women who want to ke Christ seriously—there, at least, we want to es- blish the Kingdom of God.

A pure Christian life is more than an expression of ous sentiment—it is the actual practice of sharing ssessions to meet the needs of others—it is the actice of Christian love and brotherhood. One of r Brethren, Hans Leopold, the Swiss martyr of 28 said, "If (we) know of any one who is in need, nether or not he is a member of (our) church, (we) lieve it (our) duty, out of love to God, to render lp and aid." Another one of our early leaders, ubnaier wrote: "When one sees his neighbor suffer, should give him alms, in order that the hungry, irsty, naked, and imprisoned may be helped, and at the more a man practices such works of mercy e nearer would he be to the spirit of Christianity." e are but the mere stewards of our possessions. ne of our bitterest enemies, Heinrich Bullinger, suc- ssor to Zwingli as leader of the reformed Church of rich, said of us; "They teach that every good ristian is under duty before God from motives of e, to use, if need be, all his possessions to supply e necessities of life, to any of the Brethren who are need." May we be worthy of that appraisal.

We believe that life is to be lived so simple and so aight-forward that when we say "yea" or "nay" at answer ought to be sufficient. We, being follow- of Christ, believe that his statement on this sub- t is to be taken as a literal imperative and there- e we refuse to take the oath.

We interpret the Christian life as an outward evi- ice of an invisible grace. The "good life" is refore essential to salvation. It is both the fruit the spirit and the evidence of Chrisian faith. We convinced that those who give no evidence of d works are not saved. Menno Simons put it way: "Whosoever does not walk according to doctrine, testifies by his deed that he does not eve in Him or know Him and is not in the com- nion of the saints."

t was this emphasis upon the establishment of the gdom of God here on earth, this conception of Christian life which caused us to create a new e of church. We announced to the world the conception of a pure church consisting of the regenerated only; secondly, we gave to the world the principle of a voluntary church membership; thirdly, we set the Church in contrast with the world; and fourthly, we were the first to insist on the separation of church and state.

Our aim is to create a church of those who are serious in their endeavor to alter their lives to meet the requirements of the gospel. We want a church of pure convents instead of a mixed church of the world where some are redeemed and some are unredeemed. The true church is a fellowship of believers and this means a church consisting of the regenerated only. We do not aim to reform an old church by the Bible; we aim to build a new church from the gospel.

We believe that such a church must have a voluntary church membership. Instead of the church consisting of all the people living in a community, it is to consist only of those persons who voluntarily accept Christ and are willing to confess him and to assume the responsibility of living in obedience to him.

We, therefore, believe that infant baptism must be rejected. Our reasons are: first, that faith must precede baptism and since a child does not have the capacity to think for itself it could therefore not have faith; second, this means that children before he age of accountability are unresponsible and sinless and therefore do not need baptism; third, infant baptism is un-scriptural, and fourth, in the true church the individual must voluntarily choose to belong to it.

A further consequence of our theory of the church means that it must be separated from the world. The body of Christ must be kept pure and spotless. It must be a body of believers who have deliberately turned their backs upon the world and who now are a people separate unto the Lord.

And finally we believe that our conception of the church requires the separation of church and state. At this point we stand in sharp contrast wih he popular conception of our day, even the great Protestant reformers have continued the medieval principle of the union of church and state. We acknowledge the duty of the state to perform secular functions in a secular society. But we believe that the church must be free to preach and to practice the Christian Gospel and the Church is to be responsible to God alone. This, of course, means that the church cannot depend on the state for financial support, or protection, legal, or otherwise.

A CHARGE TO KEEP

"Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; That they do good, that they be rich in godd works, ready to distribute, willing to cmmunicate;" I Tim. 6:17, 18.

Thoughts on the Parables

The parable of the Tares presents a case where the weeds were deliberately sown with hostile intent. It confronts us with the problem of the mixture of good and evil in a God-created world. It pictures a field in which there were two sowings. The owner of the field sowed good seed but an enemy came by night and sowed darnel. When the dark deed was discovered by the servants they asked what should be done about it. Wisely, the master counseled them not to root out the darnel lest they pull up the good wheat. "Let both grow until the harvest," he counseled; then there would be no mistaking.

Inferentially our Lord was claiming that the whole world belonged to him. Satan is a usurper. The seed is the sons of the kingdom; the field is the world. But our Lord says another sowing is going on at the same time, and the sower is Satan (diabolos). What is he sowing? Sons of the evil, men and women who are devoted, not to God, but to evil. What shall we who are the sons and servants of the King and kingdom do? Shall we go out and root up these evil seeds? No, let both alone said Jesus. Till when? Till the harvest, the consummation of the age when he will deal with the situation by supernatural agency. Then, in Divine justice, the good and the bad will be separated.

In the parable the questions fairly bristle! Arguments have centered around this parable as to whether or not it concerned church discipline. Should heretics be tolerated in the church or driven out? A long controversy has intermittently raged over that question. Such a question could hardly been in the mind of Jesus. Actually the church was not in existence when this parable was spoken, and no gospel writer ascribes to Jesus the view that no attempt should be made to root out iniquity from the church. George Buttrick wisely remarks on this point, "Does it offer a rule of thumb for practical conduct? No, it offers more than a rule of thumb; it breathes the spirit from which alone wise action can proceed."

The parable graphically sets before us three practical points. 1. There are missionaries of evil in the world as well as missionaries of the good. If there is one who sows good seed there is also one who sows darnel. While Christian preachers, writers, and witnesses are sowing the seeds of the kingdom, others in the press, on the radio, the saloon, in the theatre and in every conceivable way, are sowing the seeds of destruction. Wherever there is an effort to plant men and women in the kingdom there is opposition.

2. The evil and the good are mixed in the closest way, deceiving even the elect. The evil is often a parasite of the good. Invention for example, has enlarged the opportunity for the criminal as well as of the respectable citizen. Science, with all the blessings it has brought mankind, is now being utilized to make an inferno of destruction. To be specific, the aeroplane has become a scourge as well as a blessing.

Our Lord's thought was moving in the moral and spiritual realm. With his own people in view, he must have known what a travesty on religion the sacrificial and ceremonial system in Judaism had become. Pharisaic zeal for purity of race and religion issued in the ugly Pharisaism depicted in the Gospels. God meant it all for good, but what a mixture it had become in the hands of Jewish leaders!

3. Rash attempts to destroy the evil may involve the destruction of much of the good. There must have been much that was revolting in the Judaism of our Lord's day, yet he conducted the whole of his ministry within its confines. He did attack the corruptions of Judaism in some of the fiercest denunciations in literature, yet in all his dealings with it, he kept in view his own principle that the uprooting of the evil should not endanger the good.

Church history abounds in examples of rash uprooting. Many movements persecuted in their beginnings for being "lawless" have later come to be recognized as bearing genuine fruit. The first protests against slavery called down fiery persecution. One thinks of our own Mennonite history checkered by pilgrimages from country to country; it has been so because the world found it hard to make room for our interpretation of "the life in Christ." The judgment concerning us has already been greatly modified in the course of centuries. The wise man will "judge nothing before the time." (I Cor. 4:5)

If the unrighteous are to be uprooted, could any of us hope to be spared? When we remember how the Light has shone on our path, and how not once, but often we have quenched that Light, how dare we stand up and judge freely? We are driven by our weakness to humility before God.

Furthermore this matter of rooting up tares is dangerous because the roots of human lives are so closely interwoven. By pulling up tares we may pull up wheat! A worthless son for example receives his due reward, but we need to remember that the sword that pierces his body enters his mother's soul. Or when has the church undertaken to root out heresies without forfeiting gentle spiritual qualities?

"Until the harvest," what ominous words! God's control will not be ursurped. Tares will become manifest. That revealing crisis may be reached in this life, but obviously Jesus was looking still farther to the consummation of the age. The seed was wn with differing results. The antagonistic forces f good and evil are at work in this age. The emy has been sowing darnel with the wheat, perplexing even the elect. In the "harvest" the wheat and the tares will be revealed. —Freeman, South Dakota.

Relief Service in a Yugoslav Refugee Camp in Egypt

The following excerpts, which provide snap shots the activities of a relief worker in the Middle-East, ugoslav refugee camps, are taken from the letters the Mennonite relief workers, Dr. G. Richard der and Delvin Kirchhofer.)

New Refugees Arrive

"What a day we had yesterday! We received a rge number more at this camp but what a difference m the groups we had received before! Truly the uation was pitiful. For ten hours we strained ourves to register, bathe, feed, disinfect, inoculate and ccinate and tabulate them. Providing them with dding and transport to their tents was another job. her camps said it just could not be done in one y but we accomplished it. (Several of us in talk- it over at bedtime felt ashamed that we placed much emphasis on making records instead of help- the individuals and making them more comfort- e.)

'I suppose thousands and thousands in Europe and other places are far worse off than these, but it s my first experience in working with people that re actually in need. Especially in the children the old people, one could actually see the effects hunger. Dr. Yoder said last night that one baby ught to him looked exactly like the picture in book, Starvation in Europe. Time and again, ing the grueling process yesterday we had to take e of women and children who actually fainted ore us from sheer exhaustion; time and again we to rush one or more to the medical room or to hospital (the worst cases never reached us for y were dispatched directly to the hospital) for nediate attention. I could not begin to tell you all the ailments that were evident to even an xperienced eye like mine. I can see where the lical staff will be more than plenty busy for some to come."

Orphan Refugees

Not only are they a group of proportionately e numbers of women and children, but there are so many orphans. Again and again we found e children ranging from six to thirteen or so who no parents, often not even an aunt or uncle in some cases they knew absolutely no one in p. We would find them crying, not knowing what o or where to go. Since this was my first actual rience in working with incoming people, on the day, my efforts seemed rather feeble, I am id. I have learned many lessons, though, and I ld be able to profit from my mistakes. Certainly, ing after their welfare on the very first day is of the essentials we dare not forget, and trying to keep families together or to care for the homeless orphans is one of the first things one must do. Our 6,400 or so at the present time will give us plenty to do in this camp for some time to come."

Need of Clothing

"And the clothing! How often I wished we had some of the twenty-five tons you are planning to send to us. Many of them were mere rags. I hope the Red Cross will have plenty of clothing on hand for it will take a lot of it to supply these people with the barest necessities. Yes, how far more in need are these people than the ones who have come heretofore. The sights were so pitiful yesterday that in spite of our rush we could not avoid tears of sympathy for some of them."

"It is so difficult to obtain tents and palliases, but I think everyone slept inside last night. I am not sure how much the lack of clothing is due to the war conditions and how much to their natural state of poverty in their own country, but in any case they must be supplied with clothing. I could tell some horrible instances they have told of past tortures, and we have plenty of evidence that it is not only a rumor. I took a picture yesterday of one women which, I hope, will be clear enough to illustrate what I am saying."

Welfare Work Problems

"My work in welfare is progressing slowly. There is a great deal to be done especially in education and recreation. The problems we face seem terrific, such as lack of tools, wood, equipment of all people who always say "sutra," meaning tomorrow, kinds, etc. The procrastinating habits of these when something needs to be done take patience. The constantly changing personnel among the Yugoslavs with whom we work is trying. Often the hot weather or sand storms make the refugees cling to their tents like chickens in a summer shower. We seem to spend half our time revising our plans or else waiting on someone or trying to get transport."

The Medical Situation

"The situation on the medical side is far from being satisfactory. A lady doctor, Dr. Brown, of the FAU (Friends Ambulance Unit) has been stationed here and has been serving admirably. Unfortunately she became sick a few days ago but is now again about ready to begin her duties. In the meantime Dr. Yoder has been all alone in the work as far as doctors are concerned, both for day and night duty. He usually sees from eighty to one hundred patients every day and sometimes has to continue this pace for seven days a week. . . . I do hope the doctors who are expected from Palestine will be arriving soon and will be satisfactory. It is not a case of negligence, doctors are just non-existent in this area."

Non-Resistance in the Home

By Oscar Wiebe

Non-resistance, to become universally accepted as a solution to world peace, must first become practical in a smaller sphere, for instance the home. The individual must first be convinced of its worth before he can offer it to the nations. He must learn he reasons for resistance. He must get to the roots of the matter to get a better understanding of its cause and effect. Where can he find a better proving ground than in the home? The place where possibilities for strife and distrust are identical with those of nations, except in a smaller measure.

What, then, are the reasons for resistance?

1. Fear—of losing prestige and security.
2. Pride—Counting ourselves better than others.
3. Greed for Power—Dominating others in the home.

Along with these go other so called "little foxes" that tend to build a wall which must be upheld to guard our security, regardless.

For want of a better method, fathers try to maintain their position as head of the family through unkindness and stubbornness. For the same reason, mothers try to retain their position as counsellor and guide through selfishness and cunning. Quite often a child will dominate its brothers and sisters as a result of such parental influence.

Let us read what the Bible teaches about fear. There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear. (John 4:18) No fear of losing prestige. No fear of losing security. Fear of losing the two things most strived for—gone! No more pressure on the mind, and thinking becomes clear. Too many minds today are laboring under the pressure of an insecure future.

Then there is pride, selfishness, jealousy, unkindness, and stubbornness. Let us read I Cor. 13:4-5-6. "Charity suffereth long, and is kind, charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth.

Unkindness turns to kindness, stubbornness turns to seemly behavior, selfishness to unselfishness, pride to humbleness, and greed for power to rejoicing in the truth. What child would not respond to love and kindness from father or mother. A love and kindness that goes hand in hand with discipline, for the two cannot be separated and at the same time reach the objective. Discipline influenced by love will bring forth good standing for parents. Out of this is born cooperation and a willingness to serve, a willingness to admit a wrong and to seek the truth. Observe a happy family and you will find love and discipline reigning in that home.

Love, therefore, is the key to non-resistance—a Christ-like love that surmounts obstacles such as race, religon, poverty, and disease in the fellow man.

RELIEF

Departures to England

Farewell services were held on the evening of September 4 for Ellen Harder and John Thut. Ellen Harder, R.N., has departed for "South Meadows"—an evacuation center in England for children two months to six years of age. John Thut will be recreational director at the "Taxal Edge" boys' convalescent home near Manchester and Birmingham, England.

M.C.C. Executive Meeting

The M.C.C. Executive Committee met at Chicago, September 1 and 2. Among other things they discussed the possibilities of relief in Europe in the light of the rapid progress of the war. Orie Miller gave a report on his recent trip to Paraguay, and P. C. Hiebert reported on his visits to Puerto Rico.

Clothing Center to Open in Mid-West

Another collection and procession depot for relief clothing is to be located at Newton, Kansas. Elma Esau has been appointed to direct the new center with H. A. Fast to assume supervision o the work. It was also decided that Mrs. M. C Lehman should hereafter assume general directorship of all three clothing depots—Kitchener, Newton, and Ephrata. Anna Snyder will succeed Mrs Lehman as director of the local depot at Ephrata (Further details concerning relief clothing an the new collection center will be given later.)

Ingenuity Builds a Hospital

The following are excerpts taken from the September, 1944, issue of Rio La Plata news letter o the C.P.S. Unit at La Plata, Puerto Rico:

A gray, barrack-like structure, 130 feet long an 20 feet wide, and an additional wing of fifty-fiv by twenty-six feet became the present Mennonit hospital in Puerto Rico. Four feet of filling had to be done for the new wing which is now t dining room, kitchen, and women's ward. Dirt ar gravel were hauled from the creek bed, loaded, u loaded, and tamped by hand. Cement for found tions and floors was all mixed by hand.

Lumber of any kind was scarce. Yet the straig est pieces available were used for door frames, whi more cork screw-like two by four's were dispos of at less conspicuous places. Looking at the bedsi stands, bassinets, and instrument tables one wou never suspect that underneath the nice finish a fresh coat of paint is the lumber from old pig pe

The walls, seven and a half feet high, were ma panels of heavy tar roofing material.

Good tile floor for operating room, dining room, nd kitchen has solved the problem of putting a nooth surface on rough cement floor. The other oors are still rough for lack of better suggestions.

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Post-War Conscription

Discussions on post-war conscription have of late again been coming from men in high Government circles. The President has declared himself in favor of a one-year Government training program for youths, not necessarily military. General Marshall has advocated a system of permanent conscription but is not in favor of a large army. Strong unqualified statements for post-war militarism have come from Secretary Stimson, General Hershey, and prominent members of Congress.

In the light of these statements, the Peace Section has given increasing attention to the implications that a prmanent conscription program would have for Mennonite youth, as well as for others. At the meeting of the Peace Section in Chicago, September 1, these concerns were discussed. The prayer concern of the churches is desired.

JOTTINGS

—Brother H. A. Toews writes from 4221 S. Rockwell Street, Chicago, Illinois, "We are still here in Chicago waiting for our passage to Africa. As it looks now, we will not get to go till the war in Europe is over."

—Dr. Cornelius Krahn gave the address at the official opening of Bethel College for this year, held on the evening of September 10. The enrollment of the college is over 150 and that of the Mennonite Academy is over sixty.

—First Mennonite Church, Paso Robles, California: July 23 was an outstanding day in our church. Our new minister Rev. Orlo Kaufman, wife, and little daughter, Bonny Jean, were with us for the first time. Following the morning service we had a pot-luck dinner out under the trees to welcome our new pastor and to get better acquainted with him. In the afternoon we had a song service which was led by Norman Weathers from Camp Roberts. Ministers from different churches of Paso Robles were there to give him a word of encouragement in his ministry. On the evening of August 27, we had a Christian Endeavor meeting which was led by the young people who had been privileged to attend the Young People's Retreat at Lake Sequoia. The retreaters told about the blessed time that they had had. After the C. E. we all enjoyed a wiener roast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Toevs.—Lydia Quenzer, Corr.

—Rev. and Mrs. Lester Hostetler returned September 8 from a month's vacation spent at their former home, Sugarcreek, Ohio. On August 27, Rev. Lester Hostetler brought the morning message to the Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio.

—Rev. H. J. Brown spoke to the First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, on the evening of September 17.

—The Bethel College Church is planning to wipe out the remaining $500.00 debt on the parsonage. The Men's Brotherhood is conducting the campaign.

—Deer Creek, Oklahoma: Rev. Herbert E. Miller and family have moved into the parsonage recntly purchased by the church. Mrs. Miller is slowly recovering from an illness. Pray for her recovery.—Mrs. M. C. Lichti.

—The new Who's Who Among the Mennonites is selling well, according to a statement by Dr. Melvin Gingerich, co-author of the book with Dr. A. Warkentin. About 600 hundred copies have already been sold. The book is of special interest to Mennonite ministers and other church workers. It is about twice as large as the first edition which was very well received.

—Missionary H. J. Brown is publishing a book entitled, In Japanese Hands. It is a cloth-cover book of 250 pages, and it will sell for $1.50. It is described as a "book of thrilling experiences."

—Rev. Clyde H. Dirks of Hutchinson, Kansas, spent several days the fore part of September in Aberdeen, Idaho, conducting evangelistic meetings in the First Mennonite Church. Rev. and Mrs. Phil A. Wedel are the proud parents of a new baby girl, born September 5. Congratulations! The girl has been named Lois Ann.

—Former South Dakotans, now living around Newton and Moundridge, Kansas, had a great time when they got together in the city hall of Moundridge for a program and a meal on Sunday evening, September 10. Due to the rain they could not have the picnic in the park as planned. This was the first meeting of its kind. It was liked so well that another one is contemplated next year. Around fifty people attended. According to reports from the meeting, South Dakota must be a very nice place to live.

—The Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, is considering the prayers of the Lord Jesus Christ in its Bible Study and Prayer Period. The pastor Rev. Elbert Koontz, recently sent out a very interesting newsletter to non-resident members. It had the conversational, homey touch.

—The First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, recently sent 450 pounds of dried fruit, such as raisins, peaches, and apricots to the missionaries in India. Part of the fruit was bought at a reasonable price, but quite a bit of it was donated by church members. Dr. D. V. Wiebe, who recently returned from doing relief work in China under the Friends Service Commission, is again at home in Reedley and spoke to the church on the evening of September 17.

—Bessie, Oklahoma: The Oklahoma Convention was held in a tent on the Herold Church grounds, September 15, 16, 17. Rev. C. B. Friesen went to Mountain Lake, Minnesota, to bring his wife and children home. Mrs. Friesen had an operation in Mountain Lake early in the summer. Rev. Friesen will teach school near his home this winter. The fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Bergtahl Church was well attended.—Mrs. Jacob Penner —Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: "Next Sunday after the morning services we shall adjourn . . . for the annual Sunday School picnic. (Remember those good old picnics we used to have when every family brought a big basket—or even a field box—just filled with food, from apple pie to zwieback, from fried chicken to potato salad? Remember? Wouldn't you like to do it again? Why not next Sunday?)"

—The Mountain Lake, Minnesota, Bible School opened on September 5. It is offering a kindergarten course for six weeks.

—The sewing societies of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, have made C.P.S. dormitory curtains and quilt patches out of printed feed sacks.

—The address of Rev. and Mrs. H. Albert Claassen after September 17 will be Clinton, Oklahoma.

The Bergthal Mennonite Church

Pawnee Rock, Kansas

By Ruth Smith

Standing near the intersection of two country oads, four miles north of Pawnee Rock, Kansas, is . stately brick building. This is the meeting place f the Bergthal Mennonite congregation. The history f the church is a fine tribute to the religious sinerity of the people.

Early Years

In 1874 a number of homeless, weary, and homeick Mennonites landed on the shores of America. hey had left their homes in Russia in order that hey might have greater freedom in both religious nd secular matters.

Many of these Mennonites settled in Barton County, ut their homes were scattered. Traveling was diffiult and slow, so, in order to have some religious ieetings, the minister held services in three different laces. One Sunday he would be with a part of the ongregation in a little brick school house, the next unday at a sod home belonging to Jacob Base, and n the third, in another school house (District 48). he Mennonites at Pawnee Rock were somewhat nder the supervision of the Canton Church until 895, when Peter Dirks was ordained as elder. The ext year the Church became a member of the Westn District Conference. The names appearing on ie church charter are: J. B. Schmidt, J. J. Schmidt, . H. Unruh, P. H. Dirks, S. P. Smith.

The years brought other Mennonite settlers, and added size and strength to the church.

Since this group, which was sometimes known as Brother Dirk's Church or Bruderfeld, was weak and isolated, the Kansas Conference of Mennonites urged their ministers to visit and encourage them. These visits were always appreciated and many blessings received.

In 1899, the first real church building, a frame structure, 34 x 54 feet, was built at a cost of $2500.00. It was located four miles north of Pawnee Rock on land given as a gift by Jacob P. Wedel. This is also the present location. Equipment consisted of "factory seats," a coal stove, a hand-made pulpit, and curtains for the partitioning of Sunday School rooms. Dedication services were held on July 30 of the same year. The people gathered before the closed doors, and, after short services, during which the choir sang and Psalm 24 was read, they went into the new and beautifully decorated church.

Complete organization of the church seems not to have taken place until 1900, when it was also officially designated as The Bergthal Church of Mennonites near Pawnee Rock, Kansas.

As time went on, the little one room church was not large enough for the growing congregation. The members, in 1915, began to build a modern brick structure at an approximate cost of $15,000.00, to meet their needs. Construction progressed slowly at first because of many rains. The building was dedicated on December 19 of that same year however, at which time Prof. T. F. Balzer and P. H. Richert of Bethel College, were speakers. Less than a year after

International Relief In Action

1914-1943" by Herta Kraus

(Reviewed by I. W. Banman)

Since relief on an international scale dates largely from World War I, no really comprehensive study on the subject has been available and the scattered literature dealing with the problem has been inaccessible to most of us. We, therefore, welcome a source book containing materials gathered by Hertha Kraus who worked in collaboration with the Research Center of the Peace Churches in Philadelphia, published recently under the title "International Relief in Action, 1914-1943.

This volume of 248 pages contains a wealth of materials gathered from books, records, and accounts of many relief agencies who have worked in this field in the past, including the Mennonites. Since the object of the compilers is to give the best information available on the problems of international relief and reconstruction, and the methods that have been employed at various times to meet these problems, one finds a great variety of topics such as the providing of food, clothing, shelter, child care, employment, education, medical service, and many similar ones presented. Each selection deals with a specific problem or problems such as: "Joys and Sorrows of a Large Child-Feeding Center; Hungary, 1919-20," "A Community Kitchen in Operation; Russia, 1922," "Work Projects for Handicapped; France, 1942" to mention only a few selected at random. This collection of materials has obviously been made with the one object of helping any one seriously interested in foreign relief to understand the situations and problems more clearly; it also aims to give prospective relief workers an insight into their tasks, and to help them to benefit from the experiences of those who have pioneered in this work. It is therefore not a book designed to entertain, but no one who would understand the problems of relief which we will be facing after this war can afford to be without this volume. It may be added that from a volume which has been written with the foregoing objectives, much material had to be omitted which one or the other of us might have wished to see included.

The value of the book is greatly increased by the addition of a list of thought-provoking questions at the end of each section, and by the extensive list of references on the subject of international relief given in the back of the book. Copies of this book may be obtained from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa., or from the Mennonite book stores at $1.25 in cloth, or $1.00 in paper binding.

Mennonite Colonization

Lessons From the Past For the Future

By J. Winfield Fretz. Publication Number 1, Section for Mennonite Aid, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania. 80 pages. 20 cents.

When the various branches of Mennonites through their Central Committee employed a full time man to do research in those areas in which they had common problems, Mennonite history was being made. The result of this first effort in this type of cooperative enterprise is now ready for our study. It is the book Mennonite Colonization by Dr. J. Winfield Fretz.

For almost a year, Dr. Fretz carried on research in Mennonite colonization, visiting different colonies an dstudying the records of successful ventures. His findings are summarized in this study under such topics as the types and causes of migrations, the types and causes of colonization, factors contributing to success and factors contributing to failure in colonization plans, and finally suggestions for future colonization.

Although Mennonites are thought of as successful colonizers, they have often failed tragically. His chapter on factors contributing to failure lists inadequate preparation, lack of leadership, absence of group consciosness, internal conflicts, poor land, unfavorable climate, poor markets, and inadequate financial credit.

This book s not intended to be an academic study but it is a practical, easily understood discussion that will prove very valuable when the church faces the problem of rehabilitating its young men now in C.P.S. or the problem of starting new church communities. As a church we are recognizing more clearly than we have for many years that it is necessary to extend our Christian principles more effectively into the realm of our economic life and that the church must study the Christian implications of the economic life of its people. Every Mennonite minister and church leader should, therefore, procure his own copy of Mennonite Colonization and study it carefully.

—Melvin Gingerich

WHERE TO GET THE ABOVE BOOKLET

Copies of Mennonite Colonization can be gotten from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa. For convenience those in the Western District may secure their copies by addressing their requests to Box 98, North Newton, Kansas. Price per copy is twenty cents.

Editorial

A New Mission Field

One of our Mennonite leaders, who has visited uch among the C.P.S. units in mental hospitals, opes that after the war we will capitalize on the ex-erience of the men serving in mental hospitals by iving them an opportunity to serve in a mental ospital of our own. From reports available it seems hat not very many men care to stay on in mental ospitals. Perhaps, that is due to the poor working onditions that prevail in many of the institutions. s a whole, mental institutions so far have not at-racted the most efficient and consecrated laborers. he influx of C.O.'s into mental hospitals has intro-uced a quality of service that has been lauded by any, including hospital superintendents and Eleanor oosevelt. Better working conditions, as could be rovided in one of our own hospitals, would un-oubtedly make the work with the mentally ill appeal many whom it does not attract greatly now.

Work with the mentally ill presents a great mission eld. Firstly, present standards of care, as a whole, re inadequate. Secondly, the number of mental atients has greatly increased as a result of this war. illiam B. Hesseltime, writing in the Progressive of uly 17, on salvaging the war's mental wrecks stated at already the army had discharged more than a illion and a half men as neuropsychia-ic. He went on to point out that there is a great carcity of psychiatric clinics and psychiatrists. Then ointing hopefully to the C.O.'s in mental hospitals he ent on to say, "there is now being trained a goodly ody of young men who can serve in caring for the ar's mental casualties. Fifteen hundred conscien-ous objectors to war on 'detached service' from ivilian Public Service camps, are now working as tendants in 34 mental hospitals . . . Already, the Co's the hospitals have produced some minor revolutions hospital methods. . .They are discovering that the entally ill respond to sympathetic, cheerful, tactful, d kind treatment. . .Perhaps in the ranks of these en lay the hopes of the nation. They will be the rgest single group, outside the professional psychi-rists, with valid and useful experience in dealing ith mental cases. The framers of the Selective Ser-ce Act were wiser than they knew when they pro-ded that conscientious objectors should be assigned 'work of national importance.'

A mental hospital, supported by Mennonites and affed by highly competent workers drawn from our .P.S. experience, is a new mission field that lies be-re us. How fitting it is for non-resistant Christians minister unto those who need especially much love! ho will heed the call and take up the work? "I was k, and ye visited me:. . ." Matt. 25:36. Should r church feel responsible for those who are mentally ?—rw.

Churches Having Sunday Bulletins

About 22 per cent of the churches of our conference issue a Sunday bulletin, according to a rough survey made by the editor. The Western District has a total of 14, the Eastern 9, the Middle 5, the Pacific 5, and the Northern 2. This makes a total of 35. Some churches may have stopped issuing a bulletin and some may have begun one. Consequently, the above figures may not be absolutely accurate, but the editor believes them to be reasonably so. In case of mistake, please notify us.

And, please, do send us your bulletin regularly. Bulletins which are sent off on the day they are printed are of greatest worth. Please, put us on your regular mailing list.

What has just been said also applies to all monthly papers issued by various churches and also to all papers going to men in service. Yearbooks and constitutions are also welcomed.

Being Receptive To God's Will At All Times

By Walter Gaeddert

Throughout history we find that progress that was made, in terms of a common good for a worthy cause, that this was usually brought about by good leadership and a general repentance of the people for their mistakes and a turning again to the Lord.

Again we also find by modern psychiatry that it is natural to lead a Christian life. (That is, it does not come naturally, but God made man for right living.) Man can and often does live against, or below, the way he is made to live as a man. And according to E. Stanley Jones, "He can be unnatural. And to be unnatural is to be frustrated. The laws of God wrought into the constitution of our being. To be true to them is to be true to God, and to be true to God is to be true to them."

Therefore when our whole being functions most naturally—it is also natural that when our daily activities, our thought-life, and our dealings with man are done right—we are constantly attuned to the will of God.

When we are attuned to the will of God, we are doing this through conscious or unconscious communion with God through prayer. When we are at our best we are constantly guided by better knowledge of how to live and live creatively and effectively for that goal that we are trying to achieve. And to achieve that we seek for knowledge, wisdom, and guidance which again can only be had through the natural channel, and that is constant communion with our Maker.

So whether we are farmers, bankers, housewives, or in whatever field we might find ourselves, we try to be natural in our every walk of life, and to be natural in the sense that we are made for right living is to be Christian. To be Christian we live in constant receptivity to the will of God. This we gain through building an inner life that is well-rounded and understands the human being. Thus evaluating his dealings with man by his better knowledge brought about by the same growth that was said of Christ, "He grew in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and man."

We all arrive at a point in life when we face squarely the question "What is our purpose in life?" Some years ago a minister overheard his two small children talking as they lay in their beds waiting for the hush of sleep to settle down on their busy little tongues. One said to the other, "What are we here for, do you know?" The other replied, "Well, Dad says it's to help other people." There was silence for a time, when the first, a little five-year-old, piped up again, "Why are they here then?" Yes, why are we here? No doubt, if we would ask that question of ten different people, we would probably have ten different answers. Too many of us are here just to try to take everything out of life, rather than to try to put everything into life, and also to many of us are here to make a living and forget to make a life. The struggle is ever on between good and evil. That struggle is a crisis now. The scales are in such delicate balance that each person's influence counts.

Someone has said, the early Christians did not say in dismay: "Look what has come to the world!" They saw not merely the ruin, but the resources for the reconstruction of that ruin. They saw not merely that sin did abound, but that Grace did much more abound. On that assurance the pivot of history swung from blank despair, loss of moral nerve, and fatalism, to faith and confidence that at last sin had met its match, that something new had come into the world, that not only here and there, but on a wide scale, men could attain to that hitherto impossible thing-Goodness. And not only goodness, but health of mind and body—rhythm and harmony in their total being.

This same sense of confidence must be ours if we are to come into a reality of an inter-relationship with our fellowmen and with Christ.

We cannot permit ourselves to come out of the present-day chaotic condition, and not see the possibilities that lie ahead of us as Christians. We must not permit ourselves to be over-shadowed with the problems that confront us so that we would not be master of circumstances. Today more than ever, we must realize that our responsibilities are international, inter-racial, and inter-denominational, and that our Christ is truly an individual as well as a global Christ that will look to us as Christians not to say "Listen Lord, for thy servant speaketh," but rather with Samuel say, "Speak Lord, for thy servant heareth."

So with an open mind, a receptive heart, and an active personality, we have that inherent privilege to live creatively, effectively, and abundantly by constant response and receptivity to God's ability and will.—Moundridge, Kansas

My boy, men will tell you to be slow to quarrel but when you do quarrel make your quarrel so strong that you will not need to quarrel again, for your enemy will respect you for life. My boy, do not take their advice. My counsel is, never quarrel. Even if you succeed in your contest you make an enemy and you lose more than you gain. —Abraham Lincoln.

Our Glorification

By Wilbert A. Regier

The Apostle Paul, in writing to the Corinthian hurch, gives to all the Christian Church a most hallenging truth when in II Cor. 3:18, he says: But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass he glory of the Lord, ARE CHANGED into the ame image from glory to glory, even as by the pirit of the Lord." From this positive declaration e learn that the growing Christian will of necessity e a progressing Christian for a constant transformaon is taking place within his life. Christian developent is the result of a process through which God ads every believer that is yielded to Him and to is Will. In the Chrisian life we can honestly reice in the fact that the best is still ahead.

Now I want to consider with you five steps through hich God leads every believer in carrying out His lan and purpose, which is OUR GLORIFICATION. want you to notice especially how that every step a definite act of God—we are absolutely dependent on Him and His infinite grace, even as the Lord sus said, "Without me ye can do nothing!" The rst great truth therefore is:

I. We have been CALLED unto Glory.

Have you ever stopped to think how much you ould have missed in this life if someone hadn't lled you by name and singled it out to you? The me thing holds true in this matter of our attaining to Glory—if God hadn't called us we would never ve sought it, for how could we when we were "dead trespasses and sins"? Of ourselves we couldn't ve known that such a glorious thing was ever ant for us. How wonderful therefore to read in Pet. 5:10, "But the God of all grace, who HATH LLED US unto His eternal glory by Christ sus."

Naturally the question comes to us, "Why did d extend such a CALL to us?" I believe the swer to be two-fold—the first I have already anipated, namely, we couldn't possibly come of ourves—there is absolutely nothing in us that would d could lift us beyond the lostness of our sinful ndition. Secondly, God couldn't help Himself, for is "The God of ALL GRACE" and "Isn't willing t any should perish!" Thus He called us that we ght find our way home to glory. No doubt we e all at one time or another had occasion to obve carefully a person walking in his sleep. The ng that perhaps struck us most forcefully. at least most cases, was that he was walking in the wrong ection—walking away, rather than to his resting ce! And he continued walking in that wrong ection until he was awakened, or shall we say ed to consciousness by someone calling his name. a very small way this illustrates God's dealing h us, for in Isa. 43:1b we read, "Fear not: for I e redeemed thee, I HAVE CALLED THEE BY Y NAME; thou art mine."

ow, how did He call? I Pet. 5:10 tells us, lled us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus!" n while we behold Him on the Cross, we hear pleading, "Father, forgive them; for they know what they do!" Luke 23:34. Surely, it lifts the Cross to a new height when we come to fully realize that it was God's CALL to us. I Cor. 1:9, "God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord." II Cor. 5:18-19a, "And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them."

The question of course now is, have we obeyed that Call? If so, then:

II. We have been BROUGHT into Glory.

Heb. 2:10, "For it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in BRINGING MANY SONS UNTO GLORY, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through suffering."

We have already dwelt upon what our natural condition is apart from the Grace of God, but let us view it again to thus come to appreciate more fully what the Grace of God has done for us. In comparing Eph. 2:2-3, with Eph. 5:6, we glean this truth: "Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: among whom also WE ALL HAD OUR CONVERSATION (or, manner of life) in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others." "Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience." I say, how wonderful to know that God didn't wait for us to REFORM—for no one knows better than God of the utter futility of mere reformation, even as pointed out in Matt. 12:43-45. The tragedy with mere reformation is that it leaves the place EMPTY! It reminds us of the illustration of the little girl, who in speaking of her conversion, referred to it in the following way: "Before I had let the Lord Jesus come into my heart, I would hear a knock at the door and I would quietly slip to the door and open it just a very small bit—but the devil would quickly slip his foot into the door, and would always make me do exactly as he willed. But, now that I have the Lord Jesus in my heart—when I hear the knock at the door, I say, 'Lord Jesus, you had better go!' And when He steps to the door, He opens it wide, and the devil seeing Him, gets very much embarrassed and says, 'Pardon me, I'm at the wrong door! ' " Ah, friend, it takes transformation! Therefore the Lord Jesus came to indwell us when we accepted Him as our Saviour, and thus has brought us into glory, for God always views the redeemed as a finished product in Chirst Jesus. How often I have thanked God that He didn't just bring us up to Glory and then taunt us because of our wretchedness and helplessness. It is because of this fact that the mere example of Jesus isn't sufficient—merely to have the example of Jesus is but to magnify our own sinfulness, and then be left in utter dispair. It was because of this that the Lord Jesus on Calvary's Cross had to arouse us to the true state of our natural condition—take our place, die our death, impart faith, and then give us grace that we might with that faith believe on Him and in the power of His resurrection. And having done all this, finally bring us in! Oh, let us not limit the Grace of God!

Having brought us in,

III. He ESTABLISHES us in Glory.

A moment ago we stated that before we are born again, all the example of Jesus could do, was mock us! But having been born again, and having yielded our lives to the indwelling Holy Spirit, thank God, the example of the Lord Jesus moulds our lives, for He is ever the Holy Spirit's pattern. Rom. 8:28-29, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow. He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son." Weymouth translates it, "He has also predestined to share the likeness of His Son." And Conybeare and Howson translate it, ". . . to be made like the pattern of His Son."

Now, this transformation into the "likeness of Christ," calls for a daily yielding of ourselves to the indwelling Holy Spirit—He can only mould that which is yielded to Him! I am sure that Paul had this in mind when in Phil. 3:10 we hear him pray, "That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto His death." How often we Christians are willing enough to share in His Glory, but are unwilling to endure that which fits us for Glory!

In I Cor. 15:49, we plainly have God's purpose set forth for His Children, "And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." In other words, God is going to reproduce in us His Children the image of His Son. Thus we have implied the fact that God has a plan. Read Eph. 3:1-6, "That the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of His promise in Christ by the gospel" . . . Again we discover—God has a purpose. Read Col. 1:24-29. It may be summed up in one sentence, "present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." And, of course, we realize that this plan and purpose, calls for a process. And among other things God very definitely uses circumstances! I have often meditated on the fact that the world would never have had a Martin Luther had not God used the corrupt circumstances within Catholicism to awaken him to the need of "Justification by Faith!" Thus I believe that God today is longing to use even the corrupt circumstances of our day to produce men and women of stalwart character, whose confidence rests not in their own wisdom and strength, but in Jesus Christ through whom we are more than conquerors! II Tim. 2:1-3, "Thou therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also. Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." Also notice I Pet. 4:12-13; James 1:2-3. God uses these things to establish us in Glory, and to make us strong in Christ. Let us therefore keep looking unto Him, for it has been well said, "It is the look that saves, but it is the gaze that sanctifies."

IV. In John 17:24, we discover that we shall BEHOLD His glory.

Listen to our Saviour, as He prays, "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory." It has been suggested that this is our Lord's one unanswered prayer, but thank God, we have every assurance that it too will be realized, for He prayed, "Father, I will!" Certainly His will stands supreme! Thus one day it shall be the believer's endless joy to behold His Glory. But God doesn't stop there, but gives us the further assurance that in the day we shall also—

V. SHARE in His Glory

I Pet. 5:1, "The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed." I John 3:2, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is." This is a truth the world cannot possibly understand, but we know it to be gloriously true—there need be no doubt about it, for it is our present and known position in Christ. Having believed on Him, we have been born again and thus have become heirs of eternal salvation, and as a result "Our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His Glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able even to subdue all things unto Himself." Phil. 3:20-21. In the light of this then it is little wonder that Paul in Rom. 8:18 says, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." II Thess. 1:10-12, "When He shall come to the glorified in His saints, and to be admired in all them that believe . . . in that day. Wherefore also we pray always for you, that our God would count you worthy of this calling, and fulfill all the good pleasure of His goodness, and the work of faith with power: that the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in Him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ." Note also II Tim. 1:6-13.

Listen To Napoleon

"The more I study the world, the more I am convinced of the inability of force to create anything durable. Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne, and I myself have founded empires; but upon what did those creations depend? They depended upon force. Jesus Christ founded his empire upon love and to this very day millions would die for Him."

A SOLDIER OF JESUS CHRIST

"Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." IITim. 2:3.

A Meditation

By Erland Waltner

'My dear children, let us put our love not into words r into talk, but into deeds, and make it real." I John 3:8 (Moffatt)

It is easy to talk about love. We speak of loving ur neighbors when what we mean is that we stay ut of their way. Sometimes we glibly say that we ove everyone, when what we mean is that we are ot engaged in an active quarrel with anyone at the ime.

The trouble is that we have not realized the real neaning of love. Genuine love is something active. t is positive. Love is not only talking. Most of us alk plenty, but do very little. We speak sympatheically of those who are in need, but do not bend ur finger to help them. We wax eloquent in talkng about the tragic suffering in our time, but do not ncrease our contributions to charitable causes.

Our love is like that of the young man who wrote letter to his girl friend, trying to tell her how much e loved her. He would go through fire and water or her. He would swim the ocean for her. He would come to see her next Saturday—IF it did not ain.

It would be better if our love were like that of the ad who threw his arms about his father's neck and aid, "Daddy, I love you so much, and I'm going o do something about it."

We say that we love God. What are we DOING o prove that love? Have we made any sacrifices or His sake? We say that we love our neighbors s ourselves. But what are we DOING to help them n their material and spiritual needs? In what ways o we promote their welfare? We say we have comassion for those who suffer. What then are we DONG to relieve their suffering? We say we love the ouls of sinners? But what are we DOING to bring hem to Christ? "Let us put our love not into words . . but into DEEDS and make it REAL."

CATECHISM CLASS

But with the passing of each class there comes a ew group of young people. What a responsibility! nto my hands you as fathers and mothers are placng your son or daughter with the aim in mind of ading them in their Christian experience. Some of hem may have already accepted the Lord Jesus as heir Savior; others may not yet have done so. I o not know—what a wonderful thing it would be each member of the class would already know the ord as their own. Past experiences have shown hat usually there are both classes represented. To e falls this responsibility of sharing with you the sk of leading all of these to a rich spiritual expernce. That is no small responsibility and in my contact with other ministers I have discovered that they all feel much the same way—the responsibility for the Catechism class is one of the greatest which we face. If we fail in this, we have missed our golden opportunity. Nowhere do we have such an opportunity to deal personally with each individual as during the time of catechetical instruction. To fail at this point makes all future efforts of great difficulty. An unregenerate church membership is a detriment to all spiritual church growth. These thoughts impress themselves upon my mind as I look ino the future. I trust you will pray and work with me in this sacred task.

Meditation

By Ronald von Riesen

. . "Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things; but one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken from her" — Luke 10: 41-42

Martha had just reproached Mary for conversing with Jesus when she thought Mary should have helped her prepare the evening meal. However, instead of rebuking Mary for not helping Martha, Jesus rebukes Martha about being over anxious and troubled about many things. He did not rebuke Martha for wanting to prepare a meal but instead He wanted to point out to her that other things were much more important such as the part Mary had chosen to sit at Jesus' feet and drink words of wisdom.

So often in our everyday life we are so anxious about little insigificant things that we neglect time for devotions and reading of God's Word. This part Mary had chosen and Jesus commended her for her choice.

"One thing is Needful" for our lives, and that is that we have confessed our sins before the Throne of Grace and have accepted Jesus as our personal Savior, knowing that He is able to save unto the uttermost; knowing that He once and for all died on the cross for our sins and redeemed us from the penalty of sin and gave us the victory over sin in this life. He is our Rock and Salvation. He is the one thing needful. Have you chosen that good part, which is salvation through faith in Christ? Do you spend your time sitting at the feet of Jesus drinking in words of eternal life?

His Commandment

"And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment." I John 3:23.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Emma Ruth, Reedley, California

OCTOBER 1,—"Enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray" Read Matt. 6:5,6.

In a public address a woman recently referred to the literal interpretation of these words as something in which her grandmother believed, implying that we have advanced far beyond the idea of the closet with the shut door. The emphasis is on the fact that we can pray "anywhere," with the result that we pray "nowhere." The mother of Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, a devout Christian woman, never made an important decision until she had time to retire to her room for prayer. We have more to shut out than our grandmothers did. Only if there is prayer in the closet will there be prayer out of it.

"Lord, I have shut the door,
Speak now the word
Which, in the din and throng,
Could not be heard."

OCTOBER 2,—"God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray." Read I Sam. 12:19-24

Most of us regard prayerlessness as a neglect, but to acknowledge it as sin is different. Samuel did. He called it a sin against the Lord to cease to pray. John Wesley said, "God does nothing but in answer to prayer." If that be true, and God has bound Himself to working only through prayer, then I am transgressing His law when I do not pray. I am hindering Him in His work. I am cutting off His power. I am blocking His progress in human hearts when I fail to pray. A fruitless branch separated from the vine. A lamp without oil. "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure." Phil. 2:13.

"We kneel, how weak! We rise,
How full of power.
Why, therefore, should we do
Ourselves this wrong,
Or others—that we are not always strong—"

OCTOBER 3—"I will call upon Thee, for Thou wilt answer me." Read Ps. 86

Perhaps many of us, from a day when we were taught to say prayers rather than to pray, have carried with us the impression that prayer is a one sided conversation with God. We do all the talking while God is a silent listener. The Psalmist knew better. He was positive that if he called God would answer. That prayer is a two-way transaction. God will answer provided we give Him a chance. But we are like the man who calls up the doctor, tells all the symtoms of his sick child, then hangs up before the doctor has time to prescribe the remedy. Children in a public school were asked each day to listen for a few moments to what God would say to them. They heard, "Help mother more," "Be kind to little sister," "Do your work better." Do we trust God enough to listen? Do we have the courage?

"Be silent, be silent,
A whisper is heard,
Be silent and listen,
O treasure each word!"

OCTOBER 4—"After this manner therefore pray ye" Read Matt 6:7-15

It was not the length of the prayer of the heathen that Jesus condemned, for He himself continued in prayer all night, but their meaninglessness. "Do not repeat empty phrases as the heathen do, for they imagine that their prayers will be heard if they use words enough." (Goodspeed) Someone has said "We make long prayers, but pray little." The prayers of the Pharisee and the publican are an illustration in point. Their essential difference distinguishes prayer from "empty phrases." Sincerity! Not less words, necessarily, but more meaningful words. More meaningful, because they are the expression of our mind, heart and will. There may be less words when each one is weighed with meaning that follows from a sincere heart.

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Unuttered or expressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast."

OCTOBER 5—"Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing but the flesh is weak." Read Mat. 26:40-46.

An airplane rising from the earth must have power to resist its natural attraction. That power must be supplied by the motor which lifts it. Then it can rise to almost unlimited heights. So in the spiritual realm, there is a natural attraction, the weakness of the flesh, which tends to keep the spirit from rising in prayer. There is the resistance to sleep. There is the resistance to the wandering mind. There is the resistance to the press of duties. Only an ardent desire for God can release His power to lift us above the weakness and attraction of the flesh.

"Spirit of God, descend upon my heart;
Wean it from earth, through all its pulses move;
Stoop to my weakness, mighty as thou art;
And make me love Thee as I ought to love."

OCTOBER 6—"If any of you lacketh wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally." Read James 1:5-7; 4:1-3.

We are definitely encouraged in Scripture to ask of God. But our idea of asking is too often con-

Abiding Forever

And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." ohn 2:17.

Editorials

The young people's work of the General Conference began in 1917. While the conference was in session at Reedley, California, Miss Anna Stauffer passed a note to the chairman. This note suggested that something ought to be done for the young people. Nothing much came of the note, but a meeting was called of all those interested in young people. About two dozen people gathered and discussed the concern of the young people. The result was that the young people were granted one evening session of the General Conference. This followed a precedent set by the women's mission societies which had already been given an evening session on the conference program. Had the conference met this year, the young people would again have had their evening session. It would be interesting to have someone trace the progress of the young people's work or the lack of it during the years since 1917. In any such history some of the "old" leaders of today would appear as young people. Who will write a short, vivid history for the young people's section?—rw.

The young man had an excellent voice. He had had singing parts on programs since his grade school days, but stage fright had always bothered him. When before an audience he would become tense and his voice would not be at its best. One day he read I John 4:18. He was struck by the thought that ". . . perfect love casteth out fear: . . ." He began to take an attitude of love towards the audience. He found his fear subsiding. Love really drove out fear for him. Try to love those whom you are tempted to fear and see what happens.—rw

The Board of Publication at its recent meeting passed a resolution which makes it possible for the young people of our conference to have four eight-page supplements of youth material during the year. Thus the young people can express themselves through the "Youth" pages in the regular issues of The Mennonite and through these thirty-two additional pages. Whether or not these supplements will be issued will depend upon the interest shown by the young people and the material provided by them. The editor of the "Youth" pages would welcome suggestions as to how these supplements should be utilized? Send in your suggestions. The Board in this resolution also invites the young people's union to share in the expenses of these supplements.—rw

The Young Christian Workers' Institute held at North Newton recently was a wonderful blessing for the young men who participated. These were men out of C.P.S. who are interested in preparing for full-time Christian service. From lectures and discussions the young men gleaned much information and inspiration relative to Conference activities. The Cultural Conference also provided a feast for thought.

We Must Obey God

"First I begin with the assumption that there can be a conflict between what my country asks of me and what God has a right to expect of me. In other words, there not only can be but there sometimes is a question as to whether we will obey God or whether we will obey the 'powers that be.' How else can we explain why Paul spent so much time in jail? And for what reason did Peter say, 'We must obey God rather than men' when the authorities would put an end to his preaching? Scripture is clear on this point. There are times when to obey Caesar is to disobey God, and in the case of doubt a Christian would hardly go wrong in giving God the benefit of the doubt. It seems to me far too many Christians get this just backwards. They begin with the assumption that the edicts of one's country must always be obeyed and are not subject to question, and so they distort God's Word in order to make it agree with what the country demands or expects. Much as I love my country and the things for which it stands, the Saviour I learned to know . . . and the things He taught mean more to me than any nation can. If to act according to what He taught is not according to what my country expects, then I am sorry, but my course is clear—I must follow Christ. If I did otherwise I would not only deny Christ but I would also fail my country, for I am convinced that no greater service can be rendered to your country than that which you render when you are truly obedient to God.

To put my country and my God on an equal basis, to be equally obeyed, is to me rank blasphemy. I know that 'the powers that be' are ordained of God and are His ministers, but that includes Hitler. It applied particularly to Nero, who was even worse than Hitler. Are these too to be obeyed and acknowledged with equal authority with God? If so, why do we fight them? If the rulers of our country are the ministers of God in the sense that they have final authority over Christians, then so is Hitler, and you have God fighting God. The only possible interpretation of Romans 13 is that 'the powers that be' are always to be obeyed except when obedience to them conflicts with obedience to God."

Letter To Drafted Men

(The following letter was written to young me from the Pacific District in service by Dr. J. H Langenwalter, then Minister-at-Large of the Pacifi District.—rw)

Reedley, Californi
June 15, 194

Dear Friend:

I think of you often under your present circun stances away from home and wish you well in bod mind and spirit.

This is a time when being one's self at one's be is being put to many severe tests. On the oth hand, this is the very time when such an attitude needed very much.

The limitations placed upon us at this time see hard and relentless. That makes one tempted to fe that there is nothing that one can do about it. Th temptation leads to no good end. None of us ca know how much good we may be or do to othe by just being ourselves at our best.

Even though one never finds out how much go he may have done, it is worth while to be able respect one's self for having placed emphasis on t kind of man one is becoming.

This message is being sent to more than two hu dred of you at this time because I am interested you and because I care about what is becoming you. Your difficulties are known to me sufficient to make it possible for me to enter into your proble sympathetically.

I am also sending this message to you in order encourage you to give yourself the best possil chance.

Our Great Silent Partner is more deeply concern about all of us than any of us can be for each oth Our Lord has revealed Him to us as our Father. must be a Father who suffers much these days. seems reasonable, thereore, that He enters deeply a sympathetically into the sufferings of His childr It helps to remember that as we suffer. It tends draw us closer to Him, and to each other. It is t kind of relationship which helps us to become o selves at our best, which means that we become t kind of person God has in mind.

What we say, and even what we do, is of lit importance as compared to what we are in the si of our Father. He finds ways for us to expr ourselves helpfully, in so far as we are willing to helpful.

"The hour cometh, and now is, when the t worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit a in truth: for such doth the Father seek to be h worshippers. God is Spirit: and they that wors Him must worship Him in Spirit and in truth."

Very sincerely yours,

Some Things C.P.S. Men Like About An Outside Speaker

By C. J. Miller

(I have compiled this material from suggestions written by the boys who were taking the Leaders' Training Course at Downey, Idaho.)

. His Message:

1. Should be spiritual.
2. Should be meaty (food for the soul).
3. Give a new slant on life.
4. Be plain.
5. Be well prepared.
6. Contain illustrations that fire the subject.
7. Be definite.
8. Have a discussion period follow the message.

. His Behavior:

1. Mingle freely with the men in camp.
2. Visit side camps and stay over night if possible.
3. Go out on the work projects for a while.
4. Be willing to listen to personal problems.
5. Seek to understand problems of the men in camp.
6. Be interested in the men.
7. Be approachable.
8. Be honest in answering questions.
9. Be a common everyday fellow.
0. Have a definite purpose in mind when he comes.
1. Take an active part in the recreation carried on by the boys in camp after working hours.

His Contribution:

1. Points out the bad as well as the good things or the camp.
2. Leaves the fellows with a feeling that those back home are pulling for them, not only in spirit, but in a tangible way.
3. Expresses no feeling of pity for the men in camp.
4. Lifts the morale of the camp.
5. Writes articles for the church papers.
6. Uses slides and other visual aids when possible.
7. Visits camps frequently, and stays for a few days.

(The boys do not want pity, nor sympathy).

Some Things C.P.S. Men Dislike About An Outside Speaker

His Message:

1. When it is directed only to the Mennonite group.
2. When it is too long and "dry."
3. When it is too emotional.
4. When it is dogmatic.
5. When it teaches doctrine instead of a way of life.
6. When it is milk instead of meat.
7. When it fails to give them anything constructive for the present.
8. When it is flowery and indefinite.
9. When it is read directly from a manuscript.
10. When it lacks Bible teaching.

B. His Behavior:

1. When he is too bashful to speak to the individuals.
2. When he comes only for the purpose of giving a sermon.
3. When he associates only with the leaders of the camp.

A Smoke Jumper Reports

Our main job is, of course, fighting fires. Parachuting is merely the fastest possible way to get to the fire. It requires less energy as well as time. The actual jumping has taken over our interests so much that we think of that more than of fire.

Our training process before we actually become Jumpers is strenuous. We do a whole lot of running, hiking, calisthenics, and we have an obstacle course that gets you plenty tired. One of the toughest things during training is the tower jump. We jump from a tower that is about twenty-five feet high. You jump into a net below—only you don't hit the net. A heavy rope stops you suddenly at about eighteen feet. We do about sixteen jumps before we make our first parachute jump. After the first one we jump every day for a time. After we make seven jumps, get about two weeks of practice and instruction in actual fire fighting, we are considered genuine Smoke Jumpers.

We have a total of 112 Smoke Jumpers scattered over western Montana, Idaho, and Oregon. We have six side-camps besides the camp here at Huson. After our training we do a variety of work. We make hay, cut wood, keep up irrigation ditches, and so on.

We really do enjoy it out here—all of us.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Oswald Schrag of Parker, South Dakota, has returned to Hartford, Connecticut, to complete his last year in Seminary.

—Rev. Sam Goering spoke to the combined C.E.'s of the Lorraine Avenue church, Wichita, September 10. He told about his experiences on his recent trip to China as relief commissioner for the Mennonite Central Committee.

—Rev. and Mrs. Ellis Graber arrived in Souderton, Pennsylvania, September 3 to take up the pastoral duties there. Rev. Graber graduated from Hartford Seminary this spring and was ordained in his home church, Salem Zion, Freeman, South Dakota, after he accepted the call to serve the Souderton church. Ellis was very active in Young People's work, having served as president of the Northern District Young People's convention. Mrs. Graber is the former Delpha Waltner of the Salem church, Freeman. Her sister Stella is attending Bethel College this year.

—Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Goering (Violet Miller) have left for Chicago where Orlando will continue his study for the ministry at Garrett Biblical Institute.
—Edna Ruth Goertzen, Newton, and Marlo Graber, Moundridge were united in marriage at the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Friday evening, September 8. They will make their home on a farm near Moundridge. Both Edna Ruth and Marlo attended Bethel College for several years.

—On September 19, Three Japanese-American students arrived on the Bethel College campus to attend college. They came from a re-location center in Idaho. Before the government moved them there they lived near Seattle, Washington. All three are enrolled as freshmen. Besides these, three students of other nationalities are also attending Bethel this year. George Flasschoen, a Belgium refugee student; Rev. Floyd Nunnly, pastor of the Colored Methodist Church of Newton; and Teddy Rising Sun, an Indian from Busby, Montana. He is enrolled in the Academy.

Our Early Faith

By Harley Stucky

Another great principle which we cherish is Freedom of Conscience. We believe that no one shoul "use force to compel anyone to accept the faith, fo faith is a free gift of God.... The Lord has commanded simply to preach the gospel, and not to compel any one by force to accept it." Every man i free to choose. This does not mean that we ar anarchists or indifferent to any kind of beliefs bu rather it means that we grant to each individual th privilege of voluntarily deciding whether or not h wishes to be a Christian. Every man is created free being. Over against those who claim that Go chooses some to be 'saints' and some to be 'damned we hold that every man by his own choice is mad spiritual and saintly or unspiritual or damned. An we recognize too, that what we claim for ourselve we are bound to grant to others.

Out of Freedom of Conscience comes also the do trine of religious toleration. We do not believe i forcing another to accept Christianity or any of it doctrines, or "to put to death anyone for the sak of his erring faith.... The true church of Christ ha the characteristic that it suffers or endures pers cution but does not inflict persecution upon an one."

We accept and apply the doctrine of non-resistanc We are convinced that the methods of force and c ercion as used by the secular authorities are contrar to the spirit of Jesus and the principles of the Ne Testament. As early as 1524 Conrad Grebel sai "The Gospel and its followers shall not be guarde the sword.....Truly believing Christians are shee in the midst of wolves... they must be baptized i fear and in need, in tribulation and death, that the may be tried to the last, and enter the fatherland eternal peace, not with carnal, but with spiritu weapons. (Christians) use neither the sword of th world nor war, for to kill is forbidden."

Here too, we were fortunate in having the insig to recognize the logical conclusion of our princip and to live accordingly. Thus when a few membe of our group were given shelter in Nikolsbury the "told their protector plainly that they utterly di approved of his threatening the Austrian Commi sary with armed resistance if he entered the Nikol bury territory to seize them."

In our day people believe that salvation com through the sacrament. We cut away all its magic power to insure eternal life. The sacrament is on the sign or the symbol of the body and the bloo of Jesus.

The real issue between our enemies and ourselv culminates in the sacrament of baptism. The bo of contention is not the mode of baptism, or i meaning so much, as it is pedo-baptism versus an pedo-baptism. With us baptism is a symbol of co version. Regeneration is one thing and baptism another. Baptism is merely the initiatory formu signifying entrance into the church. The latter a step by itself, but a necessary step. To refu ptism and entrance into the church is to disobey ie express command of God and therefore means iat one is "unsaved." On the other hand, no bap- sm can be tolerated unless it is taken as an act of ith and as an act of personal obedience to the com- and of Christ. One of our leaders put it this way; Vater is not baptism, else the whole Danube were ptism and the fishermen and boatsmen would be ily baptized."

The final difference between ourselves and the eform leaders of our day is on the doctrine of Salva- on. Over against the Catholic viewpoint, we main- in that true religion is an act and an attitude of e person's own spirit and "that nothing whatever wrought by magic, by sacredotalism, by rite, or ceremony. Salvation is a change of nature within e soul and this change is wrought by personal ansaction between the soul and God". Over against ther's idea of "justification by faith" alone we ld that faith requires the evidences of works. The v and the Gospel are one and it is possible for e individual to move from one to the other. To be ved means to acquire a new attitude or faith and live a corresponding life, which means faithful servance of the law of God which we interpret be brotherly love. "No one can earn salvation by nself: regeneration by divine grace is always nec- ary. But the regenerated man must make the per use of his opportunities or he will infallibly ish." Over against the Calvinistic ideal that all n are predestined by God either to eternal life eternal damnation we hold the Armenian principle t Christ died for all, and that with man lies the ver to accept or reject His atonement. As one of leaders has said: (All) "are called to salvation, ause Christ died for all. The universal call pre- poses the power to answer it. Therefore one's nation never lies with God . . . God forces no , but desires that every one look away from self God".

n conclusion then, ours is an attempt to establish Kingdom of God on earth. We may not succeed, we're going to challenge the world of our day ts utmost, for we have "caught the vision of a heaven and a new earth in which dwelleth right- sness and in which the Lamb is the light thereof, for that is (we) give our full measure of devo- ."

Cost Of War

eon S. Wellstone, of the Division of Commercial Economic Information of the Department of nmerce has estimated that half a trillion dollars been spent for destruction by the world since . According to First World War experience, the e of the property destroyed in the present war be equal to the sum spent for armaments. This s the total cost to one thousand billions or a on dollars.

hat this trillion dollars could have done for the d is illustrated as follows: It would build a comfortable, modern, five-room house for each of the world's families; pay for the common school education of the world's 400,000,000 children for twenty years; provide four-year college education for 500,000,000 young men; build a million dollar hospital for every community of 2,000 people the world over, and build 25,000,000 miles of four-lane cement highways.

fined to things. Favors for ourselves. "Ye ask and receive not because ye ask amiss." A small child asks his parent for bread—for all that he needs for his physical well being. But as he grows older we expect his desires to change from "give me" to "teach me." From things to understanding, wisdom, skill, so that he may supply his own needs. So in the spiritual there is something higher to ask of God than things. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God." Things are a by-product. They will be added. George Washington Carver, the great negro scientist, said: "There is literally nothing that I ever wanted to do, that I asked the blessed Creator to help me to do, that I have not been able to accomplish."

"More holiness give me,
More striving within;
More patience in suffering,
More sorrow for sin;
More faith in my Saviour,
More sense of His care;
More joy in His service,
More purpose in prayer."

OCTOBER 7—"Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." Read I Cor. 15:57,58.

To keep a ship at sea in its true course a pilot does not depend upon the shifting clouds above nor moving objects around him for his directions, but upon a far distant fixed star. Our lives will be steadfast, unmovable as we take our directions from something fixed, unchangeable, "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forevermore." Only then will we be unaffected by changing circumstances. People may fail and disappoint us. We may suffer the loss of things. But we are not depending on them. Abounding in His work, we look to Him for directions, and away from self and others.

"Turn your eyes upon Jesus,
Look full in His wonderful face,
And the things of earth will grow strangely dim
In the light of His glory and grace."

completion, a hail storm broke about a third of the windows, and rain damaged the inside of the building somewhat. The present membership is almost two hundred.

Auxiliaries

A growing church is active. As early as 1885, P. Balzer visited the church and stayed for three months. During this time, he organized two adult Sunday School classes and an adult Bible school. In the Bible school he instructed members in reading, writing, arithmetic, and God's word. P. Balzer also organized a choir at the same time. Practice was held immediately after Sunday School, but later it was held once a week in the evening. These activities did much to strengthen the spiritual life of the church.

Since the Sunday School did provide religious education for the youth of the church, it was decided a short term of Bible school should be held in the district school house after the regular school term. This began around 1903 with Rev. J. B. Schmidt, the present pastor, as teacher. By 1914, interest had grown until there was a total of fifty-five pupils in three separate school districts. This German Bible school was discontinued for a time, but was revived again in 1925. At this time, the German language was largely replaced by the English.

The ladies' Sewing Society, now called the Mission Worker's Society, was organized in 1905 to create interest in missions. The main promoter and first president was Sister Marie Wedel. Through the years, generous contributions have been given and much sewing has been done for the various mission projects. As a part of their work, their contributions support one widow and an evangelist in India. At first meetings were held in private homes once every three months, but now monthly meetings are held in the church basement.

Shepherds of the Flock

The elder of the Canton Church, J. Ratzlaff, was also elder of the Pawnee Rock church until 1893. At that time, Peter Dirks was elected as elder. He was, however, not ordained until March 17, 1895. He served until a short time before his death in the spring of 1924. Reverend J. B. Schmidt was ordained as elder in the fall of 1923.

Ministers who have served the Bergthal Church are Heinrich Siebert, Jacob Koehn, Tobias Dirks, Jacob A. Schmidt, David Schmidt, Peter H. Dirks, and J. B. Schmidt.

Reverend J. B. Schmidt, the present pastor of this church, was born in Russian Poland on December 29, 1869, and came to this country in 1874. He attended the Mennonite Seminary at Halstead and Bethel College. On May 10, 1896, he married Anna Schmidt. The names of their four children are Paul, Pauline, Edith, and Esther. For five years he taught public school. In 1909 he was ordained minister an in 1923 elder of the Bergthal Mennonite Church where he continues his faithful service.

Significant Facts and Events

Two conferences have been held in the Bergtha Church. In 1902, three years after the first churc building was constructed, the Eleventh Session of th Kansas Conference was held there. In 1918, thi time three years after the second building had bee constructed, the twenty-sixth meeting of the Wester District Conference with approximately five-hundr in attendance, convened at Pawnee Rock.

Two members of the Bergthal Church have serv in the mission field. Mrs. William F. Unruh, daughter of the present minister, with her husban served over seven years in India. Ivan P. Decke son of P. J. Deckert, is now doing missionary work Nigeria, Africa. Another member, Elmer Jantz, d reconstruction work in France and surroundi countries under the American Friend's Service Co mittee after World War I.

While most members of the church are engaged agricultural work, a large number of young peo have interested themselves in teaching and higher ucation. Some have entered the nursing professi One of these is now a deaconess at the Bethel D coness Hospital. Other members and former me bers of the church are serving in a variety of positio both business and professional.

Conclusion

A church is the reflection of its members. spiritual interest and growth of the Bergthal Me onite Church is a result of the desires and efforts a rural people who have accepted Jesus Christ as t Saviour and have earnestly tried to live His Way Life. (The interesting article above was conden from a theme written for an English course at Be College.)

Costly

It is estimated that twenty-two million civilians lost their lives in the war. The imagination ca begin to cope with such a figure. Nor can it conc of the horrors of slow starvation, of painful wou and of execution. That number is one-sixth of entire population of the United States, and we shared in wiping them out. Who knows what ta what genius went with them? Who knows whic them might have found the secret of cancer, w might have been a Beethoven, which one a G Fox or a John Wesley, which one might have pai better pictures than man has yet done, which m have been the best neighbor you ever had? Is worth the price of risking centuries of delay in th velopment of civilized man?

C. P. S.

ase of Men in Camps of August 31, 1944, 3371 men were in Mennon-dministered camps, while as of February 29, the camp strength stood at 2977. This six-h period brought an increase of almost 400 men. Of this increase 303 were Mennonite men and ninety-one were non-Mennonite. The inductions in this period were mostly men of the eighteen-year-old group. The increase of younger men in the camps requires additional attention on the part of the camp staffs.

The Mennonite administration of CPS mental hospital units began two years ago on August 19, when nineteen men from Grottoes, Virginia transferred to the Western State Hospital, Staunton, Virginia. Since that time the program has broadened to include twenty-one units with 799 men.

The unit at Staunton recently celebrated their second anniversary. While the unit has been increased to fifty-two, thirteen of the original of the original nineteen men still remain. A report of the anniversary contains the following statements:

"I cannot say that we received a royal reception upon our arrival unless all that yelling, threatening, profanity, and foolish remarks as we passed several wards would be called royal! I prefer to call the reception frightening and belittling. . . . Conditions have certainly improved in the last two years. The group morale is on a high plane and organized activities are making use of our dormant faculties. Our eats, public relations and working hours have improved."

Appointments to Camp Staffs

The following appointments to MCC-CPS camp staffs have recently been made:

Atlee Beechy	Director, Hill City, South Dakota
Warren Leatherman	Educational Director, Howard, Rhode Island
Mrs. Peter Klassen	Matron and Dietitian, Unit I, Lincoln, Nebraska

Missionary and Editor to Visit Camps and Units

P. P. Baltzer, Mennonite missionary to China for almost thirty years, will visit the hospital units in the East. Brother Baltzer represents the Mennonite Brethren group and is under appointment for relief service in China.

Reynold Weinbrenner, editor of The Mennonite, will visit the camps and units in Utah, Montana, Idaho, and California, September 16 to October 3.

ARRANGE A WORSHIP SERVICE NOW

Some concern has been expressed lest, when the actual fighting in Europe ceases, pent-up emotions be released in excesses and even in violence and destruction of property.

Some churches are now arranging for a service to be held just as soon as possible after the report comes that hostilities have ceased. Would it not be well for all to do this?

Let us give evidence of our joy and thankfulness by arranging for such religious song and worship services as are in accord with the Spirit of the Prince of Peace.

Bible Institute and Visitation Program

A. J. Neuenschwander, Chairman, Quakertown, Pa.

:arly in October our "Mennonite Preaching Misı" as some have called it will get underway. There ıo doubt in the minds of the Committee that this ırt is the result of the work of the Holy Spirit.
'he purpose and program of this undertaking has n given in "The Mennonite" at different times ler the above heading. (See back copies for July August 15 and September 5.)

'oo often perhaps those of the camps and units ch are more removed from our communities have more difficulty in getting ministers to serve even r own members. In view of this the Home Mission ırd of our conference has in the past been respons-for such ministry of our men. Last year Rev.
liam Stauffer, Sugarcreek, Ohio pastor, visited of the camps and units. Not only was he asked visit the men but also to bring a message which ld help the men realize the Christian values and knesses of their rural home communities. We were l to hear from both campers and home church nbers that his visit and messages were stimulating uplifting.

s a result of this experience various boards of our 'erence have been divinely lead to unite in a er program:

To again serve the members in C.P.S. and
'ches as one.

To center the basic message on the basis and ıority of our faith.

To make available a week of Bible teaching to larger camps and several days in Hospital and r Units.

To crystallize what we have learned during the and prepare ourselves as a Christian fellowship for post-war days.

'eat at Y.M.C.A. Hotel, Chicago, October 3-4 ı order to do this task as well as possible the con-ıce has secured the services of 13 competent mins and teachers, each of whom will give five or veeks of time. Before entering upon the visitation teaching program, these brethren are gathering central place for a two-day retreat to prepare prayerfully offer themselves to the Lord in this ce. Immediately thereafter they will begin their ram of visitation.

Faith of Our Children

Faith of our children living still
In spite of dungeon, fire and sword,
O how our hearts beat high with joy
Whene'er we hear that glorious word!
Refrain
Faith of our children, holy faith,
They will be true to Thee till death.

Faith of our children, they will strive
To win all peoples unto Thee;
And through the truth that comes from God
Man-kind shall then indeed be free.

Faith of our children, they will love
Both friend and foe in all man's strife,
And live Thee, too, as love knows how
By kindly word and virtuous life.

"Faith of Our Fathers" was written by Frederick W. Faber nearly a century ago. It has strengthened many who have sung it as a challenge. It has often lost its force when sung merely as a source of sentimental satisfactions.

We are living at a time when we need to look forward more than backward. Youth must do that. They need challenge, but they also need encouragement. To them "faith" means "faithfulness", as it should. That is what Faber had in mind with the poem which became a hymn to be sung around the world. Words did not meet the problems of his day and they do not meet the problems of our children know it or not the New Testament makes more of faithfulness than of "faith." It takes both. Sometimes one hardly knows which term to use, but one is always sure that the "Follow Me" of Jesus means an attitude so deep and so strong that it cannot be expressed in words.

Not all of life-testing experiences are in the past. That fact is frightening many in our own day and accounts for the waves of pessimism and of cynicism which one meets so often now. Our fathers did not seek "dungeon, fire and sword." They endured these calamities. Their willingness and ability to do this gave proof of their faithfulness to the God whom they professed. Herein lies their contribution to their children. They encouraged their descendents to have right relationships with God and with their fellow human beings which could not be shaken, even by the most dire cruelties which faithless men, within and without the Church, could invent.

One wonders that youth is not more resentful because of the bad conditions into which they have been thrown by a generation, proud of its progress, and poor in the achievement of the greater values of life. We of this generation need to face the fact that what we are in this time of confusion speaks so loudly that our children cannot understand what we are trying to say, especially if they see that ou words and our attitudes fail to meet in the thing that we do. We do well to walk humbly with ou children rather than adding to their burdens throug fears and threatenings. It will do us good to catc the meaning of their faith.

Reflections on Biblical Nonresistance

J. Winfield Fretz

Biblical non-resistance is a result not a cause. I is the result of being spiritually reborn in Chris Non-resistance itself does not cause a spiritual r birth or a discovery of Christ, but a discovery c Christ does result in the practice of Christian no resistance.

Biblical non-resistance is a means not an end. I is the means by which consecrated men forsake everything else to imitate Christ for the glory of God.

Biblical non-resistance is more a matter of th heart than of the head. It is more a matter of wi than of intellect. In order to believe in the doctrin of non-resistance faith must precede knowledge a in all doctrines of Christian thought.

Biblical non-resistance presupposes that the Chri tian will voluntarily suffer pain and inconvenienc for the wrongs of others rather than inflict sufferin upon others. It seeks to redeem men rather tha destroy them.

Biblical non-resistance is based on the assumptio that only good can overcome evil. Evil itself ca never overcome evil.

Biblical non-resistance supposes that the power c God's love as revealed in Christ is greater than an power that can be contrived by the mind of ma Thus, the Holy Spirit at work in the life of a sing consecrated person is more powerful than the migh iest machine gun, the biggest tank, or the most moder armada of bombers.

Biblical non-resistance is a way of winning me to Christ through quietly, persistently bearing witne to the transforming power of his love. It is in time of hatred, war, and violence that this witness become most necessary and effective.

Biblical non-resistance assumes that it is th Christian's primary duty to testify to the WAY c Christ; that one man cannot convert another; tha only God can create the response in the heart of man that results in conversion.

Biblical non-resistance seeks to produce pure, hol and useful living and to eliminate useless habits, va argument, and idle talk.

Biblical non-resistance is not a political instrume to be used to gain personal ends or group objective It is only a religious principle to be used for th service of man and the glory of God.

Biblical non-resistance is not a moral equivale to war. War is itself the supreme human evil ar iere can be no such thing as a moral equivalent to ril.

Biblical non-resisance assumes that the authority of hrist and his revelation of God transcends the auiority and revelation of all Old Testament prophets efore him.

Victory Is At Hand

Today many are longing for victory. They expect eat things from it. Yet, how hollow was the vicry of the First World War. It was fought as a ar to end all wars and to make the world safe for emocracy. It accomplished neither. It did not free en from their lusts. Hence war followed war. The ıngry hearts which are looking for the dawn of eace might well ponder the words of James 4:1-3, From whence come wars and fightings among you? me they not hence, even of your lusts that war in our numbers? Ye lust, and have not: ye kill, and esire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, t ye have not, because ye ask not. Ye ask, and ceive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may conme it upon your lusts."

Military victories may be hollow, but there is one ctory that is all-important. From "sin and self" ade free is the greatest victory that can come to yone. It changes the individual and his relationips with others. It makes for loving and giving. truly means victorious living as a child of God. his victory is at hand for anyone who will accept it, r we have this promise, "the blood of Jesus Christ s Son cleanseth us from all sin." —rw

Qualifications

The following clipping is taken from the Daily Ret of Ontario, California:

"Just because a youth is old enough to be a soldier is no sign he would make a good taxicab driver.

"That was the opinion expressed today by City Attorney Archie D. Mitchell, in recommending no charge in a city ordinance fixing the minimum age of taxi drivers at 21 years, after City Manager Neal D. Smith reported that draftees awaiting induction complain that since they are old enough to serve in the army they should be allowed to drive taxis.

"The cases are not parallel," declared Mitchell, who is also chairman of the Ontario Selective Service board. "We send youths to the army to kill people, but that is not the quality we want in taxi drivers."

They Want the Honey

The readers of this paper want the honey and not the beehive. Regardless of whether it is good or bad, most people just simply will not read long articles. They want condensed thought. An article may even be ever so good—honey all the way through—and yet a great many readers will not tackle it if it is long. The wise contributor, who wants his article to be widely read, might well keep his presentation from being longer than 900 words.—rw.

A Quiet Mind

I have a treasure which I prize;
It's like I can not find;
There's nothing like it on the earth;
'Tis this—a quiet mind.

But 'tis not that I'm stupefied,
Or senseless, dull, or blind;
'Tis God's own peace within my heart,
Which forms my quiet mind.

I found this treasure at the Cross:
For there to every kind
Of weary, heavy-laden souls
Christ gives a quiet mind.

My Savior's death and risen life
To give it were designed;
His love, the never-failing spring
Of this, my quiet mind.

The love of God within my breast,
My heart to him doth bind;
This is the peace of heaven on earth.
This is my quiet mind.

And what may be tomorrow's cross,
I never seek to find;
My Savior says, "Leave that to me,
And keep a quiet mind."

REPORT BY SISTER BURKHALTER

August 22, 1944
Berne, Indiana

Dear Brethren of the Mission Board,—

Greetings in our Savior's Name!

I praise the Lord for the many blessings I have received from His Hand since I left India. All along the way I felt His protecting care even when we went through dangerous waters. The prayers of my many friends in India and in America were answered in a wonderful way. I never felt fear, and that can only be attributed to the Lord's nearness, for we were chased by submarines and had to be ready to jump into the life boats or climb down the ladder along the side of the ship at a moments notice. We were crowded, nine and twelve in a small cabin. It was very hot part of the way. Our cabin had to be fumigated several times on acount of vermin. Sometimes children cried till late at night because they were bitten by bed bugs. The mother of four children in my cabin killed 21 one night. We received only two meals a day just as all the soldiers did on our ship. Later we were allowed to take sandwiches and fruit with us from the dining room. But aside from these discomforts we had much to be thankful for. We had a very fine Protestant chaplain on our ship. We had a devotional period every day from 12:30 to 1:30. Every day we thanked God for protecting us thus far and committed ourselves anew into His care. There were about 30 missionaries from China and 30 missionaries from India with us on the boat. Many of these gave addresses about their work. We often had discussions on various phases of missionary work. This was very profitable and inspirational. The chaplain organized a choir. We practiced nearly every day and thus got acquainted with each other. One day we gave a concert of the selections we had learned. We had time to read many books on the ship. There was a very large library for the soldiers and sailors to which we had access. We had no chairs to sit on, so we all sat on the floor of the lounges and decks, using our life jackets for cushions. We had fair weather nearly all the way. For over 40 days we never got off the ship. We were allowed out on deck at night although we had black outs every night. We often studied the stars which, because of total darkness all around us, seemed intensely brilliant. Once the dipper lay flat on the horizon and the southern cross was above our heads. We sometimes spent whole evenings singing familiar gospel songs by memory. And so in many ways it was a very pleasant trip in spite of the fact that it was exceedingly dangerous in a number of places. The most unpleasant part of the trip was when we stopped at a certain port and the ship's crew were allowed to go on shore for several hours. Some of them came back very drunk. One of them staggered about asking everybody whether he was on the right ship. It was tragic to see these fine young men lose their dignity. We had many Chinese, Persian and Indian students on the ship. They smiled at each other when they saw some of the crew act so foolish. I did not feel like smiling. I felt ashamed. However we were all glad that no liquor was sold on the ship. We had quite a number of rescued men on the ship some who had been torpedoed four times. Some of them were very nervous and jumped when a door slammed. Some of these attended our religious services regularly.

I am having a very pleasant vacation with my loved ones and friends here in Berne, Indiana. Both of my parents went to their heavenly home while I was in India. I have given more than 25 missionary addresses and talks since my arrival in the States. The interest in missions seems to be very keen everywhere I go. It is an encouraging sign.

My thoughts and mind often wander to India and I wonder how our missionaries are getting along with all the work they have to do. Besides doing all their other work Rev. and Mrs. Moyer are looking after the Bible Training School in my absence.

I am intending to take some work in some school this fall. Perhaps I shall continue my studies at the Biblical Seminary in New York. I hope this meets with your approval.

Yours in Christ
Martha Burkhalter

Jesus Christ And Our Possession

"To the Master Teacher the subject of possessions was a very important one. In fact, twenty of His twenty-six major parables either directly or indirectly deal with them and man's relationship to them. There are three classifications into which they naturally fall. They are: those that deal with investments, those that have to do with responsibility, and those that have to do with sharing." John E. Simpson in "Faithful Also in Much"

SUCCESS

We often hear the remark, "Well, he has made a success of life."

It brings up several questions. The first of these is, "What is Success?" To some people success is the ability to make and keep money. To others success is popularity in the world, influence, achievement and many others. Christ's idea of success was different. He said that the meek inherit the earth and he who would be the greatest must become as the least.

Another question we might ask is, "How do men achieve success?" Perhaps the best answer to this is—follow Christ's example and teachings. People who follow God's will in their lives will have a successful life in its truest sense.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Rev. John T. Neufeld, Chicago writes that they baptized 8 young people on the day of Pentecost. He also writes, "The Vacation Bible School has kept us busy for the summer. We have an enrollment of 85 and an average attendance of 55 scholars and 8 teachers and helpers. The sessions are held from 9:30 to 11:30, one hour of Bible school and one hour of handwork. The handwork is always the drawing card. The school is held four days a week and for a little over five weeks."

A Young Christian Workers' Institute, consisting largely of young men from C.P.S. camps, but also a number of other young ministers and ministerial candidates, was held on the Bethel College campus August 13-16. It was rich with inspiration for those who attended.

Winnipeg, Man. The church started here by Rev. Ewert and for over a year served by Rev. I. I. Friesen is growing. In June 14 young people were baptized and received as members into the church. They are meeting in an old Jewish synagogue, which shall be torn down after the war, in order to make room for a filling station. It is a cold and very unsatisfactory meeting in an old Jewish synagogue which shall be new building. The church has already subscribed over a thousand dollars for that purpose, but it will need much more to build adequately.

Calgary, Alberta. From July 5, to August 2, the old Rev. C. D. Harder combined a visit with his children with considerable home mission work. He preached twelve times during the month and visited 60 homes in a number of different communities. People where he visited were always glad to convey him to the various homes and churches to which he planned to go.

Langham, Sask. Rev. Jacob J. Nickel relates some of his experiences on a short preaching tour to Swan Plain and Janzen. At the first place he preached 4 times, and served with baptism and the Lord's Supper. A young woman was brought to this place by wagon over 20 miles of very bad roads, that she might be baptized. The father himself had given her the preparatory instruction. After the services Rev. Nickel felt constrained to visit the community from which this father and daughter had come. The man refused to take him over these bad roads on his wagon, but secured a man with a small truck to make the trip. By auto the distance was 60 miles. The truck driver had to patch tires fives times on the way up. The five families living there all attended the two preachings services held on Sunday. After the service several seekers of salvation came to Rev. Nickel for help. He felt richly rewarded for having made that strenuous trip. From here he made a trip under further difficulties to Janzen, where he also served with five sermons and the Lord's Supper.

"A PRAYER HYMN"

(This hymn is said to have been written by a nineteen-year-old servant girl. It was read to a large congregation by Dr. G. Campbell Morgan at one of his services at Westminister Chapel, London.)

Lord of all pots and pans and things, since I've no time to be A saint by doing lovely things, or watching late with Thee,
Or dreaming in the dawnlight, or storming heaven's gates,
Make me a saint by getting meals, and washing up the plates.

Although I must have Martha's hands, I have a Mary mind;
And when I black the boots and shoes, Thy sandals Lord, I find.
I think of how they trod the earth, what time I scru the floor;
Accept this meditation, Lord, I haven't time for more.

Warm all the kitchen with Thy love, and light it wit Thy peace;
Forgive me all my worrying, and make all grumblin cease.
Thou who didst love to give men food, in room or b the sea,
Accept this service that I do—I do it unto Thee.

Meditation

"A Song in the Night"

By J. E. Entz

My heart had been very heavy with many burden The spiritual welfare of our church lay heavily upo me—the indifference of some, the worldliness of oth ers, the absence of so very many of our young me who are in the draft, the possible temptations that be set those in the cities and the camps—this terribl carnage!—all this and much else tended to make o hearts heavy.

Then our Heavenly Father sent a song. I wa working late on my sermon for the next Sunday. Th message did not come easily. It was far after mid night, when suddenly the song of our mocking bir (which we had missed and grieved over because w feared it had been devoured by our cat) rose sweetl and clear into the night. How joyously he sang, an he continued as though he'd never stop.

The words of Job came to my heart: "God, m maker . . . giveth songs in the night." What lesson! No matter how dark, God giveth songs the night. How much there was to rejoice in. The so much to praise God for! Oh, dear ones! no tter how dark the night, remember, "God my Maker eth songs in the night." Continue to trust Him, d to praise His name for His loving kindness. HE ILL TAKE CARE OF YOU!

Who Are the Anabaptists?

By C. van der Smissen

Some of the professors of church history begin to l us Anabaptists.

What does the word "Anabaptist" mean? Most ople do not know what it means. Anabaptist is in glish a Rebaptizer, German Wiedertaufer, a word ich our forefathers feared and hated, because ac-ding to the law of 1538 all Rebaptizers were to beheaded or drowned.

If we are rebaptizers, we acknowledge that infant-ptism is real baptism while the Bible says one ptism, Eph. 4:5, and in Mark 16:16, "He that be-veth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that ieveth not shall be damned."

Our renowned Professor Mueller in Halle said, en in his lecture on dogmatic he came to Baptism: ntlemen, we as Bible students know, that infant ptism has no foundation in the Bible. If any of i think different, please speak. "The next day he d, "I said yesterday, that infant baptism has no ndation in the Bible, but the blessing of children ." When we students went out my comrades d, "Ah van der Smissen!" I said, "What is?" ey said, "The blessing of Children is biblical!" aid, "That is why we bless the children."

Is Professor Müller at his old age becoming a nnonite?" they asked.

Our forefathers called themselves Baptizers, but er Anabaptists. Why shall we changed our name Anabaptists, which we are not, or when we call selves Mennonites, to accept a name, against which nno preached powerfully. Now some call him Ana-tist. When Duchess Anna of Ostfriesland made w against the Anabaptists driving them out of her ntry, she excepted the Baptizers, calling them nnist.

About "Insanity"

What Some People Still Believe

That "insanity" is either a disgrace or a mysterious affliction that cannot be prevented or cured.

That "insanity" is a single disease of only the most serious kind.

That "insanity comes suddenly and without warning.

That people are helpless to prevent "insanity."

That emotional shock, loss of dear ones, disappointment in love, loss of money, or other misfortunes, cause "insanity."

6. That "insane asylums" are dreadful places, and that to go to one means never to come out.
7. That "insanity" is inherited.

What Science Teaches Today

1. That "insanity" includes a group of the more severe types of mental diseases. They need early medical treatment just as heart disease and no one need be ashamed of this sickness.
2. That there are many Different Kinds of mental disease; some mild, some serious. The symptoms also are different.
3. That mental disease Develops Gradually and displays warning signs in advance.
4. That Danger Signals (symptoms) of an approaching breakdown can usually be recognized, and if these are given prompt medical attention the threatened mental disease can often be prevented.
5. That shocks or losses may Precipitate a mental disorder, but in such cases the real Possibilities of the illness have been present for some time but unrecognized.
6. That our "asylums" now are Hospitals from which 25 to 40 per cent of all patients are discharged as recovered or improved.
7. That some kinds of mental diseases probably have an inherited background, but a greater number seem to arise from inability to adjust to a difficult environment.

Too Late

She kissed the old man; she showered upon him kisses and tears. She told all the people how good he was. I thought if she had only given half a dozen of those kisses a year for the last ten years, how the tender-hearted old gentleman would have smiled through his tears. But now he took it all very coolly. He was dead. He was old and poor, she was young and rich. She had ten rooms, but no room for father. Yet he made room for her when he had only two. The old man was not educated. She was—at his expense. He had fed and clothed her for twenty years at home and at college, until she had risen into more refined and cultured society, and married among new friends. The old people's address and dialect were too coarse. She kissed him, and buried him in a beautiful coffin. Dear father is to have a beautiful monument. A warm kiss while living is better than cold marble when dead.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Emma Ruth, Reedley, California

OCTOBER 8 — "Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." Read Heb. 12:1-11

In listening to a famous ensemble I was deeply impressed by the almost superhuman perfection of what I heard, the complete blending of the music of 30 instruments into one masterful production. But the result was not so amazing when I became aware that not one of the players watched his music for more than five seconds, it seemed, without looking up at the director. Five seconds was long enough without getting fresh direction, inspiration, correction from the leader. How long do we go without "looking to Jesus", to whom we owe the beginning of our faith, and to whom we must look for its perfection? Five seconds, five minutes, or indefinitely? Is it suprising that often the effect is harsh and dissonant?

"Moment by moment I'm kept in His love;
Moment by moment I've life from above;
Looking to Jesus till glory doth shine;
Moment by moment, O Lord, I am Thine."

OCTOBER 9 — "In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." Read Ps. 103.

Often there is a question in our minds about the will of God for our lives. But in this instance there in none. "Everything" is an all inclusive word and allows for no exception. So then "in everything" it is His will that we give thanks. Sickness, health, disappointment, loss, failure, sin. However, it does not say "for everything" give thanks. Many things that are hard to bear we bring upon ourselves. But even in these, thanksgiving opens the door to God's mercy and grace in Christ Jesus.

"I thank Thee, Father, once again
For many blessings gladly known,
And many more beyond my ken,
That Thou dost see and Thou alone;
But most of all my heart I raise
To praise Thee for the power to praise."

OCTOBER 10 — "Men ought always to pray, and not to faint." Read Luke 18:1-8. Someone has said, "We either pray or we faint." We need to persist in prayer not only for what we can do through prayer, but what it does for us. The widow persisted with the judge in the face of an earthly enemy; how much more we need to be persistent against the enemy of our souls. After setting forth the Christian armour in Eph. 6, Paul adds "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all stints." We breathe in God's Spirit. We breathe out our weakness, our sin, our need and it is replaced by His power "which worketh in us mightily."

"Oh, how praying rests the weary!
Prayer will change the night to day;
So when life seems dark and dreary,
Don't forget to pray."

OCTOBER 11—"Confess your faults one to anothe and pray one for another, that ye may be healed." Read James 5:14-18. Confession is rarely within th experience of the average Christian today. Ther may be confession to God of a sort, but as for cor fessing our faults, we take them lightly. We laug them off with "That's the way I am. I can't hel it, and that is the way you must expect that I wi go on." James did not think so. He says. "Confes your faults one to another", with a definite purpos in view that we may be healed, cured of them. Some thing of which we can be healed is not meant to b It is a disease. Intercessory prayer is the means healing. "The prayers of the righteous have a powe ful effect." (Moffatt)

"More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of.
Therefore let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day."

OCTOBER 12—"And whatsoever ye ask in my nam that will I do." Read John 14:12-15. There are s many unlimited words used in God's promises tha it makes one realize that the limitations we experienc must be in us. "Whatsoever" is such a word. must be that we do not live in the realm where the are true, or we should know their truth by experienc A bird in a cage does not experience the freedo which his wings provide in the open. "Rush Order – Mennonite's In"

By Mathilda Schmidt

Did you get your last number of the Mennonite? Have you ever wondered why your address was only half there? So have others and here's why.

It is 4:30 p.m. Friday evening at the Secretarial Bureau. Here girls work to earn money in order to attend college. The girls have started to look wearily at the clock to see if it isn't time to stop work. But ah, like magic it dawns on them—it's mail time. The girls forget to be weary as they dash to the post office and come back in gayer spirits then before. But wait—who is that sad looking Miss over there. Oh yes, I remember now. She is none other then the girl who usually makes the corrections for the Mennonite mailing list. But what does that have to do with the look she's wearing. Let's ask her.

Mathilda Schmidt

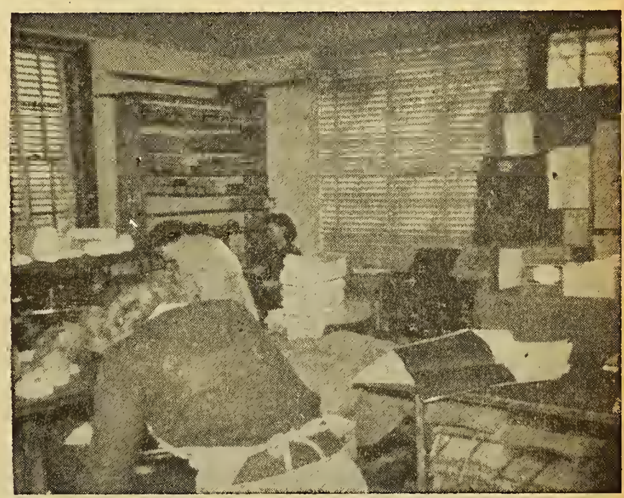
"What's wrong, Miss? Didn't we see you get a rather nice-sized envelope? We bet your folks sent you some money."

"No such luck! and I am down to my last dime. Sure I got a package as I do every Friday afternoon from the Mennonite Publication Office—and woe is me. Just look at all the corrections they sent me. Worst of all is the changes of addresses—only fifty of them. Can't people stay living in the same place for a change? It's really a job to make these corrections. First you've got to hunt up the old plate, with their name and address on it, from 5,591 different plates. These are scattered in only thirty-four different drawers. Then you've got to take this plate and put it on the embossing machine to change the address (Maybe make a new plate since so many corrections have been made that the old flexible metal plate finally breaks.), run a list to see if you've spelled it right (Let's hope the original was written so you don't have to guess about the spelling.), put it back into its right place—your guess is as good as mine where that would be.

"Additions aren't so bad. They just require making a new plate, running proof strip, and filing. But drops, I love them. Just find the plate and throw it away. Really though, if someone would care to make me happy, please introduce a 'Life subscription to The Mennonite.' Really though, it's not so bad since this is just once a week and the Mennonite Publication Office does the most disagreeable part of the whole job."

After every plate has been corrected and put in its right place—we hope—another girl takes up the work Saturday morning—trying to speed the Mennonite to you for your reading pleasure. She starts running the "singles" on the Addressograph. Now, now, hold your peace and she'll tell you herself what this is.

"The Addressograph is a marvelous machine when it works right. I take a drawer of plates from the beginning of the list and put these into the machine —imprinting each paper as the machine feeds the plates through. In this first drawer we have the names of those people or places which receive more then one copy of The Mennonite. For this reason we print them on individual wrappers and when these are given to the girls who wrap, they wrap in one package as many Mennonites as that particular person or place gets. The next three drawers are also singles, also run on slip of paper. These though are the names of those people where only one Mennonite goes to a town. Since we haven't received the printed Mennonite that is all the work we can do on it today."



The Secretarial Bureau at Bethel College where the Mennonites are addressed and sent out each week. See Article.

Looking out of the back door of the Secretarial Bureau shop-room, we see the Herald Publishing Company picking up the type from the print shop.

Monday night and we peek into the Secretarial Bureau. What's happened? The girls are all excited. We hear them yelling at each other. Honestly—such a din we've never heard any group of girls make.

"Haven't the Mennonites come?"—"No, if we don't get them tonight we won't get them out in time."—"Yes, and the post office insists on having them there tomorrow at 2:30 p.m., and here it is 5:30 and we haven't even seen hide nor hair of them."—"I suppose Mr. Bargen will want me to put in extra time and I must simply review for the exams. I haven't looked in my books for ages."

Such noise, but it is subsiding as the girls forget about the late Mennonites and hurry to the dining hall for supper.

Tuesday morning at 11:30 a.m. and The Mennonite comes in. But how can anyone expect them to address and wrap 5,591 Mennonites in three hours. Rev. Weinbrenner comes to the chief clerk and we hear him saying, "Do you think you can mail the Mennonite today? It has a special article in it and also an important announcement that just has to get to the readers."

The chief clerk humbly replies, "We'll try, but it just got in—late." So she rounds up all the girls that aren't in class and calls in some campus kids and they start dashing.

The girls who wrap start to wrap those "singles"—counting Mennonites, wrapping, and maybe groaning that the paste won't stick. The new as well as the old Addressographs are humming as they address the individual Mennonites. We hear bits of conversation floating back and forth as these five or more girls keep getting into each other's way as they try to hurry.

"My it's hot, can't we open these windows!" "Shut that window! These Mennonites are flying away. There goes one out of the window."—"Here's hoping these machines don't break."—"Oh, dear!"—"What's wrong, a machine jam?"—"Yes, and I bet I have a dozen plates in the space that one plate is to occupy. No, only eight plates."—"How about getting the mail sacks and putting them up?"—"O.K."—"Hey, don't forget to tell the post office The Mennonite is coming in late, about 4:30. We only got them in at 11:30 this morning." "Hurry girls, we'll never get it into the post office at this rate, and we promised Rev. Weinbrenner that we'd get it out today."

Those girls are working like mad. The wrappers are wrapping as fast as the two girls can address. After each city has been wrapped into one bundle and the singles have been wrapped for a certain state, the girls wrap all these into one great, big bundle. Now one girl stops wrapping and starts to sack, routing these right away so the post office need only weigh these sacks. Maybe these girls will have to leave for classes and different girls finish the job, but the work goes on anyway. No rest for the girls that work for the Secretarial Bureau. They think it's fun though.

It's 4:30 and the girls start to carry The Mennonite sacks over to the post office on a—let's call it a stretcher. They load about three or four of the eighteen U.S. Mail sacks on the stretcher and start walking from the Science Hall to the Ad. Building. To their weary ears come those old and tiring questions from amused visitors and students, "Hey, whose dying now that you've got to carry out?"

They wearily answer, "Mennonites."

As they near the post office their knees start to shake. Will the post office take these at this hour? All's well, they take them and mail them the same evening. Thank you Post Office, for being so accommodating.

With glowing face the chief clerk brings Rev. Weinbrenner the remaining copies and tells him, "We do'd it." She returns to the Secretarial Bureau for peace, but no, here comes Rev. Weinbrenner with sample copies to be mailed. Ah me, what a life.

She has to make some fresh paste since the other has been destroyed, and wrap these copies. As she hands the sample copy bundles to the post-mistress the post-mistress is heard to say, "Did you stamp each individual Mennonite with 'Sample Copy'? Must she? Yes, she must go back and open up all the bundles, stamp the individual Mennonites, rewrap, and bring them back to the post office.

It's 5:30 and the Science Hall is quiet. Could you have imagined it at noon. No, neither can Mr. Bargen who has been blamed for the past nine years when these frantic girls make a mistake in their wild rush to get The Mennonite out in time. No wonder he has gray hair, he's only had one hundred and eleven different girls working for him. Maybe these girls never have thanked him for giving them a job and for understanding them when they tried to work their way through college, but they sure have thought it many times.

Now that you got your Mennonite, we are wondering if you saw that important article and announcement, or did these girls rush in vain?

Boys We Like

The boy who never makes fun of old age, no matter how decrepit, or unfortunate, or evil it may be. God's hand rests lovingly on the aged head.

The boy who never cheats.

The boy who never calls anybody bad names, no matter what anybody calls him.

The boy who is never cruel.

The boy who never lies. Even white lies leave black spots on the character.

The boy who never makes fun of a companion because of a misfortune.

The boy who never hesitates to say "No," if asked to do wrong.

The boy who never quarrels.

The boy who never forgets that God made him to be a joyous, loving, helpful being.

BEAUTY

One hears of beauty every day.
The man made thing o'so gay
Shining, sparkling in every hue.
But nature has a beauty too.

Nature's art is soft and deep,
Which gives to one a soothing sleep.
This is a gift of GOD above,
A symbol of his gracious Love.

The softness of the twilight,
The million twinkling stars a night.
In this again, GOD's hand we see
His boundless love for you and me.

The clean fresh look of a summer sky,
White fleecy clouds floating on high.
A sight like this surely proves to me
That GOD's salvation is full and free.

When plants are scorched,
And heat is at its worst.
GOD sends the gentle rains to ease
The world's absorbing thirst.

In nature GOD presents a plan,
Its purpose is to free each man.
ACCEPT CHRIST NOW, there is no fee,
And spend in heaven eternity.

"Our government has given us the privilege of doing work of national importance under civilian direction as an alternative to direct participation in war. Civilian Public Service offers boundless opportunities to the camper who is willing to find them instead of sitting back and expecting them to come to him. We possibly cannot practice or study the specific occupation we hope to undertake, but we are able to do the 101 different things we always wanted to do and for which we never found time." —Delbert Schrag

WHATEVER PRICE

"With the pressure for ever greater numbers of men and the drafting of many fathers, we as non-resistant people should fortify ourselves more than ever before for whatever may lie ahead. We have pledged ourselves to pay whatever price may be required to maintain our conscience void of offense. It is becoming increasingly clear that we are dedicated to a task and an ideal that is not easy." —From the Supplement to the M.C.C. Peace Section Handbook and Draft Manual, which was recently printed and is now ready for distribution.

Christian Courtesy

By Hermie Preheim

Courtesy or simple politeness is not a difficult practice, neither is it something that requires great powers of concentration. True courtesy is not artificial nor stilted; a great show of formality and pompous manner. What is courtesy? It is simply a practice of the Golden Rule. It means thoughtfulness, kindliness, civility and respectfulness. It should be taught in our schools just as any other subject is taught. Have you ever seen youngsters (and oldsters too) pushing through a crowd, shoving, jabbing, and now and then placing a well aimed kick against an unsuspecting shin? Or have you seen children pointing their fingers at and mocking an elderly person, crippled and bent by long years of labor? Have you noticed people, young and old, entering a meeting place, particularly the House of God, with tongues wagging, doors banging and feet coming down HARD? Or walking and pushing around to find a place to sit while the Word of God is being read? Who of us can say we are innocent? Our churches are places where true courtesy, Christian courtesy, should be practiced. Whispering and giggling while another person is singing or speaking in a public meeting is one form of discourtesy that cannot be abolished quickly enough. Only those who have eperienced the sight of a whispering, laughing audience while performing can realize the feelings engendered. What if the whispering is not about the performer! How is he to know? Anybody who has the courage to face an audience has the right to demand respectful attention, no matter how he speaks or appears...

If true courtesy means thoughtfulness, kindliness, and a "Do unto others as you would be done by" attitude, it is necessary that we who bear the name of Christ practice this ideal because our living is a greater sermon than our preaching.

COSTA RICA

This most southerly of the five Central American Republics, has an area of 23,000 square miles. Its capital is San Jose, and its chief port is Limon. The population in 1941 was 672,043. The proportion of Spanish blood is more considerable than in most other Central American countries. Spanish is the universal language. The money exchange is 1 x 5.60.

The missions visited were the Latin America Mission, sometimes known as Strachan's work, and the Central American Mission (Scofield).

BIBLE INSTITUTE

We arrived at about 1:00 p. m. in Costo Rica. The plane rides are very uneventful, and very smooth. Sometimes I wish that we would run into a storm or something to make it exciting, but really I'm grateful that we don't. The topography of these countries is really very beautiful. I want you to see them too—I think my leaving you behind is very unscriptural. A married man is not to leave his wife before one year, but is to remain with her and attempt to make her happy. I don't know just how to make up for my act.

We were taken into this place by Kenneth Strachan. He regretted that he was unprepared for us—somehow or other he didn't know we were coming. But we were made more than welcome nevertheless, and when I told him that I was your husband, well, we were taken right into the bosom of the family. A few minutes later we were being introduced by Ken to Lucille Allen. Ken asked her whether she knew Mary Hope Wood, and she said yes, and then she went on to explain how you had recently been married and that your husband was to be coming down here for a survey (this she had learned from a letter from Isabel MacKay). Ken then told her that I was the husband—you should have seen the surprise and amazement on her face. Her jaw literally dropped. We were much amused. She seems to be a very fine person—which is natural since she is a friend of yours.

Later this afternoon we went to see Dr. and Mrs. Strachan in their home in the outskirts of this city. My how nice they were to us—and how glad they seemed to be to meet me—all bcause I was your husband. They think so highly of you and love you. They send to you their best regards. They were much interested in the details of our wedding, in the little colored picture that I carry of you, and concerning your welfare. They have recently returned from Columbia—and feel that we ought to give Columbia much thought. Dayton Roberts and Grace plan to go to Columbia soon. Both the D. Roberts and the K. Strachans have a little boy of about 2 plus years. Ken also has a new baby.

Miss Thor is certainly a jolly person—and most likeable. Did you know Keith Monroe? I understand that he was in Sem. with Bud. He was in the Chaplaincy (Navy) but I am told has been killed in action.

Tonight we visited the Bible study of the C A M with Rev. Geo. Ferris. Tomorrow we shall continue investigations, the which I shall be reporting.

Costa Rica is nice (though it has nothing on Guat.) and I like it. The present mission set-up I believe is quite adequate to take care of the evangelical needs of the country. A greater staff can be used, but there is hardly room for a new mission—except, in domains other than geographical. The next frontier for Costa Rica I think will be in the field of "strategy"—the propagation of the gospel by means of literature and radio, etc. In that, here as throughout Latin America, there is still plenty of room. Out of a population of 600,000 people the evangelical community numbers approximately 10,000. That is about 1 in 60. The people are fanatical and quite opposed to the gospel—ye people are being saved. In tonight's meeting at the Temple about 6 came forward. The radio work that is being done by the institute seems to be having the effect of breaking down the RC barrier.

DAVID, PANAMA

Voth (I still call him that!) went directly to Balboa, while I took the longer, more difficult, but more interesting trip. I took the plane to David (which is just across the Costa Rican border) and came the rest of the way by station wagon. (300 miles). I landed at David at about 3:30 p.m., got a hotel, and then went for a walk. It is awesomely lonesome to be in a little mud village without a friend—how very hard it must be to be a missionary alone. David is a town of about 8,000 with two Catholic churches, a small group of 4 sqs., 7th day Adventists, and a Methodist work that has gone on the rocks. Not much of an evangelical witness here. I had heard so little about any Mission work in Panama, that I thought I'd want to see what the trouble was.

THROUGH THE JUNGLE

The trip between here and David was made in a station wagon. It cost $11.50 and the plane would only have cost $15. But one does not get much of an idea of a country from the air, and I wanted at least a little knowledge of the country. The road is fair, but passable. The station wagon had 10 of us loaded in—six negros and 3 mestizos, but dark like negro. I was the only white person. After driving for about an hour the spring broke in the rear right. One of the negros—a very fat woman, had been sitting on the right side—and supposedly helped cause the break. The driver went back to David for help while we visited a nearby "home."—a bamboo house, dirt floor, practically nothing of anything. They did have all the grapefruit that we wanted to eat. And it rained for hours. Well, after about four hours we got started again—drove all night and landed here about 9 a. m. without further mishap except a flat tire. I couldn't have seen much of the country during the night, but it was a brilliant moonlit night, and we could see it very well. The whole strip seems to be very sparsely populated and though there is much jungle brush, yet much could be used for agriculture. The Panamanian doesn't like to farm. Santiago, a town of about 2500 is about 160 miles from David d is a better place. It has a National Normal iool of about 700 students and would make a od center for an evangelical witness. Both the A M and the Baptists are planning (the C A M is present only "considering") to open work here. e climate is rather warm, but endurable. The hts cool. With Defference to the Bapt. and the A M, I don't think we will consider it a field us.

Our hotel here—the Hotel Colon—is not very good : it is costing us $10. a day! 10|16|43

A LIVING CREED

I would rather see a sermon
Than hear one any ay;
I would rather one would walk with me
Than merely tell the way.

The best of all the preachers
Are the men who live their creeds,
For to see good put in action
Is what everybody needs.

The lectures you deliver
May be wise and true,
But I would rather get my lesson
By observing what you do.

I may not understand the high advice
You like to give,
But there is no misunderstanding
How you act and how you live.

Though an able preacher charms me
With his eloquence, I say
I would rather see a sermon
Then to hear one any day.

The Visit to the Churches

The Bible teachers are to visit the Camps and Units first and then they are to visit the Churches. Each man will write to the Ministers of the Churches he is assigned to visit and gives dates. Everyone would no doubt like to have this man come on Sunday, but we have only one Sunday in seven days so we hope you will cooperate and put forth the effort to make the meetings helpful to every one. It is expected that the men will be in each church for two services.

Members are to bring their Bibles to these meetings. Acts chapters 1-10 will be used. The Church—the Holy Spirit—the believer—God's Program, will be among the points to be stressed. We feel certain you will be glad to hear of the present day "heroes of faith."

Prayer and Intercession

Prayer and Intercession by many will help carry out God's plan and purpose.

DAILY DEVOTIONALS

When He is my shelter without, and my strength within, there is little left for me to be except something to His glory, and boasting is taken out of my mouth.

"My soul shall make her boast in the Lord;
The humble shall hear of it and be glad.
O magnify the Lord with me,
And let us exalt His name together."

OCTOBER 14—"When He putteth forth His own sheep he goeth before them." Read John 10:1-10. When we pray God works at both ends. He never asks us to go where He has not gone before. Peter prayed on the housetop and saw a vision. Cornelius also was praying and sent the interpretation. It was of the sheep in the fold that Jesus said, "When He putteth forth His own sheep He goeth before them." Who has not experienced the blessedness of finding the way prepared, the doors open. When you have a particular difficult, perhaps disagreeable task to perform, remember if He has led you out, He also goes before you. There is no experience through which we pass where we cannot say, "He has gone before me." Yes, even in sin, the iniquity of us all was laid on Him, and He tasted death that we might live.

"He goeth before you,
How blessed to say
He knows every step. He the Life, Truth and Way.

He goeth before you,
None other could go,
None other was worthy
Nor willing to stoop so low."

IN MEMORIAM

Anna Siemens, daughter of Dietrich Friesen and Anna Doerksen Friesen, was born October 26, 1864, in the village Fishau, South Russia. In 1877, she, with her parents, came to a farm southwest of Inman, Kansas. She was baptized by Elder Heinnich Toews in 1884 and received into the Bethel Church. She married David Wiebe in 1888. He died in 1894. In 1896 she was married to John Banman and then joined the Alexanderwohl Church. After six years her second husband died. In 1904 she married Peter Quiring, who died in 1910. Again two years later she joined John A. Siemens in matrimony and became a member of the Hebron Mennonite Church. This union was broken in 1916 when her husband was found dead in the yard. She then returned to her former home in Marion County and transferred her church membership to Alexanderwohl. She died August 10, 1944.

Elizabeth Schmidt Nickel, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Hooge) Schmidt, was born October 28, 1870, in South Russia, and died July 23, 1944. She came from Russia to Kansas with her parents. She was baptized and later accepted into the membership of the Gnadenberg Church, Whitewater, Kansas. In 1892 she married Gerhard P. Nickel, who left her in death in 1941. She is mourned by her four children: Menno, Whitewater; Mrs. Walter Harms, Newton; Gerhard, Newton; and Carl, Newton; by two sisters: Mrs. P. M. Pankratz, Cordell, Oklahoma, and Mrs. P. H. Fleming, Clinton, Oklahoma; and by three brothers: Jacob S. Schmidt, Carrot River, Saskatchewan; Henry Schmidt, Clinton, Oklahoma; and John Schmidt, Texas.

Heinrich J. Schmidt, son of Jacob and Elizabeth Schmidt, was born July 12, 1875, in Emmental, Marion County, Kansas. He spent his entire life on the place where he was born. In 1896 he was baptized by Elder Jacob Buller and received into the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church. In 1898 he married Elizabeth Woelk, who left him through death in 1940. He died on August 9 and is mourned by Elizabeth of the home and Simon of Hillsboro, Kansas.

RELIEF

(The following are excerpts of a letter written by Ferdinand Isaac to his parents.)

Calcutta
June 16, 1944

My dear parents and aunt;

I have been here now fully three weeks. Have gotten somewhat acquainted with my work. Milton Vogt of the Dhamtari Mission, and whose parents live in Garden Township, is still with me. We distribute rice to about 1800 families—not enough to fully feed them, but it is an assistance. By this time nearly all people can do something to keep alive. To some we sell the rice at a reduced price. We also sell cloth at a low price to help the people. We have taken over from the government the running of a temporary relief hospital and work camp. These are for destitute and hungry patients. If a person is homeless he may come here. I suppose this work will continue through the rainy season.

We live in a rented house about thirteen miles southeast of Calcutta. It is near a suburban railway with trains averaging every half hour. In this house Vogt, three Indian co-workers, and I stay. One of the Indians is the cook. He fixes food partly to our taste and partly to theirs. We seem to get along very well.

The weather here is not as warm as in the Central Province, but there is always more moisture in the air, so one feels it much more. When I left Janjgir, it was very hot. Anna wrote several days later that it had reached 120 degrees F. On the train the heat was very intense. Anna has written of some rain which has helped a little, but since then it has beıme hot again. Here the grass is green and nature beautiful. We think the rainy season will soon gin. On Sunday we regularly go to the city to ıe Thoburn Methodist Church which is near the ee Memorial Mission. At this Mission we have our eals and we can rest there. In the evening, Ameriın soldiers come to this Mission for fellowship. I ıve met a Detweiler from Upland, and a Sprunger om Berne.

Generally speaking prices are high in India, but ıe government has done much to control prices. ere in Bengal conditions have improved much. I ıve been in a number of villages and have seen npty houses where the whole family has died, but ıe living people whom I saw looked fairly well. ere and there one sees a very frail person.

With much love,

ımmer Service Units Terminate ....

Both the Ypsilanti, Michigan, and the Howard, hode Island, Women's Summer Service Units ıve disbanded following three months of service attendants in the two hospitals. The girls have iced their appreciation for the initial relief traing, the most interesting hospital work, and the quaintance with other young people of our Mennite churches. Many girls visited Akron Headıarters on their way home from Howard. Two the Howard Unit girls are now assisting in the ısiness and publicity departments at Headquarters Esther Mann and Ruth Hilty.

Relief Work in India

While reporting on relief work as carried on by the workers around Calcutta, Sonarpur, and Goria in India, Brother F. J. Isaac wrote, "In these 7 months (November, 1943 to May, 1944) more than 140 tons of rice were distributed. The area in which M.R.C.I. works has a population of over 62,000. 10 per cent of this number have been fed." During the month of April rice distribution reached its peak. During that time over 7,000 people received rice, averaging 21 pounds per person per week. About one-fourth of the people paid for the rice, about two-thirds of cost price.

—The Mennonite Deaconess Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska, is completing its 33rd year of uninterrupted service. Unlike many other businesses, a hospital must serve 24 hours a day and 7 days a week. For the nine months ending August 31, 1944, the bed occupancy rate at the hospital has been 94 per cent. During the some period 143 babies were born in the hospital. We little realize what it would mean to be living in a community without a good hospital.

The Scope of the La Plata Project

By Delbert V. Preheim, M. D.

When the Brethren Service Committee first arranged r the work at La Plata with the Puerto Rico Recon- uction Administration and the Insular Department Health, a definite field of service was outlined. hen the Mennonite Central Committee assumed the sponsibilities of the Brethren Service Committee in is area, it assumed also the committments that had en made including those as to size of the job. Under e technical sponsorship of P.R.R.A. and with the operation of the department of health, M.C.C. is nmitted to furnish medical service to the La Plata ea. It is through the cooperation of P.R.R.A. as the hnical government agency that the C.P.S. program Puerto Rico has been possible.

The "La Plata area" consists of five quite widely parated P.R.R.A. rural resettlement tracts with their adjacent communities. Of these La Plata is the largest, most accessible, and most active and has been made more or less the center. All are located in the wide, tortuous La Plata river valley. The chief concern of P.R.R.A. is of course for its resettlers, and and that of the health department is for its currently understaffed rural medical dispensaries. One of these dispensaries was constructed by P.R.R.A. for each of the resettlement projects, and were subsequently turned over to the health department for operation. With the onset of the war, the shortage of doctors and funds has forced the health department to curtail is activities at these five dispensaries. Under existing arrangements we are committed to help in these two areas. However, I feel that as a service organization, the "Study to show thyself approved unto God." IITi 2:15.

Approved unto God—is it not remarkable how cater to the approval of man in all our ways? T pressure of public opinion is one of the most effecti forces which moulds our everyday life. We find ou selves repeating over and over again a timewo phrase: What will people say? To go through l paying no attention whatsoever to the thoughts our fellowman is foolish. It matters much what o friends and companions think of us. Many a trage might have been averted had men of the past, l heeded the words of well-meaning friends. P would have us understand, however that in this mat of seeking approval God must stand above all. T first consideration shall be in the form of this qu tion: What will the Lord think? No greater dem stration shall we ever receive than that given by blessed Lord and Saviour Himself, "I do always th things that please Him (John 8:29).

"Father, we confess that we have had our eyes much upon the world. Help us to keep a sir eye upon Thee, seeking thy blessed 'well-done' ab all others.—Amen."—Rev. Walter Gering

Thankoffering of Nearly 9,000.00

Nearly $9,000.00 swelled the envelopes, which were ieaped on the offering plates. Members of the Ienno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington, had ust brought their tithes, offerings, and gifts unto God n their annual Home-Coming and Harvest Thanks Day, which this year was observed on September 24. Of the 135 members, 133 were present, and these ontributed a total of $8,800.55. Of he total $1,200 vent for relief, $$1,604 for C.P.S., $454.50 for Home Iissions, $848.50 for Foreign Missions, $65 for the acific District Conference, $2,064 for the Building und, $1,160 for Bethel College, $175 for Freeman ollege, $196 for the Minister's Pension Fund, $230 or Publication and Education, $500 for a Grand iano, $1.50 for Whitworth College, and $153.55 for ie Miscellaneous Fund. This thankoffering exceeded iat of last year, which amounted to over $7,000.00.

Previous Giving

The thankoffering of September 24 does not rep- esent an accumulated stewardship of the nine months nce January 1, 1944. During these nine months the hurch gave nearly as much for various purposes as gave on its Home-Coming and Harvest Thanks Day, amely $8,722.94. This sum does not even include cal church support. Thus this little church of the olling wheat plains of Washington had given over 17,500 by September 25 for the work of God's ingdom.

Stress Tithing

The pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Edmund J. Iiller, believe firmly in tithing and stress it. Their elief in stewardship is expressed as follows, "We be- eve that stewardship begins with the yielding life. nly as we lay our highest hopes, our brightest talents, ır material goods, and our very hearts at the feet of sus can we serve Him acceptably." Rev. and Mrs. iller have always taken that part which belongs to od from their pay check first. They do not believe expecting something of their members that they are t willing to do themselves.

The practice of tithing first took extensive hold nong the young people. On September 24. one of em gave $50.00 Now tithing is the accepted stand- d for the church. One of the members is giving 15 r cent of his income this year. The Sunday before e thankoffering Rev. Miller preached a strong ser- on on tithing.

Record Giving

This little church for the past few years has had e highest per member giving record in the General nference, and will undoubtedly hold it again in 44. It is true that the farmers of this church have joyed great prosperity through extensive wheat farm- ; accompanied by good yields and prices. However, ir stewardship over these material blessings is ique and remarkable, for not all of our church mem- rs when overwhelmed by material prosperity are sensitive to their stewardship obligations. The Menno Church at Lind, Washington, is conscious of Bible teachings on stewardship.—rw.

Editorials

LEST WE FORGET

It is strange how statesmen often succeed in making other nations appear as angels of light or as agents of the devil. Once Soviet Russia was roundly denounced. Now it is being given the halo light. In face of this it is enlightening to read what Mr. Churchill had to say about Soviet Russia some years back. We quote his words as given in Human Events.

"A foul combination of criminality and animalism."

"Of all the tyrannies in history the Bolshevik is the worst, the most destructive, the most degrading."

As recently as January 20, 1940, Churchill, after paying eloquent tribute to the heroism of Finland, continued:

"Everyone can see how communism rots the soul of a nation, how it makes it abject and hungry in peace, and proves it base and abominable in war."

Rather than turning to statesmen, the Christian had better turn to Christ for truth.—rw.

FLAGS IN THE CHURCH

Ministers outside of our denomination are not all agreed as to having a flag in the house of worship. According to the Christian Century, an Evangelical Lutheran minister from Ohio made this statement: "I wish to state that during my thirty-nine years of ministry I have never displayed a flag of any kind in the place of worship. If the Kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom of universal scope and appeal, and the Lord whom we worship is 'no respecter of persons,' then it seems to me that an emblem which is of a separatistic, divisive and exclusive nature, and is even used to rally forces for mortal combat, can hardly be dedicated to the glory of him who 'so loved the world that he gave his only-begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' " —rw

HOW PRECIOUS A FREEDOM

A survey made of church-going before the war does not indicate a great appreciation for the privilege of corporate worship. According to this report 57 out of every 100 people step into the house of God only for a funeral or a wedding. Another 30 of the same 100 come only occasionally for such events as Christmas and Easter. Add 57 and 30 and you account for 87 out of every 100 people. The remaining 13 make up the ministers, the janitors, the Sunday School teachers, and those who come every time they can.

Is it any wonder that in pre-war times there were reputed to be in our country four times more criminals than college students, four times more law-breakers than school-teachers, more barmaids than college girls, that there was a murder every forty minutes, a robbery every ten minutes, and a burglary every two minutes, that one out of six marriages ended in divorce, and that over 70,000,000 Americans went to the movies every week?

A recent report that we heard put the number of church-goers at an even lower percentage. Juvenile delinquency and crime are on the rampage. How precious is the freedom to worship?—rw.

A DEEPER SPIRITUALITY

"A deeper spirituality" is one of those terms that means a lot to most Christians but is seldom defined very specifically and concretely by anyone. Can't we define it more clearly or haven't we tried? Surely, the aim of a "deeper spirituality" is so important that we should be very clear about what we are longing for. Attempts to define it should lead us to focus on the things which are truly important in the sight of God. May we pose the question, "What is deep spirituality?"—rw.

An Outline of Mennonite History

Cornelius Krahn

Even today we find that the late C. H. Wedel has many loyal pupils whose lives were molded through his influence as a Christian, teacher and minister. Frequently they mention him as a teacher of Mennonite history. He was a pioneer in this field of endeavor among the Mennonites from Russia. Probably he can be justly called the first American Mennonite historian. There were others who had written occasionally, even before him, but Wedel's heart, soul, and mind were in this work. His four volumes in Mennonite history and contributions in the Bethel College Monatsblatter testify to this end. Therefore it seems surprising that none of his pupils continued the work of Wedel as a life's calling. This is perhaps merely a sign that we have not outgrown the pioneer stage where this is not considered to be an imperative need. Meanwhile we should not overlook contributions which have been and are being made in spite of this situation.

We would like to call attention to An Outline o Mennonite History by J. John Friesen, Butterfield Minnesota, published by the Herald Publishing Company, North Newton, Kansas (114 pages, price 5 cents each). As John Wenger, Goshen, Indiana, i his Glimpses of Mennonite History places his mai emphasis on Mennonites of Swiss or Pennsylvani German background (Old Mennonites, Amish, etc.) so Friesen deals especially with those of Dutch o German-Russian extraction. That is, each of then restricts his presentation more or less to his ow group.

In general, it can be said that the book contain more information and description than one would expect from so small a volume. The contents include chapters on the Mennonites, Personality and Princ ple, Contributions to World Life, The Melting Po and What Lies Ahead. In an extensive supplemen one finds interesting pictures of life in Russia, a description of community life in Russia, and discussio on names, cultural life, etc. of the Mennonites i general. The significance of this book is that it written to fill a need for a brief outline. Howeve it is not certain that the outline and arrangement the material may not be a drawback in meeting th need. The observations of the author are in mar respects original and, as the reviewer thinks, in gener correct. The illustrations and diagrams are definite helpful. What the book may lack in an extensi study of sources is counter balanced by the long e perience, sincerity, and deep conviction of the autho The Mennonites of Swiss origin (Amish, "Old" Me nonites, etc.) strongly emphasize "the simple way life" and "nonconformity" which traits are today most obscure among the Mennonites from Russi In some of his chapters, as The Melting Pot, T Simple Life, etc. Friesen presents a strong case f this almost forgotten typical Mennonite traditio oung and old will profit by reading this little book d study groups will find it a helpful guide.

C.P.S. Camp No. 55

Today 143 C.P.S. men find themselves located a-ong the forested peaks of Glacier National Park iving to keep this area from further destruction by e. As you would imagine, our work project is her fire fighting or fire hazard reduction. We try eliminate fire hazards by building and maintaining ck and foot trails to many otherwise inaccessible eas. This enables us to reach and control the num-ous fires which originate from lightning strikes. r work further necessitates the establishment of en side camps located throughout the park during e fire season.

During the summer months, off duty activities are gely of a recreational nature. Since our camp is ated in Glacier National Park, our spare time is ed largely in taking frequent hikes through the rk rather than in organized athletics as is custom- in the eastern camps. Our hikes over trails take to lakes which abound with fish, huge glaciers, and as covered with large timber. These sections are rally infested with wild life of all kinds.

fter the fire season and during the winter months, Educational Program becomes the center of camp ivities. Lecturers and speakers from our churches colleges and the Park Service compose one phase the Educational Program. Such courses as Rudi-nts of Music, Typing, Rural Community Life, and le Studies are conducted by fellow campers to plete the program.

Ve consider the religious activities of utmost im-tance in our camp life. The Religious Life Com-tee assumes responsibility for: Sunday Evening etings, Wednesday evening Prayer Meeting, and vides leaders and choristers for any special ser-s with visiting speakers. Sunday-school and morn- devotions are in charge of the Sunday-school erintendents. The Director secures speakers for morning worship service. Local ministers fill the it the first and third Sunday of each month. attempt is made to schedule guest ministers ughout the remainder of the month.

any of us have come to the conclusion after sev- years of camp experiences that enjoyment of p life depends pretty largely on our attitude. Ex-ences which contribute to our growth depend ely on the proper use of the opportunities which e our way.

The Scope of the La Plata Project

nonite Central Committee has here an even larger onsibility.

etween these five resettlement projects is an in-ssible, mountainous region of about seven square s which is populated by poor people living on unproductive land. The landowners are for the most part also poor and are unable to provide adequately for their people. The are few schools in this area, and these are concentrated near the resettlement projects. Illiteracy, even among the children of school age, is high. Here is, I feel, the area of need to which the Mennonite Central Committee can and should minister. As a matter of fact, a large per cent of cases come from this region.

It is difficult to estimate the population of this larger La Plata area and there is no reliable source of information. However, estimating from the 1940 census, the total area which we have undertaken to serve contains between twenty-five and thirty thousand people. Of course, these are not all entirely without medical service, because all of the surrounding towns have private doctors.

The facilities for reaching these people are good. From this large interior area they can come to the closest medical dispensaries, for free care. By helping to staff the health department's currently understaffed medical dispensaries, we can reach most of these twenty-five to thirty thousand people. From these dispensaries the majority of cases can be effectively handled. Diagnostic problems can be sent to the hospital at La Plata, where a diagnostic laboratory including X-ray has been set up, for more complete study. Surgical, medical, and complicated obstetrical cases can be taken there for expeditious treatment. We feel that the lack of available hospital beds and the lack of adequate laboratory facilities have been among the major deficiencies in the medical care of this area. For these reasons we feel that the Mennonite General Hospital, now being organized here, will have an effective field of usefulness.

As C.P.S. men it is unwise for us to carry on overt evangelistic activity. However, Christian service and the testimony of our everyday living have full opportunity to witness for our faith. Within this interior area there are no churches, and the need for a church has been brought to our attention by numerous people on numerous occasions. It would seem that the future offers even more challenging opportunities than the present.

A Visit to the Middle District Conference Churches

By H. E. Nunemaker

A few months ago it was my privilege as a representative of the Education Committee of the Middle District Conference to visit each of the churches in the Middle District. It was the purpose of the visit to meet with the Sunday School workers to emphasize the teaching program of the church as it is carried out in the Sunday School and its associated agencies such as the Daily Vacation Bible School and the week -day School of Religion. This brief report attempts to give, in condensed form, some information and impressions gained from the discussions. It is given in the hope that it may be suggestive and helpful in laying plans for our Sunday School work.

Perhaps the matter of prime importance in the Sunday School is the teacher. In some schools the securing of consecrated and prepared teachers is a problem and in most schools the training of the teachers is most difficult because of conflicting duties. The need for training was recognized in all our meetings but the difficulty seemed to be two-fold; (1) getting the teacher and the prospective teachers to see the need for it to the extent that they will be willing to set aside the necessary time and effort, (2) finding a time in which the group can meet. The varied occupations and interests of the teachers make demands on their time which often cannot be easily adjusted. This has, however, been solved satisfactorily by some of our larger schools and could doubtless be met by others as well. The annual reports just received indicate that less than one-half of our schools had access to a training class last year. Some of these are planning one for the coming year. Valuable suggestions as to material for training courses will be found in the pamphlet, "Christian Leadership in the Church" by Rev. Forrest Musser, which was published by the Education Committee several years ago.

The Sunday School lesson helps are an important part of the equipment of the Sunday School. Because of the fact that we have had no helps of our own until recent years, our Sunday Schools have secured theirs from various and varied sources. However, at the present time almost all of our Middle District schools are using our helps in part. In a number of our meetings teachers expressed an earnest desire for a Mennonite Adult Teachers Quarterly.

Another vital factor in a successful Sunday School is the influence of the parental attitude in the home. This factor was brought up repeatedly. The attitude of the parents toward the Sunday School, toward preparation of the lesson and toward religious instruction in the home, is usually reflected in the children of the home. Parents have a teaching mission as well as do the teachers; but in the average American Christian home it is sadly neglected. Many parents feel they do not have the time or ability and consequently shift the entire task to the Sunday School which is unable to adequately meet it because of limited time and inadequately trained teachers. A number of helpful books are published to aid parents in the teaching of their children. Our publishing houses would be happy to recommend some. In this connection it should be remembered that the literature which comes into the home is a vital factor. If it is largely secular the children are likely to develop a secular attitude toward life and toward things. Good religious literature in the home will be a vital factor in the life of the children and a help to the Sunday School.

The alert superintendent and teachers of one of our schools put forth special effort to "follow up" the teaching—a most valuable effort. In this way much that has been taught which would otherwise be forgotten and lost by the pupil is saved for his spiritual well being. Teachers would do well to follow up their teaching.

There is a most commendable interest in our Sunday Schools in the Daily Vacation Bible School, and in many communities east of Chicago, Ill., in the Weekday School of Religion. Both of these efforts have great possibilities for the spiritual nurture and guidance of the youth of America, and both can be made vital aids to our Sunday Schools in this time of juvenile delinquency.

In the administration of our schools many problems arise. However, most of them can be solved if they are met with openmindedness, vision, prayer, concern for the spiritual needs of the pupils and above all, dedication to the Cause of Christ in which the Sunday School is to be a vital factor.

STRAY THOUGHTS

I paused at the verandah on which an elderly Bengali was finishing the eyes on a newly idol. He turned and peering over his bent glasses said, "I'm making a god."

"How many years have you been making gods?", I asked.

"O! many many years," was the reply.

"But haven't you ever thought of leaving off making gods and letting the true God make you?" I sat down and waited for his answer.

A few minutes and his work was done. He then answered slowly, "That wouldn't do for we wouldn't have anything to worship."

No man is so poor as he who has only the workmanship of his hands to worship. But it is only as man permits the true Creator to remake his life that he recognizes Him as worthy of all praise, honor and adoration.

The Rock

By Aganetha Fast

(Miss Aganetha Fast, one of our returned mission- es, has been travelling in the eastern states. She ent some time at Lake Winona, Indiana, at Man- to, and the various C.P.S. Camps. She has been ot very busy speaking at meetings and attending nferences so we are happy that she found time to te this article for our paper. Miss Fast's home at Mountain Lake.)

'It fell not, for it was founded upon the Rock" 'esus.

Above Niagara Falls a mass of water is hurling ards the mighty cataract. Swishing, whirling, re- tlessly it rushes on, to be thrust down a precipice 168 feet. The force of the torrent is terrific, over- elming in its might and power! Its force impresses as all-powerful in its terrible swiftness and mighty ves. But at the foot of the precipice they are ished up into billions and billions of tiny sprays the rock below, where it resembles a mighty lron, boiling and seething.

s one goes up stream and observes as the mighty rent approaches the falls with baffling, powerful tness, one is impressed to see a seething pot of osing, objecting, fighting waves rising up in con- nation and horror as to the impending danger of g hurled down the mighty cataract to be smashed ear the precipice one observes three big rolls of es, like a resisting wall, putting up one more en- tic fight to push the rushing water back up stream hough in warning. Too late! They have gone far! Powerless some, headless and heedless others, waves rush toward their destruction.

ddenly we halt—can we trust our eyes? Right he very midst of this seething, roaring, rushing ent there stands a tiny tree—undaunted, fearless, ght, immovable! Peaceful in the midst of all angry waves all around it, threatening its utter uction. Peace, perfect peace—for it was embedded rock! What a picture, what a lesson, as it holds the marvels of courage and faith! To be sure, lower branches are weatherbeaten, wave-lashed. s roots the waves wash over the rocks relentlessly, lessly, but it stands firm!

nother marvel of it is—how came it to grow up as big a little tree as it is? Surely, once upon ne it was a tiny seed. Somehow the seed was ped. Whether by a wind or by a bird, we do know, but it was dropped in the CLEFT of a K. Here it sprouted, took root—just a color- sprout emerged while wave after wave cruelly ed over it. But it rose above the angry waves as the sunlight kissed its tender skin, it took and the leaves and branches grew. In spite hing waves it did not yield, but straight upward ponded to the light and warmth of the sun.

What a lesson for a storm-tossed individual! What a lesson for a time like this! Founded upon the Rock; hidden in the cleft of the rock—it fell not! Its face upturned to the sun, it grew and stood,—and withstood.

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

Onward one wanders as one passes over to Goat Island. The mighty stream twines in and out; roaring, treacherous, threatening, and here we behold some more miracles of God and nature. Here in the midst of the stream, farther up, we see larger and smaller rocks with larger and smaller clusters of trees. Regular little islets, just covered with trees and bushes of the most luxuriant green foliage; birds singing and twittering joyfully. Such a peace these scenes breathe, set in the midst of all the danger round about!

What a picture of Christ and His Church in a time like this! -"The church's one foundation is Jesus Christ her Lord."....."Elect from every nation". . . . " One holy Name she blesses, Partakes one holy food, and to one hope she presses, with every grace endued."

As one follows along a path, observing with awe and deep emotions the roaring angry waves rushing so heedlessly to destruction, one is impressed with the fact that there's where humanity now stands in this terrible world conflict and then observing the place of the church in the midst of this conflict, and its message to the world, one's eyes are led to look to the left - and wonder of wonders - one looks into a most peaceful, most tranquil forest. Such a calm, such security and steadfastness breathes out of this forest of trees, stately and towering, with its green grass and singing birds - GOD! - The consummation!

"The Church's (and individuals') one Foundation Is Jesus Christ her Lord:
She is her new creation
By water and the word....
'Mid toil and tribulation
And tumult of her war,
She waits the consummation
Of peace for evermore.
Till with the vision glorious,
Her longing eyes are blest.
And the great church victorious
Shall be the church at rest."

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

OCTOBER 15-"...and they feared to ask Him of that saying." Luke 9:45.

How often we prefer to give the impression that we know all about a subject rather than admit our ignorance by further inquiry! The disciples here feared to ask the Master the meaning of "that saying" lest further understanding of the truth make them uncomfortable. Likewise, we find ourselves stopping our ears to words of truth and become resentful toward those who prophetically point the way. We prefer to have our conscience salved rather than corrected. The true Christian Spirit seeks truth even though it be painful.-Jacob Goering

OCTOBER 16- "And daily in the temple and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Christ." Acts 5:42. This fervor produces enthusiasm in service. The early apostles were filled with divine enthusiasm. No obstacle was too great, no threat too terrifying to quench this undying zeal which they possessed. Their chief aim was to make known to the world that Jesus Christ is the Divine Remedy for man's need. They were not concerned as to what the world wanted, but rather, what the world needed. The same cold world exists today as the one which crucified the Christ. The gospel message has not gained in its popularity, but it must be proclaimed. --- John Graber

OCTOBER 17—"In everything give thanks for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." I Thess. 5:18

Paul, how can I give thanks in everything? Do you mean to say that I should give thanks when friends turn against me, when my earthly possessions fade away, when death lays its cold hands on one of my loved ones, or when I am tempted and tried? Yes, Paul says in everything. For the very reason "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Do you really love the Lord, then I can give thanks in everything, for God will only let that come into my life by his will or permission that is for my best. --- Albert Ewert

OCTOBER 18—"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God," Matt. 5:8

This verse may be thought of as one of the great themes of Jesus' life. He emphasizes it many times. The Pharisees were rebuked for keeping the outside of the cup clean by following their ceremonies and traditions to the letter, but the inside of the cup, the mind and the heart, was untouched. Jesus does not imply that the outside phases of our religious life should be ugly or unclean. He does reveal that it is the purity within that is basic and most important. Like the large icebergs, nine-tenths of man's life lies beneath the surface within the inner consciousness which we call the "heart". The pure in heart shall see God. The impure do not have the inner consciousness which makes it possible for man to be sure of God's nearness. --- Forrest Musser

OCTOBER 19 -- "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles doctrine." Acts 2:42a.

The Holy Spirit when given the right of way in the life, produces a lasting work---half-heartedness is not the fruit of the Holy Spirit, but steadfastness is! The Holy Spirit further produces, not nibblers on the Word but feeders on the Word. The Spirit controlled Christian is one who is hungry for the truths of God's Word, and thus does not limit his feedings to Sundays alone, but daily feasts upon the bread of life. And feasting leads to fellowship, and fellowship leads to communion, and communion leads to prayer. Note Acts 2:42. ---- Wilbert A. Regier

OCTOBER 20 --- "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth where moth and rust consume, and where thieves break through and steal...." Matt. 6:30, R.V.

How easy it is to become overmuch concerned about wordly goods and physical well-being. In his teaching Jesus makes it clear that if one belongs to the heavenly realm he has no reason to be laying up treasures on earth. For if things are man's ultimate goal then character goes 'out the window. The Christian is warned against acquiring or ever against being anxious about these physical needs for it inevitably leads to confusion and compromise and no one can serve God and Mammon!—Jake Ens

OCTOBER 21 ---"Thou shalt love thy neighbor a thyself."

This is the second commndment. It is an out growth of the first. We love God because he is divin and infinitely better than we are. We love him be cause he first loved us... This love for God the manifests itself in love for our neighbor. He is c the same nature as we are; our hearts are alike our bodies are alike; we live in the same Christia society. Hath God not created us? (Mal. 2:10 Has not one Christ redeemed us? All the mor reason there is for loving him.—Verney Unruh

Public Relations

By Paul Albrecht

One of the perennial problems or at least an area f uncertainty to Civilian Public Service camps and nits is public relations. Our camps and units are et in many areas, rural and urban, throughout the ountry. Each setting, of course, is an individual ituation with its own aspects. Here is what some f us in the mental hospital unit at Howard, Rhode sland, eperienced in the public relations field.

Our contacts with the local communities have in eneral been quite favorable. It might interest you know that the small but densely populated state f Rhode Island is about 75 per cent Catholic. The redominant Protestant group seems to be the Bapsts, listing twenty-three churches in the city of Proidence and surrounding area. Then, of course, ere are the Methodists, Congregationalists, Presyterians, etc. It is with this group of Protestants at our main contact has been.

Last December four of us fellows took the usual urse of C. P. S. music lovers; we formed a male artet—nothing unusual about that. Just in case u are interested, we are Warren Letherman, oylestown, Pa.; Albert Buckwalter, Hesston, Kans.; Paul Goering, Moundridge, Kansas.; and Paul lbrecht, Newton, Kansas. We started like most oups, just for the joy of singing and to help out re in the services of the unit.

Through a friendly local minister, the chaplain the institution, and some other friends, we made few contacts with churches and were asked for ecial music. This grew in the following months til we were singing nearly every Sunday night d often during the week. We have sung at many ferent types of services including such as radio votional programs, a formal Lenten service, or a wntown revival led by Rev. Hayes, the "Texas clone."

We have felt this as a real opportunity for Christn witness and have been amazed at the way we ve been received. Our first common ground of tact was sacred music, and then we tried to build wider fellowship on the boarder base of mutual ristian experience and concern. We have found r fellow Christians here tolerant, sympathetic, and en truly interested in what we believe for more n reasons of curiosity. We have always rather isted that we be introduced as conscientious obtors and at least partial explanation of our work given.

et me cite one experience as an example: Upon hearing of our appearance in her Baptist church, the lady choir leader, a well-known voice teacher in the city with two sons in the service, called her pastor saying she would not be there to share in the program with C. O.'s. She came anyway, however, in order not to be disloyal to her choir. She heard us sing and met us. That week she went to the city library and read a book about Mennonites. We were in the church the following week again to complete the Lenten series. After the regular meeting the pastor invited all who wished, to meet in the rear of the church for some more music. We also gave short talks and answered many questions.

Paul Albrecht, son of Rev. and Mrs. Abraham Albrecht, Newton, Kansas

To our surprise the choir director got up and told the group what she had said to the pastor and how she had become interested enough to read about us. She said she regretted her opinions and heartily respected out stand. She has invited us to her studio, made invaluable contacts for us in the city, and furnishes us with music materials at her expense.

While this is not exactly a typical experience, it is not by any means an isolated one. We have been invited into homes on a social basis, homes where often the sons are in the armed forces. We have really welcomed these opportunities to witness for Christ and His teaching as we understand it.

Mission Activities Among Y. P. Groups

By Orlando Schmidt

At the last annual meeting of the Western District C.E. Convention one of its resolutions stated that our Chrisian Endeavors should raise at least $1,000 for mission work during the next year. Considering the actual membership of all our C.E.'s this amounts to only a small sum for each individual member. In most Young People's Groups the quota is raised mainly by offerings at regular meetings. Is this all that we as young people can do for the greatest project in the world, that of turning the human race to Christ?

In many churches missionary activity is left entirely to the women's organizations and some special offerings during the year. Isn't there something that a Y.P. organization can do? In order to have life in a Y.P. group, there must be something to work with, and there is nothing that presents a better opportunity than mission work.

Before such work can be engaged in satisfactorily there must be an interest created in the minds of Y.P. They must be presented with the need of "labourers in the "harvest field" throughout the world. After such a need has been realized a major part of the activities of a Y.P. group should consist of actual projects that stir up missionary zeal. Probably the next thing to do is to get acquainted with the actual activities of the mission work of our conference. This can be done through special studies and reports. In connection with this, there should be some correspondence with missionaries, requesting definite needs for prayer, and then when such letters are received, an entire prayer meeting could be centered around the work of one missionary or field. Then there should be actual projects to raise money. Such projects present great numbers of opportunities for get-togethers during the week, while working with missionary gardens, selling various articles, or other things. The need for stewardship should be created in the minds of all church members. Our mission board today has twenty candidates on its "waiting list," who are in preparation for foreign service. These will soon be ready to leave, but they cannot go unless the home workers realize the great need for stewardship, that God's purposes can be fulfilled. Several times a year the Y.P. could sponsor a special missionary meeting, at which a missionary could speak and an offering could be taken. But all such activity still is not enough. No one can become fully acquainted with mission work unless he participates in such service himself. In practically every community there is some opportunity for young people to serve in some respect. This might be in the form of giving programs, tract distribution, work in hospitals, or other things, depending on the situation or condition in each community.

But no work should be done without seeking God's will before acting. This can be accomplished only by constant prayer and a study of God's Word. If this is done, missionary work in a Y.P. group can become a well-rounded program of prayer, fellowship, and service.

A Meditation

Fear No Evil

God did not take up the three Hebrews out of the furnace of fire but he came down and walked with them in it. He did not remove Daniel from the den of lions; He sent his angels to close the mouths of the beasts. He did not answer the prayer of Paul to remove the thorn in the flesh, but He gave him a sufficiency of grace to sustain him. So it is with us. God may not remove the danger from us, but He will give us the strength and courage to face it, even if it might mean death to us. He will probably not destroy all the evil about us with one sweep of His hand, but He will give us power to overcome evil with good. He may not answer our prayers as we wished, but if we learn to pray as He prayed, "Thy Will be done," then we can be sure that our will becomes His will.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Rev. Forrest Musser, pastor of the Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio, conducted the meetings of the annual Christian Life Week at Bethel College, October 2 through 6. He spoke to the student body and faculty every morning during chapel and every evening at 8 o'clock. Preceding the evening messages students led in short worship services. A conseration and communion service climaxed the week.

—Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Wenger, missionaries in Montana, write the following which is an excerpt of a letter published in the YPCE, publication of the Aberdeen, Idaho, young people: "The days here at Busby are quite full. Almost every day we spend some time studying the Cheyenne language with Mr. and Mrs. Habegger. We help with Sunday School, two Sunday services, Thursday prayer meeting, and Religious Instruction Classes at the government boarding school. Every second Sunday there is a service at an outstation on the upper Rosebud River. There is plenty of physical work, too, to keep us from getting soft. This summer we put a new ceiling in the church and made other repairs.

As we learn more and more about this work we see again the truth of the Saviour's words, "Without Me ye can do nothing." We appreciate your interest and prayers."

—Having enjoyed the privilege of caring for the Fellowship garden, Beatrice young people will also have a part in preparing canned goods for shipment to C.P.S. camps. In the week Oct. 16-20 a committee, composed of William Hamm Jr., chairman, Howard Barnard, and Theodore Jantzen will be in charge of the packing and banding of the jar cartons. The Beatrice Collection Center in the basement of the First Mennonite Church wel-omes contributions from its members and those f its neighboring churches. The study of "How our Bible Grew Up" by Roy L. Smith will be aken up in the Fellowship Group of the First nd Second Mennonite churches at Beatrice, Neb.

–The Senior Christian Endeavor Society of the icher Emmanual Church, Noble, Iowa, had charge f the worship service Sunday evening September 4, for the C.P.S. Unit at the Mt. Pleasant State ospital.

A group from this society took part in the ashington County Youth Rally held September .

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society is making Scrap Books for the boys in service. Each unior writes a letter to send with the scrap ook.

-Zion Church, Donnellson, Iowa: On September), baptismal services were held in this church. leven young people and one adult were received to the fellowship of the church. An all day arvest Home Festival is being planned for Ocber 22. Rev. R. L. Hartzler, Bloomington, Illiis, has been secured as the speaker.

-Plans are being made to erect a Memorial at r General Conference Mission Station in India r the late Dr. P. R. Schroeder and daughter, uise, according to a letter received in Mounin Lake from the Orlando Waltner's. Here is excerpt "You may be interested to know about e plans for the Memorial for Father Schroeder d Sister Louise. Because of the war, essential aterials cannot be obtained but we have made ans for a Memorial Building for a doctor and rses' office, library and compounders room, close the present hospital."

FROM GERALD STUCKY'S SCRAP BOOK

TECHNICAL DIFFICULTIES

We didn't get out of Panama on Saturday for ne minor technical reason. Since I came in at vid rather than at Panama City, no one had mped my book giving me permission to leave country. They stamp one's book upon arrival Balboa but not at David. Well, when the time ne for me to leave, I had no permit, so Voth and I yed over an extra day—thus leaving Sunday. is has been absolutely the first trouble that we e had anywhere, and that isn't bad.

HE CITY OF MEDELLIN—AND LANGUAGE SCHOOL

esterday afternoon we visited the Bible Institute nd finca (farm). Only about seven students, but ood work. There are all kinds of mission stations n here—about 12 to 20 different groups are loed. About one-half of Columbia is occupied—but half contains approximately 75 per cent of the ple, or more. The parts unoccupied are largely es which are rather inaccessible for lack of transtation and are populated with Indians—of questionable savagry! But there still appears to be a lot of room here. Most of the most desirable places seem to be occupied, however. Thursday we shall go to Bogata by land. On the way we shall visit the CMA work in Armenia. They have a Bible Institute here. (there). There must be about 200 missionaries on the field in Columbia—and most of these came during the last ten years.

FROM MEDELLIN TO BOGATA BY STATION WAGON

The trip from Armenia to Bogata took about ten hours by car and train. Prentice, who is in charge of the Chr. Mis. Alliance work in Armenia, wired Dr. Seel here in Bogata that we were coming. We arrived here at about 9 p.m., just about ten minutes before the telegram! It had taken the telegram about 24 hours to come 90 miles. So Dr. Seel, hadn't known about our arrivel— but he was very, very gracious, took us in, and has been and is most gracious. Mr. Voth (I still call him that!) hasn't been feeling very well for almost a week, and today we have put him to bed with a three degree fever. Tomorrow we will get a doctor. I am afraid that he has malaria, and that isn't very good. I certainly hope that nothing serious will develop. My own health has been excellent, have been feeling fine, taking pills quit regularly, not eating too much so that I WON'T GET FAT, and trying to be careful. I guess my biggest sin is not taking siestas when I should.

THE CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY AND ALLIANCE

Aulden Coble came along with us from Medellin to Armenia. He works in and around Ibague. The trip started at about 4 a.m. and lasted till about 7 p.m., and most of it was mountain driving. Aulden got good and sick. I didn't—I eat vitamin pills! Here in Armenia we have been staying with the Christian Missionary Alliance people. They have here a large Bible Institute, and they are really doing a fine piece of work. Many of the missionaries here, in fact all of them, strangely enough, have either a Mennonite background, are Mennonites, or have been associated closely with them (except two). I was very much surprised at this—but pleased when I saw how fine a piece of work they have done here. Emmanuel Prentice is in charge here, and Mr. and Mrs. Menno Zook, and Mr. and Mrs. William Bowman are co-workers in this station. I have been impressed over and again so far how inter-related the whole evangelical personnel is in Latin America and in the Christian world for that matter. Almost everywhere I find someone that has common ties with me either because of you, or school connections, or denominational affiliations. Every one receives us in a most friendly fashion.

TYPHUS GETS VOTH

I suppose we will be here in Bogota for at least the next two weeks, so you might as well drop me a line here. I have written to PAA in Cali and have told them to send what mail there may be there over here td Bogota. The reason for all of this is, my partner is sick, and I am his nurse! I think I told you in my last letter that Voth was in bed with a fever. When the doctor came to examine him, he thought Voth had malaria. But today we had a blood test taken and it was discovered that he did not have malaria at all but instead has Typhus Fever. This isn't very good news because this isn't a very nice disease to have. We have had him under doctor's care since Sunday, and tomorrow we plan to get a special nurse for him—and to keep her at least until after the crisis. He really has been quite sick for three days now, and half sick for a week before.

TOO MANY FLEAS

I don't see just why he should be sick instead of me, for I understand that this disease comes through insect bite. So far on this trip it has been I that has been doing all of the scratching, and he seemingly went unscathed and unbitten. However, it seems that I have been having much better vitality than he (whether it be the vitamin pills or no—anyway I have been taking them and he has not). I have really been feeling fine most all of the way, while he has been kind of run down for about the last three weeks. In any case, traveling continually like this isn't very easy nor conducive to vitality, and that especially not for an older man. I am very grateful to the Lord for the health he has been giving me on this trip, for I really feel better than I have felt for some time. I do hope Mr. Voth gets well before too long, for this complicates things considerably. Of course, I want him to get well for his own sake too.

THE CITY OF BOGOTA

Bogota is a very nice city from what I have been able to see. One does get burdened, though, when one sees how heavy loads the women here carry. Many are little more than pack animals. I saw one today carry a basket of bananas an her back that must have weighed 75-100 pounds (i.e., the basket weighed that, not the back!). It was such a strain on her neck that she placed her hands in back of her head, to keep her head from breaking off, I suppose! The "cultured" men around here make me tired. They won't be seen carrying anything around (except notebooks, etc., which might indicate learning). If a man buys a shirt in a store, he'll go out to find a boy, and pay him five cents to carry it home for him, even though he himself is on the way.

FLOWERS ABOUND IN BOGOTA

The beauties of Bogota would be so much more beautiful if they could be shared with you. Some of the residential districts are foul smelling slums, but there are also some very beautiful sections. I have not yet "done" the complete city, but I have explored quite a bit of it. The parks too are beautiful for walks, meditation, etc. The evening walks would be superb. The flowers here bloom the year around —the mean temperature being about 75, and it remains that almost all of the time. Orchids are numerous here—in fact, one can buy a dozen of them for less than the one cost that was yours on our wedding day. For Mr. Voth I purchased a half dozen orchids and a dozen of roses on Monday. The total cost was about $1 (U.S.). I longed to buy some for you too, remembering how much you love flowers. Your day will come, however.

MY NEIGHBOR'S BIBLE

I am my neighbor's Bible,
He reads me when we meet;
Today he reads me in his home,
Tomorrow on the street.
He may be relative or friend,
Or slight acquaintance be;
He may not even know my name,
Yet he is reading me.

And pray, who is thy neighbor
Who reads me day by day,
To learn if I am living right
And walking as I pray?
Oh, he is with me always,
To criticize or blame;
So worldly-wise in his own eyes,
And "sinner" is his name.

Dear Christian friends and brothers,
If we could only know
How faithfully the world records
Just what we say and do;
Oh, we would write our record plain,
And come in time to see
Our worldly neighbor won to Christ
While reading you and me.

What Attitude Do We Take Toward Selective Training and Service

To the "House hold of faith":—

Greetings with words of Paul in I Cor. 16:19. For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries.

Because of a seeming delay in a previous outlined course to go out as a relief worker to China, another door of service was opened to me in contacting a number of our young people, from various Mennonite communities, who are now working in Training Schools, State Hospitals and Base Camps.

Some of these young people are far away from their home community, and because of limited time and means, find it difficult to visit home friends even during granted furloughs. Therefore they are inclined to feel that they are being misunderstood among their friends, because of the stand they have taken regarding selective training and service.

Civilian Public Service

Since returning from the field of China about three and a half years ago, my dear companion and I have contacted many of our Mennonite communities of the Central-Pacific and Southern Districts. Thus believing that I can feel the pulse of Mennonite communities in regard to selective training and service may I express the sentiment of these dear young people, who are now in this type of service; and by means of church publications voice this abroad.

First of all, as peace loving churches, we do thank God and appreciate a government that is willing to enter into negotiations, even in war time, which eads to an arrangement, by which our young people n draft age can answer the call to service, that is acceptable and is being appreciated by the people, and yet follows the dictates of their conscience.

Furthermore, our young people who are at present n this selective training and service, are there, not ecause of their own choice, but in obedience to the all of our government, and as a living testimony of ur heritage in Christ. This testimony, which the Mennonite people look upon as a doctrine of the Bible, is now being demonstrated to suffering human-y, but is not counted merely as a stepping stone, y means of which they pass over this present time, aiting for the day when all will return and again eacefully settle down in their home communities; ther it may prove as a type of education toward a fe calling for a large number who will be influenced, ecause of the present experience. The effect of this likely to be felt in many churches and communities years to come.

Notice I have used the term, young people, instead young men, because young women are standing by e side of their beloved husbands, working just as rd in the female wards of these mental hospitals and aining schools. This presents a unique picture how e church of Christ is in action during war time.

In closing, may God help us that we prayerfully -operate with the young people, which will help em in discerning the Lord's will, and be ready to swer the call even for post war service.

Prayerfully your co-worker,
P. P. Baltzer

Mennonite Bible Academy

The Mennonite Bible Academy is glad to report an increase in enrollment over that of last year. We have 32 boys and 32 girls enrolled as full-time students, and three others taking some work with the Academy. This growth called for larger quarters for the school, which have been found in the building formerly used as the dining hall of Bethel College. The building vacated will be used solely as a dormitory.

To commemorate the occasion of opening the present building for school work, the Academy will give a program in the College Chapel on Friday, October 13, at 8:00 o'clock in the evening. Parents of the students and friends of the school are invited.

Stop and Consider

By H. D. Burkholder

This is an age of speed. In highway terminology, we have put life in high gear, stepped on the accelerator, and disregarded all warnings. Let us give ear to God's message before we crash. Let us STOP and CONSIDER GOD'S WORD.

The Psalmist, realizing its importance, resolved to do this when he said, "I will stop and consider thy testimonies" (119:95).

Most of us take time to consider the newspaper, magazine, and radio, but few of us take time to consider the Word of God. The Bible is God's revelation to man. It is inspired by the Holy Spirit in a unique sense, thus distinguishing it from all other books (II Tim. 3:16, 17). Such a message deserves consideration.

The Bible has had an important place in the lives of leading Americans, including presidents, congressmen, scientists, and philosophers. It has a message for every stratum of life.

Today, the battle rages between the "word of man" and the "Word of God." Man has made and broken treaties at will. So much so, that we are losing confidence in his word. On the other hand, we have the promise that "The Word of the Lord endureth forever" (I Pet. 1:25). Also, "Forever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven" Ps. 119:89). Beloved! Let us place complete trust in its integrity.

The scriptures also need our consideration since they make us "wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (II Tim. 3:15). They reveal our sinfulness (Psa. 51:5; Rom. 3:23) and offer the remedy (Rom. 6:23; John 1:12, 13).

STOP and CONSIDER this neglected treasure. It has a living message for every need. When in sorrow turn to the Bible. When in suffering turn to the Bible. Whoever you are and whatever your need, solemnly resolve with the Psalmist, and say, "I will STOP and CONSIDER thy testimonies" (119:95).

A Meditation

By Erland Waltner

"In passing judgment on your neighbors you condemn yourself; for you who pass judgment commit the same misdeeds." Rom. 2:1b (Weymouth)

Jesus said, "Judge not that ye be not judged." Paul confirmed this principle when he said, "For wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself."

The word "judge" as used in the Scripture is often misunderstood. When Jesus said, "Judge not," surely He did not mean that we were never to discriminate between right and wrong. In fact, He said at another time, "Judge righteous judgment." What Jesus meant is that we must not assume the role of God as a judge to render final verdicts of condemnation concerning those who have sinned. To consign a man to hell is God's business, not ours. For us to "judge" is to usurp the place of God. For this we are utterly unqualified for only God seeth the heart of man and knows its true state.

The startling thing is that those who are in the practice of condemning others are often guilty themselves. That was the case when self-righteous Jews condemned the Gentiles in Paul's day. That is still the case in our day. Have you ever noticed that those who condemn others of pride often have a great measure of pride in their own hearts? That those who condemn others of greed usually are not so unselfish as they pretend to be? That those who accuse others of lust are often guilty of an unclean mind themselves? By condemning others, we may condemn ourselves.

But even if we are not guilty of the particular sins we denounce in others, the sin of setting ourselves up as a judge is "the beam in our own eye" which keeps us from helping our brother remove the mote from his eye.

Let us condemn SINS—loudly, persistently, fearlessly, but let us not condemn SINNERS. That is God's business. —Mountain Lake Observer

CORRESPONDENCE

BETHEL COLLEGE MENNONITE CHURCH
North Newton, Kansas

October 2, 1944

Since the beginning of school the chapel is again well filled for our Sunday morning services. While the war and attendant forces have cut down the college enrollment to about 160, the academy, now in its second year helps to swell the total with its almost 70 students. The student bodies this year include two American Indians and three American-born Japanese.

October 1 was communion Sunday, "We welcome to the table of the Lord all those who love the Lord Jesus Christ and confess Him before men and are members of some evangelical church." I think the students quite generally respond to this invitation and partake of the Lord's Supper with us. This should and undoubtedly does help to strengthen the feeling of fellowship between us.

On the Friday preceding, the Brotherhood of the church sponsored a fellowship supper to which the whole church and also the students were invited. For the main course each one had the choice of either "Borscht" or chili with a variety of pies to choose from for dessert. The church social usually provided for the students in the fall had thus been made a Brotherhood project.

The main purpose, however, was to celebrate the completion of a previous project, viz., payment of the parsonage debt. Consequently the burning of the mortgage was perhaps the most outstanding event o the evening. While as a rule it certainly is best not t make any debts, the next best thing surely is to pay those that have been made. We are grateful to our heavenly Father that the church is now debt free.

The Educational Committee of our church has planned a School of Missions to be held on six consecutive Sunday evenings beginning October 22. Th American Indian is to be the subject of study, and there will be classes for all ages from first grades t adults. Some special feature has been planned fo each evening following the class period, such as th showing of slides from the Hopi Indian field, showin of Sioux Indian Relics, Indian Poetry, etc It is hope that interest in missions will be furthered by thes studies.

The last quarter of the year has begun, and wit the end of the war not yet in sight one feels constrai ed to exclaim with Jeremiah of old, "The harvest past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved but also to add Isaiah's prayer, "Oh that thou woulde rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down, th the mountains might flow down at thy presence."

Dear Mennonite Readers;

A year ago we were busy unpacking and establi ing ourselves in our home here in Kansas. Now we look back over the past year, we must say t the Lord has been wonderful in His blessings a grace toward us.

We have had a year of continuous blessing. So ma interesting meetings have been held and so ma festivities—some joyful, some solemn. In this clus of Mennonite Churches in and around Newton, th is always something to attend which is benefic uplifting and spiritual.

We are asked quite frequently just why we mo to Newton. The answer is this. Our mission in last church was fulfilled. We did not have, or at least we believed so, any opportunity to take over a church that could wholly support us. The double duty of being leader of a church and working for part of our living was getting a little too much for us. If then we were to withdraw from active service, we wished to make our home in a Mennonite Center—a place where we could partake of those things we had missed all these 35 years of service in isolated places. Every time one of our church papers came we read what had been taking place in the large Mennonite Centers. At the same time we had to look for a place where we could find suitable work to occupy our time.

Newton looked like such a place, and we have not een disappointed. Not only have we received all hese blessings, but the dear Lord has, in His grace, iven us the opportunity to help out in filling empty ulpits, substituting as S.S. teachers, and even leading he weekly prayer and Bible study meetings. Then, oo, the dear brethren have met us in a royal way, ave us a warm welcome and a continued spiritual nd social fellowship.

We are well and hearty, have withstood the heat f the summer, and are quite at home by now.

Wishing all our acquaintances, friends and relatives rich measure of blessing we are your servants, waitg and looking forward to the Lord's return.

RELIEF NOTES

ssignment of Middle East Workers

The most recent information from the Middle East dicates that several of the Mennonites workers, ter a period of orientation in an UNRRA traing camp, have been assigned to relief work in refue camps. Samuel Yoder is now at the El Shatt mp where Delvin Kirchhofer and Marie Fast are so working. Nancy Hernley have been assigned to e Tolumbat camp where Dr. G. Richard Yoder is rving. Mary Emma Showalter has not received r assignment as yet.

Far East Workers Finally Granted Permits

After a long period of waiting, the India residence rmits and passports for Lawrence Burkholder, ayton Beyler, and R. C. Kauffman have finally en obtained. They are hoping to secure passage, o in the very near future. While these workers scheduled for China relief service they will be ayed to the India field until the way opens for tering China.

RELIEF BRIEFS

llen Harder, R.N., arrived safely in London acding to a cable received September 24.

rs. M. C. Lehman is spending a number of weeks the Newton Clothing center helping to organize get things under way. She is also planning to nd some time in Manitoba and Ontario before rning to Akron.

The Montreal meeting of the UNRRA Council decided to bring relief to Italy to the extent of $50,000,000. Originally this Council had decided to refrain from relief activities in enemy territory. This organization expects to be able to enter the Balkans shortly on a relief mission.

C.P.S. Christian Workers' Schools Planned

Two special schools in Bible and Christian Service will be sponsored in Mennonite camps throughout the coming winter and spring. These schools will be located at the Clearspring Unit of the Hagerstown Camp, and at the Harrisburg State Hospital Unit. They will provide instruction for approximately thirty-five men in addition to the men already located at the units.

Both schools have been designed to meet the growing interest among CPS men for preparation for more effective Christian service. Men attending the schools will devote a considerable portion of their off-project time to the study of the Bible, Church history, and methods of practical Christian work. However, the entire life of the units, particularly the work project, will be considered the laboratory part of the training.

Denominational Groups in C. P. S.

The number of men in CPS under the direction of all agencies as of August 15, 1944, was 7,368. A partial breakdown by denominational groups as of July 1, 1944, was as follows:

Mennonite	2,730
Brethren	961
Methodist	618
Friends	614
Jehovah's Witnesses	240
Congregational Christian	164
Presbyterian U. S. A.	150
Baptist, Northern	132
Church of Christ	103

JOTTINGS

—The ministers of the Moundridge, Kansas, community have prepared an excellent service of worship for use at the end of the war in Europe. Lack of space prevents us from printing it here, but anyone (ministers or laymen) interested in having a copy may write to Rev. W. F. Unruh, Moundridge, Kansas.

—Wayland Church, Wayland, Iowa, had baptismal and communion services on Sunday, October 1. Eight young people were received into the fellowship of the church. This church, which was omitted from the list of churches that issues weekly bulletins, also issues them. Rev. E. S. Mullett is the pastor.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota; A harvest festival service was held Sunday, October 1. The speakers were Rev. J. M. Franz, Salem, Oregon, and Rev. H. J. Brown, North Newton, Kansas. Rev. Brown will serve the church while the pastor, Rev. Erland Waltner, is visiting camps and churches in connection with the Bible Institute and Visitation Program.

—Dr. D. V. Wiebe, who spent several months in China as a relief worker under the Friends Service Committee, brought the evening address at the First Church, Reedley, California, October 1.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kauffman received the following telegram from their son, Ralph, who is on his way to India for relief work. "Leaving for India October 7, by direct route."

—Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, president of Bethel College, held meetings at the Eicher Emmanuel Church, near Noble, Iowa, the week of September 17, instead of at the Wayland Church as was previously announced.

—First Church, Hutchinson, Kansas: Evangelistic meetings will begin in this church October 23, and continue through October 29. Rev. D. J. Unruh the new pastor at Newton, will be the speaker.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

West Swamp—On Wednesday afternoon September 13, a large number of members from the "Ladies Aid" and "Young Women's Missionary Society" gathered at the Great Swamp Grange kitchen and canned 76 quarts of peaches. These will be divided between the Home for the Aged and C.P.S. On Thursday September 21 they met again and canned 43 quarts of corn to be used for the same purpose. Arthur Keiser, a member of this church and a senior at Bluffton College, delivered the message on Sunday morning September 3. The message was on "The Second Coming of Christ." At a special business meeting on September 14, it was decided to buy the pastor's present home at 724 Juniper street, as a parsonage because it was for sale at this time.

—Correspondent

First, Phila.—The Church conducted services at the Home for the Aged, Sunday afternoon, September 17th. Mrs. Mary Hauck, a member of the church and a guest at the Home for the Aged for several years, celebrated her 89th birthday, September 9. Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf and Miss Catherine Niswander supplied the pulpit August 27 and September 3 respectively while the Pastor and his wife were on their vacation.

East Swamp—Thank God for an unusual birthday present! Mr. J. Walter Landis received a fine present on his birthday since his hip snapped back into place on that occasion. We hope he will soon be normal again. Brother Landis is a member of the Board of Managers of the Home and the generous hearted man that donated the land on which Men-O-Lan is located for the last several years. The Pastor, the Rev. Harold D. Burkholder, enrolled at the Reformed Episcopal Seminary, Philadelphia, for his senior year on Thursday, Sept. 21.

Second Church, Phila.—The pastor, the Rev. Walter Dick, enrolled as a student at the Reformed Episcopal Seminary on the opening day, Thursday, September 21.

Fairfield—A special feature of the Friendly Guild which met at the home of Mrs. Luella M. Arnold, Wednesday, September 27, was a soap shower and collection of used clothing for the M.C.C. clothing drive. The evening program centered about the history and work of the Mennonite Central Committee.

Eden, Schwenksville—A very delightful reception was given to the pastor and his wife, Friday evening, September 7, in the Sunday School room. After an appropriate program was rendered, the newly weds were presented with a dinner set of Syracuse China, and a $100.00 bill. Both were gifts of the congregation. The Harvest Home offering amounted to $473.59 of which amount $335.00 was for missions. Dr. John Klaassen, professor of Art at Bluffton College was a guest at the morning service one Sunday during August.

Twenty teams, consisting of two people, will canvas the community surrounding the East Swamp Mennonite Church. Christian literature will be distributed and non-church goers will be invited to attend services. Cooperating members are encouraged to do personal work whenever possible.

Serving in a Mental Hospital Woman's Unit

By Bertha Fast

(The author was a member of the Mennonite oman's summer service unit at Howard, Rhode land. This unit and the one at Ypsilanti, Michi- in were composed of young women who volunte- ed to serve in mental hospitals throughout the mmer months.—Editor)

Upon entering the Woman's Dormitory at the ospital for Mental Diseases at Howard, Rhode land, I was greeted by a pattern in the floor which s now become familiar. The pattern consists of e picture of an anchor beneath the word Iope" is inscribed. Immediately there came to y mind the verse of scripture found in Hebrews 19 "Which hope we have as an anchor of the ul, both sure and steadfast." I wondered then the word "Hope" would characterize my work th the mental patients, my classes in relief train- g, my association with the other members of the it, and my responsibilities for going abroad soon begin relief work.

For some time I felt far from "sure and stead- st" in my position as an attendant on a ward for entally deficient women. The first week, in walk- g through the corridor scattered with women, accusing, babbling, clutching bundles, and making innumerable gestures, I bravely grasped the keys in the pocket of my blue uniform, which identified me as the attendant, and prayed that I would not be assaulted before I had turned the key on the other side of the door.

Th first time I saw Dorothy Smith beat her head against the wall, I hastily reported the incident to the head attendant. When Nora Sullivan accused me, in angry tones, of running away with her husband and threatened to beat me, I was at a complete loss as to what to say or do. As in any other work, newly attempted, it takes time to become adjusted. Before feeling relatively "sure" I had to learn to know our patients, their characteristic of behavior, and methods of handling circumstances that might arise.

Duties of an Attendant

In our position as assistant attendants, we perform many duties—some pleasant and interesting and others not so desirable. We supervise the cleaning of the wards, often having to wield the wet floor mop ourselves if the patient suddenly refuses to finish his task. We also assist in the making of beds. If I have learned to do a fairly good job, I give all the credit to Annie Hale, a patient, who is an expert at bed making. Then there is always some untidy patient who has to be put under the shower and dressed in a clean blue print labeled L-3. On some wards, many of the women are not capable of combing their hair, so we struggle with snarled, long, blond hair or stubborn kinky black wool. Toe nails and finger nails need constant cutting.

MENNONITE WOMEN ATTENDANTS SERVING FOOD

Here at Howard, quite a bit of attention is given to patients in allowing them to encounter real life situations. We have supervised small groups in attending ball games, music programs, and Sunday afternoon hymn sings. The patients' reactions are of constant interest to us. We realize that none of us are expert psychiatrists in dealing with these mentally sick people. Still we feel that we have perhaps given some comfort in allowing patients to tell their troubles, a bit of pleasure in singing with them, an inner happiness in talking to someone about the God who is Father of all.

Classes in Relief Training

Our classes in relief training, based on the book International Relief in Action by Dr. Hertha Kraus, have been conducted on the basis of class discussion and committee work. In this manner each individual has been stimulated to think through the various problems himself. Our instructor, Edna Ramseyer, has given the class a deeper insight into relief work in practice through the wealth of her own experience in France.

Various doctors from the hospital, some of whom are nationally known, have given us lectures on "Mental Hygiene and Psychiatry." The case studies representing typical cases of schizophrenia, paranoia, mental deficiency, and other classes of mental diseases were naturally received with tremendous interest by the group. On several occasions patients were brought to present a type study.

These studies not only enlightened us about our individual patients, but also gave us a better understanding of the problem of mental diseases which must be faced by society.

Fellowship of the Group

One of the most valuable experiences of the summer, for me, are the friendships I have established and the rich Christian fellowship which I have enjoyed so thoroughly. The daily devotional periods for the girls were a source of inspiration, encouragement, and challenge. We experienced again and again how in sharing our thoughts and our desires we could better understand each other and feel the united effort in our service here.

We had church services two evenings a week. Here too, we received spiritual food for our daily living. Interesting features of these services were guest speakers, special musical numbers, and periods of discussion.

In spite of our full schedule of work, classes and church, we did have time for recreational activties. We attended ball games played by the C.P.S. boys, went for walks through the surrounding, beautiful wooded country, and organized some recreation of our own. Ping pong and tennis tournaments were held. Several went on bicycle tours. The entire women's unit planned worthwhile and interesting excursions on their days off. We went swimming in the bay, went to Plymouth, saw Providence with the lovely William Rogers' Park, Boston with its culture and points of historical significance, and quaint Cape Cod with its picturesque Cape Cod houses, fishing villages, lighthouses, and famous sand dunes. We will regret leaving New England which has given us so much beauty and pleasure.

The coming together of twenty-five girls from many states, from various branches of the Mennonite Church and a few other Protestant denominations, could happen only during an unusual time. The war with its wide spread chaos and destruction is such a time. This merging of different church and home backgrounds and of various personalities in one common cause, must necessarily be of benefit to the future of our program for relief. We have felt so definitely the united service interest in feeding the hungry and clothing the naked by all of those representing their church communities.

As we look forward to ministering toward refugees in the countries across the sea, we know that this summer's play, work, and worship aided us in establishing the "hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast."

New York Mennonites to Be Visited

The Board of Home Missions of the General Conference, being deeply concerned about the spiritual well-being of the Mennonites that are in New York for a shorter or longer period, is anxious to be of service to all who are in the Greater New York area. The Board at its Annual Meeting took action to give support to the Mennonite Fellowship that was started about two years ago.

In order to be able to contact the individuals and the homes of Mennonites and to invite all to the Fellowships and in this manner to help them to learn to know each other and to be drawn together in Christian Fellowship, the Board has engaged Mr. Paul F. Barkman, a student in Biblical Seminary, 235 E. 49th St., New York, 17, N. Y. for part time service to work up the Mennonite Fellowship in New York. In view of the fact that Mennonites from all branches are represented on the program of speakers, a most cordial welcome is extended to all to come to the Fellowship Meetings.

Yours in Christ,
A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.
Board of Home Missions

If you know of any Mennonites who live in or near New York City, please send me their name and address so that we can visit them and invite them to join our fellowship.

EDITORIAL

Bible Institute and Visitation Program

It seems to us that the Bible Institute and Visita-on Program is one of the most significant programs irried out by our Conference for some time. With ie beginning of November it will enter its second hase, in which the men engaged in it will visit the iurches of our conference.

What It Is

Under this program every C.P.S. camp, hospital, id farm unit and every church is to be visited by ie of thirteen competent pastors and teachers. An stitute of thorough Bible teaching is to be conducted r a week at each C.P.S. camp, for a day or two the smaller units, and during two services in each the churches. However, the program includes ore than presentation of messages. It is also a sit; it is being conducted for personal and group unselling and mutual sharing of experiences. The ogram is in a way a "retreat" brought to where e retreaters are. It is an opportunity for a very gnificant spiritual experience.

The Purpose for It

In an early statement A. J. Neuenschwander, hairman of the Program, gave the background and irpose as: 1. To bring a message to our people C.P.S. and our home churches that is central and isic to the future mission of our General Conference oup. 2. To emphasize the Biblical basis for faith d work. 3. To help lay the basis for a good post-ir adjustment between the home church and those io have been in C.P.S. 4. Now during the time war the need is so evident that we should begin pattern of education which local groups might velop further and serve as a channel for other major iphases."

How Far Along?

This program began with a retreat held for the rkers in Chicago on October 3-4. The visits to e C.P.S. camps and units began October 5 and ll come to an end around the beginning of Novem-r. The churches will then be visited. In a few tances churches will be visited before that time. ie various workers will contact the pastors of the me church—if they have not already done so—d arrange for the time of their visit.

Unique Opportunities

This program furnishes an opportunity to all men our conference who are in C.P.S. camps and its to talk matters over with a sympathetic, ex-rienced pastor or teacher. It affords the visiting rkers an unusual opportunity to get close to C.P.S. nking and feeling. It gives members of the home irches an opportunity for intensive Bible study on ch subjects as the "Church" and the "Power and rk of the Holy Spirit," of visiting with a speaker from another section of the Conference, and of securing a refined and broader picture of the mission which our churches should fulfill.

What Can We Do For It?

We can: 1. Inform ourselves about the program. See Mennonites of July 25, August 15, September 5, October 3, and coming issues. 2. Pray for the program. 3. Study Acts 1-10 and bring our Bibles to the meetings. 4. Get others to make the most of the opportunity. A letter to the son in C.P.S. camp or unit may encourage him to talk matters over with the visiting worker. 5. Let the Holy Spirit have His way.

Peace Time Conscription

Continuation of Conscription for Military Training is becoming an imminent issue again. It had been dormant for several months. The present prospects point to an early attempt to force such a bill through Congress before Christmas.

The representatives of the Peace Churches have followed closely the developments, and have made plans for making their convictions known at the proper time and place. It is not our purpose to attempt any opposition in the political sense. We believe that is not the function of the true follower of Christ. However, where moral and spiritual values are involved, it is our responsibility to sound a clarion note, whether it be to men of high or low estate.

One of the weapons of our defense against such encroachments has perhaps not been as much used as it should have been. And that is the weapon of prayer. In our own efforts we could not hope to stem the tide. But the power of God is unlimited. If it is His will we can continue to have religious liberty in America.

But God moves in the affairs of men by means of the prayers of His people. It is our conviction that the Peace Churches should unite in earnest supplication to our Heavenly Father, that in His wisdom He may thwart the evil designs being foisted upon our Nation. True Christians everywhere—let us pray!

"There is a Chinese fable about a man who, in order to make his garden produce faster, went over and pulled his plants a little farther through the ground. He was greatly rejoicing in his foresight, only to find that his plants were dead. It takes time to be holy and we cannot do it on toadstool principles." We are called upon to be faithful stewards of His not only in a material way but also in the giving of borrowed time. It is only as we spend much time alone with God our Father, and in His Word, that we will come face to face with the vital, important subject that is before us, namely: "Our Need of Being Filled with the Spirit."

Stray Thoughts

It was the stuffed calf the man was carrying through the streets of Calcutta that arrested my attention. With a rope for a handle, the man carried it like an attache case. He stopped in front of a house and set the mis-shapen, horrible looking dead thing before the buffalo cow he was leading. The buffalo was plainly contented as she licked the calf and the man was highly pleased as he hurriedly milked the buffalo.

I walked away and thought of the cow giving milk —her best possible gift—to a thing that was dead and useless. Must I confess to giving my best talents and gifts, my abilities and life to dead and useless things of the world? Or have I consecrated myself and all to the Life that bled for me on Calvary. There is nothing so alive as that Life which can use me and my talents for man's spiritual benefit.

How a Class Meeting Grew into a Prayer Meeting

This morning in one of our regular school scripture classes we discussed the parable of the sower. I usually give the students several questions in writing on each lesson. One of those questions was: "Honestly, what kind of soil is my mind like?" I asked several students to answer frankly and without fear or reticence. Quite a number of our students somewhat shyly spoke up, one saying: "My mind is like the road." Several joined in with this confession. Then others said: "My mind is like stony ground." Still others said they felt their minds were like ground full of thorns and weeds. After talking about such conditions for a while I asked the students whether they felt satisfied with such a mind. They all said "No," they were not satisfied. I further asked them whether there was anything we could do about it. Should we just accept such condition as fate, as Hindus accept such a condition? Again they were sure that we should not leave such a condition as it was. So I asked what could be done about it. Finally one boy got up and said that we should tell our heavenly Father about that. They were further asked when we should do that, whether this evening or tomorrow or next Sunday in church or when. Then several said, "Right now." We did, right there and then. All set class work was stopped and we prayed. A number of real earnest prayers went up to the throne of grace. There came an awakening over the group that we can go to our eternal Helper to ask for help, right now, that our "unworthy soil" might be turned into an acre which will yield a hundredfold. In my own mind I thanked God for such unexpected awakening and realization of a great need. Most students had read that parable many times, but it had never occurred to them what kind of mind THEIR mind was. Now they are sure that they want their mind to be worthy of the best seed of time and eternity—the word of God.

The Dedicated Rooster

This morning, Sunday, October 31, we gathered as visitors with our leper brothers and sisters in the leper home Church in Champa. Reverend Joel Asua made the introduction, and I was to preach the sermon. In the back of the Church lay a tied up rooster squawking. I could not imagine what the rooster was doing in the Sunday morning services, and I feared he would hinder me. Before the sermon Brother Asua announced that a poor Christian leper sister by the name of Jodhni had died early in the morning. Several sisters had been with her, and when they saw that her spirit would soon leave the body they asked her what they could yet do for her. She said she was ready to enter the eternal home, and she desired only one favor from them. She had no property whatever, except one rooster, and she asked them to present that rooster as her last gift to Christ and the Church. She had dedicated him to the Lord. They promised, and her spirit took flight. So the rooster according to promise, was in Church. After this short explanation I got up to speak, and the rooster did not bother me, but rather served as an inspiration because he was the last dedication of a sister in Christ.

Concerning Repentance, Menno Simons said, "No one may rightfully glory in God's grace, forgiveness of his sin and the merits of Christ, unless the fruits of true repentance are found in his life."

MENNONITE GENERAL CONFERENCE HEADQUARTERS

This office now receives contributions for the following treasuries:

Foreign Missions of the General Conference
Home Missions of the General Conference (not for any of the District Home Mission Projects)
Emergency Relief
Peace Committee (C.P.S.)
General Conference Treasury
Board of Education

We shall appreciate it if all treasuries of local churches send all funds in one check, rather than sending us several checks in the same letter, each for a different fund.

CELEBRATE 125TH ANNIVERSARY

The Apostolic Mennonite Church of Trenton, Ohio, lebrated its 125th Anniversary on October 1, 1944. uring the morning worship Rev. A. J. Neuenhwander, former pastor, brought the message, sing his remarks on Eph. 2:10 "We Are God's orthy Workmen" followed by the observance of mmunion. A bountiful lunch was served at noon, d a social hour followed where friends from far d near had gathered. We also had an exhibit of ennonite antiques and relics. The afternoon ogram consisted of greetings and reminiscences. v. Amstutz read a letter from Dr. C. E. Krehel, General Conference President; also one from s. Ruth Krehbiel Jacobs, daughter of Rev. and s. H. J. Krehbiel, who spent her childhood days Trenton. Addresses were given by Rev. and s. A. J. Neuenschwander and Dr. Herbert Rice, esbyterian missionary recently returned from dia; also remarks by Miss Elesa Holly, our oldest mber who celebrated her ninety-fifth birthday September 30; also remarks by her brother P. Holly and Miss Edna Ramseyer. Prof. G. A. hman, Baritone, Colgate-Rochester Divinity hool, added much pleasure to our celebration by ging at both the morning and afternoon sessions, d gave an entire program of worship and song Sunday evening. Mrs. H. P. Mann, pianist of uffton College, accompanied Prof. Lehman. It s indeed a beautiful day, and one longed to be nembered in the history of our Church.

THE FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
PRETTY PRAIRIE, KANSAS

O give thanks unto the Lord for He is good: His mercy endureth forever." Psalm 107:1. s was the keynote of the Harvest Festival the st Mennonite Church of Pretty Prairie held ober 1. Guest speakers were the Misses Helen kel and Eva Pauls, missionaries to India, also brethren Sam Goering and W. F. Unruh. The speakers all testified to the glorious fact that Christ does change the hearts of men and is able to save to the uttermost. They also mentioned varied experiences a missionary has out on the field and among lepers. In the afternoon Brother Sam Goering very interestingly told of some of his experiences on his recent trip to China. At each session, morning, afternoon, and evening mission offerings were taken. The sum total of these offerings was $4,550.00. Special musical numbers were given by members of the church. Monday, October 2, Rev. P. P. Tschetter left for Bridgewater, South Dakota, to attend a Sunday School Convention and also to conduct preaching services. Ernst Harder of Bethel College is to speak here Sunday, October 8, while Rev. Tschetter is absent.—Corr.

Installation Service

On Sunday afternoon, September 17, Rev. Sylvan Lehman was installed as pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Lima, Ohio. Mr. John Tosh, president of the Middle District Home Mission Committee, presided at the meeting. The speakers for the afternoon were, Rev. E. A. Albrecht, of Chicago, giving the charge to the congregation, Rev. Suderman, of Berne, giving the charge to the pastor, and Mr. R. L. Sprunger, Treasurer of the Home Mission Committee, giving the charge to the supporting churches. Rev. J. N. Smucker, president of the Middle District Conference, performed the rites of installation.

After the close of this service, a bountiful basket supper was enjoyed by the members of the church and the friends that were there. This was followed by another special service in the evening, in which Rev. Forrest Musser, of Grace Church, of Pandora, and Rev. J. J. Esau of the Ebenezer Church of Bluffton, gave a challenging message to the congregation and to the pastor. The closing remarks were made by Sylvan Lehman the new pastor, who with the help of God was ready to go forth and accept the challenge.

Special music, for both the afternoon and evening service, was furnished by the First Mennonite Church of Berne and the four Mennonite Churches of Pandora and Bluffton.

The First Mennonite Church of Lima was started several years ago as a home mission project, and is today being supported by the churches of the Middle District Conference. At first the services were held in a Seven-Day Adventist Church; later a basement auditorium was built where the work continued to grow. On September 17, a special meeting was held by the Home Mission Committee, the Church Council, and the new pastor. At this meeting there was a unanimous expression by all those present to the effect that a building fund should be started so that the building might be completed in the near future. It was further voted that the offering taken at the installation service be used to start such a fund.

RELIEF

Clothing for Normandy Sent

Six and one-fourth tons of shoes, clothing and soap, selected from the stock pile at the Akron Clothing Center, was sent September 27 through a French organization, Amis des Volontaires Francais. Plans for distribution are still indefinite.

India Hunger Again Increasing

The September issue of Christian Aid in Asia throws light on the present relief need in India: "The situation this year is not nearly so bad as last year, but it is worse now than earlier in the year." With rice prices rising, people from remote villages are being affected and more destitutes can be seen coming to Calcutta again. Serious need is reported in Malabar and Travancore in South India in addition to Bengal and Orissa.

J. N. Byler Reports from Cairo

The following quotation, as taken from J. N. Byler's letter written from Cairo, Egypt, September 21, summarizes the hitherto scattered information concerning Mennonite relief workers in the Middle East: "Tomorrow it will be two weeks since Sam and I arrived in Egypt. Nancy and Mary Emma came one week later. The two girls and Sam have now spent several days at Maadi, the UNRRA training school near Cairo. Today Nancy leaves for Tolmubat where Richard is located and tomorrow Mary Emma and Sam are leaving for El Shatt where Delvin is located. At El Shatt there are three camps so chances are not all will be in one particular camp. Marie and Delvin are in different camps now."

Camper Fatally Injured in Farm Accident

William Christner, camper at Medaryville, was killed accidentally on September 27 while engaged in farm emergency work. According to reports received at Akron, Christner was grinding feed with a hammer mill and through a mishap was caught in the power belt. He died the following day in a local hospital. William's home is at Pigeon, Michigan where he has a wife and eighteen-month old child.

Henry Braun, from Ft. Collins, was injured in the Missouri Valley, Iowa, trainwreck on September 29. He is recovering in a hospital at Council Bluffs. Henry is at home at Henderson, Nebraska.

Confer on C.P.S. Demobilization

At Elgin, Illinois, September 19-20, representatives from the church agencies met with Colonel Kosch of Selective Service to discuss the release of C.P.S. men. While nothing definite was decided by this group there was conclusive feeling that a 'point' system should be pursued for C.P.S. demobilization. 'Points' would be assigned for the following items in the order indicated: dependency, length of service, age. Selective Service feels that du to the public relations problem C.P.S. men shoul be returned cautiously and that the percentage o campers released should be comparable to that o the military.

Terry Farm and Community School

In addition to the Farm and Community School to be set up on the Lincoln, Nebraska farm units one will also be organized at Terry Montana. Thi school will include about fifty men. Approximatel 180 men have indicated their interest in such school and plans have now been made to provide opportunity for 125.

C.P.S. Briefs

An additional thirty-two men from Mennonit camps will have the opportunity to enter dair herd testing in Maine, Pennsylvania, Iowa, an Michigan. This will bring up to 120 the number o men under Mennonite administration in this type o service.

Five or six men from M.C.C.-C.P.S. will also become members of the unique "guinea-pig" proje at the University of Minnesota. This 45-man pr ject will be an experiment in nutrition with speci relation to post-war relief feeding.

A squad of campers from the Camino, Californi camp recently had the assignment of searching th mountains for a lost fisherman. They found hi dead on a rocky bluff.

Mr. Reynold Weinbrenner, Editor,
The Mennonite
North Newton, Kansas

Dear Mr. Weinbrenner:

Your editorial, "A New Mission Field," in th September 26th issue finds sympathetic understan ing in my heart.

Twelve years ago I had a job as ward attenda in a large state hospital. The inhuman treatme of some inmates and the general lack of intellige management filled me with sorrowful indignatio My attempts at introducing more progressi methods made me unpopular with "old timer" a tendants.

The institution had only a few officials of th progressive, HUMAN type who made any attem at employing improved methods. Under the vigo ous tutorship of one of these I took short cours in abnormal psychology and psychiatry. Th brought about my rebirth. Had I my life to li over again, I'd surely devote it to the professi of psychiatry.

State officials soon ousted my instructor. I r signed my job. But, I vowed to do my best to fu ther the cause of modern psychiatry at every o portunity . . .

I marvel at the heroism of those of our C.O. brethren who have the courage to bear such witness in this stand on non-resistance but only a saint can understand what infinite courage is required of a C.O. (or anyone else) in a mental hospital. I know from experience.

Yours in Christ,
C. J. Novak

IN MEMORIAM

Jacob J. Keller was born April 29, 1860, at Summerfield, Illinois, and departed this earthly life May 2, 1944. On April 28, 1898, he was married to Katie Berger. Of six children born to this union, one preceded him in death. His wife and five children mourn him.

Mrs. Agnes Dyck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter P. Dirksen, was born February 22, 1907, at Lehigh, Kansas, and departed from this life on September , 1944, at the Bethesda Hospital, Goessel, Kansas. She was baptized by Elder P. H. Richert in 1924 and received into the membership of the Tabor Mennonite Church. She is mourned by her husband, Ervin Dyck and two children, Phyllis De Lorine and Vernon Lee.

Our beloved husband and father, David J. Auern-eimer, who died two years ago, September 20, 1942: eep in our hearts lies a picture of a dear one laid rest. In memory's fame we keep it, because he as one of the best. Friends may think we have rgotten when at times they see us smile, but they ttle know the heartaches, that the smile hides all e while.—Mrs. David J. Auernheimer and family.

Elsie Epp Dyck, daughter of Franz Epp and Elisa-eth Janzen Epp, was born June 18, 1865, in Fresen-eim, Russia, and died June 1, 1944. In 1876 she, ith her parents, came to Halstead, Kansas. She as baptized in 1879 and received into the Halstead ennonite Church. In 1886 she and Peter Dyck ere united in marriage. She is mourned by her sband and eight children: Herbert of Wichita, rnie of Burrton, Pete of Moundridge, Elmer in e Marines, Johanna of Halstead, Mrs. Marie rtel of Halstead, Mrs. Elsa Horsch of Ontario, lifornia, and Anna Belle of Monterry, Mexico.

Seventy Years Ago

Seventy years ago on October 14, 1874, thirty-five milies from the Molotchna, South Russia arrived Lincoln, Nebraska.

In the summer of 1880 the first church was built out two miles northeast of the present site of nderson. In 1924 the fiftieth anniversary was ebrated. Total number alive then were ninety-nine. ose living at Henderson were forty-two. As far we know there are the following living yet at nderson; Heinrich Abrahams, Mrs. K. F. Friesen, W. Friesen, J. J. Friesen and Mrs. P. P. Epp.

Why did they leave their old homes in Russia? We all know that it was because of compulsory military training in Europe. America was then the place where freedom of religion was granted. Our fathers paid the price and came here. Seventy years have brought about changes in America. Today we are facing the same situation they did then. Our privilege is though to select alternative service instead of military. Are we true to the faith of our Fathers? Up to this time over fifty have been drafted into the various services. About one-third are in C.P.S. About ten have taken regular service, the rest non-combatant.

Mennonite Fellowship Meeting

Rev. Christian Rediger of Chicago, Secretary of the Belgian Congo Inland Mission, spoke to about thirty-five people gathered at the Mennonite Fellowship meeting held in the Chicago Loop on Sunday afternoon, October 1. He gave an inspiring and challenging message based on Mark 16:20—And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. The main thought of the message was this: As the disciples went out to preach, they were challenged by a hostile world. But as they had the Word of God and had Christ himself going with them and working with them, they were not alone in meeting this challenge. We as Christians and as Mennonites may face a hostile world, but the challenge that we face is also a challenge to the Word and to Christ, and this gives us confidence to believe in ultimate victory. Mr. Frank Loewen led the singing and the devotionals, and Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Wedel furnished some special music.—E. A. Albrecht

Some Figures That Lied

Some figures in the article "Thankoffering of Nearly $9,000.00" in the last Mennonite did not tell the truth. A total of $8,800.55 was given by 113 members and not 133 as erroneously stated. The sum of $150 was given for Whitworth College and not $1.50. One of the young people gave $500 and not $50.00 as stated.

We do not know just how these mistakes came about, but we are very sorry that they were made. We take this opportunity to state again that fact that one young person of the Menno Church, Lind, Washington, gave $500.00 on the harvest Thanks Day observed on September 24.—rw.

"Nothing is easier than fault finding; no talent, no self-denial, no brains, no character are required to set up in the grumbling business."

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

OCTOBER 22—"For My thoughts are not your thoughts." Isa. 55:8a. Read Isa. 55:1-12.

An individual is known by what he does; but if it were possible, would we be willing to have our thoughts flashed on a screen at any time? There is nothing secret before God; He knows the "intents of our hearts." The Psalmist said that the Blessed man meditates in the Law of the Lord day and night. The things we love are a guide for our meditations. If we love earthly possessions more than spiritual blessings, the earthly things will direct our thoughts, but if our love for God is greater, then He will guide our thoughts. May our thoughts be pure and undefiled before God today.—Arnold Nickel

OCTOBER 23—"For the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth Life." II Cor. 3:6.

How grateful we are that God has spoken to us through His Son. The law spoke only in terms of commands and condemnation and had no power to help us. But in Jesus we experience the inflowing power of the spirit of grace, forgiveness, and love, and the believer become one. That is the power of the spirit of love. With His spirit in us we receive life, a life that finds joy in fruit-bearing. May this union with Him evermore increase in me.—Gerhard Friesen

OCTOBER 24—"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God . . ." Rom. 8:28.

Life is like a jig-saw puzzle. One experience taken by itself is often hard to understand. Every piece in a jig-saw puzzle is needed to complete the picture. All the pieces work together. Just so, our text says, all things work together for good. Once the last experience is added, and we know as we are known, then we shall see that each one was needed. This, however, is true only of those who love God. They let God have his way with them. Self-chosen paths do not work for our good. We know that all things work together for our good because God says so. It is a matter of faith.—H. P. Fast

OCTOBER 25—"And if a house be divided agains itself, that house cannot stand." Mark 3:25

The Bible tells us that we are made in the imag of God. Jesus told the unsaved Pharisee "Behol the Kingdom of God is within you," Luke 17:21 This then, means that we have the Kingdom of Go within ourselves; each one of us carries the imag of God within. If we sin, then we sin not only agains God beyond us but also against God within us. W are literally a "House divided against itself." Tha is why sin causes us to fall.—Howard Raid

OCTOBER 26—"For whosoever shall do the will God, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother. Mark 3:35

The big standard by which we are judged is not th color of our skin, the size of our bank roll, the number of farms we have, the number of degrees w hold, nor even what church we go to, but what w do with what we do have. Do we waste it, do we l it set idle, do we let our farms wash away, do we l our children fill their minds with trash, do we l ourselves compromise with evil because we are afrai to stand for what we believe, or do we use all th we have for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God

Howard Ra

OCTOBER 27—"The eternal God is thy refuge, an underneath are the everlasting arms." Deuteronom 33:27

Am I pressed down today with heavy burdens? my soul, think not of thy weakness but of the stren of the arms that everlastingly uphold thee! It is t privilege to rest there and to press the weight of th self and thy burden unto the everlasting arms th undergird thee. Look often to the hands of thy Sa iour and thy God; but know this, that His hands a extended for thy salvation BEFORE they can be u lifted for thy blessing.—Willard W. Wiebe

A Meditation on Peace

By Erland Waltner

"There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked."
Isa. 48:22

The world is longing for peace. Men are dying, we are told, so there can be peace. Leaders of nations are studying how they may establish a permanent peace. When hearts are thus filled with hopes for peace, it is rather startling to hear God say, "There is no peace unto the wicked."

Though the statement may be startling it is as true as any other portion of God's word. The wicked will not have peace. Those who are ungodly cannot have peace because they are at war with God. Because they are living for self they are ever in conflict with others and with God.

It is true that hostilities between nations m cease. It is true that an armistice may be signed a that soldiers and sailors may stop active comb That is what we sometimes call peace. Yet, that not complete peace. Outer peace does not guaran inner peace.

To have inner peace requires a reconciliation w God. There needs to be a clearing up of those thi which have come between ourselves and God. In ot words, sin must be confessed and forgiven. This conciliation is possible through Jesus Christ. P says, He is our peace.

We should think and pray much in these days ab

Letter from Helen A. Penner

This week, August 28 to September 3, I am having a privilege which I would like to share. I am the only Mennonite having this particular opportunity, so to make up for that I am going to try to describe it to you.

At present on this beautiful Thursday afternoon I am sprawled out on a huge rock sunning myself as a giant lizard might do, sans blanket beneath him.

Can you hear the wind soughing in the pines? Or the water as it dashes against the rocks? Can you see the sapphire blue of the water; "bluey-blue" I think describes its intensity. The sky is blue too, but an entirely different tint. See the white caps on that deep blue water! Can you hear the pages of my notebook flapping wildly? Notice the tiny white clouds here and there as they hover over the Sierra peaks in the west. The mountains look smokey, bluish-gray in the distance. On those to the northeast, which are closer, one can see evergreens.

You might be wondering what I am doing in such beautiful surroundings as I came to Carson City, Nevada, only about a month ago to work in the Orphanage. I arrived at Zephyr Point on the shores of Lake Tahoe about noon on Monday to attend a spiritual retreat under the leadership of Kirby Page. There are about twenty in the group usually. Most of the participants are ministers and their wives, some of whom have been foreign missionaries. There are five or more denominations represented.

The retreat is carried on in an informal sort of way. On Monday evening the group met for the first time at the dinner table. Later we had a two-hour conversation. On Tuesday we met for a conversation period from 9-12 in the morning and from 7 (or 7:30) to 9:30 in the evening. That is the plan for the week. (Friday and Saturday afternoons we also met from 4 to 6. And we had our last group conversation from 9 to 10:30 Sunday morning.) Our Sunday morning service will be more formal as it is for the whole community. (At the 11 o'clock service Dr. Page preached on the subject "God's Remnant." We ate dinner together Sunday noon and that brought to a close another "mountain-top" experience.)

There are periods of devotion, sometimes at the opening; other times at the close of the conversation. The general topic of conversation for the six days is "The Will of God." We discuss many interesting and thought-provoking questions. I shall list some of them at the end of this article. Personally I believe we could discuss this topic a year under such leadership and in such company and still not exhaust its possibilities!

During the week we had some visitors who were of much help to us. I am mentioning two who were particularly helpful: Max Yurgin, Princeton PhD., a negro who gave us some interesting light on race relations particularly relating to the black race. He is a former Y. M. C. A. worker, now director of the Council on African Affairs. Also one afternoon for a short time Professor Arthur Swift was with us. He has been teaching classes in postwar reconstruction work in the Pacific School of Religion at Berkely, California, during his leave of absence from the New York Bibical Seminary.

Now let us take a look at the scenery again. Watch the graceful flight of a seagull as it wings its way steadily into the wind to a destination I cannot see from my resting place. Did you see the tiny rainbow in the spray as that wave splashed against a rock? Or feel the misty spray just then?

This beautiful lake, sometimes called "The Lake of the Sky," is at an elevation of from 6,000 to 7,000 feet. It is twenty-three miles long and thirteen miles wide in places. About one-third of it is in Nevada, the rest in California. Zephyr Point is about nine miles from the California line.

Did you see the gull glide down, dart into the water, then ride the waves a short time before he was off again? "Chester," a gull who is resting on a rock projecting out of the water, and I are regarding each other with comfortable curiosity.

The following are some of the questions discussed during the week: What conditions must be fulfilled in order to understand the will of God? Are the conquences of our acts all realized in this life? Why haven't the civilian American people suffered like those in Europe and Asia are suffering? What does God expect of the United States? What was God doing at the time Jesus was crucified? What is God doing in relation to this war? Does God Himself practice experience? Is it true that man is moral but society is immoral? Have we confidence or faith that organized groups can live God's way? How deal with the people who are shirkers, who will not share responsibility? What are the ways in which properties are now owned in the U. S.? If a nation is strong in a military way, is it strong? What kind of world organization or "society of nations" do we want? If racial prejudices are the symptoms of something deeper, what is it? What has changed the attitude of Russia so that there is now a minimum of racial discrimination there? Does racial inter-marriage deteriorate the races? What helps you to remember God frequently? Are the churches ready for the boys to come home? What are the ways of finding the will of God? Why do we believe so differently on some of the simple teachings of Jesus? Now do you wonder that six days flew by in rapid succession?

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—A Tri-church Mennonite Youth Conference will be held at Dalton, Ohio, October 21 and 22. "The sessions open with a banquet Saturday evening with registration in the afternoon. Russell A. Lantz will lead all the music; Paul R. Shelly, new Bluffton Bible teacher will give the major address; William H. Stauffer will give an illustrated message on 'The Church in Action.' "

—Rev. and Mrs. Hugo Mierau are back in Hartford, Connecticut, where Rev. Mierau is attending seminary. They were at home at Henderson, Nebraska, this summer.

—Fourteen young people of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, are attending the Mennonite Academy at North Newton, Kansas.

—"Activities of the (Gen. Conf.) Education Board" was the interesting and worthwhile theme of the program given by the Senior C. E. of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, on September 17.

—The Young People's C.E. of the Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas, gave the missionary play, "An Important Question" on October 8. The play has ten characters and calls for a soloist and chorus.

—Moundridge, Kansas Winton Stucky, who used to be one of the C.P.S. Smokejumpers, showed some very interesting pictures to an unusually large number of C. E. members and guests of the Eden Church on September 10.

—A complete list of the young people and what they are doing is given in the young people's paper of the Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho.

—The C.E. of the Zion Mennonite Church, Elbing, Kansas, will be host to the Gnadenberg C.E. on November 5. The latter C. E. will render the program that evening.

—The Halstead, Kansas, C.E. has a program schedule which includes a talk on astronomy by "Uncle Davy" Richert of Bethel College, a play, a hymn study, and programs on race problems and friendships. The C. E. has an annual one-day retreat in the late summer, at which time general plans for the year's C. E. work are made.

—Roland Brown, son of Missionary and Mrs. H. J. Brown, will leave October 18 for the C.P.S. Camp at Downey, Idaho. Paul Andreas, a former premedical student at Bethel College, has also received notice that he will be inducted into a C.P.S. camp.

—The Mennonite young people of the Beatrice, Nebraska, community are hoping to get acquainted with the C.P.S. men at Lincoln this winter.

—Beatrice, Nebraska: Calvin Wiebe, Alfred Claassen, Walter Schmidt, and William Andreas were the young people who assisted Rev. Koontz with the task of removing the old grass and dandelions off the parsonage lawn, filling in new dirt, and seeding the grass.

—Bergfelder Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: We have our Christian Endeavor programs every second Sunday of the month throughout the year. These meetings are attended nearly as well as the morning services, as they are attended by young and old alike. We had two new missionary couples present at our October meeting. They were Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Nickel of Mountain Lake, who with their family, are leaving as missionaries to Alaska in November and Rev. and Mrs. Elmer Dick of Lustre, Montana, who will leave for the African mission field in the near future. We also have a Young People's Meeting the first Sunday of each month. At these meetings a general program of singing, testimonies, Bible drills, discussion of topics, and the like is given, which enables the young people to receive valuable experience and training which will be a benefit to them when they are asked to render a part at the regular Christian Endeavor programs.—Ruth Nickel, Corr.

—Verney Unruh, ministerial student at Bethel College, edited The Mennonite while the editor was gone on a three-week visit to C.P.S. camps and units and the Menno Church at Lind, Washington.

—The Kauffman Museum, North Newton, Kansas, now has an aeroplane on display. It is a Lincoln-Page plane with a 1914 Curtis engine. Elvin and Felix Waltner of Freeman, South Dakota, are the donators of the plane. They purchased it in 1927 and used it for "barnstorming" as far north as Canada and as far south as Oklahoma. The plane is still in flying condition. Visitors to the Museum will find it hanging in the open space between the first and second floors. Mr. Lloyd Kauffman of Freeman was largely responsible for securing this addition to the Museum and accompanied the plane to North Newton, where he helped his father and others put in into the museum.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE NOTES

October 4, 1944

Bluffton College is beginning the school year with an enrollment of about 148 students, including conservatory and special students.

The first College Church was held September 17, in Lincoln Hall lobby, with Rev. Paul Shelley as speaker. Following this meeting, students and faculty members were entertained at a reception at the First Mennonite Church. A number of outside chapel speakers have been secured for the first several weeks of school. Among these were Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger and Miss Martha Burkhalter missionaries to India. Miss Janet Soldner and Miss Mary Becker, who are members of a group which will open a mission school in Bogata, Colombia, for children of leper parents, spoke one morning. Another speaker was Dr. S. F. Pannebecker, who is working with the MCC, and is planning to do relief work in China as soon as possible. Other speakers were Rev. Ervin Albrecht, pastor of a Mennonite church in Chicago, and Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, pastor of the Swamp Charge at Quakertown. Dr. L. L. Ramseyer has announced his series of weekly chapel lectures. His subjects are under the general heading, "A Christian Looks at Modern Problems," and includes relations with God and with man, the state, other nations, war capital and labor, the race problem, business, and relations between men and women. Rev. Russel Mast, pastor of the Deep Run Mennonite Church near Bedminster, and president of the Eastern District Conference of Mennonites was chapel speaker on October 5.

About thirty hospital directors and representatives of the western hospital units attended the CPS conference on the Bluffton campus, September 24-27. The Sunday afternoon and evening meetings were pen to the students and general public, with the irst college vesper service, in charge of Mr. Albert aeddert, general director of MCC camps. On Sunlay evening at the First Mennonite Church, Dr. Iarold Bender, a member of the MCC executive ommittee, and dean of the Bible School of Goshen ollege, spoke on "The Anabaptist Vision." On Ionday evening J. Winfield Fretz, chairman of the Iennonite Aid Section of the MCC, spoke in the hapel on "The Mennonite Community of Tomorow." Dr. Lloyd L. Ramseyer spoke on Tuesday vening on the subject, "The Pattern for Postwar ducation—What are the Gaps? Where Will Be ie Emphasis?" After the meeting, a college—CPS sing" was held on the ball diamond, with Pro-ssor Russel A. Lantz directing.

The annual Homecoming and Parents' Day was eld October 14 and 15. The second college Vesper rvice will be held on Sunday, with Mr. C. H. runger as speaker.

The First Mennonite Church of Bluffton received kteen college students and one faculty member in associate membership on Sunday, October 1.

Dr. Lloyd L. Ramseyer attended a committee meeting of the Mennonite seminary board in Chicago on October 3.

Professor Russel A. Lantz has conducted try-outs and selected forty girls to sing in the Girls' Choir this year. Their first rehearsal was held on September 22, and their first public appearance will be for Parents' Day Vesper service.

JOTTINGS

—Rev. Herman Wiebe, who has been serving the Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon, recently informed the church that he would like to be released from this work by the beginning of the new year.

—Miss Helen Nickel, who is home on furlough from India, spoke at both services of the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, on October 15. In the week previous to this she had also met with the three mission societies of this church. Rev. Theodore Epp spoke in the Second Church on the evening of October 8.

—Rev. P. A. Kliewer sends the monthly church bulletin of the Grace Mennonite Church, Albany, Oregon, and writes that he uses this bulletin in personal work as he calls "from home to home or places of business." This church has two sermons a Sunday and mid-week Bible study and prayer service according to a schedule in the bulletin.

—About two-thirds of the young men of the Northern District have chosen military service. A total of 127 chose full service, 92 non-combatant, and 76 C.P.S. These figures submitted by Brother Adolph Preheim in his statistical report for the Mennonite Year Book represent reports from twenty-six of the thirty churches in the Northern District. Thus approximately two-thirds of the Northern District young men have chosen military service. According to another report this is the average of our General Conference as a whole.

—Rev. Alvin Fast has resigned his pastorate of the Mennonite Church at Madrid, Nebraska. He and his wife are making preparations for missionary work in Cuba. Their special emphasis this winter will be on language study. The Fasts plan to go to the field next summer. Rev. Fast writes, "Besides my own study I am Bible instructor at the Missionary Bible Institute here (Dayton, Ohio)." The Madrid Church was Rev. Fast's first charge upon graduation from Northwestern Bible School. Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Dirks have received a unanimous call from the First Mennonite Church at Aberdeen, Idaho, but they do not feel led to accept that call at this time.

—Seventy years ago Mennonite immigrants from Russia settled upon the plains of Kansas, bringing with them the hard Russian winter wheat.

—Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Krehbiel left October 10 for a visit of several weeks with relatives and friends in California. Especially did they want to visit Mrs.

Krehbiel's mother, who lives in Los Angeles.

—The Western District Conference will convene October 18 and 19 and not on October 25 and 26 as the delegate certificates mistakenly stated.

—The new M.C.C. clothing depot in Newton, Kansas, south of the railroad tracks and on the east side of the street—seems to be a very busy place.

—Rev. Sam J. Goering receives call to direct European Relief work: The Mennonite Central Committee has extended a call to Rev. Sam J. Goering to serve as director of M. C. C. relief activities in Europe with headquarters in Switzerland, probably at Basel. Rev. Goering and Dr. H. A. Fast have just returned from an M. C. C. meeting in Chicago, at which the program of Mennonite relief work in Europe was discussed. According to present plans the director of M. C. C. relief work in Europe is to begin his work just as soon as possible. At present we have ten workers in England. It is expected that a number of these will take up relief work on the continent along with other workers from the United States.

—First Mennonite Church, Halstead, Kansas: During July and August union Sunday evening services were held with the local pastors in charge. A union vacation Bible school was also conducted again this past summer. Our pastor, Rev. D. C. Wedel, spent two weeks at Ecelsior Springs, Missouri, this summer for the benefit of his health. In spite of handicaps he has been very faithful and active in service. On September 3, Rev. Karl Friesen of Newton occupied the pulpit in his absence. On September 14, Mrs. H. J. Brown, returned missionary from China, spoke at the Women's Missionary Meeting. Brother Ben Bargen of North Newton was the guest speaker at the young people's retreat, which proved a great inspiration to all attending it.

—The children's talk and the special musical numbers were ranked first among fourteen different possible items for the mid-week meeting by members of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, who attended the first mid-week service. The survey made by the pastor will help to determine the nature of the meetings for the year. A variety period will be another feature on the Wednesday evening meetings this year.

—Rev. Phil. A. Wedel of the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, conducted special meetings at Monroe, Washington, during the latter part of September. Rev. J. M. Franz, Minister-at-Large of the Pacific District Conference, visited Aberdeen and held special services for a period of eight days in September.

—Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita, Kansas: Mrs. Guy T. Gebhart recently spoke to the Friendship Circle. Mrs. Gebhart told of her experiences at an International Seminar conducted by the Friend's Service Committee this past summer.

—The First Mennonite Church, Newton, has three Bible classes on week-day evenings. They are taught by Rev. J. E. Entz and Rev. D. J. Unruh. The Dorcas Sunday School class of this church recently visited the Kauffman Museum on the Bethel College Campus.

—Willis Rich and Ernst Harder leave for California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, and Colorado. Willis Rich and Ernst Harder left on October 10 for a visit to churches and C.P.S. camps in western states. They expect to be gone about five or six weeks. Each school year representatives from Bethel College try to visit most of the churches in the Western, Northern, and Pacific conferences. On this tour the churches and the camps will have an opportunity to hear Ernst Harder, who has attended Freeman Junior College and Bluffton College and is now attending Bethel. A letter to the churches states this about him, "Ernst was born in Russia, and after living in Germany for several years, moved to Paraquay. From there he was brought to th States by the General Conference Relief and Hom Mission Boards to receive his education in our Mennonite schools. After completing his school work he expects to return to Paraquay as a Christia worker." Brother Harder will either give a gospe message or speak on the experiences of the Mennonites in South America as desired. The college considers this a part of its work in Adult Christia Education and also as an opportunity to acquain Ernst with the work of our American Mennonit churches. It is preferred that no offerings be hel for this service. Mr. Rich states that in connectio with this visit he will "appreciate an opportunit to meet with church councils to discuss opportunitie for mutual helpfulness between Bethel College an our Mennonite churches." Part of the tentativ schedule is given here:

Shafter October 20, Reedley 22-23, Three Rivers 2 North Fork 26, Winton 27, Camino 29, Pratum 3 Dallas November 1, Portland 2, Monroe 3, Lind Newport 6, Colfax 7, Aberdeen 9, 11, 12, Downey 1 Provo 13, Denver 15, Newton 16.

—Rev. Henry Franzen was installed as pastor the Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, o October 8. Dr. C. E. Krehbiel officiated. The churc also observed its Mission Festival on this day.

—Mrs. Henry A. Toews writes from Chicago: "M Toews will perhaps assist in the work here at th Mission while Rev. J. Neufeld visits some of th C.P.S. camps. Miss Quiring wrote from Africa ar stated that the rumor had been passed around amor the natives that we had arrived near the statio The natives ran to meet the car and crowded arou it with the anticipation of greeting us. To their di appointment, it was not our family but another m sionary family from another station."

—The First Mennonite Church, Reedley, is dou ling the space of its church basement for additio Sunday School room. Curbing and gutter are al being placed around the church grounds. The ne addition to the basement is to be dedicated on No ember 5, if completed by that time.

—Correction: In the recent list of bulletins p out by our churches, the bulletin of the Wayla Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa, was unintentio ally omitted. This church had baptism and co munion on October 1. Eight young people we baptized. E. S. Mullett is the pastor.

—Rev. W. C. Voth is teaching industrial arts in the Montezuma, Kansas, high school. His family lives in Newton.

—Dr. R. C. Kauffman in a letter to his parents dated October 8, wrote, " . . . we are to sail tomorrow (Monday) forenoon." Going to India with Dr. Kauffman are Lawrence Kurkholder and Clayton Byler. It will take the men at least six weeks to get to India. Dr. Kauffman's address there will be, 13 Wellington Square, In care of Lee Memorial Mission, Calcutta, India. Mrs. Kauffman and daughter, Bonnie Jean are staying in Rochester, New York, where Mrs. Kauffman is employed.

—From "Church Tidings," Bethel College Church: "Six Sunday evenings, beginning on October 22, will be given to mission study, with the whole church membership invited to enroll. The theme is "The American Indian." There will be classes for all ages from primary to adult. Sessions begin at seven o'clock and close at nine." Rev. Hostetler speaking of the Mennonite Academy of North Newton writes, "The Academy now has nearly seventy enrolled, which is almost double the number of students that attended last year. This seems to be convincing evidence that many of our people want a Bible Academy for the training of their children rather than the average high school where religious instruction is ignored and where the present-day secularism prevails."

—Carl M. Lehman writes from Puerto Rico, "Our ospital is in operation now, though still on a rather mall scale. We are awaiting the arrival of one or wo additional doctors and two more nurses. After hat we hope to gradually expand operations to our ull 24-bed capacity."

–The Mennonite Hospital at Beatrice, Nebraska, had hospital occupancy of 110 per cent during August.

-Winton, California: People are still busy with the rapes, but the end is near. We had our annual icnic in June. Rev. Gerald Stucky was with us one unday morning. Rev. P. P. Wedel was also with s one evening and told us of the work our conference has done in the foreign field in the past fifty ears. Rev. P. K. Regier of Reedley is to be the uest speaker at our annual harvest and mission stival, which is to be an all-day affair. The dies are preparing for their mission sale in Nomber. —Corr.

Mennonite services are being held in the Loop, icago. Their purpose is, To provide an accessible eeting place for the people of Mennonite faith ing in Chicago and surrounding area for worip and fellowship and for others who are interest-, The place is the Dixon Chapel on the second or of the Chicago Temple. Enter at 33 North ark Street. The time is the first Sunday of each nth, at 2:30 p.m.

Rev. Albert Gaeddert recently spoke at a Bluff- College vesper service and also at an evening vice of the Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, io.

—The Grace Church, Pandora, plans to have a special service on November 12 for all men and women in government service. One feature of the service is to be the reading of excerpts from the letters of those absent.

—Rev. P. P. Wedel, pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas, sends a monthly letter to all men in service. From the one of September 30 we take this news item: "On the 26th of September, I arrived at home from a trip to South Dakota, California, and Colorado. The occasion for the trip was to ordain Miss Eleanor Schmidt of Reedley, California, as a Mission Worker. She, together with three furloughed missionaries, is to go to India this fall. She and the others are badly needed on our mission field. Besides this ordination all seven of our Churches in California were visited and also four of our C.P.S. Camps, one in South Dakota, one in California and two in Colorado. At each place a message on missions was brought, and at quite a number of places I spoke two times."

—Rev. D. J. Unruh of Newton will be the speaker for the evangelistic meetings of the First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas, October 23 to 29.

—Rev. W. F. Unruh, in the name of the Evangelism Committee, has sent a letter to pastors, urging them to write an account of their experience in leading someone to Christ.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio: Facts about this congregation: Founded in 1852 by Ephraim Hunsberger of Berks County, Pa. Under the pastorate of N. C. Hirschy, the second minister, this present structure was purchased from the Congregationalists in 1892.

—Herewith we present part of a letter written by Rev. I. J. Dyck to the men from his church who are in service. In it Rev. Dyck describes the trip taken this summer and offers some reflections: "For a long time we had cherished the hope of seeing the west. This summer everything was favorable, so we went—Mrs. Dyck and I. We left July 10. We made ten stopovers in five states. We saw the Mennonite settlements north and south of Wolf Point, Montana, and spent eight days in Glacier National Park visiting with our children, Selma and Willard. At the west entrance we find C.P.S. Camp No. 55. We hadn't seen a C.P.S. Camp before, so it was something new. We were favorably impressed by this institution. Thanks be to God for such camps. We should also be very thankful to our government for recognizing our peace principles. The scenery in this park is simply grand. The mountains, the lakes, and the forests make a deep impression on anyone who has an eye for the wonders in God's creation. There is so much one can learn about God—His beauty, strength, eternity, mysteriousness, immensity, etc.

We were also impressed by the large wheat fields in Montana and Washington, then also by the large orchards in Washington, Oregon and California. "This is My Father's World" we sing. Yes, God surely cares and provides for His children and for those who are not His children. His grace is boundless. Man, of course, has to do his share, otherwise there would be no crops, especially not in California where crops are dependent on irrigation. Some people say California is man-made, but surely man couldn't produce anything if God didn't furnish the material, the favorable weather, the water for irrigation and the human intelligence to utilize the elements at man's disposal.

We traveled by train, but made a few side trips by bus and one even by plane. Traveling wasn't difficult and we didn't feel tired when we got home as people usually do when they travel by car. But we were very handicapped without our car. We enjoyed the fellowship of many Christian friends and relatives, but failed to see many others.

—The editor recently visited eight C. P. S. camps and units in Utah, Idaho, Montana, and California and also the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington. He was gone from September 15 to October 7.

—Missionaries may leave for Colombia, South America, the latter part of October. According to a statment by Miss Mary Becker our "South American missionaries" are still waiting for their visas. The group hopes to go to South America by plane as soon as possible after their visas arrive. Miss Becker is at home in Newton. Brother Rutschman is at home at Whitewater. Rev. and Mrs. Stucky are at Berne, Indiana, and Miss Soldner went back to hospital work in Bulffton, Ohio.

Correction

The two articles in The Mennonite of September 26 entitled "Some Things C. P. S. Men like About An Outside Speaker" and "Some Things C. P. S. Men Dislike About An Outside Speaker" were not written by a C. J. Miller as erroneously stated. They were written by Edmund J. Miller, pastor of the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind Washington.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

The Seventieth Sunday School Convention was held in the Allentown Church, September 30. The theme was "Grow In Grace and Knowledge." The Mission Treasurer reported that $1365.98 was received for missions and that several churches brought contributions to the convention so that there was a balance of almost $144.00 in the mission fund. Upon motion it was decided to give the balance to the Home Mission and Church Extension Committee of the Eastern District Conference to be used for church extension work. The panel discussion on the theme was very interesting and enlightening. In the evening Rev. J. J. Plenert had charge of a special recognition service for Sunday School teachers who had taught more than twenty years. The convention message was delivered by Mr. Carroll Parks, an active Christian layman and a teacher in one of Allentown's junior high schools. We were glad to have the following missionaries with us: Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman. Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, and the following who are waiting to be sent to India: Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger, Miss Augusta Schmidt and the new missionary, Miss Eleanore Schmidt of Reedley, California.

First Church, Philadelphia—The Rev. Carl Landes preached the sermon Sunday morning, September 24. The Rev. E. J. Davis, Secretary of the China Inland Mission, was the speaker at the Rally and Harvest Home Service.

The Second Quarterly Conference will be held in the Upper Milford Church, November 6. In the afternoon, the Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, Pastor of the Schwenksville Church, will present a paper on "William Penn," and in the evening the message will be delivered by M. C. Lehman of Akron, Pa.

Lansdale—The pastor, the Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel, will visit several C.P.S. camps in Montana and eleven churches in South Dakota during October. During his absence, the following will deliver messages in the church: Rev. Albert Gaeddert, Ernest Bennett, Robert Kreider, Elmer Ediger, Irvin Richert, and Herbert Fretz. The Rev. Andrew R. Shelly pastor of the Kitchner Mennonite Church, Ontario Canada, will bring a series of messages from No vember 26 to December 3.

Perkasie—The Springfield Church loaned the communion set for communion service October 8. Thi was the first time individual cups were used in th church. A representative of the Gideons will speal October 22. The Rev. T. D. Gehret of Easton wi be the guest speaker at the special meetings to b held November 2-4.

The Annual Brotherhood Meeting of the Easter District Conference will be held in the Lansda Church, October 28, with afternoon and evenin sessions. The Ladies Organization of the Conferenc will meet during the afternoon at the same churc

The Young People's Rally of the Eastern Distri Conference will be held in the Sounderton churc Sunday afternoon, October 29. Mrs. Henry Bull of the M.C.C. will be the speaker. The Interme iates will hold a Rally in the Sunday School roo at the same time.

"Now it seems to me that we as Mennonites h on the whole, become quite materialistic, and m erialism, as we all know, is one of those things t makes for war. Our ideal of pacifism is a lofty a exacting one and will be difficult to maintain in future unless we revive its corollary of the sim life and learn once more to find our major satisfacti in the area of appreciation instead of possessio —R. A New Mennonite History

A new book on Mennonite history has just recently come off the press. It bears the title An Outline of Mennonite History and the author is J. John Friesen of Butterfield, Minnesota.

Although the book is entitled "An Outline" it is, in reality, much more than that. It has 114 pages, six by nine inches, and is divided into two sections. Section one deals with the origin of the Mennonites, their major movements(including those from the Netherlands to Prussia, Europe to America and Russia, Russia to Canada and the United States, and Russia to South America), their principles and contributions to world life. Section two presents a number of interesting photographs of life in Russia and discusses the organization of community life in Russia, the distribution of Mennonites throughout the world, and the cultural life of the Mennonites. The book closes with a treatise on "The Simple Life" as applied to the Mennonites.

The book was written primarily for young people, and it is especially suited for class and group study. However, it will also be read with interest by anyone who desires to increase his knowledge of Mennonite history, principles, and background. One reviewer makes this statement: "Since books on Mennonite History are not plentiful, any new book on this subject should be welcomed. Mr. Friesen's book has items of information that most other books do not contain. However, the book does more than give interesting information on the origin and practices of the Mennonites, it carries to the reader the faith of the author in the message and mission of the church."

The book is printed in easy, readable type and on good quality book paper, and it is bound in an attractive and durable form. The price is fifty cents per copy postpaid. On quantities of twenty-five and more a liberal discount will be given. The book can be obtained from the author or from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, and the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana.

Rev. Sam J.Goering Accepts Call

North Newton, Kansas: Rev. Sam J. Goering has accepted the call of the Mennonite Central Committee to serve as director of M.C.C. relief activities in Europe.

It is the desire of the M.C.C. to open the work in Europe just as soon as possible. A shipment of clothing is already on the way to France. Some of the ten workers, who are at present stationed in England. will go to France to receive the shipment and later help in its distribution.

According to present plans Rev. Goering will leave here so as to reach London by the first part of December. In London he will take over the work from Brother Glenn Miller, who is to take up his teaching duties again at Goshen College by the beginning of the new year. As soon as possible Brother Goering will proceed from England into Europe. Relief headquarters will be established in Switzerland, very likely at Basal or some nearby place. From here will be directed the distribution of food and clothing and other relief activities undertaken by the M.C.C. The plan is that Brother M. C. Lehman, who has served as relief worker in Europe, will follow as soon as the way opens. It is expected that Brother C. F. Claassen from Canada is going to serve as Special Relief Commissioner to Europe as soon as conditions permit. Other workers will follow as soon as the war is over and supplies are available.

For the present Mrs. Sam J. Goering and son, Robert, will remain living in North Newton. However, it is hoped that they can follow Mr. Goering later on, perhaps next summer. Brother Goering plans to continue his relief work in Europe at least until the summer of 1946 and perhaps longer.

Relief work is not new to Rev. Goering. From July 1943 to May, 1944, he served as one of two relief commissioners to China under the M.C.C. There he and Brother J. D. Graber investigated relief needs and established the M.C.C. with the proper authoriies of the Chinese government so that the way for relief work would be open. They also consulted with organizations already in the field and with which the M.C.C. unit will want to work in close cooperation fter it gets there. It is upon the foundation laid by these two men that the relief work in China will e built.

On the way to China the two men stopped in India. The Bengal famine was at its height. There they elped to establish the M.C.C. relief work that has ow been going on for over a year.

Brother Goering has had wide experience in mission work, travel, and business. Upon graduation from college he entered our mission work in China and served there for two terms. After his return home he served as Business Manager of Bethel College from 1936-1942. He has traveled extensively in India, China, Africa, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Europe, and South America.

Dr. S. F. Pannabecker on Way to China

Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, Director of the M.C.C. Relief Unit for China, left during the first days of October from an Eastern seaport on a trip that will eventually take him into Free China. Originally it was planned by the M.C.C. that he stop in Egypt and Palestine and help with the relief work that the M.C.C. is carrying on there in conjunction with the UNRRA, until his residence visa for India came through. However, the visa came through to the United States shortly after Brother Pannabecker had sailed. So it is not known at the time of this writing whether he will stop off for some time in Egypt and Palestine or not.

From the Near East he will proceed to India, there to assist in M.C.C. relief work while awaiting an opportunity to get into China. It may be about six months before he reaches Chungking, China, where the headquarters for M.C.C. relief will very likely be established. Rev. P. P. Baltzer of Hillsboro, Kansas, is following Brother Pannabecker and will join him in China to help direct relief work.

Dr. Pannabecker began his missionary service in China in 1923 and has served there most of the time since then. He is reported to have an excellent command of the Chinese language. This past summer he was awarded his Ph.D. degree. Previous to his missionary service he served as instructor in Physics and Chemistry at Bluffton College for five years. The Pannabeckers have three children. The two boys are in C.P.S. Mrs. Pannabecker is teaching Bible at present and continues to make her home in Bluffton, Ohio, with her daughter Alice Ruth, who is in high school.

Henry Detweiler, banker and farmer from Souderton, Pa., also left at the same time. Brother Detweiler is to do relief work in Egypt, where we already have a number of workers from our conference.

One of These Men Will Visit Your Church

See Opposite Page

One of the men shown here, with the exception of one man not on the picture, will visit your church. They are the Bible Institute and Visitation Program workers. They are pictured here in a Chicago hotel room where they met October 3, 4 for a spiritual retreat preparatory to their weeks of Bible teaching and visitation.

Undoubtedly, you will recognize most or all of the men, but here is a little information about each one: Standing, left to right: Rev. J. H. Langenwalter, Minister-at-Large for the Boards of Education and Publication of the General Conference; Rev. Walter Gering, Pastor of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas; Rev. A. W. Friesen, Pastor of the Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska; Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel, Pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa.; Rev Walter H. Dyck, Pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska; Elmer Ediger, Educational Secretary for the M. C. C., Akron, Pa.; Rev. John J. Plenert, Pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa.; President Ed. G. Kaufman of Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas; Rev. William S. Stauffer, Pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Sugarcreek, Ohio; and Rev. H. E. Nunemaker, Pastor of the Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa.

Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander is serving as chairman of the committee making all arrangements for the Bible Institute and Visitation Program. Rev. J. N Smucker served as dean of the retreat held in Chicago. Rev. Walter Gering and Dr. J. H. Langenwalter conducted devotionals. Rev. A. E. Kreider served as Bible study director at the retreat. Rev William H. Stauffer addressed the retreat on "Making the Most of Our Camp and Personal Contacts." Rev Erland Waltner conducted the closing dedication service. Rev. Albert M. Gaeddert and Elmer Edige helped relate the whole program to the C.P.S. camps and units, which are being visited by the workers prior to their calls upon the churches.

Not shown on the picture is Rev. Edmund Miller Lind, Washington, who was unable to come and tak his assignments. His place in the program is being taken by Rev. John T. Neufeld, Pastor of the Mennonite Bible Mission, 4215 South Rockwell Street, Chicago 32, Illinois. He also is not on the picture.

Bible Institute And Visitation Program

A. J. Neuenschwander, Chairman

On October 3-4th the men connected with the above named program truly had an "Upper Room" experience as we gathered in three sessions in the Y.M. C.A. Hotel, Chicago. The spirit of prayer and consecration was felt at all times. There was also a deep feeling of humility manifest. Humility that we had to be led through the fires of a great war, in order to get a real sense of mission for our young men who are scattered far and wide in the various military and C.P.S. camps and units. We were humbled to think that it was only after they were away from home, we became definitely burdened to minister to them and to help them see and appreciate the great principles of faith that our fore-fathers had held so nobly so long ago, as a result of careful Bible study.

The Spirit of God was felt as we faced the task of ministering to the scattered young men and as we look forward to meeting the home folks in every General Conference Church. The motives and ideals of the Bible Institute and Visitation Program were studied anew with a view of bringing the most help possible to those who are confronted with many problems.

Much time was spent in united Bible Study, taking Acts chapters 1-10 as a basis, drawing from this section of God's Word. The Church, the Holy Spirit, and the Individual in God's Program were some of the main points emphasized. Much time was als spent in prayer when every man joined in to invoke the Lord's grace and guidance so that th most good might come from the Bible studies an the individual personal conferences with the men.

The Visits to the C.P.S. Camps Appreciated

As the reports from the workers come in, ever man has stated that he had been given a most cordia reception by the boys in camp. Mention has als been made that the Government men were ver cordial to the men and the Camp program.

Communion Service

In one of the camps a desire was expressed fo a communion for the General Conference men Naturally all others who had a "hunger and thirst for the Lord were also welcome. With the aid o a neighboring Baptist Minister a Communion se was secured and the Sacrament was observed wit deep appreciation. This minister has since writte a personal card to every home pastor of the boy that gave in their names. In this way and in man other ways the workers seek to keep a warm relationship between the men and the home church.

Another minister reported that he has encourage each young man to get his own Church paper an read it faithfully. Meetings have been held in camps

Highlights of the Western District Conference

The Western District Conference met last week, October 18 and 19, in the Memorial Hall at North Newton, Kansas, with an attendance that during most sessions filled nearly all of the 1200 or so seats in the main auditorium. The weather was ideal. Fifty-eight churches from Nebraska, Oklahoma, and Kansas, out of a total of sixty in the Western District, were represented at the conference with a total of 418 votes. Rev. D. C. Wedel, President, kept the sessions running smoothly.

Conference Sermon

As the text of his conference sermon, Rev. Wedel used Haggai 2:4, "And be strong all ye people of the land, saith the Lord, and work; for I am with you, saith the Lord of Hosts." He said, ". . . . it is a fact that there is a tendency to lose some of our religious fervor as time passes. When religion comes to an individual, it brings a great experience of God through our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. But as time passes there is a tendency to lose something of the spiritual glow that came with that first experience of Christ. That is true not only of the individual but is true also of the church and of the conference work."

After having referred to the Churches at Corinth and Ephesus and some churches of today as proof of the above, he asked, "What are we doing? Is our program Christ-centered? Are we letting His light shine through us? How is the light of the gospel shed abroad by us? Is it really penetrating our own circles? Is its light going out beyond our own group, and how bright is our light, or has it become dim? Are we too passing through this cycle of generating enthusiasm at the beginning, but as time passes, we become less enthusiastic, giving way to compromises and finally deviating from our original purpose? Are we also 'a well-fed, comfortable lot, wholly at ease in Zion'? I fear we have moved too far in that direction. We need to be aroused by these words of the prophet, "And be strong all ye people of the land, saith the Lord and work, for I am with you, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Outlining the task before us in a few bold strokes, Rev. Wedel stated, ". . . first and foremost we need to win our youth for Christ. We must not lose our young people. Then the influence of the gospel must go out to the uttermost parts of the earth. . . We need to strengthen our own churches by solving those problems that now impede our spiritual progress. We need to build now adequate resources that will guard against despair and disillusionment in the immediate years ahead. We need to gather funds and train lives for the staggering opportunity of world reconstruction . . .The voice of the church needs to be heard at the peace table. In particular the peace testimony of the Mennonite Church must continue to be heard. We must become more effective and more consistent in its expression. We must plan now to find service outlets for our young men when they come back to our various communities. We must help them spiritually and also economically. Some of them will no doubt have outthought and out-stripped us in their spiritual life. Then we need to help them economically and learn from them spiritually."

In conclusion Rev. Wedel pointed to Him who enables us to do the task and developed the thought that "We are not to see the task only. We are also to realize that back of us, beside us stands God—"For I am with thee, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Officers Elected

Rev. David C. Wedel and Rev. H. T. Unruh were re-elected respectively as President and Vice-President. Rev. Ronald von Riesen was elected Secretary. Others elected to various committees were: Rev. A. E. Funk and Dr. H. A. Fast to the Home Mission Committee, Dr. P. S. Goertz to the Education Committee, Rev. B. H. Janzen and Rev. J. W. Bergen to the Peace Committee, Rev. J. R. Duerksen to the Relief Committee, and Rev. T. A. van der Smissen, D. J. Goering, and A. T. Mueller to the Board of Trustees. Nominees to the Bethel College Board of Directors are Dr. A. M. Lohrentz and Rev. Walter Gering.

Conference Membership 12,077

A membership of 12,077 for 1943 in contrast to one of 12,294 for 1942 was reported by Rev. Ronald von Riesen, statistician. He explained it as a revision of membership rolls.

The statistical report revealed that there were forty-two active ministers and fifty-three retired ministers in the conference. "The average age of the active ministers is 47 years. Thirty of these active ministers at one time or another attended Bethel College; 14 attended O.B.A.; 8 attended Witmarsum; 3 attended Bluffton; 1 attended Goshen; 23 have at one time attended non-Mennonite schools. Seventeen ministers live in parsonages. Seven ministers received a salary of over $1,500; eleven between $1,000 and $1500; twenty between $500 and $1000; and six receive less than $500. The average salary for all ministers is $1,039."

Church member giving was summarized thus: "If our membership stands at 12,077 . . . each member contributed on the average of $22.59 toward his church, or $6.79 for Local Church Support; $3.65 for Foreign Missions; $1.44 for Home Missions; $1.83 for Relief; $4.59 for C.P.S. and $4.26 for all other purposes."

Rev. Harry Yoder, Guest Speaker

Rev. Harry Yoder, President of the Central Conference of Mennoites and pastor of the Carlock Mennonite Church, Carlock, Illinois, gave his opening address on Wednesday afternoon on "The Living Church." His text was from John 3:5, "Except a man be born of the . . .Spirit he cannot see the Kingdom of God." Rev. Yoder pointed out in his introduction that the Hindu temple becomes a part of the village in India in the same way as the tree which grows on our village green or town square. Christianity, he said, however, becomes a part of the community only as the "living Spirit" of Christ finds its way into the community through our lives. "Except ye are born of the spirit' you are not a part of the Church." His four main points were: 1. The living church cannot be substituted by custom, creed, or tradition. 2. The Spirit of Christ cannot be handed from one generation to another as a creed. The Spirit comes to the individual by the touch of God upon the soul. 3. Our outward acts are testimonies of the inward belief. 4. As the Church is possessed by the Living Spirit of Christ it will carry on its work in an orderly, well organized way. He concluded with the thought that our task as churches and conferences is to carry on the work of Christ and give witness of this spirit in our day and generation.

Thursday morning he spoke on "The Need of Christian Training," using as his text Prov. 4:7, "Wisdom is the principle thing; therefore get wisdom, yea, with all thy getting get understanding." He suggested that today as we see all the forces of the intellect through science so destructively at work, we realize more pointedly the real need of Christian training. He brought out that: 1. Christian education involves spiritual insight. It gives direction to life. 2. Christian training is not confined to our institutions but must begin in the homes. 3. Christian training is a life process. 4. The result of Christian training is that it gives Christian standards of conduct to the world. The greatest post war problem in discussion now is how to maintain proper conduct among peoples and nations. He concluded that Christian education and training give proper standards for conduct.

Thursday afternoon, Rev. Yoder spoke on "The Steadfastness of Jesus," using Luke 9:51 as his text, "He steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem." To be steadfast means to have a set purpose and to have a loyal devotion to duty, said Rev. Yoder. Jesus' set purpose was found in His statement "Wist ye not that I should be about my Father's business?" Main thoughts brought out were: 1. The steadfastness of Jesus meant difficulty. To go to Jerusalem meant opposition, ridicule, and even the cross. 2. His stead fastness and loyalty to purpose led Him to: (a) the garden of prayer. (b) Confide in his fellow men and in His Father. (c) A great courage. (d) Sacrifice—even the cross. 3. Our need of the steadfastness of Jesus today is great. The closing thought was; We need to serve as the circuit through which the steadfastness of Jesus is given to the world.

One Church Joins Conference

The First Mennonite Church of Burns, Kansas, which had applied for admission was received into the conference. Brother Henry Goossen is the Elder of this church. It has a membership of thirty, and the average attendance is around fifty.

Home Mission Report

Much of the discussion following this report had to do with the providing of funds for those groups in need of a church building. The following action was taken on the matter of a "Church Building Fund."

"In view of the fact that a number of requests for help to build church buildings have come to the Home Missions Committee, be it recommended to the Conference that when churches desire help to build it be held THAT:

"1. The proposed church building must be favored by two-thirds of the church members concerned and approved by the Home Missions Committee, after which funds may be solicited for this project in churches as recommended by the Home Missions Committee.

"2. If a loan is needed, all applications for loans from the church building fund shall be presented to the Board of Trustees through the Home Missions Committee. The decision as to whether or not the loan is made shall rest entirely with the Board of Trustees.

"3. No loan shall be made for more than 40% of the cost of the building and ground. The Board of Trustees shall charge 3% interest per annum on loans made for church buildings, and definite plans for repayment of the principal and payment of interest shall be agreed upon at the time the loan is made.

"4. As security the Board of Trustees shall hold the first mortgage on the property until the loan with interest is repaid.

"In view of the urgent need of money for church building purposes, be it resolved that this conference urge sincerely upon the Western District Conference churches to attempt to raise PV.JJ per member for the revolving church building fund by January 1, 1945."

Report of Bethel College

President Ed. G. Kaufman pointed out in his report that last year was the fiftieth year of Bethel College counting from the date of the opening of the school. Eighty-seven per cent of the student body last year belonged to the General Conference of Mennonites and came from a total of sixty-nine Mennonite congregations. Financially the college had a good year. The budget was more than balanced. The debt was reduced from $73,000 to $33,000. The Endowment Fund was increased by $60,000. The total net worth of the school is now $1,100,000. The gifts from 2,433 donors totalled over $122,000 during the year. President Kaufman stated, "It is hoped that in the current year enough money will come in, not only to balance the budget and pay the debt, but also to add considerably to the funds needed for the library building and the boys' dormitory . . . The Bethel College Fellowships in our constituency deserve much credit and thanks for the financial progress of the college."

Continuing he said, "We are happy for the increasing understanding helpfulness that is developing between our Conference and Bethel College. We are especially grateful for cooperation of the Home Mission Committee in the matter of training and placing our ministerial students. At the last Corporation meeting steps were initiated so that in time the General Conference as well as our District Conferences will be given an increasing number of votes in the Bethel College Corporation."

The school is studying its program with the aim that it might be better prepared to render its optimum service to Christ and the Church. Some questions facing the school are: Should it arrange a pre-college course of two years for older men who have not yet finished their high school so they can prepare to enter college. Should it arrange for a goodly number of married student's apartments? What about the C.P.S. boys? Will the church provide funds for their education? On this question President Kaufman said, "No investment could be more far-reaching in its result for the church and the Kingdom than money used for that purpose." Another question was, "How about increasing demand for adult education and extension work after the war, for those who will be unable to come to college and yet want to continue their studies at home?"

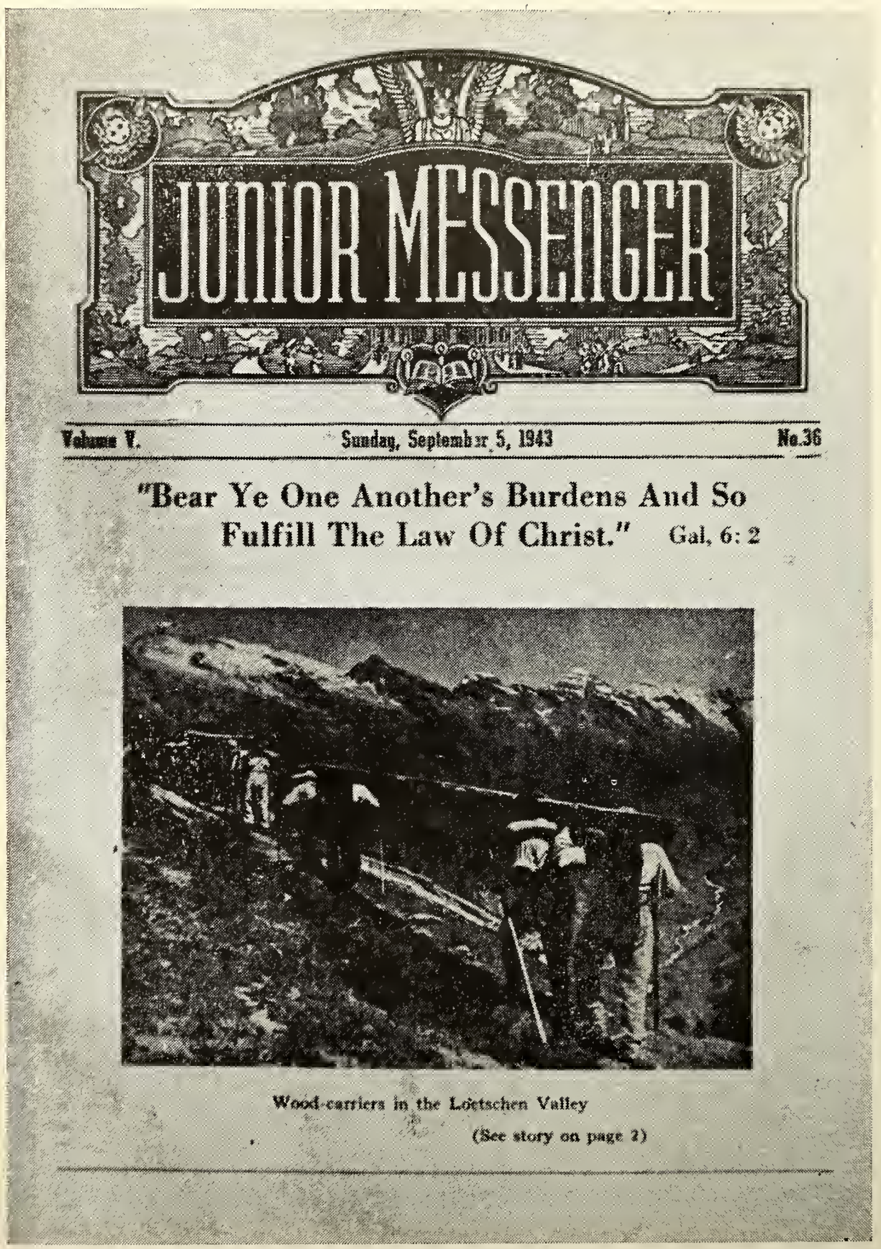
Free Copies of "Junior Messenger" Now Available

The picture below is a photographic reproduction of the General Conference children's paper, the Junior Messenger. It is the successor to the Kinderbote and has been published in its present form since 1938. At first it was issued only bi-weekly, but the urge to have it published weekly became so strong that, beginning with 1943, the Board of Publication decided to make it a weekly paper.

One reason for this desire to have the Junior Messenger issued weekly was the fact that the children like this paper so well that they do not like to wait two weeks until the next issue appears. However, the main reason for making the Junior Messenger a weekly paper was that it might meet in favorable competition those children's papers which are published weekly. Many Sunday Schools regularly provide a children's paper for the younger members, and since most of these are issued weekly, the Junior Messenger had to be issued weekly also in order to meet this competition.



JUNIOR MESSENGER

Volume V. Sunday, September 5, 1943 No.36

"Bear Ye One Another's Burdens And So Fulfill The Law Of Christ." Gal. 6: 2

Wood-carriers in the Loetschen Valley

The Junior Messenger is an eight-page paper, measuring about 7 x 10 inches. It is full of interesting stories which are designed to build character and to stimulate love for God and the Lord Jesus, and to induce the readers to become loyal and devoted Christians. It also contains many other features such as pictures, puzzles, Bible studies, etc., all of which are interesting and helpful.

The Junior Messenger now has over 3,000 readers. Many of these are individual subscribers, and a large number receive the paper through the Sunday School. At present more than one hundred Sunday Schools regularly supply the paper free to all families where there are children in the home. But this interesting and helpful paper deserves to have a still larger circulation. And in order to give those who are not yet readers of the Junior Messenger an opportunity to become acquainted with this good paper, the Board of Publication offers to send to Sunday Schools Entirely Free for a Period of Three Months enough copies to make one copy available to every family on the S. S. Register where there are children of the Junior or Intermediate age. The only condition is that the order must be placed by a responsible official or committee of the Sunday School.

Here is your opportunity to obtain copies of the Junior Messenger entirely free for three months, and no Sunday School should miss this opportunity. Just mail your order for as many copies as you need, and they will be sent to you at once. This offer applies to all General Conference Sunday Schools which are not now receiving the Junior Messenger. The price to S. S. is 50c per copy for one year. Single subscriptions are 60c for one year.

Send all orders to the MENNONITE PUBLICATION OFFICE, Newton, Kansas. Sample copies will be sent free to anyone upon request.

Highlights of Western District Conference

In conclusion Dr. Kaufman stated, " . . . we need a full-orbed Christian education of mind and heart and body, so that individuals will not only know what is good, but will also have within themselves the living Christ as the source of moral authority that will energize the will to do . . . "

Report of Education Committee

Some facts from this report are: The Western District Loan Library now has 1460 volumes. Our churches should ask our schools for daily vacation Bible school teachers. The Mennonite Bible Academy of North Newton, which had an enrollment of forty-six last year, now has sixty-seven students. The Mennonite Bible Academy of Beatrice, Nebraska, had eleven students last year. This year it has eighteen. The Oklahoma Bible Academy has sixty-nine students this year as compared with seventy-nine last year.

The way for a "conference field worker" was opened with the adoption by the conference of the following recommendation: "The joint committee (Home Mission, Peace, Education, C.E. Society, Sunday School Convention of Kansas) in session October 1, 1944, recommends to the Western District Conthe conference to appoint the conference field worker in consultation with the various conference comin consultation with the various conference committees and organizations."

Report of Peace Committee

The work of the committee has largely been a coordination of efforts with that of the General Conference committee under the M.C.C. program. In its suggested resolutions to the conference the committee urged: "That efforts be put forth to deal with our returning young men, whatever stand they may have taken, in an attitude upholding a practice of the principle of Christian love." "That we encourage our churches in their efforts along the lines of Mutual Aid among their members, especially to those who now are in the service of the government and who will again be endeavoring to become established in their home communities. That we encourage the formation of local Mutual Aid Committees who will anticipate the post-war needs of our young men and be prepared to counsel with them and extend loans or aid to any worthy individuals." "That, in view of an inequality among our young men now in government service, we establish a grant-in-aid-fund to be made available to such men desiring to continue their education when released from such service."

The conference also adopted a statement expressing its "deep concern over the present agitation for peacetime military conscription in our country and military training in our public schools." This is to be sent to the President of the United States and to senators and representatives.

Report on Hospitals

The Bethesda Hospital at Goessel cared for 504 patients in the past year. More room is needed in the Home for the Aged at Goessel. A similar statement was made relative to the Bethel Home for the Aged, Newton by Mr. H. J. Andres in his report. Eighteen beds will be added to the Bethel Hospital when the third floor is completed. The Bethel Deaconess Sisterhood experienced a great loss through the death of Sister Frieda Kaufman.

Other Meetings

The Women's Missionary Meeting was held on October 18. Its evening program was on October 19, with Miss Helen E. Nickel giving the main address. See the Youth Section for the young people's program. The Ministers' Conference was held at Hillsboro this year.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Mary Becker

OCTOBER 28—"Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." Psalm 139:23,24.

Read the above verse again and ask yourself the question, "Is that the sincere prayer of my heart? Or am I afraid of God's flaming eye upon my heart and upon its every thought and intent?" As those who have been redeemed and who rejoice in our salvation it should be our innermost desire to live a life well-pleasing in the sight of the One who has become our Lord and Master. So let us in these devotional meditations for the coming days search our own hearts and ask the Lord to search our hearts in regard to our everyday Christian conduct. And he will lead us in the way everlasting.

OCTOBER 29—"All the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the soul is not filled" (marginal reading). Eccl. 6:7.

There are many people, and it is feared many so-called Christian people, who in their labor for that which satisifies the neds of the body forget to feed their souls. Jesus called the man who was interested only in building larger barns and storing up wealth a "fool." And is it not foolish to forget the nurture of the immortal soul in our care and concern for the mortal body? "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Mark 8:36,37).

October 30—"Death and life are in the power of the tongue." Proverbs 18:21a.

Our speech, perhaps more than any other form of our daily activity, needs to be put under God's close scrutiny; for it is here where many of us fail miserably in our Christian behavior. James calls the tongue "a fire, ... a restless evil . . . full of deadly poison" (James 3:6-8). Our tongue can bring death through unkind words, passing of hasty judgment, and ruthless condemnation; and many a man and woman has died —his influence has been hindered and his work destroyed. On the other hand, our tongues can bring life through the proclamation of salvation in Christ. Paul says, "Let your speech be alway with grace." Is there death in the use of my tongue? Or is there life? "Search me, O God."

OCTOBER 31—"And the Lord said to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid but speak and hold not thy peace; for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to harm thee. . ." Acts 18:9,10.

How often it is fear that grips our hearts when an opportunity presents itself to witness for Christ! And how often the one whom the Lord sends into our path to be helped by us goes away unhelped because of our fear of men. We fear the ridicule of men more than we fear being found unfaithful by God. But, our fearfulness can be changed into boldness. Consider the case of the disciples, who, in the hour of their Master's greatest need, all forsook him and fled. But only a few weeks later no amount of threatening or persecution or mistreatment could stop them from preaching. Their prayer was, "Grant unto thy servants that with all boldness may speak thy word": and the record states, "And they spake the word of God with boldness" (Acts 4:29,31).

NOVEMBER 1—"God looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand (deal wisely, acc. to marginal reading), that did seek after God." Psalm 53:2.

In God's sight the children of men fall into two classes—those who deal wisely and those who deal foolishly. Those who deal wisely are the ones who seek after God; those who deal foolishly are those who do not seek after God but deny his existence and power as the preceding verse says: "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." None of us, I am sure, would deny the existence of God; but do our lives and conduct always testify to our seeking after God and his will for us?

NOVEMBER 2—"Thy way, O God, is in holiness" (marginal reading). Psalm 77:13a.

There are two ways—God's ways and man's ways. Often we desire to walk our own ways, not seeking to know God's will for us. This is not as it should be in the life of a child of God. Although we sometimes cannot understand why God should lead us as he does, let us ever remind ourselves that God's way is holy. "He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake." Often we will find it true as the Lord has said, "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways" (Isaiah 55:8). If we follow him in humility and obedience he will lead us aright.

NOVEMBER 3—"Thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not." Isaiah 58:11.

One can hardly imagine anything more pleasant and comforting than suddenly to come upon a watered garden or a perpetual spring of water when tired and weary from traveling in the heat of a summer afternoon. Nor can one imagine anything more uplifting and inspiring, when tired and weary from traveling along the road of life, than to meet someone in whom the Spirit of Christ dwells and who radiates his love and goodness. Let us search our lives in regard to the influence we exert on others. Are we like a watered garden?

Young People's Program

For many years it has been customary to give one evening during the Western District Conference to the young people. This year again the program committee of the Western District C. E. Convention had planned a program for Wednesday evening, October 18.

Arnold Nickel, ministerial student at Bethel College, conducted the devotions. Verney Unruh, ministerial student at Bethel College and president of the Western District C. E. Convention, presided at the meeting. He told briefly of the work which the C. E. Convention is trying to do this year and named the projects which constitute the major part of this work. The young people have pledged five hundred dollars for each of four projects: The South American Mission, to be opened by the General Conference in Colombia; C.P.S. Camps; the aid of Chinese students who are preparing to carry on the work of our mission in China; and the Student Aid Fund at Bethel College for students of other groups. He stated that already three Japanese-American students are enrolled at Bethel and also one Negro and one Belgian student, as well as one American Indian boy who came to the Mennonite Bible Academy from the Busby, Montana, mission station.

In keeping with the theme for the evening, "I Choose Christ," Rev. Lubin Jantzen, superintendent of the Oklahoma Bible Academy, Meno, Oklahoma, spoke on the subject "Leading Youth to a Decision for Christ." Dr. P .C. Hiebert, Professor of Education at Sterling College, Sterling, Kansas, and chairman of the Mennonite Central Committee, spoke on "I Choose Christ." Both speakers emphasized the importance of making decisions and the necessity of making right decisions. The young person today must decide either for or against Christ: there is no neutral position he can take. It is imperative to acknowledge Christ not only as Saviour, but also as Lord.

The brief song service, preceding the program, was under the direction of Professor Vilas R. Gerber of he Bethel College music faculty. Miss Alta Unruh was the pianist. A string ensemble provided offerory music. Special numbers were furnished by a male chorus from the Buhler Mennonite Church and mixed choir from the Alexanderwohl Church.

The offering of $274.25 will be divided equally mong the four projects.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Wichita, Kansas: A group from the M. B. Church gave a C. E. program in our church on October 15.

—The North Church C. E. gave a program in the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, on October 15.

—The Three Rivers C.P.S. camp in California has received a contingent of thirty-nine new men, twenty-nine of them from the Sideling Hill camp, which was closed recently.

—The Burrton (Kansas) C.E. Echoes has reprinted the story of "The Invincible Leader," a very good peace story.

—C.P.S. men from the unit at the Lima State Hospital, Lima, Ohio, recently served as speakers at an evening worship service of the Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio.

—Leo Goertz and Pete Bartel are home on furlough at Hillsboro, Kansas. They are members of the C.P.S. Unit at Mulberry, Florida. The unit fights hookworm disease by building and installing sanitary privies. Recently the men of this unit constructed their 1000th sanitary privy.

—Robert Goering of Moundridge, Kansas and Ray Funk of Hillsboro, are also home after having participated in the atypical pneumonia experiment conducted at Pinehurst, North Carolina. After their recuperation and furlough periods they will return to the Colorado Springs and Fort Collins camps respectively. Reports are that Ray got so sick that the doctors in charge nearly got some gray hair. We hope that they will report on their experiences—that is, Bob and Ray.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE NOTES

Speaker for the Parents' Day Vesper service will be Mr. C. H. Sprunger, Berne, Indiana, class of '24. The Girls' Choir will sing several numbers.

Officers elected recently for the Men's Gospel Team are Maynard Shelley, East Greenville, Pennsylvania, as president, and Arthur Keiser, Quakertown, Pennsylvania, as secretary-treasurer.

Rehearsals of the choral society, founded in 1902, have begun under Professor Russell A. Lantz, for the Christmas rendition of Handel's "The Messiah." "The Messiah" has been sung for about forty years at Christmas-time by the choral society.

President Ramseyer has announced that the Rev. Ernest Bohn, Millersburg, Indiana, minister at the Warren Street Mennonite Church at Middlebury, Indiana, will be a new instructor in philosophy and ethics at Bluffton College next spring. At the same time he will operate the college farm.

Rev. Bohn is a graduate of Goshen College, and received his B.D. degree from Princeton Seminary, and his master's degree at the University of Pennsylvania. He was minister at the Tiskilwa, Illinois, Mennonite Church until 1930, when he moved to Souderton, Pennsylvania, where he served until 1943. For the past year he has been at the Middlebury, Indiana, Mennonite Church. He will move to Bluffton not later than March 1, 1945.

Mennonite Bible Academy News Items

The Academy program given in the College Chapel Friday night, October 13, was attended by parents and friends. Immediately following the program, the visitors were shown through the 'new' Academy building, formerly known as the old dining hall. We would invite others who may stop at the campus to look us up in our new quarters.

Mrs. Buller to Speak at Rally

Mrs. Henry Buller is to be the speaker at the Annual Fall Rally of the Eastern District Y. P. Union. The date is October 29, 1944, the place Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton. This will be the Union's fiftieth rally, for it is in its fiftieth year. The project for the Fall Rally is $200.00 for the erection of two rooms in the parsonage of Rev. and Mrs. Gregor at Napier.

The Intermediate Rally will be held at the same time that the above Senior Rally is held. The project goal for the Intermediate Rally is $20.00 for part payment of the $50.00 needed to purchase a cow for the leper work in India.

Insulin By Plane Saves Girl's Life

An interesting account of how the life of a young woman in Paraguay was saved by prompt action has come from the Mennonite center in Asuncion. Netty Voth, from the Friesland colony in eastern Paraguay, journeyed to the Fernheim colony in the Chaco to secure medical advice and care from Dr. Schmidt. She arrived in a very serious state as a result of a diabetic condition. The supply of insulin at Dr. Schmidt's office was not sufficient to save her life. By telegram the Mennonite Center at Asuncion was asked to make arrangements to have insulin flown in by plane. The Paraguayan government graciously cooperated and the next day eight parcels, with the aid of tiny parachutes, were dropped from the plane into the Fernheim colony. Latest reports indicate that Netty is improving. A fuller account of this incident has been written by Mrs. Willard Smith and will be released at a later date.

hospital units, and with farm units on Sundays. The men from the farm units can get together only on Sundays.

Home Churches To Be Visited

As soon as the men have completed their camps and units, they will proceed to visit the churches in their assigned district. When time permits two meetings are planned, in a few instances when time is too short, only one service can be held.

The cooperating boards—the Relief Board, th Education Board, and the Peace Committee, with the Home Mission Board—hope that every effort will be made to make the meetings a true blessing, filled with inspiration. It is the prayer of all th members of the arranging Committee that th General Conference church members everywher might be drawn closer together and to Christ and that they will everywhere determine to give mor time for careful Bible Study and prayer. Very sincerely in Christ, A. J. Neuenschwander, for th Cooperating Boards.

THE BACK SEAT SPEAKS

I am the back seat. In many places I am not popular. At a baseball game nobody wants me. In th great arena where the men are playing hockey, I am often quite forsaken. When two prize fighters ar matching their wits, people try to get as far away from me as possible.

But inside a church—am I ever popular! I am th most important seat in the entire building. I migh not amount to much when elsewhere, but when I go to church, believe me, I really am somebody. People make a big fuss over me. I am always the mos crowded of all the pews. The young people love m and so do the old folks.

I am not much for looks. Many of the other seat are far nicer than I am. I have many other disa vantages, too. People can hear the preacher bette listen to the singing better, and catch the spirit o the meeting better when they are sitting in any othe seat except me. Yet, for all this, I do not seem to b losing my popularity. I am more in demand tha ever. Sinners love me, and so do Christians. Th is something that cannot be said for my fellow seat

I am the first seat to be filled. I am never empty I sometimes pity those poor front seats. They loo so sad and empty-like—just as if it were a funera and they were waiting for the mourners to come i and fill them.

IMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH
Los Angeles, California

The Lord has richly blessed our congregation, in that eight young people were baptized and received nto church membership. Ten more were received nto church membership by transfer of church letter.

Announcements have been distributed in this comnunity inviting people for the great city-wide revival nder Hyman Appelman, which will be held in a tent n the down-town area.

October 8, it was a privilege of this church to have children's dedication service. Six babies were conecrated to the Lord.

This church has consented to furnish space for the eligious classes sponsored by the "Evangelical Reeased-Time Education, Inc."

The Women's Missionary Society again met on)ctober 5. Quite a number attended, so much was one in the line of fixing up old clothes and quilting.

The quilters had a good time it seems—they even opy recipes in between. But when they quilt they vork so hard that they bend or break their needles. Irs. Arthur Richert gave a report of the various neetings she had been able to attend while on a rip to Kansas and then to Chicago, where she had ie honor of becoming a grandmother.

The congregation indeed is going to feel the loss f our pastor and family, Rev. W. A. Regier. They ntend to leave for Oregon, the latter part of Novnber. We are waiting upon the Lord to show us e person he has for this church. His will be done our prayer.

FAREWELL FROM THE WENGERS

Philadelphia
Oct. 17, 1944

Dear Christian Friends:

On this our last morning in the U.S.A., we are very conscious of the fact that the prayers of many dear friends are surrounding us, and that we are being carried to the throne of God on the hearts and lips of many who love us.

May we take this opportunity to express our sincere and hearty thanks to all for the love and friendship which we have so much enjoyed during the time of our furlough, and for the love and interest which you have shown in the work which is dear to your hearts and ours.

In a few hours, God willing, we shall embark. It costs to leave home and loved ones, but the peace and quietness which He gives is nothing less than a miracle. Our trust is in Him. "The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show Himself strong in behalf of those whose heart is perfect toward Him." May He grant us that "perfect" heart attitude, and then as He "shows Himself strong" in our behalf, and in behalf of our loved ones at home and in India, what more can we desire. God bless you and us.

In Christian love and fellowship
(Signed) Paul and Adah Wenger

Letter From Ferd Isaac

(Jacob Isaac, Moundridge, Kansas, sends for publication the following from a letter, just received from his son, Ferdinand, now in Calcutta, India. The letter is dated August 3, 1944, and reads as follows:)

"I am here at Calcutta now over two months. It is the rainy season and very wet indeed. We continue our rice distribution in a limited way, until we see that the people are safely over this difficult season. I had sciatica, beginning with July 1 and it was very severe for three weeks. Since then I am much better. It was in the right leg; could not sleep at night. At that time I had the opportunity to cry to God, as the Psalmist did acording to Psalm 130. The whole Psalm became my own during those nights and I received great joy in the midst of pain. I did not get sick otherwise and was able to do the most necessary work. I still feel traces of the trouble and I can not walk perfectly even with both legs, but I can sleep well and am steadily improving. My helpers, Indian Christian brothers, have also been sick these days with flu and fever. There is very much malaria around here.

Anna writes that they too are having heavy rains. She is getting along quite well with her school management."

1. The tool house where tools for project work are kept. Two campers issue tools to the foremen and also file saws and sharpen axes.
2. Henry Mullet and the deer he shot in '43. All hunting is done outside the park. Much of the game was brought to the kitchen where the meat was prepared for the dining hall. On one occasion bear meat was served here.
3. Our president Alfred G. Zook. He was formerly a amper here and also served as assistant director at he Western State (mental) Hospital, Staunton, Virginia.
4. Snow plow at work on the Going-to-the-Sun Highway. Because of the snow, this highway across the park is closed generally until the middle of June.
5. A native of Glacier National Park. Besides bear there are deer, elk, moose, and many smaller animals in the park. Bears often try to make themselves at home in several of our side camps.
6. A view across Lake McDonald, about one and one-half miles from camp. The mountains in the background are around twelve miles away.
7. West entrance to Glacier National Park. This is one of seven official entrances to the park. A checking station is located at each entrance.
8. Bear and cubs on the Going-to-the-Sun Highway. Travellers are forbidden to feed wild animals.
9. Forms for 100,000 gallons reservoir near Park Headuarters. This reservoir was contructed this past summer by our C.P.S. campers—Herman Liechty being the foreman.
10. Clarence Graber, Foreman McPherson, and Emanuel Miller with a catch of trout. Fishing is excellent especially in lakes far into the interior. The limit is 10 fish or 15 lbs. and 1 fish.

Two campers, Mike Wipf and Levi Tschetter, cutting down timber. The project during the winter consists chiefly of cutting wood for fuel.

Skiing is the main sport in winter. This skier is Walter Surau. A ski slide on Belton hill was used by most of the fellows.

Blazing a trail in the western part of the park. This road was built to enable the trucks to haul wood from areas along the main North Fork road.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Penner. Their wedding was the only marriage ever performed in our camp chapel.

IN THE MAIL

'This is my first year I read The Mennonite. I e to read editorials about mission work, the daily votional messages, about young people's retreats especially the one from Halstead, Kansas, and P.S. notes. Now that my nephew Ben. H. Bergen d many of our church members are in camp, I e to learn more about camp life and also pray ch for them. The jottings also are very interest-:.

Am thankful I have this paper now. I let others read it . . . Am sending $2.00 for another year; the rest you can use where it is necessary. Wish you all God's richest blessing in your work. I am sending a poem along, but if you can't use it throw it in the waste basket.' Below is the poem sent in by reader "M.G."

GOD'S KIND CARE

God hath not promised skies always blue,
Flower-strewn pathways, all our lives through
God hath not promised sun without rain,
Joy without sorow, peace without pain.
God hath not promised, we shall not know
Toil and temptation, trouble and woe.
He hath not told us, we shall not bear
Many a burden, many a care.

God hath not promised smooth roads and wide
Swift, easy travel, needing no guide;
Never a mountain, rocky and steep,
Never a river turbid and deep.

But God hath promised strength for the day,
Rest for the labor, light for the way,
Grace for the trials, help from above,
Unfailing sympathy, undying love.

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. Peter Boehr was born on April 12, 1855, in Stockborn Bei, Kaiserlautern, Germany, to Peter and Phillippina Schwalter. She married in 1880 and four years later with her husband and children migrated to Henderson, Nebraska, where they lived for nine years. After thirty-two years spent in the Wisner, Nebraska, community, they moved to Bluffton, Ohio, in 1925. Mr. Boehr died in 1930, a few weeks after the golden anniversary of their marriage. Mrs. Boehr was living with her daughter, Elizabeth at Tiffin, Ohio, when she passed away on September 17, 1944. The six children who survive her are: Mrs. D. J. Brand, Jacksonville, Florida; Mrs. E. R. Moser, Bluffton, Ohio; Elizabeth Boehr, Tiffin, Ohio; Rev. Jacob P. Boehr, Newton, Kansas; Henry Boehr, Wisner, Nebraska; and John Boehr, Bluffton, Ohio. At the time of her death Mrs. Boehr was a member of the First Mennonite Church, Bluffton.

John J. Krehbiel was born December 1, 1857, at Eduardorf, Vohlynia, Russia. In 1874 he migrated to Moundridge, Kansas. He was baptized in 1872. During his life he held memberships in the Hopefield, Eden, and First Mennonite Church of Christian congregations. He and Anna M. Stucky were married in 1880 and lived in wedlock over sixty-three years. Of the fifteen children born to them, three died in infancy. They first lived in Turkey Creek and then in Mound Township. In 1887 they moved to Moundridge, Kansas, where he was in business for about forty years. He filled various positions of trust and business, and for ten years he served as county commissioner. His wife passed away in 1943, and he departed this life on October 7, 1944.

Mrs. Katie nee Roth Grubb, daughter of Edwin and Mary G. Roth, was born in Milford Square, Pennsylvania, July 13, 1876. She was received into the membership of the First Mennonite Church of Philadelphia through baptism as a young person and remained a member until 1899 when she became a member of the Second Mennonite Church, working with her husband who was pastor of the Church for thirty-nine years. She was united in marriage to Silas Manasses Grubb, June 7, 1899. She died October 1, 1944. She is survived by a brother, Menno; one daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ella Grubb, and one grandson, Robert Grubb.

RELIEF

India Appointees on Way

After many months of waiting, direct passage to India was obtained for R. C. Kauffman, Clayton Beyler and Lawrence Burkholder. (The latter two have been sent by the Mennonite Relief Committee). Farewell services were held at Akron on the evening of October 5, after which they left for an eastern port to be ready for sailing.

Middle East Workers Leave

At the time of the farewell services for the India workers two additional brethern were commissioned for services in the Middle East. Henry Detwiler, Souderton, Pennsylvania, will join the other Mennonite relief workers in Egypt. S. Floyd Pannabecker has been appointed for India and China, but at the present time, will go as far as Palestine and temporarily enter the relief activities there until permission can be secured to enter India. P. P. Balzer could not accompany Brother Pannabecker because of lack of space. He will leave in the near future and follow the same route.

Thut and Buller in England

By letter it has been learned that John Thut and Henry Buller arrived safely in London on September 28. John has gone to Taxal Edge to assist Peter Dyck with the convalescent boys there and Henry is located at the London Center.

C. P. S.

C.P.S. Side Camps

Throughout the fire season, which usually starts in May and ends in October, small units of C.P.S. men were stationed away from base camps and lived in side camps. Particularly was this true of the camps in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast areas. At this time of the year side camps are breaking up and coming in to the main camps. Here are a few glimpses into the life and activities of a number of side camps during the past season:

Caldor (Camino)—"Fought one small lightning fire. . . dug a water pipe line ditch. Porcupines gnaw the floor underneath our sleeping barracks every night."

Airport (Camino)—"Our work has been telephone maintenance and filling in water breaks. We had several rough thunder and lightning storms which were the cause of our forest fires of the season."

Camas Creek (Belton)—"We have done quite a bit of trail work. . . We have seen several moose and seven bears came around the first day we were here."

Quaking Aspens (North Fork)—"Ten of the eleven-man crew were going through the forest two by two when we almost bumped into a bull the other day. Only measuring and recording merchantable timber in sample strips. The result. . .will help the Forestry Service to determine what timber can be sold on a basis which will maintain a perpetual yield."

King's River (North Fork)—"Most of our time was spent in fighting fire. We were called on one fire which required a 23-mile hike to get to it. A pack train of nine mules carried our food and our fire fighting tools. The hike was made over the most rugged country imaginable."

Grant (Three Rivers)—"One crew is still erecting a most natural-looking fence around the Genera Grant Tree while another crew is tearing down old buildings."

Mennonite Aid Notes

Mennonites in Mexico

Winfield Fretz, who is in charge of the Mennonit Aid work at Akron, spent the month of June and a few days in July visiting the Mennonite colonies in Mexico. Brother Fretz was interested in survey ing and studying the colonization efforts of the Mennonites there. A report of his visit will be pub lished in a thirty-five page pamphlet. According to a census which he was able to take the number o Mennonites in Mexico by group is approximatel the following:

Old Colony Menn. (Migrated from Can.)	11,69
Sommerfielder (Migrated from Can.)	60
Ch. of God in Christ Menn. (Migrated from U.S.)	6
Gen. Conf. Menn. (Migrated from Russia)	5
O. O. Amish and O. O. Menn. (Migrated from U.S.)	3

—Hebron Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas: Mrs. M. C. Lehman gave a talk about collecting and preparing relief clothing in our church on Sunday evening, October 8. The three sewing societies will hold their annual mission sale November 18, 10:45 A. M. Everybody is welcome to attend.—Corr.

—Freeman Junior College received cash donations of $44,730.29 in the past two years. It has paid all of its debts.

—A word to those who block the way, taken from a church bulletin: "It has been repeatedly brought to our attention that the rear doorway of the church is congested because of people standing in the door and on the steps. If all of us would try to keep the door clear it will add to the orderliness of a church service. Some of our older people who finding that the service has taxed their strength and who want to go quickly to their homes, are otherwise forced to wait at the door."

—The following two quotations taken from two church bulletins describe one kind of spiritual aid: MEDITATION CARDS—you will receive one at the door as you leave. They will contain some of the helpful thoughts found in the sermon and they are printed with the hope that they will prove a real help and aid in daily meditations. Take the card and refer to it during the week, every few hours during the day and let the thoughts become a part of your major thinking through the day. This may help to clarify your thinking and strengthen your spiritual life."

"SILENT COMMUNION WITH GOD

(Write the following affirmation on a card and carry it with you for a week. Read it slowly and imaginatively a dozen times a day, until it has sunk deep into the mind, where God will use it to heal and integrate body, mind, and spirit). Prayer can become a great power in my life. It changes events. It makes me pure. It is the way to the greatest and best Friendship. If we ask anything in his name, he will do it. I will open my heart fully to God through prayer that His power may flow into my life."

in charge of the service Sunday evening, October 29.

Fairfield—The community has again started a series of union services. Sunday evening, the service was held in the Mennonite Church of which the Rev. G. S. Stoneback is the pastor. The speaker was the Rev. John A. Klineginna, pastor of Grace Reformed Church of Hanover, Pa.

East Swamp—Janet, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Abraham Unruh, of Kentucky, was very sick with pneumonia, recently. Brother and Sister Unruh, members of the Church, are doing mission work in the Kentucky mountains. The Rev. Fred Kuehner, Th.M., Professor of New Testament Greek at the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, was the guest speaker at the Rally Day service October 8.

First, Phila.—The pastor, the Rev. J. J. Plenert, is visiting churches and C. P. S. camps in the interest of the "Bible Institute and Visitation Program." During his absence, the Rev. Paul A. Uhlinger, a student at the Eastern Baptist Seminary, Philadelphia, will occupy the pulpit.

Springfield—The Rev. R. F. Landis, representative of the American Sunday School Union, gave an illustrated lecture on Sunday evening, October 8.

Perkasie—Members of the church conducted a service at the Home for the Aged at Frederick, Sunday afternoon, October 1. Mr. Herbert Fretz delivered the message. The Rev. R. F. Landis gave an illustrated lecture Friday evening, October 6.

STRAY THOUGHTS

The shoe-shine boy watches the shoes on the fe of those that walk by, and the hat seller looks a the hat of the passerby. From his open shop th vendor looks at each walking stick in the hand the pedestrian and the newsboy sees each paper the hand of its purchaser. Each sees his particula interest in the hope of finding someone without that he might receive it.

The eyes of the Lord run to and fro through th whole earth searching out the Lord's particular i terest—the pure heart, that such hearts as are y vile and unclean might be made pure and holy His sight. As a Christian worker, is a man's hea my chief interest or do my eyes see things that a of little concern to God?—O. A. Waltner

Rev. Phil. A. Wedel New Elder Of Alexanderwohl Church

Rev. Phil. A. Wedel, until recently pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, has come to Kansas to assume the Eldership of the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church, Goessel, Kansas. Some of the family came from Aberdeen by train, while Rev. Wedel drove through in the car. The Wedels will ive in Goessel.

Rev. Wedel will formally accept his new position on Sunday morning, November 5. On this day the church will welcome its new Elder. After the church dinner at noon a reception will be held for the incoming pastor. There will be special music by various groups and short talks. Rev. C. C. Wedel and Rev. J. J. Banman will bring brief messages.

Rev. Philip A. Wedel

The Alexanderwohl Church, with a membership of over 900, is the second largest congregation in the General Conference. However, Brother Phil. Wedel is not unaccustomed to serving a large church, for he was pastor of the large Eden Church at Moundridge, Kansas, from 1925 to 1936. From 1936 to the present he has served as pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, one of the largest churches in the Pacific District Conference.

Brother Wedel is a native of Kansas, having grown to manhood in the Mennonite community at Moundridge. Before being called to the pastorate of the Eden Church he had served as teacher and superintendent in the public schools of Kansas for over half a dozen years. During most of his pastorates at Moundridge and Aberdeen he has served as an instructor of religious education in the public school system.

He has served in numerous offices of both district and General Conferences. He was president of the Pacific District Conference for four years. From 1935 to 1941 he served as Chairman of the Doctrine and Conduct Committee of the General Conference and from 1938 to 1941 as Secretary of the Colonization Committee. In 1938 he became Secretary of the General Conference. He is also a member of the Board of Directors of Bethel College and has served on hospital boards.

Statement On Peacetime Military Conscription

The statement below was unanimously adopted at e recent session of the Western District Conference North Newton, Kansas, October 19.)

Statement to the President of the United States nd to Senators and Representatives:

We want to express to you our deep Christian ncern over the present agitation for peacetime ilitary conscription in our country and military aining in our public schools.

Our forefathers knew what it was to live in counes cursed by military conscription. That is why ey came to America seeking to be free from compulsory military service and the restrictions of religious and personal freedom by the power of the State.

You will therefore understand why we are so concerned lest the scourge of state totalitarianism and militarism which now threatens to curse the entire world may engulf our own land and its institutions. We cease not in our prayers earnestly petitioning that our country may be spared from being caught in this fateful drift. With equal earnestness we pray that you may be used of God to help stem this dangerous tide and to help find a more God-pleasing answer to the problem of human conflict than that of militarism and war.

From Our Brethren in Europe

Neff and Kuiper write. Hege passed away
By Cornelius Krahn

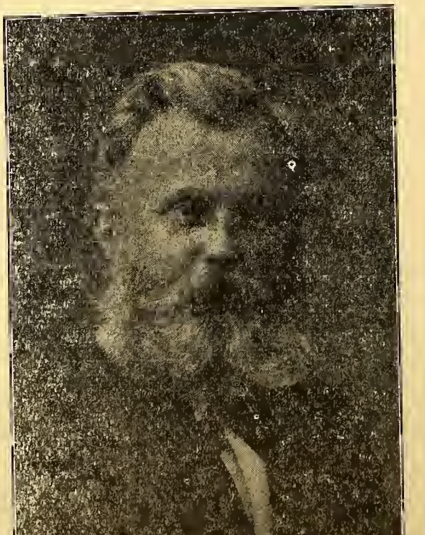
A few days ago the writer received two letters from friends in Europe through the International Red Cross. The editor asked for permission to publish them in The Mennonite. Rev. Christian Neff writes: "Befinden gut. Alle gesund. Christian Hege gestorben. Lexikonsarbeit langsam vorwarts. 37 te Lieferung nach dem Krieg . . . Gott befohlen."

Neff Still Active

Many will remember Rev. Neff from his visit to this country as well as for his work in arranging for the three Mennonite World Conferences in Zurich, Danzig, and Amsterdam. He had been the pastor of the Mennonite Church of Weierhof and after his successor was drafted he again resumed these duties. Although he is more than eighty years of age, he has "post war plans" just like the rest of us. After the war the thirty-seventh part of the Mennonitisches Lexikon is to appear. This unique contribution is to consist of forty-five parts and was begun before the first World War. Christian Hege, the co-editor of the Lexikon lived neither to see the end of the present war nor the completion of this important work. Unselfishly and untiringly Hege has worked, and all Mennonite scholars profit by it. Mrs. Hege, who also made valuable contirbutions to the field of Mennonite History, passed away some time ago.

Dutch Leader Writes

The second letter was written by Fritz Kuiper the pastor of the Mennonite Church, Alkmaar, Holland. He is the outstanding leader of a movement amon Dutch Mennonites which emphasizes the significanc of the Scriptures and our Mennonite heritage (non resistance, etc.) more than they have been in preceding generations. From previous letters and thi one we learn that our Mennonite brethren in Hollan carry on their work even though under extreme difficulties. The Mennonite Church building of Rotterdam, whose pastor, Gorter, was chairman of the Dutc Mennonite relief organization, has been destroye Rev. Kuiper writes that they have had to move twi and that two of his nephews were killed recently. Hi father, Dr. A. K. Kuiper, a well-known ministe formerly of the church of Amsterdam, is over eight years of age. Since some of the readers may enjo reading a Dutch letter we quote it. "Gelukgwensch Verhuisden naar Vandermeystraat Alkmaar Taco ve loor twee zoons Vader rusthuis Haarlem Van jouw familie geen bericht Wij en vriendenkring gezond vr werkend. FRITS ANS"



Rev. Christian Neff, German Mennonite leader who although eighty years old is serving as pastor of a church and is still engaged in editing the "Mennonitisches Lexikon," an historical work. The above picture of him was undoubtedly made at about the time when he visited the United States after the first World War.

May these few lines inspire us to intercede for ou brethren and to aid them as they have formerly alwa been willing to help those in need.

MEDITATION

By Lester Hostetler

SEEK YE FIRST the kingdom of God and H righteousness. This verse sums up the principal teac ing of Matthew six. It is all too common to put G second, even in our prayers and fasting and almsgivin Or, living as if He did not exist, we worry concerni things to eat and drink and wear. He feeds the bir and clothes the lilies of the field, and, Jesus assur us, He will take care of our needs. Of course, must do our part. While we must pray for our dai bread, prayer is not intended as a substitute for wo Even the birds get up early in the morning and hus for their feed. God does not put the worms do their throats, neither does He build nests for the He gives them the strength and the materials wi which they can do these things for themselves. EDITORIAL

What Is Deep Spirituality?

In the October 10th issue we raised in these coumns the question, "What is deep spirituality?" We uggested at that time that this term, which seems o mean a lot to most Christians, should be defined nore clearly and concretely and that such attempts hould lead us to focus on the things which are truly nportant in the sight of God.

Herewith we print two answers that have come.
tev. H. Albert Claassen writes:

"To define this expression in terms of my own ersonal longing and experience I must say that it that craving of the heart for communion and nowledge of God and His saving grace.

How my soul hungered for this experience from arly boyhood days, when sin troubled my conience, I am unable to describe here. But the Lord esus who saw and understood my need, ministered rough believing parents, ministers, and teachers
His Holy Word, the light that led me to behold y sinful lost condition and Himself on the cross as e died for me. It was the Holy Spirit's work rough these channels that sought entrance into y heart. And when He persuaded me to yield my-lf to Him, assurance of sins forgiven, peace and a w life have been ministered to me by the Spirit of od.

That this result was reached after many years of nflict, I must confess with shame. And that after ace with God, which passes all understanding of mind and heart, was my inestimable possession, nptation, conflict and many a sin has marked d marred my witness for Christ's saving power. I ewise do confess. But I wish to praise His mercy d grace, who has not set me aside but granted me giveness as often as I confessed to Him my sins.

These experiences have created within me a cravfor deeper spirituality, greater fruitfulness to rify my Father in heaven, such as He alone can part and produce by the Holy Spirit in my little
."

Brother Claassen defines "deep spirituality" as at craving of the heart for communion and know-ge of God and His saving grace." This defini-reminds one of Jesus' words, "Blessed are they ch do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for shall be filled." Is this hungering and thirsting ep spirituality"? Brother Claassen relates how "soul hungered for this experience from early hood days, when sin troubled . . . . conscience."
this hungering already deep spirituality? Let ecure release from sin by bodily torture and weari-e pilgrimage a condition of "deep spirituality"? Is craving and longing the essence of "deep spiritty"?

Mrs. H. W. Vickers submitted the following answer:

"The first great truth brought to mind in meditating upon the meaning of "A Deeper Spirituality," is that it is looked upon as all foolishness by the natural man.

But we have the mind of Christ! We can still always say "Jesus Christ is the Lord" in spite of what others teach. All this because we have not received a worldly spirit but the spirit which is of God."

Perhaps then, a deeper spirituality is the whole difference between a Peace Church and one which has not overcome the worldly spirit. But if there are envying, and strife and divisions among ourselves, are we not still carnal?

Let us then be spiritually minded, so that the God of peace be with us, and cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

She suggests that "Perhaps then, a deeper spirituality is the whole difference between a Peace Church and one which has not overcome the worldly spirit." We may ask as to what mainly constitutes that difference. Is it the spirit of love? If so, is love then the all-important essence of "deep spirituality"? Does Paul suggest this in I Cor. 13 and Romans 13:10 and Jesus in such verses as John 13:34?

We thank Brother Claassen and Mrs. Vickers for their contributions and invite others to help define "deep spirituality."—rw.

Seeing Ourselves

What would be the feeling of most Americans if some morning they should read in a new release about Japan that a letter opener described as having been carved from the bone of an American soldier had been offered to the emperor Hirohito? Well, how must the Japanese feel if they have found out that a letter opener described as having been carved from a bone of a Japanese soldier was actually offered to President Roosevelt? The White House has made known the fact that President Roosevelt refused to accept it.

A news release from New York states, "Deploring 'isolated' acts of desecration with respect to the bodies of slain Japanese soldiers, the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America in a public statement appealed to American soldiers as a group to discourage such actions among the 'relatively small number of their comrades in arms who may be inclined toward such conduct."

All this suggests that among all peoples there are those who go to the extremes of hate and that among all peoples these do not represent the whole picture.

World Order Sunday

Many churches in the United States will observe November 12 as World Order Day. "The purpose will be to enlist the total strength of the churches behind an intelligent and concerted effort to achieve a world settlement consistent with Christian principles. Primary emphasis will be given to the laying of spiritual foundations for tomorrow's world." Will any Mennonite churches observe this day, and if so, what will their approach to the matter of World Order be?

Peace Time Conscription

Renewed efforts are being made to bring about peace time conscription, and these efforts will undoubtedly be heightened after the election. As Christians we ought to be deeply concerned about this matter, for surely it is not God's will. Mennonites who take part in the national election ought also to recognize their responsibility of expressing their concern about peacetime conscription to the men who represent them. The Mennonite Central Committee urges that the Peace Churches unite in prayer about this evil that threatens. Certainly it is not the will of God that senators and representatives should vote for peacetime conscription. If prayer is essentially surrender to God, then perhaps one of our first steps should be the expression of our concern to those who represent us. We need not make demands; we can simply state our position. See in another part of this paper the resolution on this matter passed at the recent Western District Conference. This resolution is suggestive of the approach that might be ours.—rw.

Church Building Needed For The Bethel Mission Church In Winnipeg

Since the need of a church building for the Bethel Mission Church has been recognized by the Canadian Mennonite Conference, which met in Winnipeg this year, appeals have been made in our Canadian church papers by Rev. David Toews and others for contributions to finance such a project. At this time we would also like to bring this matter to the attention of our American brethren.

The need of a church building in Winnipeg has been keenly felt by our people for some time. Our present quarters are rented, but they are in such a poor state of repair that the owners desire to tear down this building as soon as the war is over in order to make room for an oil station. The work in Winnipeg is largely a missionary enterprise and hence the people on whose behalf such a church is required cannot be expected to raise the necessary funds themselves. They have, however, shown a real interest in this matter by promising over $1000 to be devoted to this purpose.

We feel that the work in Winnipeg has a definite future and that the Lord will incline the hearts of many individuals as well as churches to contribute toward this need. Any contributions may be sent either to Rev. Benjamin Ewert, Moxam Court, Winnipeg, Manitoba, or to Rev. I. I. Friesen, 864 Downing Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

WHAT ARE YOU THANKFUL FOR?

"According to all indications we will be spending another Thanksgiving Day while a great World War is raging. Under these circumstances, do we yet have things to be thankful for? Here is an invitation to you who are in the C.P.S. Camps and in the Government Services to drop us a line in response to the above question. We shall publish as many of these replies as possible in the Church Bulletin." —Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, Calif.

CORRESPONDENCE

HANSTON MENNONITE CHURCH

Hanston, Kansas

Greetings to readers of these columns from this Western Kansas church on the hill.

May I share with you one of the enriching experiences in the lives of one of our church families, the celebration October 22 of the Golden Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Miller.

As is their custom the Millers attended the services of our church and Sunday School, after which their sons and daughters served a lovely dinner in the home, to the honored couple, their brothers and sisters, and the pastor's family, numbering thirty-six.

This was followed by a program for which the two grandchildren sang, gave the scripture and an appropriate selection of poetry. A men's quartet composed of two sons and two sons-in-law sang two appropriate numbers, one of which was "God's Book." Our pastor, Rev. Bechtel, based his short address on I Samuel 7:12, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." Then Mabel Bechtel sang a favorite hymn of the Millers, "So Nimm Denn Meine Haende." As Mr. Miller then voiced their appreciation for the kindnesses of the day he beautifully expressed thanksgiving to a loving Heavenly Father that has led and ever helped them during these fifty years together.

It was a joy to the parents that the five living children and their families could be present for the occasion. Likewise all of the living brothers and sisters of the couple were able to attend excepting Mrs. Minna Ewy, of Abilene, Kansas, and Mr. Alfred Miller of Los Angeles, California, a brother and sister of Mr. Miller.

Other activities of our church continue in the usual way. Several weeks ago the Sunday School teachers met with the Superintendent and discussed plans for improving our Sunday School. Previously individual attendance records have not been kept, but now shall be, as will recognition and awards be given for perfect attendance. Also one class has ordered a class banner and class pins to designate that they are attempting to be "Shining Stars."

Our pastor and his wife attended the Western District Conference that recently convened in Memorial Hall at North Newton and report a most profitable time spent there. —Corr.

BUHLER MENNONITE CHURCH

October the 8th a mission festival and installation service proved to be a great day in our church. In the morning Rev. Fransen was installed as Elder. The rites were performed by Dr. C. E. Krehbiel. The sermon was rendered by Rev. A. J. Dyck. Dinner was served to all who attended. The afternoon was a mission program. The two guest speakers were Rev. Edwin Weaver, Hesston, Kansas, and D. J. Unruh, Newton, Kansas. A musical program was given in the evening and also an address by Rev. Clyde Dirks, Hutchinson, Kansas. The offerings for the day were given to following causes: Peace committee of the Western District Conference, Missions, and C.P.S. camps. —Mrs. Arnold Esau, Corr.

FREEDOM IN INDIA

By John Thiessen

So often we think of India as being absolutely bound in caste regulations and customs and fears. Yes, that is true religiously and in general external behavior a Hindu is bound by tradition to act in certain prescribed ways if he wants to be in good standing with his fellows. But when it comes to what is called Christian ethics, then the Hindu is remarkably free. He does not need to ask whether a certain statement he is about to make, or has made is true or false. The only consideration is, "Does it serve my purpose?" He also does not need to be careful about distinguishing between the difference between "mine and thine." If he swipes something he only needs to be careful to conceal it. Whether he has done wrong or not does not enter his mind. Out of such atmosphere our Christians come, and they cannot always shake off what they have been told for twenty-five centuries. So very often when a brother comes to me with a story about some other brother my first duty is to consider whether he is a friend or foe of that other one. However, thank God that there are many Christian brothers and sisters who can speak the truth in love, and who have the grace to repent and amend when they have dealt dishonestly. There is growth toward Christlikeness.

STRAY THOUGHTS

The short, bewhiskered gentleman was hobbling along the station platform on his peg leg. His friendly face was the invitation to have a conversation with him. Pointing to his wooden leg, I asked, "Where and how did you lose your leg?"

He chuckled as he answered, "I didn't lose my leg. I gave it in the service of the railroad company."

Our visit continued but the above words were more important than everything else that was said. Here was victory in defeat. My admiration for my new friend was complete. But I admire Christ even more for the words He can say, "I didn't lose my life—I gave it for the salvation of the world."

"Be sure to list Bob's apple-crate book-case."
ut before that improvised book-case was listed in ie inventory Willard Smith stood at the door with message from the Chaco: "A person ill with abetes near death. Send by air eight boxes of inılin. We shall lay out sheets in triangular form mark the spot where the medicine is to be ropped." The clock stood at 10:40 and by eleven eleven-thirty all business houses would close unl two-thirty or three in the afternoon. In a few inutes the plans were laid out. One went to see e Air Commission, another bought the medicine ıd the third tried to find the original message which ıd been telephoned to a hotel near our house. By even-thirty all the men were back with reports. El-n had the medicine, Bob knew the message had en sent by radio from Fortin de Lopez Filippis ıd Willard had the plane. Since the Beachcraft had en slightly damaged in a storm they had to secure small two-passenger plane to make the trip. In short time the insulin was in Lieutenant Van Hing's office and was tied into two small cloth pack-es with a little white paper parachute attached to ch so that they might float safely to earth when ey would be dropped over Filadelphia. Lieutenants randa and Van Hining left later in the afternoon this mission. They landed at Pinasco for the night cause they had started rather late in the day and cause of the unfavorable weather conditions. But six o'clock the next morning the roar of the motors
s heard over the quiet little village of Filadelphia.
e little plane dipped its silver wings as if to salute sleepy town, then dropped its precious cargo while d and grateful hands reached up to catch both ckages before they fell to earth. Again the plane ıted and turned toward home, arriving in Asuncion mid-morning.

he next day a message came saying that the sick
l was better. We then learned the rest of the story.

GOD'S WISDOM

By Forrest Musser

2. The judgment of God is guided by infinite wisdom. When man sets himself up as a judge of people, invariably he becomes unjust because his wisdom is limited. Man can look upon only one side of the ledger at the same time. He will focus his eyes upon the debit side or the credit side. God looketh upon both sides. His judgment is made in the light of man's past, present and future, his weakness and his strength. The judge of all the earth will do right because he has infinite wisdom. The sooner we recognize our mental limitations in judging people and nations and bring in a reverence for the unfailing wisdom of God, the sooner our personal and our national life will become beautiful and full of joy.

I cannot help referring again to the life of George Washington Carver which has always stimulated my thinking. At the beginning of his college training he asked the creator what the universe was made for and God answered, "Ask for something more in keeping with that little mind of yours." Carver then asked, "What was man made for"?, and God replied, "Little man, you still want to know too much." Later he spoke to the Creator and said that he wanted to know all about peanuts. God told him again that his mind was too small even to know all about peanuts, but God said that he would give Mr. Carver a handful of peanuts, which he could analyze and study. Carver took this handful and in the course of time made over three hundred by-products which raised the whole agricultural life of the South and in one sense the welfare of everyone. What he did in this line he did also with sweet potatoes, other vegetables and flowers. His success was due largely to his recognition of the infinite wisdom of God. He freely admitted his own mental limitations and had the common sense to ask for God's wisdom. As long as we continue to hope in the settlement of all our troubles the wisdom of man alone, we shall have fear, injustice, and the tragedies of death because our wisdom alone is definitely limited. Our deeds, our thinking and our lives become righteous as we bring in reverence for the infinite wisdom of our heavenly father.

FROM SOLDIER TO PASTOR

"I've attended church whenever possible. Not too many soldiers go to church here on Sunday in comparison with those you see staggering around on Saturday night. If only they would wake up and realize before it's too late. Many of them are very nice young men if they'd only let drink alone. There is one thing I wish I had done more often when I was back home. That is, I wish I had come to church oftener than I did. I hope the people who are left back home keep the church going while we young boys are away, so we have a church to attend when we do come back."—From the bulletin of the First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Mary Becker

NOVEMBER 5—"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." Matthew 5:48.

To be perfect as God is perfect! Who can even begin to strive toward such a standard, let alone ever hope to attain it? Yet, that is the standard Jesus holds up before his followers—God's own perfection. He who was tempted like as we are, who knew all the infirmities of human kind, still asks this of us; and the knowledge of his standard and what he expects of his followers should keep us humble before him and totally dependent upon him. Our lives should give evidence that we endeavor to serve the One who claims, and has every right to claim, the highest from us. He cannot be satisfied with anything less than the best.

NOVEMBER 6—"Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned unto him for righteousness; and he was called the friend of God." James 2:23.

"The friend of God"—what a title of honor! And three times the Scriptures use this term to designate Abraham. (Cf. Isa. 41:8 and II Chron. 20:7,) But it isn't reserved only for Abraham; it can also apply to you and me if we meet the condition set forth by Christ: "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you" (John 15:14). Are we concerned about winning this title, or are we ashamed of being pointed out as God's friends and more concerned about retaining the friendship of the world? We can't have both.

NOVEMBER 7—"Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?" Matthew 18:21.

When Peter asked Jesus this question, he had not come to a full realization of his own sinfulness; for Jesus had taught his disciples to pray: "Forgive. . . as we forgive." If God would forgive us only seven times, all of us would be hopelessly lost. The more we realize our constant failing, and the more we experience God's forgiving grace, the more willing we should be to forgive others. Christians should be characterized by a loving and forgiving spirit. The Church of Christ should be characterized thus. Is it so? The world sees and judges Christianity by what it sees.

NOVEMBER 8—"Take heed to yourselves: if thy brother sin, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him." Luke 17:3.

In many of our churches today discipline is one of the lost virtues, for a virtue it is; and if practiced according to Christ's command, it keeps the life o the Church and of the individual member on a hig level of conduct. Discipline should be practiced, no in anger or in a "better-than-thou" attitude, but i the spirit of love and humility, remembering that th first part of the above command is "take heed t yourselves." Do our churches need a re-emphasis o the above command in order to purify the life of th Church and to make it a real salt in society and light in the world?

NOVEMBER 9—"He that observeth the wind sha not sow; and he that regardeth the clouds shall no reap." Eccl. 11:4.

Someone has called this an important mission verse and when we spiritualize its meaning, we can see ho it would apply to missions or any work of the Lord When there is work to do for the Lord, whether i be facing the difficulties of the mission field, raisin a voice against sin and vice at home, urging a mor holy life among Christians, or whatever needs to b done, the Christian worker cannot observe the win of disapproval or the cloud of opposition and perse cution. A Christian cannot choose that which i easy; he must answer the call of God to whateve task he sets.

NOVEMBER 10—"Whoso loveth correction, lovet knowledge." Proverbs 12:1.

Human nature is so constituted that it shrink from any type of correction. Before the Flood t people had become so corrupt that they would n accept reproof from God's Spirit. And so it is whe ever man leaves God's precepts and wants to go h own way—corruption results and punishment follow Can we trace our social troubles—juvenile deli quency, immorality, divorce, alcoholism, war an bloodshed, and in the church the laxity in Christia conduct and brotherly love, and a repudiation of t doctrine of non-resistance—to the fact that we will n accept correction from God? "Search me, O God

NOVEMBER 11—"What do ye more than others
Matthew 5:47b.

In these meditations we have endeavored to sear our hearts in regard to some points of Christian co duct. We have noticed Christ's high standard f his followers. He expects them to do more th others. There is where most of us fail. We are inte ested in being only as good as the other person, or pe haps a little better, using man's standard rather th God's. How would it affect our conduct if we wou place the above verse at a prominent place in o homes or places of business to remind us at all tim that we are to "exceed" the standard of the worl

Like Banners Of Light

By Hermie Preheim

The evening sky is aflame with banners of crimson and gold flung upwards to a zenith of pale green, which gradually merges into a lustrous blue that becomes darker and darker as it sinks into the deep purple of the eastern twilight arch. Hanging from the shimmering sky is the slender silver crescent of the moon. It is a scene of breathtaking beauty, found only in the vast expanse of the western plains, and the soul within can only echo the words of the Psalmist David as he chanted so long ago, "O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth! Who hast set Thy glory above the Heavens," Ps. 8:1. Looking at the awe-inspiring beauty of the sky with thoughts only of God's majesty and infinite power, the gaze is caught and held by the sight of a lone rider on the very tip of a sheer towering bluff, silhouetted darkly against the flaming western sky. Again the words of the Psalmist as he question, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him and the son of man that Thou visitest him? Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels and hast crowned him with glory and honour.... Thou hast put all things under his feet." Does the rider, Indian or cowboy, as he surveys the winding gleaming river reflecting the sunset glow, the far stretch of rolling land and the jagged piercing bluffs, realize his heritage? Created in the image of God to do the will of God—to worship, serve, and honor his Creator, the rider has, as all other human beings have, latent powers and possibilities that are never fully realized, much less used.

Let us imagine that the rider represents our Mennonite youth, placed in a position today as never before, where it can see the heavenly glory of God's love and power and the opportunities for service in the world about. The glory of the sunset generates a spirit of worship, of homage, obedience, and praise to God and our Lord Jesus Christ. "Blessing and honour and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever." Rev. 5:13b.

Our heritage is a simple faith and a firm trust in God's goodness, mercy, and justice—a faith and trust that centuries of persecution and uncertainty and wanderings have intensified rather than weakened. How tragic to lose this faith in times when it should develop into a strong, living, energetic faith! What are we, the leaders of the Church of tomorrow, to do about our Mennonitism? Shall we relinquish it and join other more popular and stronger denominations, or shall we be apathetic, thereby dying a slow lingering but final death? Shall we be ashamed of our simple worship services, our "queer" principles of non-resistance, non-swearing, opposition to secret societies, our firm belief in the infallibility of the Word of God and of salvation found only in Jesus Christ? If we are not ashamed we must hold our faith high as a beacon light through the coming years when it may possibly be more difficult to witness than it is now. Then no one will be able to say we have been hiding our light under a bushel as some have reproached us.

Where can we obtain the determination, courage, and strength to do the tasks delegated to us and to fulfill the mission assigned us? Our forefathers and our leaders have taught us and they have set us an example, but they cannot live for us neither can we rest on their accomplishments. We ourselves must cultivate the powers God has given us by faithful study, communion, intercession, and complete dependence upon Him through our Lord Jesus Christ. Our legacy is a gift of true and lasting beauty. We should not therefore, become bigoted and intolerant towards those who differ from us in practice and belief. We cannot separate ourselves from our fellow men, living a hermit-like existence, uninspiring and usless. Service should be more than a "Watchword." It is life itself.

Carelessness and indifference to the precepts and teachings of Christ and our church are a greater menace to our Christian witness than downright unbelief because there is much more of the former among us. We cannot afford to lose our Mennonitism. To one who has lived in non-Mennonite communities, Christian or non-Christian, for any length of time, the very thought of the possibility of our Mennonite areas losing their peculiar Christian witness (though it be far from perfect) is disquieting and alarming. No matter what anyone may say, we have something we cannot afford to lose. This fact is attested to not only by Mennonites but also by those who are not in sympathy with us. We know what a bed of petunias looks like after it has been inter-mixed with every known species of petunia. Colorless, wan and sickly-looking, the flowers have lost their vividness and appeal. We can become colorless petunias.

Let us, the Mennonite youth of today, make our lives so attractive and interesting and meaningful that those round about us will be drawn to a desire for Christian living. Let our Christianity shine forth as the banners of colored light which illuminate the sky—beautifying the little sphere we move in as the rays of the setting sun make the whole universe radiant. Such light cannot be hidden.

MAY WE INTRODUCE EDITOR HERMIE PREHEIM

Miss Hermie Preheim, editor of the Northern Light, the young people's paper of the Northern District was born on a farm not far from Freeman, South Dakota. She attended Freeman Junior College Academy and has one year of college. She also attended Moody Bible Institute for two terms and the Northwestern Bible and Missionary Training School in Minneapolis. She is a member of the Salem Church near Freeman. When at home she has usually taught Sunday School, and for two years she was Junior Superintendent. Miss Preheim is now teaching a rural school near Beresford, South Dakota.

As to hobbies—Miss Preheim says that they are too numerous to mention. She likes reading, music, handicraft of any kind, painting of all sorts, nature study (she has a large collection of the wild flowers of the state), and the collection of anything "collectable," especially "old" things such as quaint earthenware and glasses, etc. She holds that "This world is so full of interesting things to see and to do one need not suffer boredom nor wonder about what to do with one's spare time."

Questioned about her convictions, she replied, "My convictions are simple. I believe the Word of God to be The Word of God—The Bible, that Jesus Christ is the only salvation for sinners and that the world is not getting better in spite of all the progress of inventions, education, and the enlightenment of man. Each one of us as a Christian has his place to fill—be it a narrow or wide space of influence—for which we will be held responsible. I do believe we should not do things for an immediate reward or payment but we should give of one's time and self without thinking of being rewarded. Lastly, I am very thankful that I was born into a Mennonite Christian home, that I was reared in a Mennonite community, have been able to attend a Mennonite church and a Mennonite school. I believe I know what I am talking about because I have had occasion to live in other places, many of them fine and desirable.

(The sunset scene mentioned by Miss Preheim in her article was witnessed by her some years ago on the Yankton Indian Reservation, where she was engaged in Christian education work.)

C.P.S. MEN MAKE CHRISTMAS CARDS AND GIFTS

From C.P.S. Camp No. 35, North Fork, California, comes the story of three C.P.S. men who are trying to help themselves financially by making a number of craft articles and trying to sell them. The partnership of three is making an assortment of linoleum block print Christmas cards.

Don Turner, who is one of the three men, and his wife are also producing other items, such as leather bill folds, key cases, coin purses, redwood book ends, and redwood ox carts (for center pieces or flower holders.) One who has seen some of the sample products says that they are really A-1 and that the prices are not at all out of line compared to those found in shops.

Jacob D. Goering who is Assistant and Educational Director at C.P.S. Camp, No. 35, tries to encourage the men as much as possible along this line.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

"Among the Bethel College students this year is a Cheyenne Indian. Teddy Risingsun, from Montana, a negro minister, Floyd Nunley, from Newton, and three American-born Japanese boys—John Kanno, Shuzo Kato, and Samuel Komorita—from the relocation center in Shoshone, Idaho, but whose home before Pearl Harbor was in Seattle. All of these colored young men are fine students and fine characters. They add a cosmopolitan spirit to campus life and their presence among us does more to keep us thinking straight on the race question than any course of study could do. We hope it always may be said of our church and college that we entertain here no race prejudice or hatred, and that students of all races and nations will find here the spirit of Christian brotherhood. Incidentally, this would answer in part the criticism of those we say that our peace testimony is too negative. What can do more to establish world peace than a right spirit toward the people of all nations?" —Rev. Lester Hostetler.

—On October 17, Miss Lynette E. Basinger, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Elmer Basinger, was joined in marriage with Mr. Edward T. Hirstein of Golconda, Illinois. The single ring ceremony was used and was performed by the bride's father in the presence of the immediate family. They will reside at Golconda where Mr. Hirstein is in the hatchery business.

—The Youth Fellowship at Beatrice, Nebraska, is now studying Roy Smith's booklet entitled "How the Bible Grew Up."

A NOTE OF EXPLANATION

(The following note of explanation is from Helen Hiebert Mueller, who serves as Secretary to Dr. P. A. Penner at General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas. Mrs. Mueller keeps the books and submits the figures for the quarterly financial report. —Editor)

"You might wish to mention that these figures do not include funds collected in Canada. I have not given you a report of the Canadian contributions because our treasurer there reports at odd intervals, so his report would not line up with the calendar quarters.

"Another thing you might well mention is the fact that the Eastern District has a district treasurer who receives almost all contributions which the churches of that district make for both relief and the support of C.P.S. Camps. He then sends the money in one large check to this office. That accounts for all the empty spaces in the relief and peace columns in the Eastern District report. I thought you should know about this so that the churches of that district will not be criticized as lagging in their interest in these departments of our Conference work."

Grand total for all treasurer's from all districts and individuals is $95,862.95

RELIEF

Clothing Shipment Arrives in Egypt

A letter written October 6 informs Headquarters that the ten tons of relief clothing shipped from Akron in May, have arrived in Egypt. Delvin Kirchhofer and Dr. Richard Yoder report that this shipment will help relieve the pressing need in the refugee camps. J. N. Byler writes, "A number of UNRRA officials have said that this shipment of clothing is a 'godsend' as the camps are short of clothing supplies and colder weather is not far off."

Byler and Kirchhofer in Palestine

J. N. Byler's most recent communications reveal that he and Delvin Kirchhofer have been in Jerusaem, Delvin accompanying on a temporary rest from iis camp duties. The two men were offered the pportunity to travel overland to Palestine in an JNRRA truck. Brother Byler has received permision to enter Syria, and will proceed to survey the elief situation there.

Mennonite Base Camps in Maryland to Open

The desire of the Friends to relinquish administration of several base camps and transfer their men to special projects gave opportunity for Mennonites to assume responsibility for another base camp in the East to compensate for the closing base of Sideling Hill. Beginning November 15 the M.C.C. will administer the camp at Powelsville, Maryland. This camp is located near Pocomoke City and near the Mennonite community at Westover.

MENNONITE AID NOTES

Educational Aid Proposed

Administrators of Mennonite and Brethren in Christ schools met in Chicago, September 23, to consider the matter of providing aid for C.P.S. men who wish to continue their education after the termination of C.P.S. Their proposal was brought before representatives from the various Mennonite groups who met with the M.C.C. on October 13. The problem wil be studied further before final action is taken.

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Confer on Post-War Conscription

In addition to the consideration of Mennonite Aid problems, the group in Chicago on October 13, also gave serious thought to the imminency of post-war conscription and its implications for non-resistant Christians. A statement for presentation to the President was approved. A strong appeal was presented to have the church and its leaders devote themselves to prayer supplication that God might overrule as this issue is faced.

Limited Service Draft Ended

Selective Service has instructed local boards to reclassify men over thirty-eight as IV-A. Formerly this classification applied only to registrants over 45. Other limited service classifications for men in other age brackets, such as IV-E (L) will also be discontinued. IV-F will be given unless eligible for occupational deferment.

Peace Is The Victory

A Book Review by Miss Leona Krehbiel

Introduction

"And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isaiah 2:4

At the beginning of this war we heard much about the brave new world we would build after the fighting ceased. We were reading and talking about the Four Freedoms, the Atlantic Charter, the Century of the Common Man, One World, and a peace based on justice and the welfare of all people everywhere. However, before long it became apparent that we wanted the Four Freedoms for ourselves only. We know now that the Atlantic Charter does not apply to India, nor to Poland, nor to our present enemies. The Century of the Common Man has been changed to the American Century. Instead of One World we are to have a Europe divided between Russia and England, with a war already predicted between these two countries within the next ten years; while the Pacific Ocean is to become an American Lake. Does anyone stop to think how that term must sound to the ears of the Orientals, living on the other side of the lake? The peace which the Big Three are planning, behind locked doors, is a peace based not on justice, but on the selfish interests of the victorious powers. Such a peace can only be enforced by the use of arms. That the men, who are making the peace, are perfectly aware of this fact is evident. Witness the drive for permanent peace-time conscription in this country.

Amid this growing hysteria, I thought it might be well to review a book, on peacemaking, written by thirteen American pacifists. They are men who are trying to say, "I am a Christian therefore, not I am a Christian but." The book is entitled, Peace is the Victory. It is edited by Harrap A. Freeman, published by Harper Brothers, 1944 (Price is $1.50). On the title page we find this quotation from Victor Hugo:

> There is something greater than armies, and that is an idea when its time has come.

The book is divided into five main parts:

Part I, Basic Concepts for Peace

John Haynes Holmes discusses the fundamental basis of the pacifist's faith. He is well qualified to to do this, for he has remained true to his convictions through two world wars. He says, because the pacifist believes in the reality and power of the spirit, he refuses to meet the evil of our day with physical force; instead he tries to use a more powerful force—the power of the spirit. He believes, that by prayer and forgiving love, "he can lay hold upon this spiritual power and use it for good ends, even the rescue of men from tyranny and death."

The causes of war as Kirby Page sees them are sovereignty, imperialism, individualism, racialism, nationalism, materialism, and disintegration. He believes that we have the resources to avoid World War III, provided we are willing to seek and do the will of God.

The Hebrew-Christian religion, as A. J. Muste reminds us, "set men to the task of building the Kingdom of God upon earth." At this task Western man has made great progress. He has conquered his physical environment, perfected his social organization and has begun to recognize the worth of the individual. In fact, he has reached the place where the possibility of reaching the goal envisioned by the prophets "actually looms on the horizon." Yet, in this fifth year of war the actual world situation raises the question whether Western man has not already started to slip from this high place into the abyss.

Part II. From War to Peace

According to Albert W. Palmer all modern wars are civil wars, because the whole world has become one neighborhood. In ending a civil war, we must remember that in the future we will have to live in community with our enemies. Therefore, "a civil war should be ended by planning, consultation, reconciliation, and the resumption of cooperative enterprises, in short, by the reestablishment of community at the earliest possible moment with the least dislocation."

Hiram Motherwell paints a dark picture of conditions, as we will find them, in Europe after the war. The real problem, as he sees it, in reconstructing the continent will be the problem of gaining "the consent of the peoples concerned." He says we can rewrite the elementary textbooks, as we are doing in Italy, but we cannot insure their use one minute after our armies are withdrawn. "The quality of the peace we shall make will be tested by its success in making people want to perpetuate it, instead of wanting to smash it."

In his chapter Clarence Pickett makes a plea for the starving millions in Europe. In our giving relief to these millions we must guard against the use of food as a political weapon.

Part III, Post War II or Pre War III

Harry Emerson Fosdick sees no possibility of isolationism in the future. He thinks we will inevitably find ourselves involved in one of these three methods of international cooperation: Balance-of-power, military alliance with Russia and England and perhaps China, or true world community.

Theodore Paullin is convinced that the peoples of the world are not yet ready for world government, because their loyalty to their country is much too strong to make them willing to give up their national sovereignty. He suggests that we start with functional organizations. After the people of the various nations have learned to work together through them, then they may be ready for world federation.

Harrap A. Freeman urges changes in international law to make it "responsive rather than "coercive." While Robert Stevens in his chapter on the "new economics" believes that the greatest contribution which the United States can make to world peace is to achieve full employment at home.

Part IV, Area Applications

Oswald Garrison Villard sees the Second World War in Europe as the natural result of age-old economic and political rivalries. He considers economic union of Europe far more important than political union. Disarmament is an absolute essential to the future peace of Europe. If the victors again make the mistake of disarming Germany while they refuse to give up their own armaments, "then the trend to future wars will be inevitable."

In his chapter on Asia, E. Stanley Jones warns us that we cannot have peace unless we abolish all empires. He makes a strong plea for Indian independence. Who are we to say India cannot govern herself, we who have fought two world wars in one generation?

The Americas are discussed by Devere Allen. South America is a land of great contrasts. There are geographical, historical, and cultural differences which have hindered the development of the continent. But, "the evil character in it all is Yankee imperialism." The Latin American is waiting to see whether we are sincere in our talk about the Good Neighbor Policy, that is, whether in the future we shall come as equals and friends, or as superiors and exploiters.

Unfortunately this section fails to include a chapter on Africa. This continent is also vitally involved in the future peace of the world. Here, during the present war, England has already added many square miles to her territory.

Part V. Conclusion.

This is written by the editor and I want to quote his last two paragraphs:

> We face the problems of our time and they are truly numerous and great. Like a thicket they stand between us and the brave new world which has ever been the vision of prophets. Now, when the vision holds the promise of becoming reality, have we the spirit which will venture the gloom of the forest rather than lie down in the shade of the first promising tree? Have we a compass which, in the forest depths will still point to the goal? We believe we have. It is high religion in action: it is pacifism
> And we shall reach the goal, for "there is something greater than armies, and that is an idea when its time has come.

This book is a voice crying for mutual understanding and forgiveness among the many voices screaming for revenge and punishment. It should be read by all men of good-will, for in it are clearly set forth those basic principles upon which alone, a just and durable peace can be built.

THE 6TH WAR LOAN AND CIVILIAN BONDS

The 6th War Loan Drive will be conducted from November 20 to December 16.

The Peace Section of the M.C.C. again urges "....that if investments are made in government securities, we should leave our testimony of non-support of war by registering such investments through Providence Trust Company, by the plan which has been in operation."

Undoubtedly, many members of our churches lack information about Civilian bonds and how to purchase them. To remedy this the peace committee, person or persons in charge of civilian bonds in each church might make clear what kind of civilian bonds can be purchased and how. This could be done through the church bulletin or through oral announcements.

EDUCATIONAL BODIES AND POST-WAR CONSCRIPTION

The following is part of a statement adopted on March 13, 1944, by the Educational Policies Commission of the National Education Association and the American Association of School Administrators and the Problems and Plans Committee of the American Council on Education:

"The American people are fighting this war with the high hope that it will eventuate in an enduring peace. We all look for measures of international cooperation which will reduce the necessity for large scale post-war military establishment. If, against the background of these great expectations, a year of compulsory military training is urged, many Americans will interpret such action as a signal for the return of the cynicism of the 1920's or as an admission that we shall all continue to live in an armed camp and that the hopes of a more peaceful world are not to be realized."

The above is taken from a little pamphlet entitled Peacetime Conscription. It may be secured for five cents from the Peace Section, American Friends Service Committee, 20 South 12th Street, Philadelphia 7, Pa.

WHAT THEY SAY

The Sunday School lesson for November 12 is headed "The Church During War and Peace." Noteworthy it is what Bible scholars comment on this esson. Dr. H. A. Ironside, writing in the Sunday School Times, is to be commended for many of the things he says. Praiseworthy it is that he brings in he fact of conscientious objection to war. He does not bring it in so much on the basis that the Bible eaches it but rather on the basis that there are C.O.'s. He, at least, does not denounce C.O.'s or gnore them altogether. His statement that there always have been differences as to how far a Chris- the light of the first centuries when the Christians tian can go in support of war needs modification in refused to bear arms. In his emphasis upon obedience to government he fails to make clear as to where the line ought to be drawn between obeying God or man. Dr. Ironside's emphasis upon love in inspiring. It would be even more so if he made it clear that it precludes all killing of human beings. But considering Dr. Ironside's position in church circles, we admire him for much that he does say. It is to be regretted, however, that he disclaims the non-resistant position by stating that according to certain scripture passages it may at times be necessary to bear arms for the defence of home and liberty. Perhaps, through the grace of God Dr. Ironside will yet come to the non-resistant position. Harold L. Lundquist, writing for the Moody Monthly, combines the thoughts of fighting the enemy and yet loving him. We admit that a good many soldiers may have little or no hatred in their hearts for men of the enemy side, whom they have never seen and whom they hold to be drafted much like they themselves are. However, loving them for Christ's sake and with Christ's love is another matter. Just because one does not hate does not at all say that one necessarily loves. Even more so does it fail to say that one loves with the love of Christ. We ask, can anyone love another human being with the love of Christ and take his life? An emphasis upon not hating is not enough, and God would have Christian love mean something, John 17:26. It is very regrettable that Christians should try to have love express itself in killing.

The press is again bringing stories of horrible atrocities. It is difficult to know just what to think. However, we do know that atrocity stories were utilized in the First World War and that after the war many were proved utterly false and others could never be substantiated by investigations, and that furthermore the various countries used these for fanning hatred and building fighting morale. How much of this is being practiced now is difficult to tell.

THE ELECTION

By the time this paper reaches its readers, the day of election will be over. Many who will have voted will consider their political responsibility over for some time. But is it? It is not enough to elect a man. People must convey their attitudes to the men in office if democracy is to function. Mennonites who voted need to express themselves to their present governmental representatives on the important matter of peace-time conscription that is to be taken up when congress reconvenes on November 14.

IMPORTANT TO TEACH CHRISTIANS

"Sentiments in the country are rapidly moving to extremes with regard to both Germany and Japan which if allowed to crystalize may make impossible the achieving of a just and durable peace. The one group in the country that should give a steadying influence in this regard would seem to be our church people, but they must be informed." So wrote Walter Van Kirk, a secretary of the Commission on a Just and Durable Peace, on October 24, as he urged the publicizing of two booklets for use in church study groups.

". . .but they must be informed." How true! Spiritually-born people must be informed; they must be taught. There are many Christians, whose spiritual birth we do not question, who take a rather unmerciful attitude as far as peace terms for Germany and Japan are concerned. They may be most loving to those in their own home, and gentle and generous to the members of their community—soundly Christian in these relationships—and yet have an attitude toward Japan and Germany that can only help to produce another war-provoking peace settlement. Such was the treaty of Versailles. Had the Christians of England and of France, especially, pled with their leaders for a merciful treatment of beaten Germany, then Clemenceau and Lloyd George might have acted less revengefully. Political leaders do want to be popular with those who vote. For what kind of peace will the Christians of America plead this time? The answer lies largely in how much right information will be given to the Christian citizens of America. They need more than the mirroring of themselves in the daily newspaper; they need to hear the voice of the Church of Christ, calling for confession, repentance, and restoration on their own part and for mercy and forgiveness towards the defeated peoples. Not only must Christians have been born spiritually but they must also learn what is right in the complex affairs of this world. ". . .they must be informed."

The two booklets referred to above are: A Durable Peace in Europe by William Henry Chamberlin and A Durable Peace in Eastern Asia by Willis Lamott. Price twenty cents per single copy. —rw.

AS BECOMETH A CHRISTIAN

Lord of my Life, henceforth I bear
The name of Christian everywhere;
And all observing eyes shall see
The Christ as is revealed in me
In trade, or play, my every word
Will shame or glorify my Lord;
Each act, each generosity,
Will point to Thee unwittingly.
Therefore, O Christ, my spirit claim,
And make me worthy of thy name.

INDIA NEEDS HELPING HANDS

Evangelistic, Medical, Education

Our human resources are too inadequate; prayer can release God's divine, adequate resources.

TO LEAD—Indian Christians who are showing forth the love of Christ to non-Christian friends and neighbours. Missionaries to transfer heavy responsibilities on to Indian shoulders in a helpful, Christian manner.

TO TEACH—in high and middle schools and to supervise and increase the efficiency of many primary schools. To use consecrated funds to help build a Bible training school plant at Janjgir station. The school to the present has been inadequately equipped and crowded into the school anterooms of the Janjgir Church.

TO TRAIN—worthy selected and tried in service Indian young people for all types of Christian service and leadership: pastors, evangelists, doctors, nurses, compounders, teachers, and office workers. A scholarship fund has been established.

TO HEAL—with leprosy, disease, and epidemics always prevalent, the fight against tuberculosis much needed. Our three hospitals are seriously understaffed. With only one American Missionary surgeon, soon due his much needed furlough, now on the Mission field, the call for a doctor is urgent.

Who will help?

INDIA-GRAMS

Post-War Reconstruction No. 1.

Said the great Gladstone, Prime Minister under Queen Victoria, about 1880, "I am convinced that the welfare of mankind does not now depend on the State, and the world of politics; the real battle is being fought in the world of thought, where a deadly attack is made with great tenacity of purpose upon the greatest treasures of mankind, the belief in God, and the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

If so, there is no more fundamental and greater work than being a proclaimer of the treasures that are in Christ Jesus, and being an ambassador for God reconciling the world unto Him through Jesus Christ our Saviour in (1) the home, (2) among the unchurched in so-called Christian lands, (3) in foreign lands; (a) in the Sunday School Class, (b) in the pulpit, (c) in evangelical Christian Schools, (d) among all students, (e) in administration of Christian work, (f) in producing evangelical literature, (g) in institutions the definite object of which is to make Christ known.

Bible Lecture Week At Bluffton College

The annual Bible Lectures and Ministers' Conference will be held this year during the week of November 12-17. The main speaker for these meetings will be Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, great missionary to the Mohammedans, and author of The Cross above the Crescent, and many other books and pamphlets on his experiences. His writings represent the latest word on the validity, necessity, and urgency of missions to Moslems. While residing in his homeland, the United States, for the last ten years, he has been editor of The Moslem World. Dr. R. Lincoln Long, D. D., of the Callingwood Presbyterian Church, Toledo, Ohio, will also speak.

The program for the Bible Lectures, November 12-17, follows:

Parent-Child Confidence

Helen Gregg Green

When I was a child I was taken to a dentist's office with an aching tooth.

"Let me see your tooth," the dentist said.

I hesitated and then, "I'm afraid you'll pull it!" I admitted, frightened.

"I won't pull it," the dentist promised.

Confident that he was telling the truth I opened my mouth. It was pulled before I had closed my mouth.

I never liked the dentist after that. Years later, whenever I passed him on the street I thought of that incident. He had two boys. I often wondered whether he kept his word with them.

A well-known writer relates the following:

"A little boy of five, pointing to a library, asked his father, 'Is that your office, Daddy?' The father answered that it was the library. 'What's in a library?' asked the child. 'Books," replied the short-spoken father. 'What does it say in books?' 'It says to mind your Daddy!' "

The writer goes on to say that the child would eventually find out that his father was wrong, and that a series of such thoughtless answers, "over a period of time," would very likely cause him to lose confidence in his father.

I feel that the writer is too optimistic when he says, "over a period of time," because of my experience with the dentist. One untruth made me lose confidence in him completely. I looked upon him as a man in whom something fundamentally right was lacking.

Probably I exaggerated the offense. But that was one child's reaction to a breach of faith, and, without doubt, it is a fairly reliable criterion of other children's reactions to similar experiences My attitude toward this man made little difference, but had the offender been my parent the incident would have had very unhappy consequences.

It is indeed important that children have confidence in their parents and older relatives. For this reason, if for no other, parents need to appreciate their children's viewpoints.

A friend of mine related her childhood experience with regard to a pet lamb. She had fed the lamb from a bottle and was devoted to it. One day when she was at school some older members of the family sold the lamb.

When my friend recalled this incident she was a mature woman but the hurt she had felt that day crept into her eyes and voice. It had been a real tragedy to the child. The blow might have been softened had the aunt explained why her pet must be sold before Emily left for school that morning. It was a severe shock to come home and find that she would never again see her lamb.

Another friend said she wanted always to remember, in bringing up her little son, to try to put herself in his place when she was in doubt about any question that might arise. When a child, her mother had given away a little dog she adored.

"That was a lasting sorrow to me," Eileen said. "Mother thought I should soon forget about Curley. I never forgot him. To me he was as much a member of the family as myself."

If that mother had only stopped to put herself in her little girl's place, she would not have caused the deep and lasting hurt. I'm afraid we all have the human tendency of thinking in terms of our own immediate interests—even parents, at times.

NEW BOOKLET WITH ENGLISH WORDS FOR FAVORITE GERMAN ADVENT AND CHRISTMAS SONGS

In a beautiful booklet, entitled Oh Come Let Us Adore Him Joanna Suderman Andres presents English words for some of our favorite German Advent and Christmas songs. In it we find English words for such songs as "Sieh' dein Konig kommt zu dir," "Wie soll ich Dich empfangen," "Alle Jahre wieder kommt das Christuskind," "Auf Judaas grunen Fluren," and other favorites. The majority are translations. Those which are not have better thought than the original words. Gracing one page of the booklet is a translation of "Du Kindlein in der Krippe" with complete notes as arranged by Sister Helen Marie Bartsch. In it is also the song "In Love Make Me Thine." This was written by Mrs. Andres for her daughter Amy Elizabeth, who sang it to the music of Brahms "Cradle Song" at the Christmas program of the Bethel Hospital last year. The booklet is a treasury of Advent and Christmas songs, which have been favorites among our people for centuries.

A precious addition to these songs are some original Advent and Christmas poems by Mrs. Andres. Her poems have been eagerly received among Mennonite papers, and here is a choice selection of them.

The booklet has been artfully edited with different kinds of type and fitting designs. The print is very clear on good paper, and the booklet is well-bound with a pretty cover.

Oh Come Let Us Adore Him is a "must" for Mennonite lovers of music. It is a significant contribution by one of our Mennonites rich in thought and skilled in writing.

The price of the booklet is 25 cents. All orders by mail should be addressed to Joanna Suderman Andres, 700 East 5th Street, Newton, Kansas. The booklet can also be purchased at the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kan.

Report on Bengal Relief Project

During the summer and fall of 1943 word was received that severe famine conditions existed in the Bengal area of India as a result of hurricane and flood. The situation was further aggravated by the war and the occupation of Burma. Immediately, the Mennonite missionaries in India prepared to bring assistance through their local organization known as the Mennonite Relief Committee in India (M.R.C.I.) This organization had been formed sometime before to take care of the need for relief in the areas in which the mission stations were located.

The work the M.R.C.I. could do was limited by the personnel which could be shifted from the mission stations to the relief projects in Bengal and the budget upon which the committee was operating. Consequently, an effort was made in America to send several relief workers and increase the budget. The missionaries managed the relief activities by serving in relays from the different mission stations and by using native workers. J. D. Graber and S. J. Goering arrived in the fall of 1943 and assisted in relief administration both before and after their trip to China. Later Ferdinand J. Isaac and George Baere arrived to relieve the missionaries and to take charge of the project. The relief activities continue at the present time under their supervision.

Financial Report

Receipt and expenditure totals are given here. Report covers the period from February, 1942 to May, 1944, and figures are in terms of American currency.

TOTAL RECEIPTS	$41,340.49
TOTAL EXPENDITURES	$24,193.58

Relief Activities

The greatest activity was carried on through the period, December, 1943, to May, 1944. During this time more than 140 tons of rice were distributed. The peak was reached in April when over 7,000 people received about two pounds per week per person. At first the missionaries distributed rice in and around Calcutta. Later two stations were opened at Sonarpur and Goria and a car was purchased to facilitate the work. Of the 62,000 people who lived in the area in which our workers were operating, about ten per cent received assistance in the way of food.

Hillsboro Church to Celebrate Sixtieth Birthday

According to present plans the First Mennonite Church of Hillsboro, Kansas, will celebrate its sixtieth birthday on November 23, 1944. This anniversary will be observed by holding a series of meetings throughout the week of Thanksgiving. The Rev. D. C. Wedel of Halstead will be the speaker.

On Thanksgiving Day, November 23, special Thanksgiving services will take place throughout the day, with a fellowship dinner at noon in the church basement. On this day Rev. J. H. Epp from Kingman, Kansas, who was a pastor of this church for twenty-seven years, will speak both morning and afternoon. Rev. H. T. Unruh, local pastor, will conclude the services in the evening. At this occasion the choirs of the Brudertal, Johannestal, Lehigh, and Hillsboro churches will sing. They will appear singly and in combined choruses.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, McPherson, Kansas

NOVEMBER 1—"Our Father who art in heaven," Matt. 6:9a.

How often has the model prayer, which Jesus gave us, been misused, because we have simply repeated memorized words! So often we are called upon to "repeat the Lord's Prayer together" instead of "pray the Lord's Prayer together." Pray it slowly, earnestly, with time enough to think of what we are asking of or saying to God. As we say "Our Father" we must have hatred and malice toward no one, neither the underprivileged nor the wealthy, neither the starving nor the oppulent, neither the enemy nor the friend—all are our brothers and sisters and we are to love them.

The Negro, the Chinese, the Hindu, the Fiji Islanders, and all the rest are related to us, because God is Our Father. He is color blind and we must strive to become so too.

NOVEMBER 2—"Hallowed be thy name."

Last year an army chaplain in addressing a group of women at a World Day of Prayer said, "In the last two years I have heard the name of God and his son used more often than ever before in my life." He paused for a moment and then slowly, but sadly went on to say, "But it was not reverently or prayerfully used as you might think. No, it was being misused." More and more that same misuse of God's name is creeping into ordinary conversation; newspapers and the radio are letting it slip in more and more, whereas formerly it was prohibited. God's name and Jesus' name are holy and are due honor and love. Reverence is due the name of Our Father and Jesus, our Saviour.

NOVEMBER 3—"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven." Matt. 6:10.

God's will forms the joyful, the harmonious pattern of behavior in his kingdom in heaven. Here we are asking to have this same pattern of behavior transplanted to earth. There is nothing static or negative about this petition. Our job begins right there. Men, women, and children are given the task of working and helping to bring about conditions of love, kindness, and friendliness on earth, so that his kingdom may be established here and rule the earth. What are we doing in our daily life to bring to fruition this petition.?

NOVEMBER 4—"Give us this day our daily bread," Matt. 6:11

The "us" and "our" rest in the fact that God is our Father. We do not pray selfishly, "Give me this day my daily bread," but as his many children, we petition him for a common need that is to be supplied and it is supplied. When we see some of his other children, whose needs are not supplied, who are hungry or cold or even unchurched or unevangelized, then it becomes our duty to help him supply those needs, to help him "pass the bread around," to help see that every one gets his daily bread.

NOVEMBER 5—"Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." Matt. 6:12.

Again like the above petitions, this one is positive, dynamic; it calls for action. Before we can ever ask God to forgive us a sin, a wrong, or a transgression, we must have forgiven our neighbor that harsh word, that unkind story or act, or that insult. As far as we are concerned, we then harbor no ill-feeling, no malice, no hate, and we have no enemy. Having gone that far, we can then ask God to forgive us all our shortcomings. A follower of the Jesus Way seeks to get into harmony with his fellowman and then with his God.

NOVEMBER 6—"Lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil." Matt. 6:13a

Thomas Edison was asked one day what he did about temptations. "I have none," said Edison, "I have no time for them." Idleness and too much time on our hands are often the breeding places of temptation. Big, hard jobs or constant work serve as an antidote.—Trees of the timber-line are among the toughest, staunchest ones, because they must grow where the storms bend, twist and lash them mercilessly. The sheltered, protected tree is the one that snaps when the storms beat upon it. Phillips Brooks expresses it satisfyingly: "O, do not pray for easy lives. Pray to be stronger men! Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for powers equal to your tasks!"

NOVEMBER 7—"For thine is the . . . glory." Matt. 6:13b.

Man has always been fond of building towers of Babel or monuments to his own honor and glory. A young interne in a hospital was quite elated, but also boastful, over a dinner invitation by his superior, an eminent staff doctor. His host was one of the highest in the profession. As the two talked during the meal, the older man drew the interne out about his parents and his home. The interne was happy to tell of his fine, sacrificing parents and his home. The host commented that the young man owed them a great deal. His educational opportunities had been very splendid too and the young man enthusiastically told of all he had been able to do. Again the host pointed out how much he owed these agencies for his success. On and on they talked and the young man became less and less sure of himself. Finally the host pointed out how helpless we would be, if we worked without God's help. "The greatest men in science and other fields, too, are quite ready to say with all sincerity, 'For thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory'," he concluded. God's best servants are the humblest.

Neither Lukewarm Nor Self-righteous

By the former Elizabeth Locher

There is something nauseating about a luke warm ink; there is something similarly unsatisfying out a lukewarm personality. All about us are uses, issues, and principles which demand posi-e attitudes. One who takes a middle ground and neither for nor against anything is most dis-uraging to those who seek the truth. The lack of husiasm of the would-be faithful is more trying n the staunch opposition of implacable enemies. om seeing the latter one says, "To provoke so ch hatred there must be a power!" The inference of the others causes one to conclude t they serve a dead or dying truth.

he lukewarm personality is contented with gs as they are and closes his mind and eyes to ater possibilities and opportunities. Are we lly convinced that war is wrong? Dare we then ug our shoulders and say that we can do nothing all to relieve the untold suffering? Have we faith that ways of feeding Europe will be open-

The truth remains unchanged. It is we falter or remain indifferent. The challenge us to take a stand upon issues and to show by our actions that faith and belief does make a difference in our lives.

It is well, too, to face a contrasting danger—the one of being so sure of our own righteousness that we close our eyes to the convictions of others. All people are chosen by God to fulfill some purpose. The statement has often been made that "It would be a dull world if we were all alike." Truth has been revealed in many ways, and different truths to different people. Kahlil Gibran in The Prophet says,

"Say not 'I have found the truth' but rather, "I have found a truth.'
Say not, 'I have found the path of the soul,' but rather 'I have meet a soul walking upon my path.'
For the soul walks upon all paths.
The soul walks not upon a line, neither does it grow like a reed.
The soul unfolds itself like a lotus of countless petals."

Enthusiasm should be coupled with imagination. Jesus often says that we should put ourselves in the other person's place. When He announced that all men were His brothers He taught us to look on other people imaginatively and not as though they were figures in a mathematical sheet. Where there is no imagination there is cruelty, selfishness, and death. It is not enough to be one thing or another, but to understand others who have not arrived at the same postion, one must imagine how one would feel in the same situation in which the other person is.

So easily do we judge others by their actions and ourselves by our highest motives! It is well that we attempt to understand the deepest motives of others and to be very careful of our own actions, trying always to do the thing which we know to be best in accordance with our deep convictions and steadfast faith that God works through us.

"Wait not until you are backed by numbers. The fewer the voices on the side of truth, the more distinct and strong must be your own."—Channing

SERIES BY EDITORS

Above we present the second in a series of articles by the editors of the young people's papers of the various districts. The next article will be by Grace Binder, editor of the C.E. Witness of the Eastern District. For a brief biography of M. Elizabeth Locher see the next page.

M. Elizabeth Locher. Editor

M. Elizabeth Locher has been editing the Vine Press, which is the young people's paper of the Middle District Conf Miss Locher graduated from Bluffton College last spring and did some work there this past summer. Some of the time she worked in the local greenhouse. This is the kind of work that she did in Cleveland, Ohio, during the few years that she was out of school. Miss Locher states that it was during these years that she really learned to appreciate the small community and the simple life. Three summers ago she went to a Friends' Work Camp at Merom, Indiana. There she became convinced that her place was no longer in the city. So she remained at Merom and worked as secretary for the C. P. S. camp that had been opened there and also in the office of Carl Landes, who was then Rural Secretary of the F. O. R. Upon the death of her father she returned home to Bluffton and continued her college work, completing a major in sociology and a minor in Home economics. She is prepared to teach, but she will not attempt it before Christmas, if then. And here comes a turning point in this story, for as much as we know Miss M. Elizabeth Locher is no more. That is, she undoubtedly got married in October—for those were her plans—and she failed to tell us the name of her husband-to-be. So very likely she is somebody else now, but we shall use her former name in this article. Miss Locher wrote in September that she intended to marry a Friend from C. P. S. Camp No. 194, Trenton, North Dakota, and then stated, ". . . . We will then plan together how we can make our most positive contributions to a small community or to relief and rehabilitation work."

A member of the Grace Church at Pandora, Miss Locher has worked in the Junior Department for the last three years. New materials were introduced and a personal interest in relocated Japanese on the part of the children was developed.

Besides being editor of the Vine Press, Miss Locher has served as Field Secretary for the young peopl of the Middle District. She will have to relinquish this work because of her residence far away. The Vine Press now has a circulation of about 400. A copy goes to all the pastors, to the C. P. S. men (free), and other interested leaders. Most of the societies have group subscriptions which total about 300. The annual printing bill is about $80.00. No other literature is sent out for carrying on young people's work.

We thank Miss Locher for the article and offer our congratulations.

Experiment in Group Farming

A Book Review

By J. Winfield Fretz

Exploring Tomorrow's Agriculture: Cooperative Group Farming—A practical Program of Rural Rehabilitation —by Joseph W. Eaton. New York, Harper and Brothers, 1943.

This 255-page book deals chiefly with twenty-seven co-operative corporation farms established by the Farm Security Administration throughout various parts of the United States. The study covers a period of five years from 1937, when the first co-operative farm began operations, to 1942. It is, therefore, a study of a very youthful project. Factual data is given as to the size, acreage, membership in families, cost, physical layout, method of establishment, management rent, and subsidization as well as an evaluation of success and failure of the projects to date.

The Purpose of the Projects

The co-operative corporations were begun during the depression years under The Federal Emergency Relief Administration. Most of the members were former farm laborers from sub-marginal farming areas and for that reason the experiment had certain handicaps to begin with. The co-operative farms were established for the express purpose of testing relative advantages of large-scale co-operative and small-scale family-type farming. The FSA also established many individual units near each corporation and assigned the supervision of both to the same staff. Comparative surveys of the two methods could therefore be made easily.

The Value of the Book

State colleges of agriculture and the various U. S. Department of Agriculture agencies have long known that demonstrations are the most effective methods of teaching new agricultural techniques to farmers. Lecturing and theorizing seems to accomplish little, but if the demonstration farm which is trying out a new seed or a new method of plowing gets a high yield, the chances are that the neighbors will copy the new idea.

We need to have some one experiment in new and improved methods of farming. We need to learn how farmers can work together and own certain machines and instruments of production together in such a way as to reduce the costs of labor and capital stock. This book by Eaton examines such an experimental project. The author wisely refrains from drawing final conclusions but confines himself to pointing to the record and to asking questions.

Personal Reaction

The book does not have a religious theme. The interest in co-operative methods of farming is largely economic, nevertheless, Christians interested in developing brotherhood economics and mutual aid will find much valuable help in this book. The experiments are not truly co-operative because of the government subsidy and the management policies of F.S.A. as well as the methods used in selecting members; nevertheless, there are many practical lessons to be learned by those interested in such developments. Supplementary chapters discuss Hutterian and Amana Community life as well as the Co-operative Saline Valley Farms established by Harold Gray in Michigan.

Seminars on Normal Living

At Oberlin Seminary this summer a group of twenty persons—young rural ministers, teachers and members of Civilian Public Service Camps—met for sixteen three-hour seminars on Normal Living under the direction of Ralph Borsodi, founder of The School of Living, and author of "This Ugly Civilization."

It was agreed that a movement toward the decentralization of production, population, ownership, control, government and education is necessary as the right direction and the first step for the achievement of normal living.

A forty-page summary of the seminars can be had for 50c from Mrs. Mildred Jensen Loomis, Lane's End Homestead, Brookville, Ohio.

RELIEF

In El Shatt Education Prgoram

Samuel Yoder describes phases of the work assigned to him in the El Shatt refugee camp, in a letter written October 4:

"It seems that I am to have charge of the schools in this camp, about fifty of them.... But with almost no materials available, and with the refugees themselves going ahead with what they have, I'm still not certain what I can do. I visited several the other day. They are housed in tents; for seats many of them have gasoline cans, and no desks at all. They do have some paper and pencils now, though I understand that these have come recently. Blackboards have been made by the carpenter shop out of wood and black paint. Children do a marvelous job of adapting themselves under such difficult circumstances, and seem reasonably happy. If any of you have any ideas what to do with about 1700 children in the midst of the desert with very little equipment, I would be glad to have them."

Mechanic Enroute to Egypt

Ervin Hooley left Miami, by plane, October 24, enroute to Egypt to help meet the need for mechanics in the refugee camps there.

Farewell for Three Relief Workers

A farewell service was held at Headquarters, the evening of October 24, for three relief workers, each entering a different area of relief need.

J. Harold Sherk leaves in the very near future to help administer relief in India. He has served as pastor in the Ontario Conference of the Mennonite Brethern in Christ Churches, and for fifteen months was engaged as camp minister in the Canadian Alternative Service Camps, which were equivalent to our C.P.S. camps.

P. P. Baltzer is ready to leave for the Middle East, vhere he will be engaged in relief work until such ime as he and S. Floyd Pannabecker have permis- ion to enter India and China. Brother Pannabec- er is already enroute to the Middle East.

Ophia Sevits of Fort Wayne, Indiana, is the last urse scheduled to leave for Puerto Rico to join the a Plata Hospital staff. She leaves Miami by plane ctober 28. Miss Sevits had served as nurse in the edaryville C.P.S. Camp during the summer onths.

ar East Workers Finally Granted Permits

After a long period of waiting, the India residence rmits and passports for Lawrence Burkholder, ayton Beyler, and R. C. Kaufman have finally been tained. They are hoping to secure passage, also, the very near future. While these workers are heduled for China relief service they will be re- yed to the India field until the way opens for en- ing China.

Relief Briefs

race Augsburger, R.N., has arrived in Algiers, ording to word received October 18.

he Greek War Relief Association has reported t the Mennonite women have cut 42,735 gar- nts, out of 33,310 yards of material. The Associ- on has cut 8,500 more garments for them to sew. women will have sewed 51,253 garments when work is completed. Many of these garments reported already to have been received by the ociation.

he clothing received at the Ephrata Clothing ter amounted to 21,493 pounds for the months une, July, and August. 11,077 pounds were re- ed last year during the same period.

dian Notes

an order passed by the Canadian Government pril, 1943, conscientious objectors were to be ted by mobilization boards to "employment e their service could be utilized to the best ntage in the national interests." Because of the age of farm labor and because the majority of were from farms, agricultural work was substituted for work in the alternative service work camps (A. S. W.). Not only have C. O. inductees after the passage of this order been sent into agriculture, but many of the men in the camps have returned to their home providences.

The Wartime Information Board, Ottawa, in a Reference Paper, May 25, 1944, gives the following information concerning Canadian C. O.'s:

"In a total of 8,858 conscientious objectors postponed more than 5,160 were working on farms as at December 31, 1943. The order provided that postponed conscientious objectors in agriculture should be put under contract with their employers. The farmers were to pay $25 a month plus board and lodging to each conscientious objector employed, and the difference between this and the going wage to be paid to the Canadian Red Cross."

C. P. S. Briefs

Appointments: Paul Albrecht will be educational and assistant director at Three Rivers, California; Naomi Brubaker will be dietitian.

C. P. S. Assignments: According to a report from the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, based upon the drafting of the lower age groups, about 45 percent of all C. P. S. inductions for July, August, and September were Mennonites.

Fish Planting: During the month of September a number of campers at Three Rivers, California were engaged in planting rainbow trout. They planted at least 30,000 in the streams and lakes throughout the mountains.

Peace Section Notes

Civilian Bonds

The following statement has been prepared by Jesse Hoover, secretary of the Peace Section:

"The Peace Section has been trying for several months to interest the Treasury Department in a special Relief Savings Bond to finance the Congressional appropriation for United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Association. Recently we received what appears to be the final reply from the Treasury officials. There does not seem to be any prospect of obtaining such an issue.

With the probability of another Bond Drive in the not too distant future, we will have nothing more to offer our Churches than the plan followed previously. And while it has not been entirely satisfactory to many of our people, we do want to urge again that if investments are made in government securities, we should leave our testimony of non-support of war by registering such investments through the Provident Trust Company, by the plan which has been in operation."

JOTTINGS

—The Annual Harvest-Mission Festival of the West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, was observed on November 5 with Rev. W. C. Voth and Dr. G. S. Klassen as speakers. Rev. Voth told about his trip to South America and Dr. Klassen about the experiences he had while serving as a dentist in the Chaco. Dr. Klassen recently returned from Paraguay.

—The First Mennonite Church, Paso Robles, California, of which Rev. Orlo Kaufman is pastor, is now enjoying a Sunday bulletin. The church building has fresh white paint with brown trimming. A new roof was put on last fall. The Women's Missionary Society's sale of linens and other articles brought $73.41. A total of 165 pounds of clothing was recently packed for the M. C. C.

—From Rev. Phil. A. Wedel's final report to the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, we glean: That Rev. Wedel taught a Bible class in the local high school from 1936 to 1942 and that the student enrollment ranged from 96 to 165; of it he says, "This course proved to be a proficient method in Christian character building. Many could be reached who never attended Sunday School or Church services; that the church membership in June, 1936, was 282 and on November 11, 1944, was 389; that the congregation presented an electric refrigerator to the parsonage in 1940 and that the church has venetian blinds.

—The First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, had its Annual All-Church Celebration on November 5. The new addition to the church basement was dedicated. Rev. Walter H. Dyck brought the morning and evening messages on October 29. The Reedley Church has canned 1168 quarts for C.P.S. All of it was done at the home of Mrs. Herman Neufeld. Some of the fruit will be sent to the camps in Montana.

—The Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, plans to have evangelistic meetings the first week in December. Prayer week in January is to be observed with home folks giving brief talks.

—The Tabor Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, recently at a business meeting, at the request of its dear Elder, voted to call Rev. H. B. Schmidt as its Junior Elder and that the two, Rev. P. H. Richert and Rev. H. B. Schmidt, divide the work equally. Since Rev. Schmidt was one of the deacons, the church had to elect a different brother as deacon. Brother Clarence Schmidt was elected. At its annual meeting in September, the Sunday School elected twenty-one teachers and their substitutes. Brother Alfador Frey is superintendent, and B. W. Schmidt is superintendent in the basement. Mrs. Alfador Frey is superintendent of the Cradle Roll and Rev. H. B. Schmidt of the Home Department. The sewing society recently canned eighty-two quarts of fruit for C. P. S. The society, which meets once a month is very busy sewing for relief and missions. It also prepares a bundle of goods for each boy who leaves for C. P. S. Rev. Richert is again instructing a large catechism class. In October we had two very welcome visitors from Manitoba, Rev. D. H. Loewen, a mission candidate to Africa, and Rev. Schlutz, Elder of the Bergthal Church. Rev. Schultz spoke to us on "The Wonderful Love of Christ."—Abr. Schmidt, Corr.

—The Archbishop of Canterbury died recently. He was the first chairman of the World Council of Churches after it was launched in 1937 by the Protestant and Eastern Orthodox bodies of 30 nations. He was regarded by some as the outstanding Protestant in the world today.

—Soldiers talk Pennsylvania Dutch with German Civilians: Wm. H. Shelly of Philadelphia, Pa., sent us some newspapers clippings which tell how American soldiers of Pennsylvania Dutch (German) origin have had no difficulty in talking to German civilians they ran into. Undoubtedly, the Germans were from the Pfalz or the Palatinate. The Pennsylvania German (without the English words in it) was brought from that region.

—Rev. Sam J. Goering is to address a combined meeting of the First and Second Mennonite Churches, Beatrice, Nebraska, on the evening of November 9.

—The mission societies of the First Mennonit Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, presented a mission pla on October 29.

——Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander recently conducte evangelistic meetings for the Mennonite Church i Richfield, Pa. It is reported that interest and atter dance was good and that there were decisions fo Christ.

—Rev. Homer Leisy began a series of evangelisti services in the West Zion Mennonite Churc Moundridge, Kansas, on November 8. They wi close on November 17. They begin at 8 P. M. number of the messages are illustrated.

—Correction: Rev. Herman Wiebe did not ask th Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon, be released by the beginning of the new year. He to serve until the end of the school year or June "At that time he will receive his degree and feels ca led to continue as Bible teacher after that."

—Rev. Don. E. Smucker writes that speaking dat in the months ahead include the C. P. S. camp Mulberry, Florida, and the Founders Day at Fre man Junior College and Academy.

—Th Annual Indiana All-Mennonite Women's M sionary Convention took place at Middlebury, In ana, on October 27. Mrs. J. P. Suderman of Ber was one of the convention speakers.

—Newport Mennonite Church, Newport, Washi ton: Four of our young members returned ho from the Bible Institute of Los Angeles for the su mer. They were: Màrie Peters, Linda and Su Woelk and Eldon Unruh. During the summer t other members, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dalke, attenc summer school at B. I., leaving their year-old dau ter with Mr. Dalke's sister. This certainly was qu a sacrifice on their part, but which they were willi to do for the Lord's sake. After all, in our Christ life we sometimes have to make sacrifices. I am minded of the verse in Romans 12:1, which is greatest sacrifice of all: "I beseech you theref by the mercies of God, that ye present your bod living sacrifice holy, acceptable to God, which is our reasonable service." All these students left gain for the fall term. Another member is planing to attend a Christian college at Three Hills, lberta, Canada. Our Sunday Schools and Christian ndeavors are very well attended. —Corr.

VOLUME LIX NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, NOVEMBER 14, 1944 NUMBER 45

OUR FOREIGN MISSION WORK

P. H. Richert, Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board

While mission work still has "A great door and effectual opened unto us," as Paul states in I. Cor. 16:9, it is also true, that "There are many adversaries," which we have to mention in the same breath, as Paul did. When missionaries are once in India, the door is wide open for them, but on the way are still adversaries, and the going back and forth is still dangerous on account of the war. Four of the missionaries are now on the ocean on the way to India, the Wengers and the two Schmidt sisters, thank the Lord. And with thanks may we always combine prayers for further protection.

Six other missionaries are waiting for passage to Africa, namely the Toevs's, Neufelds, and Dicks. This route is also so dangerous that small children are not permitted on the ships. This keeps the W. E. Harders back until the end of the war, as it looks now. But they do not sit and wait. They substitute in Arizona for the Sudermans, perhaps till next June, 1945.

Five other of our missionaries wait for their visas to Columbia in South America. Through a misunderstanding in the application, the waiting time is prolonged, but we have not given up hope for an open door in the near future. What a comfort it is to know that mission work belongs to Him, who has the keys to all the doors in the world. Rev. 3:7.

Mr. P. A. Banwar, Manager of the Bethesda Leper Home and Hospital

About twenty applicants for the various fields are still preparing in school and practical work at home. May we also be preparing for the time when they can be sent out as also the evacuated missionaries from China. For the latter the Board is laying aside a China fund, and there is also talk in the Board to lay a fund aside for expanding the work as soon as the war ends and the doors open. Other mission boards begin to do this very thing.

Brother and Sister Wenger in Montana will soon begin their second year in language study combined with actual spiritual work. Brother and Sister A. Claassen of Beatrice serve as substitutes for Brother and Sister Ediger at Clinton, Oklahoma. The latter now live in Newton under instructions from the board to rest six months. This does not prohibit them to accept here and there invitations over Sundays to visit churches as they get permission from the doctor.

May we continue to remember all workers in our prayers, both those on the field and those at home, especially those who are sick like P. W. Penner, J. R. Duerksen, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Isaac, and Mrs. W. E. Harder. Nearly all are, so to say, on the way to recovery, more or less. Three sisters (Helen E. Nickel, Martha Burkhalter, and Eva Pauls,) recently came home from India on furlough.

HE CAME EMPTY AND WENT FULL

One who does not know lepers cannot realize with what depressed feelings these afflicted people come to leper Homes for treatment. They come and they go out. Many just leave the Home to live and die a leper because a segregated life, away from the numerous attractions of the world, is not congenial to them, or sometimes their land demands them back home, or similar such excuses make them discontinue treatment. It is a pity! But some are healed and when they go out, what a JOY!!!

Purushottam, a young man was admitted into the Bethesda Leper Home and Hospital at Champa —a leper and a non-Christian who found in the Bethesda Home not only a Home but a fellowship of saints and a Christian enviroment exhibiting the spirit of Christ in all phases of work. Above all, he was very much influenced by the Young People's Society and although it was entirely a Christian organization, i.e. C. E., he attended all the meetings regularly and later even took an active part. Being a young man he could not help being with them. What did the C. E. have to present to this young Hindu Purushottam? It presented Christ, His teachings, and attractive programs, and Purushottam's participation brought light into his dark heart. He soon became an ardent enquirer. A bright day dawned upon him. He must decide for his salvation and he DID. He discovered a new way of salvation—an inexpensive way!! He no more has to go to holy pilgrimages, nor does he have to bathe in the holy Ganges, nor feed the Brahmins. All such things required by the Hindus to obtain salvation must end. The blood of Christ stands above all these. He realized this and fully believed it. One Sunday he confessed Christ to be his ONLY Saviour.

Then took place his "Farewell" from the Home. Being absolutely free from leprosy, he wanted to go back to his village. The C. E. Society arranged for a program and the whole Church was invited. The chairman of the society gave a short address on "Ye are the light of the world" and presented him with a copy of the Bible and a Sunday School picture roll showing the life of Christ. Now what does Purushottam say?

"I came empty and now I go full."

INDIA
ANNUAL COMPOSITE OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE MENNONITE MISSION
April 1, 1943—March 31, 1944

Dear Brethern:

Among our Lord's farewell expressions we find this "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the consummation of the age." Lately this has made an unprecedented impression upon us that it is here released as a greeting. The work began and progressed thus.

I BEGINNING

Bro. and Sister P. A. Penner opened Champa in 1901, the same year Bro. and Sister J. F. Krocker started Janjgir only 7 miles southwest, both stations lie south of the Bengal Nagpur Mainline Ry. 1911 Bro. and Sister P. J. Wiens went 25 miles south of Champa at the conflux of the Hasdeo and Mahanadi rivers began Mauhadih. In 1915 our eyes were directed 25 miles North of Champa to Korba for a strategic centre. Bro. and Sister C. H. Suckau undertook the opening. These three stations are located on the eastern bank of the Hasdeo River. Far across the Mahanadi river lies the large dense jungle with numerous villages that showed an open door for the Gospel, therefore Bro. and Sister S. T. Moyer opened the work now called Jagdeeshpur, in 1924. Upon Drs. H. R. Baumans' arrival the Medical Station one-half mile north of Champa was laid out in 1926. These stations lie in almost a straight line from North (Korba) to south (Jagdeeshpur) around 90 to 95 miles long.

II FIELD

A — The Mission field covers approximately 8,000 sq. m.
B — It harbors villages and small towns about 3,000.
C — The population lies in the neighborhood of 1,015,000.

Our portion is located pretty well inland. A straight line drawn from Calcutta to Bombay 1,223 miles crosses our mission field towards the north some 400 miles from Calcutta. The Hasdeo river transverses from the north until it empties into the Mahanadi river at Mauhadih, flowing from west to east. This bed is at places one mile wide. The soil between the low mountain ranges in the north and south is very fertile for rice, wheat, linseed and pea culture. Those interposed portions, covered with jungles, bossom tigers, leopards, hyena, wolves, bears, they endanger the public. Annually their toll on domestic animals and people is still serious. The monsoon from June to September precipitates on the average 50 inches of water. The temperature ranges between 45 and 122 Fahrenheit. Snowfall is un-

THE STAFF

This consists of both European and Indians. All Indian co-workers listed here are from Christian ranks. The Europeans are U. S. A. citizens, except one holding Canadian citizenship.

Out of 3,000 villages 163 have Christians residing in. There are 19 missionaries on the field to each would on the average fall 53,421; 72 Indian co-workers are on the evangelistic staff, therefore to them fall 14,097. Comparing the last year's report we notice the ratio has not improved, consequently it is so much more necessary to pray for the revival in the church and an increased working staff in consecrated action.

M — Widow:—There are no non-Christian widows fully supported by the mission. Some forsaken ones, old, blind, crippled receive a certain portion weekly as a helpout. Their existence in most instances is most pitiful indeed.

Christian widows we have 174. Just a very small per cent fall to the support of the mission, the rest are either somehow self-supporting or helped by relatives or the church. All the churches so-to-say have a certain fund from which such emergencies are drawn.

N — Industrial work gains constantly in prestige and is pursued in farming, i.e. rice, wheat, linseed, soy beans, orchards. Great difficulty is found to introduce new methods by which the yields can be enhanced.

Gardening has much room for expansion, because people refrain from endeavoring to utilize properly each corner of land lying void. During the monsoon and immediately after, much vegetables could be raised; those along the rivers even the dry season offers opportunities. Poultry venture in most instances meets with serious distress on account of crows, hawks, dogs, coyotes, thieves. Frequently some house wife brought out a brood of 50 and more; probably two became grown. Weaving specially around Jagdeeshpur under Mrs. Dester's supervision becomes very prominent. In spite of the materials almost unobtainable and payable the orders come in fast. The goods turned out rank high. Certain individuals display good enterprise. The printing press at Jagdeeshpur makes fast headways too. Smithery and carpentry lag yet behind for certain reasons. Then there come in sewing, paper making, rope making, field construction, soil preservation. The objectives before us are to make each life a useful one to humanity, then the honorable aspect of manifold labor.

O — The Missionary and Indian Church Conferences have met in joint sessions to discuss ways and means of working together more, and more; the latter to shoulder more responsibilities and the former release certain phases. A constitution has been drafted to that effect and ratified by the Missionary Conference and the Mission Board. The respective Governing Board and the committee were chosen, and are now operating. The phases released by the Missionary Conference are the Evangelistic, Primary Schools, Pastor Fund, Cemeteries, Church Property. The finances in connection with these phases are handled by the Indian Church Conference Treasurer. The object is that gradually larger portions will be integrated. It is thought this venture will prove successful and encourage greater zeal among the Indian constituencies.

Much relief work throughout the area among the Christians had to be done. The two preceding years in certain portions the fields yielded nothing consequently an unprecedented poverty followed. The poverty can in no wise be duly described with words. If it would not have been for the many willing hands in the homeland, starvation certainly had claimed many lives. As it is of Christians, it is known three fell, victim in lonely places. High prices cause many adults to wonder about their haggard bodies wrapped in rags; children up to 12 years generally run about naked. The harvest was good, but the creditors at the threshing floor waited and took away their share borrowed from them leaving the farmer as destitute as aforetime.

The political situation on the surface has im-roved. The Gospel found many open doors, the ork among the villages could continue unabated. iose four churches organized of which was report-l last year had worshipping places were dedicated, pecially the TalDeori and Beltikeri increased in ımber nicely. WITHOUT A DOCTOR explained the situation to the men and the pat-t. I said that they could stay if they wanted to, l I thought we could give the patient some help, could relieve his pain some, but we were not doctors and if they waited until the doctor came back, they would receive more effective treatment. They were disappointed and discouraged. The man had been sick for sometime. They had finally gotten the courage to come to the hospital. And now there was no doctor. They turned away to discuss the matter. Finally they decided they would return a two days' trip to a village where they had relatives. Then after ten days when the doctor would be back, they would return for treatment. However, the doctor returned to duty, a week passed, and still I had not seen these people at the hospital. We had missed an opportunity.

Our Indian doctor was on vacation. We were thout a doctor in our Mission Hospital in Champa. was sitting in the doctor's office trying to take re of the patients as they came for treatment ıen four men set down a cot in the hall. On it lay rather elderly man with one leg pulled up into painfully cramped position. One of the men came :o the office. "We have brought our brother to u for treatment. There is something wrong with s left leg." I asked a few more questions. I was zzled as to what was wrong. There was no one to ıom I could go for advice. I asked, "From where e you?" hoping that they had not come far so ıt I could ask them to return after our doctor me back from vacation. "We have come a five ys' trip, and we have brought our food and bed-ıg so that we can stay here until our brother cured." A five days' trip on a springless buffalo t, and we without a doctor. I felt downhearted. 'hy does not some doctor from America answer call to come to India?" I cried to myself.

A few evenings later we were relaxing in our living room after the day's work. A couple of men came to the door. "We have brought a boy to you. A cart wheel ran over his head this morning, and we have brought him to you for treatment." I could not imagine any child being alive after a heavy cart wheel had gone over his head. I wondered what he would look like. As I hurried to the hospital I thought helplessly, "What will I do? I'm no doctor." The child's face and head were covered with deep, dirty gashes. His face was badly swollen, yet he was partly conscious. It was clearly a case for a doctor, yet we had no doctor. I was afraid if I or any other hospital worker tried to sew him up, we would only injure the boy more. I explained our situation to the father. I said we would clean the wounds and give other emergency treatment, but then I suggested that they take the boy to Bilaspur on the train the next morning. After giving first aid, I wanted them to stay at he hospital for the night, but they were disappointed and left immediately. Again with aching and troubled heart, I prayed, "Oh, God may some doctor be willing to come to India to help us."

TO OUR CO-WORKERS IN AMERICA

PRAYING HANDS

You know the story of that painting called the Praying Hands? Some four hundred years ago there were two friends, both artists, both dreaming of doing some work of art. Neither had the funds. They decided that one should labor with his hands while the other would paint. Later they would turn about and the one who labored would take his turn at painting while the other labored to support them both. But when the day came to change about menial labor had so gnarled the hands of the one that he could no longer paint. To give him grace to bear his load, he prayed. The painter, Durer, has made his unforgettable picture of these praying hands.

It is your praying hands that enable us to stay in India to write epistles of Christ by the spirit of God on tablets of flesh. Many of you could be doing this same work. You stayed back, and permitted us to be free for this commission. The picture of your labor of love is unforgettable. We can only carry on, praising God and thanking you for your every help in this God's wonderful work.

There is a River

To change the figure, we think of the contributions of our home folks as the upper reaches of a mighty river. Its source is the throne of God. It issues forth from under an altar.

But if its source is in the snow-crowned heights, it came gushing down through the lives and lips of our mothers and fathers, as they knelt with us at our bedsides at night, to say the good-night prayers; through our Sunday School and public school teachers, as they taught us the Word of Life; through our home church pastors, as Sunday after Sunday they brought us the Water of Life and nurtured our lives in the things of God; through our friends as they encouraged us to go to the altar there to dedicate our lives to the Captain of our Salvation; through the Mission Board and the missionary societies, who have been great reservoirs of sustaining power. YOU all are the upper reaches of this mighty river of God.

Of Life, Healing, Cleansing

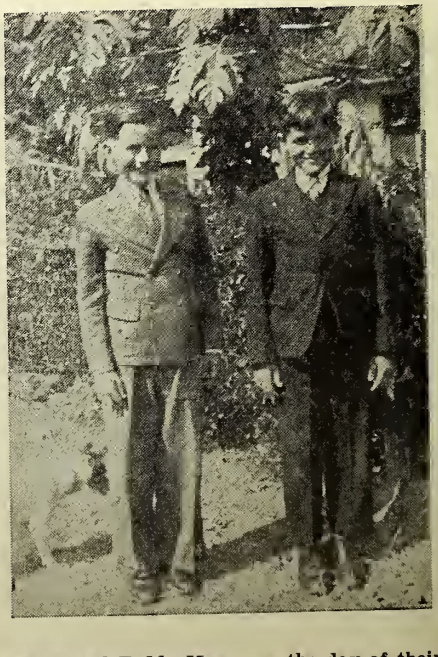
But a river touches places of which its sources know little. And so does this river, flowing through you, our best friends of the home land, mightily touches myriads of lives of which you know nothing. We can only report briefly as a peon of praise to God in deep appreciation of a debt which we can never repay to our parents, teachers, pastors, friends, Mission Board, mission societies.

A river has healing in its waters. She was standing weeping at the end of our bungalow. The community was retiring for the night, or had retired when the night watchman discovered her. She and her husband had been married only six months, and the first glamour had passed. Married life did not quite pan out for them as they had pictured it. That night, before both young man and woman that river of life was poured forth in healing power,—and through the night they went back to their home, resolved to try once again to establish an altar of love there.

In some ways he was like a thirsty fertile fallow field. A few seeds had sprung up in it. And then he came seeking entrance into the Bible School. Others had passed him by. They saw the weeds, but failed to see the rich soul soil it contained. The river of life has been poured forth into his life. Most eagerly he drank in every opportunity. Today, with graduation ahead, he likely will be the first honor student. A river is for the thirsty.

He was a youth who had been prodigal with his God-given wealth, good health. At the end of his string he came back home, having failed, but not a failure. A river is for cleansing. Who will bathe in Jordon and be cleansed? For three years the cleansing waters were applied. He responded to our prayer, your prayers, and resources, the power of the Word. That river from America with its source

Rev. and Mrs. S. T. Moyer and Teddy on Christmas, 1942



Albert Bauman and Teddy Moyer on the day of their baptism in the highlands of God flowed through us. But it also flowed through a great spiritual convention in a distant city. Thither he was sent for an anointing from on High. He yielded and prayed, "fill full Thy righteousness, Oh Lord" and immediately the heavens opened, and they have been opening ever since for D. S. We praise God for His cleaning Jordon.

Who can measure the results in the lower reaches of this stream through which the hundreds of Bibles and scriptures sold each year, the thousands of messages taught, the tens of thousands of healings and preachings in His holy name, the twenty and thirty thousands of instances of personal contacts for Him.

There is a stream, the waters of which make glad the City of God. We praise God for the bounty from the upper reaches, as they apply to this needy and thirsty land.

HEALTHY HOME SURVEY

Are the children of lepers worth saving? They come with weak bodies, itch, sore eyes, empty stomachs, bad habits, bad training, and the stigma of being potential lepers—but with a need which cannot be overlooked. It was not overlooked in the past either, but many children were given homes in the two Healthy Boardings opened years ago by Dr. P. A. Penner.

Through the years the Healthy Home children have helped patiently giving physically and spiritually. Many there were who were incorrigible, trying patience and wits keenly, but all needing the love which Christian care gives. A survey of those who have come out of the Healthy Homes will show that the work has been blessed.

Among the boys who have been brought up in the Healthy Homes there are: one evangelist, four compounders, five in war service, one electric welder, one farmer, one train driver, one carpenter, one surveyor, three laborers, one poepn, three gardeners, one present Housefather of the Boys' Healthhly Home and two who are ill, a leper and a border T. B. case. Among the girls there are: four doing Bible Women's work or wives of evangelists, three nurses, four doing Bible Women's work or wives of evangelists, three nurses, four teachers, one boys' housemother, four farmers' wives, one teacher's wife, one compounder's wife, one electric welder's wife, one tailor's wife, three carpenters' wives, three whose husbands are in war service and one laborer. Often times one despairs of being successful with these young lives. Many have great temptations to overcome and not a few have developed into one "half" Christians, but there are enough stable Christians among them to make us thank God for the Healthy Homes. Such children have a long way to go to make up for their adverse early environment and in-heritance, but the grace of God is great—great enough for any who will avail himself of its help. When we see a man like Timothy, now technician at the Leper Home we must say "Thank God for the Healthy Homes." When we see another who will not listen to counsel we still say "Thank God for the Healthy Homes" for he has at least had a chance to learn of better things. At the same time it makes us pray "Give more grace that there may not be such failures."

OUR HOME MISSION WORK

A. J. Neunschwander, Secretary of the Home Mission Board

Psalm 26:7 "That I publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works."

Bible Institute and Visitation Program

This work with our men in C.P.S. Camps, hospitals and other units, and the churches has been going on for four weeks, and many letters have come in telling of the "wondrous works" of God. Without giving places or names I feel constrained to "publish with the voice of thanksgiving" what the Lord was able to perform in this united effort: "We of C.P.S. Camp No.______ wish to thank you and the Home Mission Board, of the General Conference for making it possible to have Rev. __________ with us for a few days during the first part of October. We appreciated the services of Rev. __________ very much. I believe that young people now are moulding the Church of tomorrow."

From another letter: "Our unit is isolated from Mennonite communities and also quite far from the beaten path of travel between other camps so that it was a particular benefit to us. Visitors are always welcome, but when they come to us in such a well-planned schedule, as happened in the case of Rev.__ We want you to know that his spiritual leadership in the eight sessions in camp as well as his association with the men has been highly regarded by all of us."

Hally's Pocket Bible Handbook was recommended to the workers as a helpful book to recommend to the C.P.S. men. A total of 323 copies were sent to the different camps and units all over the United States. These books are bought by the men for $1.00. One minister reported: "It was not any task to get the men to take the book, it was a question who would have to wait till another supply could be secured."

From another camp: "Rev. ________'s consecrated personality and humility went a long way to make the men appreciate him and his messages. Rev.____ visited a number of men in the dairy unit and by his interest in them stimulated them to come to the meetings. A ministerial visit of this type (October 8-15) gives the camp a great deal more than an overnight stay. A one-day visit, and a Sunday visit at that, can hardly give a minister a picture of C.P.S." One of the workers writes: "The five Bible Study classes deal with the New Testament Church as described in Acts chapters 1-10. I assume that all of our experiences today have their precedent in the early church: their activities, their power, their leadership, their spirit, and their problems are a pattern by which we are to test our spirit and our work."

From another letter we take this: "Little had I realized the blessings that come to one in an intensive united endeavor such as this." The sentiment expressed in one letter is found in almost identical words from many others. It is: "I am having a wonderful experience in this camp. The cooperation is beyond expectation. They had a full program for me for the whole week, but the Lord has given me health and strength and it has been a pleasure to serve."

These men are still human and they need our prayers. One man wrote: "There are spiritual stragglers." In the same letter the same worker writes: "We had a communion service. The leader here has not had communion in three years. Thirty-one communed (there are only twenty-four General Conference men in that camp) Mr.____________ a member of ______________ church in Ohio served as deacon. We had a blessed time meditating on Luke 24:13-36, remembering our Lord in this manner."

"I arrived here at ______________ Camp, Saturday, October 7 at 5:30 p.m. after three nights and three day's continuous traveling without sleeper, as it was not possible to get reservation. It was a hard disagreeable trip in an overfilled car, but the Lord gave me health and strength as it was for His sake that I was traveling. I also have a service arranged with the _________________. They have asked for a private service on some concrete teaching on God's Word, so I am happy for the privilege. The morale in this camp is very good. Here are a group of men who are very true to the cause we as Mennonite people represent." So reports another worker.

From still another camp this: "I do not know when we have had a speaker who found his way into the hearts of our group as Brother ______ did. The religious life committee and I worked out the programs for each evening. We had two services each night, one for those on night duty and one for those on day duty. Each meeting was well attended. I am sure that our Conference will be blessed for this and we shall in a greater way be able to serve Him to whom we owe our all for His matchless love and care for us. Enclosed find a $5.00 bill to go toward the fund to defray the expenses of this work."

From another camp the Educational Director writes: "One definite result of Dr. __________'s visit here is the organization of a Bible study group that is following his recommendation of reading the Bible together and a discussion of the passages studied."

Many more fine reports and words of appreciation might be given but we had to "publish with the voice of thanksgiving and tell of all thy wondrous works."

A MISSIONARY ENDEAVOR

For many years the Women's Missionary Society of the First Mennonite Church of Chicago had wished for an auxiliary society consisting of high school girls, working girls, and young married women. In the beginning of the year 1943, such a group was organized and has been meeting once every month since that time.

The first project undertaken by this organization was to collect clothing for the M.C.C. relief program. Since then we have sought to send cheer and happiness to many others. One of the main projects has been to help support the work of Miss Elsa Grantland, a missionary from our church working among the mountain folk of North Carolina. Besides sending her five dollars a month, an effort hs been made to bring cheer to the children there b sending clothing, toys, and candy for her to pass out.

Another project has been to supply some pillow cases and knotted comforters for the Women's Dvision of the Pacific Garden Mission here in the cy, which serves as a rescue mission for homeless gls and women. The Christian Service Men's Cnter connected with this mission has also called o our organization to furnish refreshments and hp in serving the food to the service men.

Nearly every one of our members has a husband o brother in the armed forces; therefore a very ken interest is felt in their behalf. At the beginning, sveral boxes of cookies and candy were packed at eery meeting. Now that so many of the boys are oerseas, this has been discontinued, but we are snding a four or five page bulletin, called Mennone Notes, every month to twenty-one boys that hve their name on the roll at the church. This pper is greatly appreciated by the boys and keeps thm informed of church activities. Also every isue has a full page message from the pastor; ptures of two of the boys, and a few comments aout them are also put into every issue. Gathering th material, cutting the stencils, and running it off o a mimeograph machine takes considerable time ad work.

The regular monthly meetings are held in the hmes of the members. The program for these metings usually consists of a period for devotionals folowed by a discussion of some missionary topic le by one of the members or by some guest speake Then there is time for planning work projects ad also a short social period.

Although several of the members have gone to lie near the camp where the husband is stationed, w hope that we will be able to continue to fulfill th purpose for which the Vesper Circle was organizd, namely to promote the cause of Christ at hme and abroad.

HERBERT, SASKATCHEWAN

O give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good: for H mercy endureth forever." Ps. 136:1

Yes, we have many things to thank God for. His hnd has been over us for good. Many blessings He h bestowed upon us. At times the way has been hd too and we could not understand, but we look t God in faith, knowing that he knoweth best.

On June 11, the Rev. J. J. Thiessen of Saskatoon ociated at our baptismal and communion service. Eht young people were baptized. Two more had bn baptized in the Swift Current Bible School in sing, making a total of ten. May they be found a living stones in the temple of God.

The following day was to be the dedication service o the Glen Kerr Church which was just completed. A day it rained. Most people thought it impossible t get out there. However, one car ventured out, ctaining Rev. Thessen, a mixed quartet, and the dver. We had nine miles of highway and fifteen nes of mud, a model "A" Ford and a good supply o optimism.

There were about fifty people present for the impressive service, a good attendance for that community. The return journey was no easier than going up, but fired by many a spiritual song, our optimism held, and today six people look back to a very strenuous trip as one of the greatest blessings of the summer. God was near to us.

Owing to gas and tire rationing our work on the outstations has somewhat decreased. It becomes increasingly difficult to provide transportation to these outlying points as neither of the two ministers owns a car. We have four preaching points outside of Herbert, from sixteen to thirty miles distant in different directions. Lack of transportation facilities greatly hampers the work on the points.

Harvesting operations are practically completed now. With the exception of some hail damage the crops have turned out well.

The thanksgiving offerings, including proceeds from the mission auction sales, to date amount to about $1600.00. Not all of our outstations have had their thanksgiving service yet. May all this money be used of God toward the salvation of souls.

We are looking forward to another visit by the Rev. J. J. Thiessen for our fall communion service.

We are praying for God's hand to guide us in the election of a deacon or deacons.

Christmas is almost here again. It seems difficult to obtain suitable English materials for the Sunday School. Who can give us advice or help us out? Any hints would be greatly appreciated.

Wishing all readers God's richest blessings we remain your fellow pilgrims.

SMITH CORNER MENNONITE CHURCH

East Freedom, Pa.
October 7-44

Dear mission Friends:

Another three months in the work here has become history and I shall try to tell you what happened those months, as well as the condition of things here at Smith Corner.

From what I can learn about the other churches in our district I am sure ours is no worse; however, I am not offering excuses or seeking consolation; I am just comparing. The condition is not by any means as I would like it to be. We have dropped in attendance as compared with the same period last year. Last year attendance in the third quarter was 55 average, this year 45. Last year average offerings were $8.45, this year $8.07. (Figures for Sunday School only)

The Sunday evening service continues to be the largest in attendance; usually there are from fifty to sixty, sometimes even more.

We have suffered the loss of some of our members through death, and others because of the war; one family was entirely broken up, the son having gone into the service, the mother to Cumberland, Maryland, to work, and the father to somewhere in Ohio to work.

Out of twenty-three men we used to have here, twelve are in the service of the country and five have died.

We are still having young people's meetings every Sunday evening even though it is not quite up to what we would like to see it.

The Ladies Aid and Brotherhood are still living though pretty badly hurt by the conditions. Then another thing which always did hinder the work here is the fact that so few of our women are good at sewing, and so few are willing to do what they can, so our meetings are little more than a fellowship meeting. But much good has come out of the meetings for us, and some help to other causes.

One of our young ladies is in college this year. This is the first one of our young people ever to go to college, and although she did not go to Bluffton I am still glad that there has been a start made by one to go to a school of higher learning; perhaps others may be inspired. She is going to Juniata College Huntingdon, Pa., she says, because is it closer home and she has some relatives there, and she can get home for the week-ends (45 miles). She is studying to be a teacher.

Mid-week service is attended by some twenty-five to thirty and the time is used for Bible study and prayer.

Thanking you for all your support both in prayers and money,

Sincerely,
John S. Raugh

ALBERTA COMMUNITY CHURCH, PORTLAND, OREGON

Greetings in our dear Redeemer's name!

At the close of another quarter, the question involuntarily arises, "Lord, have I done my best?" I humbly confess that the Spirit has been willing, but the flesh is weak.

We cannot report of great advancements in so far as increase in membership is concerned. The fact is that a number of members, whose names are on the membership list, have not attended our services once since we are here. We can report, however, of definite results in the spiritual realm. The active members are becoming more zealous in their endeavor to make the church prosper spiritually. The services are being attended with a marked increase in regularity, and the spirit of cooperation is commendable. It can also be said that the desire to reach out and win others is being expressed and demonstrated by the majority. We have good prospect of receiving into the membership several young people of good Mennonite training, who are capable of taking an active part in the work.

We are very happy for the decision of the church to secure a pastor, with the permission of the Home Mission Board, who will devote full time to the work here. Their desire and mine is that he will be one who will give prominence to the evangelistic appeal, and at the same time feed the flock and teach them to observe all things the Lord has commanded.

We covet your prayers for the successful furtherance of the work here.

QUARRYVILLE, PA.

Mrs. Regier and I were brought up on a farm in the Henderson, Nebraska, community. We were regular in attending both Sunday School and church service, and in our later teens became members of the Bethesda Mennonite Church. We received some Bible training in the Henderson Bible School where we came to know the Lord Jesus Christ as our personal Savior.

Prior to our marriage, the Lord had spoken to each of us concerning full time service for Him. We were married Aug. 8, 1940, and left immediately after our marriage for the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, where we enrolled as students. We thank God for this great school where we learned more about the Bible and where we received our training for Christian service. In our four years at the Institute we have had many opportunities to serve the Lord in different ways such as: Sunday School, rescue mission, hospitals, jails, house visitation, pulpit supply, etc.

We graduated from the Institute on Aug. 3, 1944. Mrs. Regier graduated from the General Bible Course, and I from the Pastors' Course. We came to Calvary Mennonite Church on Sept. 1 to begin our work here.

In our short period of service we have done some visitation among the members of our church, as well as among other families in the community who are not attending any church services.

Our Sunday School, originally consisting of four classes, has been divided into six classes according to the various age groups.

Our young people have charge of two evening services a month. Miss Anna Swarr, one of our young people, has spent five years doing missionary work in China. She plans to return as soon as passports will again be granted.

We are trusting God for great blessings, and we ask the prayers of God's people that this church might stand as a lighthouse in a dark world leading many to the light of life, the Lord Jesus Christ.

LOVE FOR GOD

By Grace Binder

How can I best show my love for God? Many are the young persons and older persons too, who have at some time been confronted with this question, and you and I are no doubt amog that group. We know within our hearts that there is no greater love than the love we have for the one who watches over us, guides us through many a trial and leads us on from day to day, but how can we show our love, our gratitude and our thankful acceptance for the wonderful things which have been, and are being done for us and given to us.

Although there is probably much that can be said on this subject, the first two words which enter my mind are service and prayer. By serving Him through His church, we indirectly show our love for Him, and through prayer we can personally show our love and thank God for the everyday personal guidances He so freely gives.

"For God so loved the World that he gave His only begotten Son," therefore, if we so love our God, we will want to give of our time, and our talent to serve Him, and great are the opportunities for we as young people to do this very thing. Many will go to Sunday School or Church on Sunday morning with the feeling that now they have done the pastor or their parents a great favor, or now their duty for the week is done, being very careful not to attend the young people's meeting which is being held in that same church at 6:45 that evening, and oh how much could be accomplished at that young people's meeting, how much is accomplished by those who ttend! They are offering their services to our Lord in return for the blessings bestowed upon them from just being there, and the knowledge received through their study of that great book—the Bible.

Then comes the night set aside to sing our praises o God. The night that we can willingly give our me and services as a member of the choir to sing f our love and thankfulness. Do we respond willingly, or sit back and watch?

Many are the things which we as young people an do in cooperation with the older more experienced members of our churches to be a Servant of od, to show Him our great love for Him. How many are the times we asked by some other member f the church to serve on a committee, act as an fficer or take part in a program. Do we willingly ccept the task and render our services, not merely s a courtesy to the person who has asked us, which of course also a very important factor, but as a rvice to our God, or do we shirk the responsibility ith the "Oh, but I couldn't do that" or "Let some- ne else do it" attitude. If we really love God we ill undertake the task, and with His guidance, we ill be able to do it successfully.

Then we come to the subject of prayer. Much can be and has been said on this one great subject. Here is our opportunity to offer our praise and thanksgiving for all that we have and hold dear to us. Here is our chance to tell Him our great love for Him. Not only can we thank Him and praise Him but we can also bring our problems to Him asking His guidance and care. This too will show our love for Him, for it shows that we have our trust in Him and want his guiding light shining before us at all times. And I believe that in these days of war and strife there are many more people drawing closer to God, putting their trust in Him and bringing their problems to Him.

Summing it all up, if we serve our Lord physically by working for Him and speak to Him mentally through prayer, we can show our love, acceptance, and gratitude to the one who constantly watches over us. So next time you are asked to take part, serve him willingly. Next time you have a difficult problem take it to Him, and thank Him often for His wonderful works.

Miss Binder lives in Lansdale, Pa., and graduated from high school there in 1942. At present she is a stenographer for Frank M. Weaver & Co., Inc., a structural steel plant. A strong interest in church work is evidenced by the fact that she is Secretary of the Sunday School, President of the Young People's Sunday School Class, and a member of the Program Committee of the C. E. Society. She is also Secretary of the Lansdale Council of Religious Education. Besides all of this she serves as editor of the C.E. Witness, which is the young people's paper of the Eastern District. The Witness has a circulation of approximately 625 copies and is published every two months. It is subscribed to by members of all of the Eastern District Mennonite churches and is being sent to all members in the service by the Sunday School Union.

The article by Miss Binder is the third one in a series by the editors of the young people's papers of the various districts in our conference. Two more articles will appear in this series.

Youth Conference

Rev. Lando Hiebert of Enid, Oklahoma, will speak at the Youth Conference to be held at the First Mennonite Church of Newton, Kansas, on November 24, 1944, at 7:30 P. M. The Conference theme is "Certainties in a Time of Uncertainties." Everyone is invited to come and hear an inspiring message.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Eden Mennonite Church, Inola, Oklahoma: The joint C. E. program of this church and the M. B. Church was very much enjoyed by a large audience. We are proud to stand under one Banner, the Lord Jesus Christ.

—The First Mennonite Church, Nappanee, Indiana, recently sponsored a "Leaf Collection Contest." Primary, Junior, and intermediate groups took part.

—Arnold Classen, a member of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, has transferred from Provo, Utah, to the C. P. S. unit at the Alexian Hospital, Chicago, Illinois.

—Wadsworth, Ohio: The Junior Sunday School is undertaking the support of Urmilla Mehan, a young Christian of Champa, India. A total of $30.00 is to be raised for this project, which was arranged for through Missionary P. W. Penner.

—Harry Harder, a C. P. S. camper from the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, wrote the following in answer to the question "What have we to be thankful for this year?" (Question appeared in church bulletin.)

"I am thankful that I have been able to mingle, share, bunk, and associate with fellows, of similar basic beliefs, but not vitally different beliefs. This association has taught me the lesson of tolerance. I have learned that no matter what creed or religion a person may have, he may have something, he may have some ideas that I do not have. I have been able to learn from them. I have learned to appreciate the various branches of the Mennonites, as well as the other branches of the "Christian Church." For this lesson of tolerance, I am truly thankful. I have a rather meager and limited experience in this present world conflict, but even at that I have been able to draw from my experience something which I am sure will help me when the "strain and strife" will be over. So long for now. Yours for a better Church after the war."

—Mrs. Don Bumgarner, the former Mildred Unruh, is teaching English, history, music, and physical education for girls in Dayton, Ohio, high school, while her husband is attending Bonebrake Seminary. Don has a seminary charge, which is a full pastorate.

—Henderson, Nebraska: "The First Mennonite Church of Beatrice invited our C.E. society to bring them a program. The trip was made October 29. We arrived there in time for morning worship service. At noon our Beatrice hosts served a bountiful meal in the church basement. The program was presented at 2:30 in the afternoon. It centered around the theme "Saving our Lives by Losing Them." Such inter-community exchange of programs certainly strengthens the bonds between churches, giving opportunity for the renewal of old acquaintances and the making of new. The Beatrice church people always make us feel very welcome. We hope to have the opportunity of having them as our guests in the future."

—Halstead, Kansas: On October 1 the C. E. met for its regular meeting. Talks were given on the work of the Young People's Union and the Western District Conference. Following these a candle light installation service was held. On October 15 the society met at 4:00 to go to Mr. C. A. Smith's home for a nature meeting. A short devotional period was first held under Mr. Smith's beautiful red oak tree with Robert Schroeder as leader. The remainder of the meeting was spent in an interesting study of the many different trees in Mr. Smith's yard. It was a good opportunity to become acquainted with trees as he has over seventy different kinds in his yard. The group then went back to the church where they enjoyed a sack lunch together. On October 29 the theme of the program was "Friendship." On October 30 we had a Halloween party. The evening was spent in playing many interesting games. The social committee served hot-dogs, cocoa, and apples.

—Hopefield C. E., Moundridge, Kansas: The membership of our society is about forty-nine members. The absence of the young men in the service quite naturally handicaps us at this time. We can now more fully realize how the effectiveness of any group is dependent upon the presence of an individual as well as any other support one might offer. The condition as such naturally increases the responsibility for those of us at home. However, we have as yet been able to continue as usual with two meetings each month and also carry much the same financial responsibility.

The projects we are supporting are as follows:

1. Twenty-five dollars for Elizabeth Shalini, a school girl in India.
2. Other projects suggested by Y. P. U.

Various groups of our young people make visitations. These are, however, voluntary groups who visit and sing for the sick, aged, and other underprivileged groups. The young people of our society had the special privilege on October 29, to visit and sing for the folks who have made their home at the Bethel Home for the Aged, Newton. We are grateful to our Heavenly Father for the sustaining grace and strength He imparts to all in His service and which we as young people may enjoy—Carl Juhnke, Vice-pres.

—Paso Robles, California: The C.E. purchased a mimeograph machine for the church. It is used to put out a paper for the men in service and for issuing the church bulletin.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE NOTES

—The third annual Rural Life Conference of the historic peace churches will be held December 8 and 9 on the campus. This year its theme will be "Conservation of Our Resources: Spiritual, Natural, Economic, Social."

—Seniors selected as college representatives by the Student Council and faculty, in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities are Miss Lois Sommer, Pekin, Illinois; Miss Frances Beckenbach, Canfield, Ohio; and Miss Donna Hartzler, Bloomington, Illinois.

—Those granted honor scholarships this year by the admission and scholarship committee, and whose names President L. L. Ramseyer announced in chapel October 17 are: senior, Miss Lois Sommer, Pekin, Illinois; junior, Miss Iona Gerber, Orrville, Ohio; sophomore, Miss Carolyn Wilcox, Deerfield, Ohio.

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
Aberdeen, Idaho

The first Mennonite Church of Aberdeen, Idaho, in particular, and the community in general, keenly feel a loss in the leaving of the Rev. P. A. Wedel family. Their tireless efforts in behalf of the church and their general interest in the community has called for the admiration of many.

In their honor a number of families extended dinner invitations; one of the Sunday School classes had a farewell dinner, and the church in general participated in a farewell program.

On October 24, the M.D. Linscheid Sunday School class had a dinner in the church parlor in honor of the Rev. Wedel family. A delicious meal was served and a congenial hour of fellowship followed.

On October 29, Rev. Wedel gave his farewell sermon to a record attendance, composed of regular members and many friends that came for the occasion. The members of the Methodist church attended in body, and many other interested friends were in attendance. During the church worship service the regular order of service was followed. Rev. Wedel based the message on the first verse in the tenth chapter of Romans. His remarks particularly emphasized the need of Christian living in the present world crisis, and his final challenge to everyone was that the narrow way be chosen in preference to the popular, broad way of life. He clearly explained that the broad way in reality is narrow because it excludes God in its program, while the narrow way in its application is in reality broad since it includes the whole world in its service, and in it God receives His rightful place. This last message was greatly appreciated by the nearly five hundred that were in attendance.

Sunday evening a special program was rendered n honor of the Rev. Wedel family and it included variety of numbers and finally followed with a ellowship lunch in the church parlor.

The ministry of Rev. P. A. Wedel to the First Mennonite church of Aberdeen began in June of 936 and continued for a period of eight years and ive months. During this period many events took lace which shape themselves into a very profitable s well as interesting history. The most outstanding of these is the fact that the church membership rew during this period from 282 to the present nembership of 389. Other important events are: he new church edifice was dedicated on June 5, 938. Three golden weddings were celebrated. One ixtieth wedding anniversary was observed. Sixeen silver weddings took place. Seventy marriages ere performed. Peter Becker Jr. was ordained to e Eldership on September 29, 1940. Arthur Wener was ordained to the ministry on May 24, 1942. alcolm Wenger was ordained to the Christian issionary work October 31, 1943. The Church tertained the Idaho State Christian Endeavor onvention on November 2-5, 1939. Teaching of hristian Ethics in the Aberdeen High School benning with the school term of 1936 and continuing for six years to the end of the year 1942. Student enrollment ranged in number from 96 to 165. New church pews were installed during the week of March 6-13, 1943. The King's Daughters, a Young Women's Mission Society and the Boy's Club, an organization of teen-age boys were organized. Both organizations are missionary in endeavor. Ninety-one members were added by baptism. Fifty members were added by right hand of fellowship. Thirty-six funerals were conducted by the pastor. Thirty-three are serving their country.

A long and fruitful ministry has come to a close, but its results will be evident through the future years. The Mennonite church and the Aberdeen Community will long remember the kind services rendered by the Rev. P. A. Wedel family.

The final prayer of Rev. P. A. Wedel for the church was spoken in the words: "Oh God, Holy Spirit, Rewarder of the faithful, visit, we pray thee, this congregation with thy love and favor. Enlighten their minds more and more with the light of the everlasting Gospel. Graft in their hearts a love of the truth, increase in them true religion, and nourish them with all goodness. Amen."

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
McPherson, Kansas

The group of the First Mennonite Church of McPherson is still looking forward to complete organization. The group holds its weekly meetings in the McPherson Community Building, which is a nice place to meet, but which does not serve the group as adequately as a meeting place of their own would. With eager hopes the group is busily engaged trying to find ways and means of acquiring such a meeting place in the near future.

The attendance is slowly increasing. The average attendance now stands between fifty and sixty. This group is divided into five Sunday School classes including one catechism class. Six youngsters are receiving instruction in catechism.

On October 15, a special service was held in honor of those who are in service. This program was very well attended. Each boy or girl in service was remembered by a flower which was placed into the vase by his sister, brother, or other relative or friend. When each flower had been placed, the bouquet was complete. This bouquet then was in honor of all those who are scattered away from home in service. Each individual in service was also remembered by a verse of scripture and in prayer.

The Christian Endeavour of the First Mennonite Church of McPherson has been fully organized. The constitution has been drawn up and adopted. All the C.E. officers have been elected. The C.E. holds its meetings on each second and last Sunday of the month.

A choir has also been started. Rehearsals are held each week in private homes. Considerable interest is shown in the choir as also in everything else.

The work here in McPherson is slowly progressing. Our prayer is that God will continue to lead and direct His work, and that soon we shall be a completely organized church.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Madrid, Nebraska

After one year of service, our minister, Rev. Alvin Fast, felt definitely led by the Lord to take up further preparation for foreign missions, and they suddenly left us on a few week's notice. So our small group here at Madrid is again without a shepherd. We must truly say with Matt. 9:37-38, "The Harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few, Pray ye therefore the Lord of harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

On October 16 and 17 we were privileged to have with us Rev. Freeman Swartz from Schwenksville, Pa., on church visitation. He was very much impressed with our scantily populated, small town, western country, the large green wheat fields, and the long corn piles piled up along the end of corn fields with the aid of mechanical corn pickers.

Evenings we had Bible study of the first 10 chapters of the Book of Acts. He pointed out ten foundation stones of the Christian Church. He also made plain the principles of the Mennonite church.

Sunday, October 22, we celebrated our Thanksgiving and Mission Festival, for which we had invited Rev. J. M. Regier of Hillsboro, Kansas, Chairman of the Home Mission Board and Rev. W. C. Voth, missionary from China, as guest speakers. Other guests invited were the M.B. church of Paxton, Nebraska and the C.O. Mennonite group of the Nebraska State Agricultural Experiment Farm at North Platt. In the morning reading of scripture and prayer service was led by Rev. George Jansen of the M.B. church. Then we were favored by two Thanksgiving messages by Rev. Regier and Rev. Voth. In the afternoon Rev. Regier spoke on home missions. In the evening Rev. Regier led in the evangelistic service, and Rev. Voth gave us a message with picture slides of his trip through South America.

The program all through the day was greatly enriched by special music by a male quartet and a mixed quartet of our church, the choir of the M.B. church, and a duet of the C.O. Mennonite group of North Platt, Nebraska. Dinner and lunch were served by the ladies in the church basement.

The collections taken were as follows: Morning, Home Missions, $140.88; Afternoon, Foreign Missions; $171.45; Evening, Foreign Relief, $126.43; Total for the day: $438.76.

The entire day was a day of service and of blessing and rejoicing.

Rev. Regier also assisted us in our planning for our future ministry. He gave us the assurance that the Home Mission Board would assist us to the extent that we could support our minister in the future with $100.00 a month and free parsonage. We feel very grateful to the Home Mission Board for their assistance.

We are waiting upon the Lord to show us the person he has for our church. His will be done is our earnest prayer.

—P. A. Regier

THE EDEN MENNONITE CHURCH
Moundridge, Kansas

May our hearts be more intense in the things of the Lord, that He in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever" (I Peter 4:11). The Lord must be served with all humility of mind in this perplexed world in order to overcome the injustice thereof.

The annual Sunday School picnic was held August 22, with the junior department presenting a program in the forenoon. The afternoon was spent in visiting and the playing of games.

"In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you" (I Thess. 5:18). The Harvest Festival on August 27 was a special opportunity for the congregation to show its thankfulness to God for His many blessings. Rev. Walter Gering spoke in the morning and Rev. Sam Goering was the guest speaker of the afternoon. The offerings for relief amounted to $5,912.

A new catechism class has begun which meets during the Sunday School hour. September 6 was the beginning of our midweek services. These services will again be held during the winter, meeting every Wednesday. This is an hour of fellowship for both old and young.

Our pastor, Walter Gering, is at present participating in the camp visitation program. He is to visit the C.P.S. camp at Mulberry, Florida, and then go to the Puerto Rico unit. His visit will include a definite program of Bible study, as well as informal visiting and counselling. Rev. Sam Goering is taking charge of the work until he returns.

The Ladies Aid and Mission Society has again done a fine job of collecting clothing for relief. The society is planning other projects for the near future—such as providing food for C.P.S., making Christmas gifts for Indian children of our mission stations, etc.

The Singing Society had it annual business meeting in September.

"For the love of God is broader Than the measure of Man's mind;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."

LEHIGH MENNONITE CHURCH
Lehigh, Kansas

On August 7 Brother P. R. Krause's funeral was held. Mrs. Krause has gone to California to be with her children. August 20 we were favored with special music by six sisters, daughters of B. B Wedel of the Alexanderwohl Church. At the quarterly church meeting plans were made to mak the Sunday School services more interesting fo the children by giving them a special part in them For the school opening program on September 3 a very inspiring message was brought to a larg audience by Prof. Benny Bargen of Bethel College His subject was "Education Within, Without." O September 17 a basket lunch was enjoyed at noon A Children's Day Program together with some Rall Day numbers was given in the afternoon. After thi all enjoyed ice cream cones. The Marion Count Fair week was a very busy one for our members as we served meals, the proceeds of which go int the sinking fund for an enlargement of the bas ment and most likely a new furnace. The sewin societies are making three new comforts to sen along with the clothing for relief. Rev. Valentin Nickel from Strong City will conduct special mee ings in our church from November 12 to 19 inclusiv We were privileged to hear Rev. Erland Waltner a illsboro on October 25 and in our church on October .—M.K.U.

JOTTINGS

ie Kansas Hospital Association met in Wichita, sas, on November 14 and 15. Brother H. J. An- , Administrator of the Bethel Hospital, Newton, resident of the Association. He reports that hospital supplies are now obtainable, but that is still a shortage of cotton goods.

v A. J. Dirks, pastor of the Garden Township ch, Halstead, Kansas, went by train to Kansas on November 4 to make a pastoral call there. call was on a non-Mennonite and had been re- ted by a non-Mennonite in Brother Dirks' home community. This man also paid the expenses of the round-trip. Rev. Dirks, who is the father of Missionary Marvin Dirks, reports that his daughter Florene expects to take up mission work in Africa. Dr. L. G. Little, psychiatrist from Wichita, Kansas, and a brother-in-law to Rev. Dirks spoke in the Garden Township Church on the evening of November 12.

—A nation-wide Thanksgiving service will be broadcast over the Blue Network, November 23, at 10:30 A.M. EWT. Artists of the network will provide both orchestral and vocal music. The message will touch upon postwar relief and reconstruction movements of the several denominations.

—Mrs. John T. Neufeld of the Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago, Illinois writes: "Mr. Neufeld is on a trip to the Northern states, visiting C.P.S. camps and churches in behalf of the work of the Church of Christ, in place of Rev. Edmund Miller who could not make this scheduled trip. He writes that the Lord has led in a wonderful way so that all the dates have been approved. Also, the various train connections are made possible without much trouble. May souls be edified and others be brought to His saving and keeping power is our prayer.

Brother Henry Toews is carrying on the work here for us in the services, also in the work of the week day church school. It is wonderful how the Lord leads His children often when the future seems so dark. Brother and Sister Toews are patiently waiting for their passports to go ahead again to Africa. Their children are attending the public school while in Chicago. Mother Wiens is happy for their stay here with her."

Hillsboro Church Invites

The First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, plans to celebrate its sixtieth anniversay on November 23, Thanksgiving Day. The program is to begin at 2:00 P. M. Former members and friends are invited.

—Dr. D. V. Wiebe, who this past spring returned from China, where he had served under the American Friends Service Committee, has now accepted a position as surgeon at the Navajo Base Hospital, Fort Defiance, Arizona. This is a 250-bed hospital under the Department of the Interior, which urgently requested Dr. Wiebe to accept the position. Dr. and Mrs. Wiebe are members of the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California.

C.P.S. Demobilization

Mutual Aid Required

Gordon Alderfer

The conscientious objector in Civilian Public Service camps and units or in prison can rely on no "GI Bills of Rights" to help him readjust in the community to which he returns after he is discharged. The Federal Government makes no provisions for him—offers him no financial assistance, no guarantee of his old job back, no special job-finding assistance, no chance to continue an interrupted education, no mustering-out pay, no insurance benefits. He has worked for his government up to three years, but during that time he has received little or no pay. He has had to buy most of his own clothes, and many have had to make provisions for their own dependents. He has appreciated the help and support given him during these years by his church or other religious agencies and service groups.

But now as Demobilization Day becomes less of a distant dream and a more pressing reality, the CPS man faces a period of difficult readjustment. When The Day comes, he will have no props to depend on except the kindly interest of those individuals, families and organizations, the churches and the service groups which have helped him during the war. But the kindly interest does not necessarily help him continue his education, or help him establish a home or a place of business, or lead him to a job. Not necessarily—unless many of these individuals and organizations somehow work together. The man who has gone through several years of CPS or prison does not want merely a helping hand, however; he wants a chance to do useful work in the community to which he returns. They who help him may thus be repaid by the contribution he makes to the community.

The Kind of Help Needed

But he must know what opportunities exist, where they are located, what service he can perform through them, and what people can help him find the type of work for which his talents are best suited.

The three peace-church administrative agencies, the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, and other cooperating agencies have long recognized the need for a closer cooperation on matters affecting the demobilization of CPS, and have assigned part of the job to an interagency committee. The committee in turn needs the help, guidance and cooperation of local groups—individuals, churches, or organizations "back home" which can effectively assist returning conscientious objectors to become again a working part of the community.

Meanwhile the several administrative agencies of the CPS program are working on plans of their own to extend various types of service to men under their administration. Plans to provide vocational counseling, postwar educational assistance, information or specific phases of demobilization, and perhaps financial assistance are either already established or under consideration. These areas of service are regarded primarily as the concern of the separate religious or service agencies.

This planning, however, effective as it is, does not fill all the needs. Many discharged men, for example, will want to relocate in communities where they are unfamiliar with the resources that can be of help to them, and through which they can be of service to the community. They will need to know what specific jobs are available there to men of their interests and

Let Us Give Thanks

For the discipline of sorrow,
For the angel of distress,
For the unseen hands that draw us
Into greater blessedness;
For the lips that close in silence
For the strong hands clasped in prayer,
For the strength of heart that suffers,
But sinks not in despair;
For the penitence and patience
That are meek beneath the rod,
And for hope's glad resurrection,
We give Thee thanks, O God.

For the hope that right shall triumph,
For the lifting of the race,
For the victories of justice,
For a coming day of grace,
For the lessons taught by failure,
Learnt in humbleness and pain,
For the call to lofty duties
That will come to us again;
For the hope that those who trust in God
Shall not be put to shame,
For the faith that lives in all the world,
O God! We praise Thy name.

background; what people can help refer them to prospective employers, where they may stay overnight or for several days if they are enroute; what organizations or community groups exist there through which they could become an integral part of the community. To collect such information and see that it is made available to men in camps and prisons requires the cooperation of us all.

This is where you can help in one of three ways—(1) notify the MCC periodically of specific available jobs. These will be distributed to men who have been, or are being discharged and reclassified IV-F, and to the camps, units and prisons where conscientious objectors are located; (2) notify the MCC of names of people who are willing and able to be of assistance to CPS men wishing to locate there; and (3) notify MCC of places or homes in local communities where CPS men may find hospitality for brief periods, or of references through whom they might find such places of hospitality. Information on these three items would be deeply appreciated. Please send any such information or suggestions to the Mennonite Aid Section of MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Board to Render Greater Service

With the appointment of Dr. J. H. Langenwalter as Minister-at-Large, the Board of Education has taken an important step which will enable it to render a far greater service in promoting the program of Christian education for which it is charged as a General Conference Board. The members of the Board have not had the time to carry out the tasks of our program in a larger way. The answer to the need of someone to do this is the appointment of Dr. Langenwalter as Minister-at-Large. Dr. Langenwalter will also represent the interests of the Board of Publication.

An expanding program of Christian education is needed for the days that are ahead of us. We need to do the very best we can to assist our young people to prepare to face the challenges that are to come. Some specific needs must be met, for which the Board of Education will be called upon to assume some responsibility. This larger program will be discussed by Dr. Langenwalter in future articles to appear in our church papers.

The Board of Education is asking for your support, both prayerfully and financially, in this program. It will mean considerably increased financial expenditures for us. We are very appreciative of the support that we have received from many churches and Sunday Schools, ranging from quarterly to annual contributions. But with our need for larger support we wish to appeal to those schools and churches that have not been contributing, and also to suggest increased contributions, if possible, from all churches and schools

Above all we desire your prayers and suggestions for our work. Our prayer is that God may quide and direct the work of the Board, and of our Minister-at-Large, in a program of Christian education that will more completely meet the needs.

The Board of Education
A. S. Rosenberger, Treasurer

OPPORTUNITIES

Sometimes golden opportunities are missed because we have not been aware of them. Most churches have a week of special evangelistic meetings either in fall or in spring. In connection with such meetings the Evangelistic Committee would like to point out the following opportunities:

I

When a church plans for a series of special evangelistic meetings, arrangements for Bible Study in connection with the meetings might be made. History shows that a revival is always accompanied by a new interest in Bible Study, and churches should make provision for it. Some churches have the Bible Study in the mornings, others in the afternoons, and still others precede the evening service by a forty-five minute period of Bible Study which makes the evening program a double feature service.

II

When such special meetings are planned, a good deal of attention should be given to bringing non-Christian friends to the meetings. In order to be able to do this, their friendship needs to be cultivated for some time before the services begin. Pray for them, befriend them, and bring them with you to the meetings (with emphasis on bring), and then trust the Holy Spirit and God's Word to touch their hearts.

III

Parents need to realize that the matter of helping their children to a saving faith in Jesus Christ rests very definitely in the home. A loving interest, sympathetic understanding, and kindly encouragement will go a long way to help young people to decide to accept Christ. A parent may be able to say the word that will cast the balance in favor of Christ in the child's life.

IV

Aside from the evangelistic meetings, the catechism class affords an excellent opportunity. In connection with the studies in this class, good tracts are a grea help. The collection of tracts made by the Evangelism Committee includes a good number that can b used in the catechism class to great advantage. Wh not use them?

A New Day That Never Dawned

Five days after the Armistice in 1918 President Woodrow Wilson wrote in his Thanksgiving Proclamation about a "new day." He said in part:

"This year we have special and moving cause to be grateful and to rejoice. God has in His good pleasure given us peace. It has not come as a mere cessation of arms, a mere relief from the strain and the tragedy of war. It has come as a great triumph of right. Complete victory has brought us, not peace alone, but the confident promise of a new day as well, in which justice shall replace force and jealous intrigue among the nations. . . .God has indeed been gracious. We have cause for such rejoicing as revives and strengthens in us all the best traditions of our national history. A new day shines about us. . . ."

That new day never dawned. Force and jealous intrigue continued among the nations. They piled up armaments, loaded Germany with reparations, engaged in economic warfare, and spun military alliances. The darkness became thicker and out roared the flames of the second World War.

Although we have much to be thankful for this Thanksgiving Day, we also have much to sorrow over, for there is little hope of a new day after this holocaust. Someone has described the coming peace as bad, mad, and sad. Already England is seeking alliances with France, Belgium, Holland, and others to counteract the Russian colossus. In spite of the proposed world security organization there are bills in congress calling for peace-time conscription. The robot bomb suggests horrible possibilities. A CIO paper suggests that six million may be unemployed three or four months after the fall of Germany. Over 100,000 of our young men are reported dead. There is much to sorrow over.

The Sunday after the end of World War I, a New York clergyman declared, "This is the greatest moment of all history, except the one in which Christ was born." In contrast to this is the opening paragraph of an editorial in a prominant religious journal of November 15, 1944. We quote: "From time immemorial poets have hailed and the people have acclaimed 'the dawn of victory.' Victory meant the beginning of a new day. Thus it has been in the past. But it is not so now. After these long years of conflict, victory is almost in sight. But it brings no promise of a new day. No hearts are lifted exultantly at the first shafts of a new dawn flickering across an expectant horizon. Instead, harried man, worn and exhausted by the terrors of these years of torment, finds himself trying to gather his weakened powers for a blind adventure into the unknown."

Must not the eternal Christ, as He looks upon our nation today, say again, "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes." War does not bring a new day. It brings darkness. We can only regret this war. However, we can be thankful that God's law of sowing and reaping also works another way—that the sowing of goodwill brings a harvest of righteousness and peace. If brighter days will come, they will come not because of war, but in spite of war. They will be the result of the leaven of the Kingdom that is at work in the world.

What Comes First?

At Thanksgiving time we tend to be much impressed with the material gifts which God has given us, and rightly so. However, shouldn't the spiritual gifts that we have received warm our hearts even more? Jesus put the things of the spirit in first place. He said, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." He commended Mary for having chosen spiritual meditation. In the desert he proclaimed "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world, but lose his own soul?" We shall have put first things first if on Thanksgiving Day we can truly say with Mrs. Mary F. Butts:

Not only for the earth's rich gifts,
Strewn thick along the way,
Her looks of constant loveliness,
We thank our God today;
But for the spirit's subtle growth,
The higher, better part,
The treasures gathered in the soul—
The harvest of the heart.

Thankfulness is not an attitude of pessimism. A stranger passing by a farmer in his field stopped and asked the farmer, "How is everything?" Replied the farmer, "Poor. It has been a bad year."

"But the wheat looks well," answered the traveler, "and the corn is growing splendidly, and the oats are good, and I have never seen finer hay than that you are cutting. It looks to me like a very good year."

"But look at those potatoes," said the farmer, pointing to a half acre of potatoes, "I am going to get only half a crop there."

Thankfulness is not the habit of magnifying the losses and failures of life until these obscure the many, many blessings that God does bestow.

Thankfulness Balances The Scales

Life may be likened unto a balance with two scales. The one scale represents the tension side of life with our needs for food, clothing, shelter, fellowship, health, etc. In it are crowded the worries, anxieties, and fears which we may have. The other scale represents the security side of life. In it are all the good things which have come to us. In it are our feelings of contentment, relaxation, accomplishment, and fulfillment.

These scales need to balance if we are to be balanced individuals. As we become tense about the needs and desires of life, the tension scale of life goes down, and we feel heavy-hearted. Our problem then is to weigh down the security scale so that it will balance the tension scale.

Thankfulness does just that. The Apostle Paul exhorts us to do that very thing when he says, "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be known unto God." When "requests" are made with "thanksgiving," when seeing the dark we also see the bright at the same time, then we keep our mental and emotional balance. That thankfulness makes for balance seems to be indicated by the fact that many who are mentally ill, or mentally unbalanced, do not exhibit much thankfulness. And the mentally ill exhibit in extreme form traits which are to be found in the lives of perhaps most normal people.

Not only do we owe thankfulness to our Father in Heaven, but we also owe it to ourselves to be thankful so that we may enjoy the mental and emotional balance that God would give us.

Thanks and Giving

By Roselyn C. Steere

I said "Thank you" in the morning
For this day so clean and new,
But have I used one hour of it
In service, Lord, for you?

I saw a blind man on the street
And breathed a thanks for sight,
But do I use these eyes to search
Thy Word for guiding light?

I'm thankful every day because
Your saving power I know,
But have I tried that wondrous grace
To some poor sinner show?

Have I a right to ask for blessings
More and more, until I've used
The ones already in my hands—
Or mourn o'er those refused?

Help me to see true thanks includes
A Christlike way of living,
Not merely words of gratitude
But loving, cheerful giving.

Seek Funds For Church Building Purposes

The recent Western District Conference, which met October 18 and 19, was strongly impressed with the great and urgent need for funds to help young and growing church communities to build a house of worship for themselves. As a result of the action taken at this conference the Board of Trustees has sent out the following letter to all pastors in the conference, in the hope that the various churches will rally to the appeal.
Dear Minister of the Western District Conference:

At the session of the Western District Conference, October 18 and 19, we heard the reports of the young ministers who are working for our Home Mission Committee. Their work is encouraging; however, the one great need in a number of places where they labor is a house of worship.

The Home Mission Committee has long been aware of this need, so several recommendations were presented at the session of the conference. Along with these recommendations a resolution was adopted which reads as follows:

"In view of the urgent need of money for church building purposes, be it resolved that this conference urge sincerely upon the Western District Conference churches to attempt to raise $1.00 per member for the church building fund by January 1, 1945." ....

We therefore send this letter to the pastors of the Western District Conference churches with our sincere request that every effort be made to provide funds to help our struggling congregations build churches for themselves.

If your church had delegates at the Western District Conference, you may learn from them details of the plan to help growing churches to secure money to build. You will find the "Highlights of the Western District Conference" on page 4 of the October 24 issue of The Mennonite. On page 5 you will find the part of the report of the Home Mission Committee which relates to the subject of raising funds for the revolving church building fund.

Your wholehearted support and cooperation in this work of the Western District Conference will be greatly appreciated. Send your contributions and church collections to Mr. Ferd Neufeld, Burrton, Kansas, treasurer of the Board of Trustees.

GOD'S WORK

There are a million songs to be written,
A million prayers to be said;
A million stars to be studied,
A million books to be read.

There are a million aching hearts,
Waiting for some one to care;
There are a million starving children,
Dying from lack of fare.

A million hours to be filled,
With a worth-while thought or action
When you can help to lift some friend,
By your silent intercession.

There are a million pains to suffer,
For those who are not understood
There are a million burdens to carry,
In the name of the Son of God.

There are a million beauty wonders,
In this and every land;
Waiting for some one to see them,
Some one to understand.

A million persons in the Orient,
Too ignorant to know of their need;
Too dull to have any conception,
Of what real love can mean.

There are a million seeds to be planted,
In the hearts of young and old,
For the spread of God's own Kingdom;
"The kingdom is within you."

There are a million homeless children,
Innocent victims of war;
Waiting for some one to love them,
Wanting a home once more.

There are a million broken hearts,
Sighing for the end of the war;
Oh, when will men learn to FOLLOW Christ,
Not just worship and adore?

BEAST OR HUMAN?

A villager and I were sitting underneath a small tree which was located on the edge of the street about in the center of the village. The man and I were talking about religion, and, of course, I took the opportunity to tell him of Christ and of how Christ was interested in his salvation also. The man listened to me for a while and confessed to believe everything I was telling him. More than that he even went so far as to tell me that the Christian religion was by far the best religion of all and that he enjoyed listening to people tell about it. "But," said he, pointing to a stone stuck in the earth just behind us, "This is where we get our salvation."

I looked at the stone a bit. It was a flat reddish piece of stone hewn into a rectangular shape with one end stuck in the ground so as to hold it erect and the top end somewhat rounded. On it were some scratches which formed a vague likeness to a very distorted human face. After looking at it for a bit, I turned back to my friend and asked, "Do you really get salvation from this stone?" He looked at the stone, then at men, and then back at the stone again. Finally he turned to me and answered, "Well, that is what they say," I agreed that that is what they say, "But," I said again, "is it really true? Do you really know that this stone gives you salvation?" There was no answer.

This man had been taught to consider it axiomatic that that stone gave him salvation and that all he had to do was to offer periodical sacrifices to it and pay either money or rice to the village priest every time he came around asking for it. That would be all that was needed and he need not worry about anything more.

Thereupon I again told him about Christ and that by believing upon Christ he would actually be able to experience salvation—he would not have to merely depend upon what somebody told him. He would be able to know for himself whether he was saved or not. This set the man to thinking and he sat there in a very meditative mood for some time. Finally he looked up at me and said, "Sahib, we illiterate villagers are nothing more than buffaloes, so even if I would like to believe on your Christ I could not because, like buffaloes, we have to do what we are told to do and we have to refrain from doing what we are told not to do, and our masters will not let us become Christians."

Thus the man was making an excuse to me for not accepting Christianity but in his words there is much more to be detected than just a mere excuse. The fact of the matter is that not only had he had been told that he was nothing more than a buffalo, but his ancestors had had this same thing pounded into them for many generations. This idea was already so well established within the minds of those people that they have come to regard it as "wrong" to even doubt the idea that they are no more than buffaloes.

After these many generations these poor people have been made to become "possessed" with the idea that they are incapable of ever learning any new thing or of ever being able to improve their social or spiritual status. And indeed, they are incapable of any such progress. Christ alone is able to bring about any kind of a worthwhile change in them. Just as the Apostles were unable to help the possessed man in Matthew 17, so I was unable to get this man to commit himself to Christ or even to see his fallen spiritual condition. Thus it behooves us to heed the injunction which Christ gave to his disciples at that time when He said, "Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting" for I am convinced that if we do, unitedly, give ourselves to fervent and persistent prayer, such people as this man will be lifted out of their "buffalo" state of existence into that higher life which only Christ can give. Will you not help us by adding your prayers to ours for such as these? —Harold Ratzlaff

OUR FIRST MISSIONARIES TO AFRICA

Inman, Kansas
November 11, 1944

Dear Brother Richert:

We have received notice to come to Philadelphia from where we are to sail on November 22. We are leaving here at Inman on Thursday morning, November 16 at 2 a.m. We shall be in Chicago for a day or two and then go to Philadelphia. As we prepare to go, we covet your prayers.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Neufeld

Yours in His Service,

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Neufeld

Note: Thank the Lord that two more missionaries can go out, the first ones to Africa. May the Lord also soon open the way to South America.

The First Thanksgiving Sermon

The first Thanksgiving sermon, in the modern sense, of which we have any record is the one preached by Cotton Mather in the Old North Church, Boston, on December 19, 1689. We quote here a part from the sermon as given in a Saturday Evening Post of 1906.

"It is an excellent thing indeed, that we may have a Day of Thanksgiving, while the world is in so much confusion and combustion, and every where Men's hearts are failing for fear, and for looking after those things which are doing upon the Earth. Let us be at some pains, that this day be not lost, or that it may not evaporate in a few sensual satisfactions. The excellent things done by God are now to be the Repast of our souls.

"Dayes of Thanksgiving as they are among the most Heavenly so they will be among the most prosperous of all Devotions. There are Pious Men that will now and then in secret places, keep their Dayes of Thanksgiving before the Lord; laying out whole Dayes in praising of the Great God for what He is, and what He does, and in pondering on What they shall do for God. And I'll assure you, such persons ripen for Heaven apace; yet they live in Heaven upon Earth."

What Has The Church To Offer That You Cannot Get Elsewhere?

By Mrs. Wm. Frantz, Orienta, Oklahoma

Firstly, the church was established by the Lord Himself; it belongs to Him. He promises to keep it, and it can present Him as the model Church-builder. Matthew 16:18—"Upon this rock, I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

The Church has a twofold purpose: to save the lost and spiritually nurture the already saved. Mark 16:15,16—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved." The church has concern for every creature. It offers an open door to both young and old, to man of all races and professions, alike to rich and poor, educated and unlearned, to man struggling under any burden or to any individual it preaches the same gospel—the message of repentance unto salvation through our crucified Lord and Savior. Faith comes through hearing, and salvation is by faith. Upon confession of this faith the church offers baptism and its hand of fellowship into the fold of the sanctified, by granting membership with equal rights.

In II Peter 3:18 we read:—"But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." While spiritual growth comes from within, the church upholds, helps, and encourages it through prayer and intercession, preaching of the Word, and by administering its sacraments such as Lord's Supper, consecration of children, and baptism. It offers a large scope of teaching, using principally one text, the Bible. To meet material and social, as well as its teaching needs, the church has branched out into Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor societies, choirs, mission societies, its own prayer and Bible study meetings, catechetical instruction, programs that are kept sacred, young people's meetings and retreats, sacred conventions and conferences, and even has established its religious schools.

Lastly, this church organization can make manifest the true Church to which every regenerate person is added by the Lord Himself, making such an one a member of the Body that has Christ for its head. As a member of the "Household of God" he belongs to a "chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a peculiar people, an holy nation, (I Pet. 2:9). He is one of the Bride of Christ and lays claim to all precious promises given to the saved by grace in God's Word.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

BETHEL MISSION CHURCH, WINNIPEG

We are glad to say that God has been blessing he work of the Bethel Mission Church in Winni-eg and that we are enjoying and increasing at-endance at our services. We feel, however, that our vork would be greatly helped if we had a church uilding of our own. The building we are renting t present is in a very poor state of repairs and t is only kept warm with difficulty in the winter ime. We are praying that the Lord may provide us vith some more suitable place of worship. The eople attending our mission church, although they annot carry out such a project alone, have shown heir interest in this matter by promising over 1000 to be used in securing a new church. We re glad that several hundred dollars have been sent n t ous from other churches and individuals in Can-da and the United States, and we feel that others ill also wish to support this work which is now eing carried on under the auspices of the Home Iission Board of the General Conference.

During the past year our church has been able serve an ever increasing number of Mennonites hat have moved into the city of Winnipeg and are need of spiritual care and a church home while ving here.

A large number of C.O.'s are working in the hos-itals and meat packing plants of the city, and we ave had the opportunity of contacting and help-g some of them in spiritual matters.

Our Young People's Society and our choir have so shown an increase in attendance. The young eople delivered a special program at Altona, Mani-ba, which is situated seventy miles south of Win-peg. Their topic was "Youth for Christ." Another ogram is to be given by the young people in Stein-ack, Manitoba, on November 12.

Between October 15 and 21 we had a week of services conducted by Rev. A. J. Schulz, a returned missionary from Africa who has also travelled extensively in the Orient. In spite of war-time working conditions our church was filled at each of these evening services.

On October 22, Rev. David Schulz and Rev. J. N. Hoeppner both of Altona, Manitoba, preached at our harvest and mission festival. Many were blessed by the messages reminding us of God's blessings to us and our obligations to Him.

We are asking for a continued interest in your prayers.

NOVEMBER DAYS

Pauline Tyson Stephens

We thank Thee, Father, for the gift
Of calm November days,
When all the world is overswept
With early winter's haze;
Cool days when fuzz of broom-sedge flits
Like snowflakes through the air,
And sumac leaves, like tongues of flame,
Are gleaming everywhere;
Good days when corn-bins overflow
With yellow, ripened grain;
When luscious juice is flowing from
The mellow sugar cane.

There are so many precious things
November brings our way,
And, Father, for each one of them,
We give our thanks today.

MOUNTAIN ECHOES

Point Rock, N. C., October 23, 1944

Here we are again in the mountains, with their beautiful autumn colors. How it thrills our hearts, as we see the handiwork of our Heavenly Father and realize His goodness to us.

This past summer has been very dry here in the hills, and crops have not been very good due to dry weather, but we have much to be thankful for.

Our Sunday School got along nicely while I was in hospital this summer. We have been having a splendid Bible study class, pretty well attended all through the summer, and we are going to continue it this fall. Wednesday and Sunday evenings we felt real encouraged. One of our teen-age boys requested a Scofield Bible, as he wants to study at home, as well as in the Bible class.

We are preparing to hold a Community Thanksgiving service on Thanksgiving day. This is new to our people here. The children will take part in a spiritual program.

I am beginning a story hour for a group of children from four to six years old, each week teaching these least ones Bible verses. I'll have six little children from four to six in my home to teach them Bible verses.

We are planning to start a Bible club for our teen age boys and girls on Saturday afternoon—teaching them Bible memory work right here in our community. As we do not get an opportunity with them only on Sunday as they go to a Consolidated school eight miles away and leave early and return late. So I plan to get our boys and girls Saturday afternoon.

We do not have any young people preparing for Christian work. As our young people usually get married at an early age—then move away, We have been having victory this past summer for there has been some progress for which we praise the Lord.

I am praying the Lord to grant my petitions for two new tires, so I can still go way back in the mountains to the rural schools to teach the children Bible memory work and stories. I need two new tires as mine are badly worn and cannot be recapped. One needs good tires to go far back in the mountains as the roads are steep, lonely, and narrow.

We do thank God for answered prayer concerning our Sunday School and Bible class. Yet we need

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, McPherson, Kansas

NOVEMBER 24—"Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil." Exod. 23:2.

It is hard not to follow the course of least resistance and go along with the majority. It is often unpleasant to stand alone for what you know is right, especially, for young people. It takes much courage to be called "yellow", or slacker, or coward and not retort in kind or start a fight; it takes real fortitude and bravery. A lad said to his mother one Sunday afternoon, "Mother, a fellow has to be alone in this town, if he does what you contend is right." "Son," she replied, "never forget, it pays mightily to do what is right, even though you must stand alone in doing it." Peter said, "We ought to obey God rather than men," and he won as he stood with and for Christ.

NOVEMBER 25—"......and as thy days, so shall thy strength be." Deut. 25: 33b.

How hectic some days are and how everything seems to go wrong! The underlying reason most often is, that we are trying to wrestle with our problems alone, not having asked God's guidance and help at the beginning of the day. We have not filled in nor replenished later at the fountain of all supply.

"God hath not promised skies always blue,
Flower-strewn pathways all our lives through.
God hath not promised sun without rain,
Joy without sorrow, peace without pain.
But God hath promised strength for the day,
Rest for the laborer, light on the way.
Grace for the trial, help from above,
Unfailing sympathy and undying love."

NOVEMBER 26—"Ye are the light of the world." Matt. 5: 14a.

A little girl once prayed: "O Lord, make all the bad people good, and all the good people nice." To be made "nice" in the girl's language meant, that they as Christ-followers might really let their light shine as a true, untarnished reflection of Christ, the Light. Joyce Kilmer expresses this when he says:

"Because the way was steep and long, and through a strange and lonely land, God placed upon my lips a song, and put a lantern in my hand."

NOVEMBER 27—"Let your light so shine ......" Matt. 5:16.

Saint Francis of Assisi once invited a young monk to go into town with him to preach.The two set forth, going through the principal streets and through the lonely alleys, talking with each other until they again reached the monastery gates. "When shall we preach, Father," asked the young monk. To which Saint Francis replied, "My son, our behaviour has been observed, we have delivered a sermon as we walked." Not all sermons are preached by word of mouth; some of the most convincingly eloquent ones are preached as we walk along. "Everybody is a sermon as he goes along." What kind of a sermon are we?

NOVEMBER 28—"Looking unto Jesus . . . . Heb. 12:2.

In Nathaniel Hawthorne's story, "The Great Stone Face," the lad Ernest looks at, thinks about, and marvels at that human countenance hewn by God into the perpendicular side of the mountain near his home. It becomes his teacher, his inspiration and ideal, for it seems so noble in features, so grand and sweet in expression, as though it had a vast warm heart embracing all mankind in its affections. One day many years later some one looking at him exclaims: "Behold! Ernest is himself the likeness of the Great Stone Face!

One Chinese asked another one one day. "Have you seen Jesus today?" "Do you mean the picture on the wall?" "No, Jesus, who walks in and out of those hospital gates every day." He meant Saintly Dr. Freeburg, who looked unto Jesus for every single thing and to these simple people because the personified Jesus.

NOVEMBER 29—"Caleb said . . . . give me this mountain." Josh. 14:6,12.

A commission of twelve men had been sent out to look over the Promised Land. Ten reported the land far too well fortified to take. "We are not able," they said. But two Caleb and Joshua, said,"We are abundantly able" with God. The majority report was heeded and years went by with no advance. Caleb, as an old man, made another call to advance, and he himself asked for the hardest and most perilous task—the winning of the mountain country. We are so prone to want easy lessons, easy tasks, easy victories. How much more satisfaction and real joy we get when we ask, get and win with God in hard, difficult tasks and situations. How much we grow thereby and are then ready for bigger and harder assignments.

NOVEMBER 30—"My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Phil. 4:19.

In the margin opposite this verse in Moody's Bible was found the following notation: "The Christian's Bank Note: President of the Bank—'My God'; promise to pay—'shall supply'; the amount—'all you need'; the capital of the bank—'according to his riches in glory'; the cashier's name—'Christ Jesus'." That fountain is open to us always and Jesus is always present, if we will only let him be. How marvellous! How little we make use of its power and so puff away at half-speed. With such ample provision as this verse shows, there should be no excuse for spiritual poverty.

HAPPINESS

by Verney Unruh

There are many paradoxes in the Bible. One of these paradoxes is found in Matthew 10:39; "He that findeth his life shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." Everyone in this world is trying to find life--trying to make life meaningful and happy--trying to have the more abundant life which Jesus spoke of.

Some people think happiness lies in being famous. As a young man Alexander conquered all the known world of his time. Yet he died at the age of thirty-three, heart-broken because there was nothing more he could do to increase his fame. Napoleon was another man who thought that happiness lay in power and fame. He is acclaimed by some as the greatest military leader who ever lived. Was he happy? These are his words while he was in exile on the isle of St. Helena: "Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne and myself founded empires. But on what did we rest the creations of our genius? Upon force. Jesus Christ alone founded his empire upon love, and at this hour millions would die for him."

There are other people who think happiness lies in amusements. These people spend much time and money attending movies, dances, night clubs, and other forms of amusements the world has to offer. Are these people happy? They believe they are happy, and that only as long as they are taking part in these entertainments, for it leaves them empty and hungry--still longing for a peace of heart and mind.

Yet another group of people thinks that happiness lies in wealth. Perhaps, the best example of such a person is the rich young ruler mentioned in Matthew 19. Here was a man who had great possessions. He had kept the commandments from his youth, and yet he felt insecure, for he came to Jesus and asked Him the great question, "What must I do to inherit eternal life?"Christ's answer was, "sell that thou hast, and give to the poor. . .and come and follow me. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions." So today many people turn away from Christ's call, for they too have great possessions.

Wherein then lies true happiness? Can we ever find it and have the abundant life? Someone has given this formula for happiness: Happiness lies in some work into which a person can put his best, in an expanding and friendly interest in other persons and things, in great loyalty or devotion to something greater than self.

It has been said "Happiness is that peculiar sensation which we acquire when we are too busy to be miserable." This well ties in with Jesus' teaching "he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." If we would be happy we must be busy. We must put our best into Christian service. Christ demands our best and highest. He demands that we lose ourselves in service for Him if we would have abundant life.

Happiness consists in activity. Such is the constitution of our nature. It is a running stream, not a stagnant pool. In Palestine there are two seas—the one glistening and flashing in the sun, the stagnant and stale in which nothing lives. The only difference between the Sea of Galilee and the Dead Sea is that the Sea of Galillee has an outlet. It is time that we as Mennonite youth have an outlet for the great heritage we have. Too long we have been dead and stagnant in matters of Christian service and witnessing for Him. If we want our lives to be abundant and radiant we must put our best into Christian service.

Another thing we must do to find happiness is expand our interests in other persons and things. Too many people today are so wrapped up in themselves and the things which they do that they forget that other people also have personalities and souls.

Jesus, our supreme example, is again our example in this. Wherever He went He attracted people unto Himself. Regardless of who the person was, Jesus never failed to take an interest in him. We see Him associating with little children, with the sick of body and soul, with publicans and sinners as well as with the righteous. Jesus found His life by losing Himself in the interest of other people. So we too must forget ourselves and be interested in other people if we would find our lives.

A third key to happiness is in a great loyalty or devotion to something greater than self. Some people show a great loyalty or devotion to high ideals—others to a great movement or organization. For the Christian the loyalty must be to Christ. We may have great loyalty to high ideals or an organization, but our primary loyalty must be to Christ. He must be the center of our lives—around Him everything else must revolve.

Pascal once said "Happiness is union with God." How may we have union with God? The apostle Paul gives us the answer in Roman 5:1: "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Our supreme loyalty must be to Christ because of what He has done for us. Not because devotion to Him will save us from judgment and damnation, but because He died for us on the cross, should we willingly live for Him. Then, and only then, will we have abundant life.

MAY WE INTRODUCE

Verney Unruh, author of the article on "Happiness" is the temporary editor of the Western District Tidings, the youth paper of the Western District Conference. His roster of offices is a long one. He is President of the Western District C.E. Convention, President of the Student Christian Movement of Bethel College, Co-Chairman of the Kansas District of the Student Christian Movement, and Assistant Editor of the Bethel Collegian. He is a candidate with the General Conference Foreign Mission Board. He has served in various churches of the Western District as a ministerial student and this past summer was a ministerial interne in the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska. He is beginning a similar interneship in the West Zion Mennonite Church of Moundridge, Kansas, on November 26. He grew up on a farm in Montana, graduated from high school in 1940 and from Bethel College in 1944. He is now a fifth-year student at Bethel, with plans of going to Biblical Seminary in New York next fall. His hobbies are football and basketball, listening to symphonic orchestras, and working crossword puzzles. He says that his convictions are not anything sensational. He briefly states some of his outstanding convictions as follows: "I believe in the Bible as the Word of God. Salvation is only in Jesus Christ who died for us on the Cross. After we accept this salvation our lives should be such that we give evidence to it. The Mennonite Church, I believe, has a contribution to make to the world, and it is up to us to carry high the torch of our martyred forefathers."

What One in C. P. S. Is Thankful For

Roy Auernheimer, who wrote the following is a member of the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, and has recently transferred from the Camino camp in California to the Agriculture unit at Lincoln, Nebraska. Mr. Auernheimer writes:

"Even though we boys in the service are temporarily deprived of the opportunity of making material gains, that type of gain is of very minor importance; instead, while here in camp, we are making social and spiritual gain and growth in wholesome fellowship with other Christians. We also have the opportunity of increasing our knowledge in various fields of study through our education programs.

"Above all, our inner spiritual lives have been deepened; we must now have a stronger faith and trust in God than we have felt the need for in past years; this, I believe, has strenthened our Christian beliefs and convictions, and also strengthened our determination to live more uplifting and progressive Christian lives in the future. For those blessings of guidance and assurance we need to give humble and sincere thanks to God."

BLUFFTON COLLEGE NEWS

The Dalton, Wadsworth, and Sugar Creek, Ohio, Mennonite churches held a Tri-Church Youth Conference at Dalton, October 21-22. Those attending that conference who at some time attended Bluffton College were: from Macedonia, Mr. Eugene Weed, C.P.S. unit at state hospital; from Wadsworth, Rev. Donovan Smucker; from Dalton, Mr. Victor Gerber, superintendent of music; Miss Pearl Sommer; Miss Celia Amstutz,. Bluffton College; Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Moser; Mr. Ivan Badertscher; Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Rosenberger; Mr. Lawrence Zuercher, Bluffton College; Miss Dorothea Lehman; Mr. Clinton Sprunger, teacher in Dalton schools; from Smithville, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Berky; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Farver; from Orrville, Miss Iona Gerber, Bluffton College; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Howenstine.

Miss Wilma Vandersoll, travelling secretary for the Student Volunteer Movement, will be on the campus December 6-8. She plans to be a teacher or evangelist in Africa under the Evangelical Missionary Society.

Instead of being sent to the M.C.C., as previously announced, the money received from the Armistice Day fast will be sent to the Cheltenham, Maryland, C.P.S. unit, for recreational work in the school for delinquent Negro boys there.

Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, minister-at-large in General Conference, representing especially the education and publication boards, was chapel speaker, November 9.

THANKSGIVING

Her soft white sifting snow,
For spring when all things are renewed,
For summer, leaves that glow
In flame and gold when autumn comes;
For fertile earth, for rain,
For needed warmth the sunshine brings
To valley, hill and plain;
For harvest that is gathered in—
The gold plump-kerneled grain,
The apples that are in the bin,
The juicy sugar cane;
For every comfort we enjoy—
The clothing that we wear,
The food we eat, our cozy beds,
For homes where we may share
Each day with those whom we love best,
For truth and harmony,
For all these things—and more, dear Lord,
We give our thanks to Thee.

Religion In Soviet Russia

Religion In Soviet Russia, 1917-1942. By N. S. imasheff. 1942 New York: Sheed & Ward. 162 ages. $2.00.

The author of this book is a professor of sociology t Fordham University in New York City. His book s of wide concern to Christian people throughout the vorld, and it is especially of interest to Mennonites ecause of their historic connection with that country. he actual condition of religion of Soviet Russia since 917 has been a mystery to most people outside ussia.

In this book we have a valuable accumulation of ocumented information dealing with the attitudes nd methods of attack of the Soviet Government on eligion. In six chapters Timaseff shows the inevitble conflict between the doctrines of Marxist Comunism and Christianity, the official attacks of the ommunists on religion, the deep rooted nature of eligion in the hearts and minds of the Russian people, e failure of the Communists to exterminate religion, nd the new Soviet religious policy and the outlook r Christianity in the future.

Outlook for the Future

The readers of the book as well as the readers of is review are of course concerned with the last apter more than with any other. They want to now what the prospects are for reviving Christianity Russia. The answer to their question found in is book is on the hopeful side. Timaseff is optimisc, but it is a guarded optimism. He feels that the tcome of this war will be a determining factor, nting that if Russia is a victor, religion will again more suppressed. However, he indicates that there e also evidences of a growing attitude of tolerance t only toward religion but toward such economic ctors as private ownership of property and differing ge scales. Likewise the sanctity of marriage and e importance of family life are again being disvered and recognized.

Value to Mennonites

Although the author of this book is a Catholic and eats the whole subject pretty much as though Catholism were the only religion in Russia (Protestants e mentioned only four times), the book has great lue to American Christians and especially Mennonit who still have many relatives in Russia and many emories of their childhood homes. Those familiar th the history of the Mennonite people in that untry during the years of revolution and famine ll be able to fit the Mennonites into the larger frame reference that the material in this book provides. e book is well written and can be easily understood the common man. Timasheff is to be commended his painstaking gathering and presentation of this uable factual material.—J. Winfield Fretz

A GUIDE TO SOURCES IN MENNONITICA

The September issue of Church History contains a study on The Historiography of the Mennonites of the Netherlands by Dr. Cornelius Krahn. The author takes the reader through four hundred years of Dutch Mennonite literary efforts. More than one hundred fifty titles dealing with history, biography, theology, worship, devotion, confessions of faith, etc. are listed and critically evaluated. Libraries, archives, and bibliographies, and other source material are referred to in a special chapter. The purpose of this paper, according to the author, "is to call attention to the wealth of Dutch source material, which is essential to any study of Anabaptism, and to furnish a guide to the same." The significance of the Dutch literature for students of American Mennonite history is stated in the following paragraph: "American Mennonitism is now beginning to analyze its tenets, doctrines, and heritage. In doing so it has turned first to its Swiss background . . . But in the future of the American Mennonite research more attention will have to be given to Dutch Mennonitism. In the first place, the sources of Swiss Mennonite literature on which research is based are limited, in comparison to Dutch Mennonite literature. Secondly, the latter has influenced the Mennonites of Switzerland and those of Swiss background more than their own. Thirdly, Dutch Mennonitism faced problems and made developments some one hundred and more years ago which American Mennonitism faces today and will face tomorrow. These problems and their solution are reflected in Dutch Mennonite literature and in the Dutch Mennonite churches of today. A study and knowledge of these problems and their solutions may help American Mennonitism to solve its present and future problems."

The writer was enabled to make this contribution because he spent many years in research in this field in Europe and especially in Holland. Those interested may order reprints of this study in booklet form from the Bethel College Book Store, North Newton, Kansas.

prayer for those who are unconcerned. We need a real revivial here so that people will take a vital interest in teaching the children the verses at home. The children do not get much encouragement at home along spiritual lines.

1. Please pray that I may be able to carry on this work without another breakdown.

2. Please pray for our Thanksgiving and Christmas programs that they may wholly please the Lord.

We need prayer. Satan does buffet and tries to raise much confusion, but the Lord is on our side. What can man do to us?

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. MARIA NICKEL HARMS, daughter of Peter and Anna Harms Nckel, was born on July 28, 1865, in Russia, in the village of Michelin and departed this life on November 8, 1944. When nine years she came to Kansas with her parents and with them made her home in Harvey County east of Newton. At the age of sixteen she was baptized by Elder John Schroeder and received into the Gnadenberg Church. She was married to Gerhard N. Harms on April 17, 1887. Together they lived a life of mutual love and happiness for over fifty-seven years. She leaves her bereaved husband, Rev. G. N. Harms, 8 children, 3 sons-in-law and 2 daughters-in-law. They are Ernest and wife of Wichita; Laura of Newton; Sister Theodosia of Bethel Deaconess Hospital, Newton; Hannah and her husband, Fred Klassen, Whitewater; Gerhard and wife of Whitewater; Marie and her husband, William Harms, Whitewater; Gertrude and her husband, Jacob Hooge, Plum Coulee, Manitoba, Canada; and Ruth of the home.

HENRY F. FRIESEN, son of H. B. and Helena (Duerksen) Friesen, was born February 2, 1874, in Alexanderwohl, Russia. In 1879 they migrated to America and settled near Hillsboro, Kansas. He was baptized by Elder J. S. Hirschler and accepted as a member of the Mennonite Church of Hillsboro. In 1893 he married Elizabeth Schmidt. She died in 1902. Four children were born to this union. In 1903 he married Helena Dyck. With the exception of five years in Idaho, they lived on a farm near Buhler until 1941. The last years they lived in Hutchinson. He died September 23, 1944. He is mourned by his wife and the following children: Mrs. J. S. Unruh, Newton; Mrs. B. B. Wiebe and Henry of Aberdeen, Idaho; Bernard, Wiley, Colorado; Milton, Hutchinson; Kathryn, Mrs. Abe Froese, Mrs. John Miller, Hutchinson; Mrs. Alex Weber, Wiley, Colorado; and Mrs. Nick Wiens, Newton.

JOHN P. GRABER, son of Peter D. Graber and Mary Krehbiel Graber, was born on April 17, 1885, in Alta Township, Harvey County, Kansas. Later the family moved to the Pretty Prairie, Kansas, community, where he grew to manhood. In 1902 he was baptized and received into the membership of the First Mennonite Church at Pretty Prairie. He was united in marriage to Anna K. Goering in 1910. They lived near Pretty Prairie until 1922, when they moved to Moundridge. Here they joined the First Mennonite Church of Christian. He passed away on October 19, 1944.

SAMUEL S. BAER, son of Jacob and Anna (nee Langenwalter) Baer, was born on October 6, 1859, near Troy, Illinois, and died October 7, 1944. In 1875 he was bapitzed by Rev. Christian Krehbiel and received into the First Mennonite Church of Summerfield. He served as deacon of this church for many years. In 1885 he married Elise K. Reibold, who preceded him in death in 1929. Four sons and five daughters who survive are Otto J., Lebanon; Samuel B., Summerfield, Menno S., Pasadena, Calif.; Harold A., Santa Monica; Mrs. Christian Heer, Lebanon; Mrs. Walter Ruth and Mrs. Henry Ruth of Mascoutah Township, and Marie and Clara who are still at home.

ELIZABETH H. REMPEL FUNK, daughter of Deacon Johann and Elizabeth Rempel, was born May 2, 1874, Berdjansk, S. Russia, and died Sept. 17, 1944. In 1874 she came with her parents to the Bruderthal community near Hillsboro, Kansas. She was baptized by Elder Benjamin Unruh and received into the Bruderthal Church in 1891. In 1892 she and G. W. Funk were united in marriage. They farmed in the community until 1935 when they moved to Hillsboro. In 1942 they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. She is mourned by her husband, three daughters, Lydia, Mrs. G. K. Warkentin, and Mrs. Adolf E. Schmidt, and three sons, Solomon, Valentine, and Edwin.

THANKSGIVING

Margaret E. Sangster

For the days when nothing happens,
For the cares that leave no trace,
For the love of little children,
For each sunny dwelling-place,
For the altars of our fathers,
And the closets where we pray,
Take, O gracious God and Father,
Praises this Thanksgiving Day.

For our harvests safe ingathered,
For our golden store of wheat,
For the corn lands, and the vine lands,
For the flowers upspringing sweet,
For our coasts from want protected,
For each inlet, river, bay,
May Thy bounty, full and flowing,
Take our praise this joyful day.

For our dear ones lifted higher
Through the darkness to the light,
Ours to love and ours to cherish
In dear memory, beyond sight,
For our kindred and acquaintance
In Thy heaven who safely stay,
We uplift our psalms of triumph,
Lord, on this Thanksgiving Day.

For the hours when heaven is nearest
And the earth-mood does not cling,
For the very gloom oft broken
By our looking for the King,
By our thought that He is coming,
For our courage on the way,
Take, O Friend, unseen, eternal,
Praises this Thanksgiving Day.

The Ohio Cutting Room Bluffton, Ohio

The Ohio Cutting Room was organized in October, 1943, in a basement room of Science Hall, donated by Bluffton College, for the purpose of cutting garments for relief. The cutting room committee, none of whom had seen a cutting room previously, was composed of three women from each of the four local Mennonite churches, Ebenezer and First Mennonite at Bluffton, and St. Johns and Grace at Pandora. At the present time, Mrs. Sam Locher and Mrs. J. S. Schultz, Bluffton, are chairman and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the committee.

In order to start the cutting room, the committee borrowed $500 from the Emergency Relief Board of the General Conference, to be used as a revolving fund.

Since the organization, committeewomen, and local volunteers have cut 14,700 garments from 23,500 yards of material. Of this, the government has given 000 yards for Greek War Relief. Now on the shelves are 3500 yards soon to be cut. Women's societies from thirteen states, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Oklahoma, Minnesota, Kansas, Pennsylvania, Missouri, New York, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Oregon, have ordered cut garments for sewing. Scraps not used by local societies for relief quilts and comforts are sent to societies requesting them for relief.

The local committee, in figuring the price for each garment ordered by a society, charges only for the cost of material and postage, plus a small fraction for incidental expenses, such as patterns, electricity, cutter repairs, and stationery. All work by committeewomen and local volunteers is done without remuneration.

The first anniversary, on the October 10 cutting day, was celebrated with a pot luck dinner, in charge of the presidents of the four local Mennonite women's societies. Mrs. J. S. Schultz gave a report for last year, and suggestions were given for more efficient work this year. There has never been a shortage of help, and a fine spirit of cooperation has been shown in the community. — Naomi Brenneman

"Clothing for Relief" Folder Ready for Distribution

A relief clothing folder has just been printed and sent to all the churches in sufficient quantities for each family to receive one. Besides a brief presentation of the need, and an appeal for clothing contributions, the folder contains suggestions for adult and junior groups. Distribution of M.C.C. Clothing in Refugee Camps in Egypt

J. N. Byler describes the distribution of the ten tons of clothing, sent to Egypt by the Mennonite Central Committee, as it took place just before he left Egypt to go to Palestine and Syria. We quote from a letter dated October 23, 1944:

"I am glad to report that the ten tons of clothing has arrived in Egypt. Before I left I authorized an UNRRA official to release the shipment and also designated Dr. Richard Yoder to have general supervision of the distribution in his camp and Delvin Kirchhofer in the other. Richard and Nancy (Hernley) checked the bales and decided which bales should be sent to Tolumbat. I think somewhere between 35 and 40 bales were chosen. The remainder of the shipment is to be shipped to El Shatt where there are three camps with a total of approximately 30,000 Yugoslav refugees . . . Everyone who had the opportunity to look over the list for the things in the 186 bales became very enthusiastic. It was a real treat to see Richard and Nancy scan this list for the things they needed. They told us of having had to pin babies into pillow slips since they had nothing else for them, and that they had only 90 diapers for the 60 babies in their hospital. Naturally they picked bales containing things for babies."

Hospital Work at El Shatt Camp in Egypt

Extracts from letters, written between September and October, indicate that Marie Fast is engaged in nursing hospitalized refugees in El Shatt Camp hospitals.

"I'm still working among measles. I was transferred to Camp No. 1 about ten days ago. Camp No. 2 Measles Hospital was closed a week ago yesterday so we take all the stragglers at Camp No. 1 now. They each had a bed capacity of 250 and were running "to capacity" for a little while. Now however, we think the measles have spent themselves and they are definitely on the way out. The census today, when I went off duty, was 130. Admissions are only around ten a day. We used to admit twenty—and once in Camp No. 2, fifty—a day. The children have a lot of complications to battle beside measles, heat and flies. The flies are too bad there though, because we have a good spray that really works wonders . . ."

Dietitian in Charge of Child Feeding Program in Egypt.

Mary Emma Showalter describes her work at the El Shatt refugee camp in a letter dated October 8, 1944:

"I am the only dietitian in this camp of approximately twenty-five thousand people. As Delvin (Kirchhofer) has no doubt written, the camp is divided into three sections, each one functioning as a separate unit. Each camp is divided into blocks and there is one kitchen in each block, approximately one thousand adults and three hundred children are fed in each kitchen. The food for the children from two to ten years is prepared separately and my job is to supervise the child feeding program. I have been sent to camp three to concentrate my efforts for awhile."

India Relief Work

Operation of relief activities during the month of July, 1944 have been reported in diary form, by F. J. Isaac:

No appreciable reduction in the number of rice tickets during the month.

With the rains much sickness has developed. Much more quinine has been distributed. Day-patients at the hospital have increased from 75 to 275, mostly malaria cases.

Workers have not escaped sickness. Mr. Joseph and the new Mr. Biswas have both had light attacks of flu and the director has had sciatica. God has graciously helped so that the necessary work could be done.

Number of inmates in the work camp has risen to 80.

Cloth sales have declined. The regular market is steadying. Government price control helps this situation.

C. P. S.

Psychiatry and Christian Service School

In connection with the C.P.S. unit at the New Jersey State Hospital, Marlboro, a special school in "Psychiatry and Christian Service" will be set up. The main objective in organizing this school is to provide special study in psychiatry as it relates to various fields of Christian service, and also to provide training for C.P.S. men who have been considering psychiatry as a profession. In addition to members already at the Marlboro unit approximately ten men will have the opportunity to transfer in for this special school.

Carload of Men Transfer

On October 31 a carload of men from the Medaryville, Indiana, camp were transferred to the Downey, Idaho, camp. The transfer was advisable to equalize the camp strength of these camps—Medaryville was above and Downey under camp strength.

Openings in Hospital Units

Selective Service has authorized the enlargement of the Mennonite hospital units, providing opportunity for about fifty men to transfer from base camps. All units to be expanded are in the East with the exception of Kalamazoo, Michigan.

C.P.S. Briefs

A conference for camp directors of Mennonite units will be in session at the Denison, Iowa camp, November 12 to 15.

The C.P.S. Hospital Section is preparing a symposium, titled, "Should the Church Establish and Maintain Hospitals for the Mentally Ill?" Contributors include state welfare officials, church leaders, and C.P.S. men.

Transplanting white pine and red pine seedlings was a big job at the Medaryville, Indiana, camp during the month of October. Approximately 853,000 trees were transplanted.

Single	71	60.8	67.2
Married	29	39.2	32.8
States with Highest Induction in C.P.S.
Kansas		353
Pennsylvania		280
Ohio		278
Indiana		219

C.P.S. Briefs

Roy Wenger, director of the smoke jumper unit at Huson, Montana, is transferring to the Akron Office to assist in the C.P.S. Hospital Section. The staff in this office was reduced when J. N. Byler left for relief service in the Middle East.

Leaders from the four Farm and Community Schools will gather at Lincoln, Nebraska, to confer on a number of concerns related to their work, November 16 to 17.

For diversion a number of campers at Belton camp hunted in the Glacier National Park. As of October 27 they had bagged two deer, one bear, and one elk.

JOTTINGS

—Rev. Sam J. Goering will not leave for England as early as planned. He expects to be home yet by December 2.

—Rev. Wilbert A. Regier, who has been pastor of the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, since 1938 has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon. He writes, "... the Lord willing, we expect to leave Los Angeles on Monday, November 20, for Pratum, Oregon. This is not a matter that was decided over night, but to the contrary, has been under consideration for over a year. When I was first approached with a call from Pratum, I considered it in prayer for a long time, and finally sent them a negative answer, for we were happy in our present charge and the Lord was giving evidences of His blessing upon the work. But when the Lord seemed to withold an answer to my prayer that He might speedily meet their need—He more and more seemed to be pointing His finger at me as much as to say, "Thou art the man!" And when after a year the Church there extended another call, there was little else I could do. With real joy therefore, we look forward to taking up our new work with the one prayer, that in all that we do we might Glorify only the Lord Jesus Christ. As for who will fill this pulpit—that has not yet been fully decided

But I am confident that God's eye is on the man, and in His own time He will make it plain.

—Rev. H. J. Dyck is conducting meetings at the Meadow Mennonite Church, Colby, Kansas. They began November 19 and will end the 24th. He will serve the group at Vona, Colorado, on the 26th.

—Rev. A. G. Schmidt of Medford, Oklahoma, was elected to the Program Committee of the Western District Conference at its recent session. We failed to report this in the list of officers.

—Rev. C. H. Dirks conducted meetings in the Sichar Mennonite Church, Cordell, Oklahoma, November 13 to 19. This week he is visiting churches at Corn, Gotebo, Carnegie, Mennoville, Taloga, Enid, and Meno in the interest of the Home Mission Board and the Western District Sunday School Convention.

—Rev. Menno Kliewer was ordained as Elder of the Sichar Church, Cordell, on November 19. A harvest thanks and mission festival was held in the afternoon.

—Brother John W. Boehr, who is serving the First Mennonite Church, Ransom, Kansas, wrote on November 10:

We have been enjoying a week of special meetings this week at our church with Rev. Gerald Stanton of St. Petersburg, Florida as our evangelist. Most of the churches in Ransom are cooperating in these meetings, and we have advertised them as the First Community Youth Conference. We hope these will be repeated in later years.

Mr. Stanton is a gifted Chalk Talk Artist and has drawn a different picture every night. These pictures are given away to various groups and individuals who make special effort to come and bring others to the meetings.

The Lord Jesus Christ has been exhalted in every meeting, and at least a dozen young people have given their hearts to Christ so far.

The 57th regular Annual Meeting of the Bethel College Corporation is called for November 24, 1944, to be held in the Memorial Hall, beginning at 9:30 a. m. Annual reports will be presented. Board members will be elected and other college business may be taken up including the proposed change of charter.

—Salem Zion (North Church), Freeman, S. Dak.

A large audience attended the memorial services for Pvt. Jessie E. Tieszen in the North Church last Sunday. The young man died of wounds in France. Scripture reading and prayer was led by Rev. J. J. Regier, pastor of the church, and the sermon was given by Rev. A. P. Waltner. The Male chorus brought two numbers: "He knows it all" and "Asleep in Jesus." Our weekly prayer meetings have been discontinued during the corn picking season. We are thankful for the "Indian Summer" we are enjoying.

Brother Theo. Epp of Lincoln, Nebraska is starting a two week's revival campaign under the auspices of the Ministerial Association. Our newly elected S. S. superintendent is Ben Senner. Our Ladies Mission Society has been busy with the C. P. S. canning project and is now busy collecting and sewing clothes for relief.

—Mrs. J. Miller

—Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas: Rev. Lester Hostetler pointed out in his sermon on Men and Missions Sunday, November 12, that although Jesus endorsed the payment of taxes to the Roman government He thereby did not endorse the worship of the Emperor that the Roman government at that time called for. Man created in the image of God owes his services to God, he declared. During the past week Rev. Hostetler spoke at the Farm and Community Leaders' Conference at the C. P. S. Unit in Lincoln, Nebraska. Brother Hostetler has been asked to make periodic visits to this unit. Four fifteen-minute reels of motion pictures on Indian life were shown after the mission study discussion period on the evening of November 12.

—The Indiana All-Mennonite Missionary Convention which recently met at Middlebury, Indiana, adopted the following resolutions:

(1) That we express our deep gratitude to our Heavenly Father for His blessing and guidance, that even though we are in the midst of war, we enjoy the privilege in the United States of America of worshipping God according to the dictates of our own conscience under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. (2) That we as missionary women continue praying for our national leaders; that they may have strength to guide us at a time like this and to help prepare us for a just and durable peace. (3) That we pray for our young people, the church of tomorrow, and particularly for those in the service of our country. (4) Resolved, that we perpetuate the faith of our fathers in their historic belief that peaceful methods are better than war in solving this world's problems.

—Bergfelder Mennonite Church, Mt. Lake, Minnesota: Missionary and Mrs. P. J. Nickel and their three little girls left November 10 for Alaska, where they will be missionaries. On October 29 Mr. Nickel ordained as missionary, a farewell service was held for the family, and the children were consecrated to the Lord. November 19 special meetings will begin with Rev. H. P. Fast as speaker. Rev. Solomon Mouttet was the speaker on Sunday evening. He spoke in the interest of Grace Bible Institute at Omaha. Mrs. Alvin D. Eitzen, Corr.

—The Week of Prayer booklets are now ready and can be obtained in any quantity at the rate of 3 cents per copy from the Department of Evangelism, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

—Rev. J. P. Suderman began a series of meetings in the Ebenezer Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio, on November 19. They will end on the 26th. He will also be the guest speaker at the young people's banquet on the 25th. Rev. John Esau is now serving as supply pastor of the Ebenezer Church.

—First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Rev. Waldo Flickinger conducted meetings recently. He and Missionary Helen E. Nickel were the guest speakers on Thanksgiving Day when a harvest and mission festival was observed.

NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS

—The Pastor's Conference of the Northern District met in the Bethany Church, Freeman, South Dakota, on November 14 and 15.

—Rev. Don E. Smucker brought a message at Goshen College on November 12 and also one at the North Church in Goshen.

"O Come Let Us Adore Him"

Humbly I offer this small leaflet to the public, not as something so valuable or well done as our good editor stated in a late issue, but as a small tribute to Him who has done so much for me. Sincerely, Joanna S. Andres.

Our Ministry of Education

By J. H. Langenwalter

When Christians speak of Ministry they think of service—unselfish service—moved by the Love of God for mankind.

When they speak of Education they think of guidance from a lower to a higher level and of leadership on the way to greater living.

Jesus called His followers "disciples"—men who are willing to learn and to be trained for a ministry to mankind. They were to learn to lead people out of small, inadequate views of life toward greater ones.

Times and circumstances may change but the needs of human beings to be trained for real living do not change. This is true because such training is a part of the orderly arrangement of God in order that men might become learners. The fact that God has endowed us with the ability to think lays upon us the obligation to think at our best. That calls for training. Such training is really a sharing with us on the part of those who have thought further than we have. It also means that they are willing to help us escape having to learn things the hard way.

Our forefathers, as well as those of other Christians, appreciated the value of education in the realms of its greater meaning. The home, the church, good literature and the school were all considered means toward training childhood and youth for the kind of life that attempts to do great things greatly. People who do things that way have a real appreciation for the opportunities which life offers to us.

If our forefathers lived today they would adapt themselves to existing conditions, but they would not lose sight of the values of true education. They would make use of the means at hand to lead us out of the small, unworthy ways of thinking and living into those realms of which Jesus thought when He said: "If ye abide in my word, then are ye truly my disciples; and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." John 8:31b.32.

Why Not

"The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light." Who said that? According to the Gospel of Luke 16:8, Jesus is reported to have said it.

If this statement is true it means that people with worldly objectives are wiser toward their generation of children, youth and maturer neighbors than are those who have seen the light of greater objectives such as Jesus proposed to men.

Perhaps this is shown nowhere so clearly and so sadly as in the lack of provision which is made by churches for good literature. If one becomes a member of almost any kind of organization whether it be social, business, industrial, political or any other kind of group which expects to succeed with its objective, he is supplied with literature in order to keep him informed. Too many churches have not been approaching their opportunities as wisely as that. Too often new members read almost everything except the kind of literature which reveals the objectives of those who profess to be followers of Jesus.

Young people seldom criticise Church papers. They simply do not know them. That is true of too many people who are members of churches and are no longer young.

Suppose every church were to have an item in its annual budget for a subscription to their Church paper for every home in which there is at least one member! That would do away with the excuses usually offered for not knowing what the denomination is doing in its many fields of activity. It would also reduce the overhead in the publication office expenses. Several hundred accounts are more easily handled than five thousand.

The increase in subscriptions would reduce the average cost per member, and the increase in interest, because people know, would multiply the support of the work of the denomination as a whole as well as that of the local church. The wisdom of the women in promoting missionary work through the publication and distribution of the MISSIONARY NEWS AND NOTES is a fair example of what can be done. Why not try it for the coming year? If presenting the possibilities before and during the General Conference in 1941 could double the subscriptions to the MENNONITE—and the consequent increase in intelligent interest—why should we not continue the good work and do the business of the Kingdom in a more business-like-wise-way? That would solve a lot of our problems of which we complain too much, and do too little to solve them.

Work Where Doors Are Open

By John T. Neufeld

All of us regret the difficulties we as a church have had in our foreign mission work because of closed doors. Recently we have had difficulties getting passports for our missionaries to go back. We certainly should put forth all efforts to carry on this work. When, however, some doors are closed for foreign mission work, we should put on more effort to work where doors are still open. Perhaps the fact that doors to foreign mission work are closed indicates that more work needs to be done in home missions.

A Parable

A mother had six children. One day it was very wet outside; she said to her children, "Now today you will have to stay in the house because you will bring in too much mud if you go out."

Before the day was over, she was glad to open the door and let the children out, as they had become such a pest that she would rather have the mud than the children in the house.

If we do not press the parable too far it may help us. Let's get active at home; stir up the Grace of God that is in us. If they refuse us passports to other lands, then double our efforts to spread the Gospel here. Make it known to every man, women, and child, beginning with the President of the United States and down to the boys and girls in the institution for the feeble minded. Follow the stirring of the Spirit, and soon they will either be converted or be glad to open the door and let the pests out.

Our Gospel

Paul uses the expression: "according to my gospel" in Romans chapter 2. Because of this precedent I feel we can use the term "our gospel." I feel the Mennonite church has the full gospel if anyone can lay claim to this statement. This gospel is expressed in the last command of Jesus: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Our gospel should include all things that Jesus taught.

Evangelism

We must not isolate evangelism and set it apart as something entirely separate from the entire program of the church. Let it be that Spirit-inspired activity which is interested in carrying out the entire program of the church. We must not let the easy type of evangelism, which is expressed in the invitation: "Come forward and shake my hand" predominate. The Jesus way of evangelizing is expressed in these two statements from our Lord:

> "Sell that you have and give to the poor, then follow me" "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men."

At the same time it must be reinforced by the tools of love, especially when we are dealing with the needy. "I was hungry and ye fed me, in prison and ye visited me." Perhaps one of the reasons for our lack of success in winning people to Christ here in our own land is that we do not use Christian service as a bait for winning people to the Kingdom. Perhaps we have not had enough opportunity to serve.

Procedure

When the first followers of Christ were persecuted in Jerusalem, they were scattered all over; and whereever they went, they preached Jesus and the Kingdom of God, Acts 8:12. And even when they were prisoners, they still kept on preaching Christ and His Kingdom. See the last two verses in Acts. We submit in all humbleness the following suggestions for ministers.

1. Recognize the Holy Spirit as the guiding force in evangelism. Pray much for guidance and give honor and recognition to the Holy Spirit in this matter.
2. Let your preaching ministry exalt the message of the Kingdom of God as did the apostles, so that all Christians may begin to feel and believe in the Kingdom of God. When once the realism of the Kingdom grips us and we become truly loyal to Christ our King, then we begin to be contagious. This should be the aim of your preaching to your congregation. Your congregation will then become a spreading influence in the community.
3. Look around to see whether there are any unchurched areas in your community; places where Christian work could and should be carried on. Perhaps, there are institutions that offer opportunity. If you feel that you need help of any kind, consult with members of the Evangelism Committee or with members of the Home Mission Board. Where the work is more than you as a congregation can do, then there is the possibility that the Home Mission Board will be willing to lend help.
4. Use wisely every opportunity to write for newspapers. Do some printing yourself. Spread it among those who do not get other Christian literature.
5. Work harmoniously with other churches in your community. Willing and helpful cooperation, rather than criticism, will help the other churches and will present a much better front to the non-Christian.

(Rev. John T. Neufeld is a member of the Evangelism Committee.)

"War, Peace, and Nonresistance"

y Guy F. Hershberger

A new book entitled War, Peace, and Nonresisance has just come from the Herald Press, Scottlale, Pa. The book is written by Dr. Guy F. Hersherger, Instructor in History at Goshen College. Many n our churches have read his booklet on Christian Relationships to State and Community. Dr. Hersherger's new book is a substantial volume of 415 ages. Written by one who is a staunch Christian and keen scholar it is truly an event in Mennonite peace iterature. Undoubtedly, many as they come to know it vill want to place it in Church, Sunday School, and ome libraries. The author approaches his subject rom the basis of the Bible. The book is up-to-date nd comprehensive in scope. The chapter headings re as follows: I. War in Human History. II. Peace nd War in the Old Testament. III. Nonresistance in he New Testament. IV. Peace, War, and the State n the History of the Church. V. The Mennonites n Europe. VI. The Mennonites in America. VII. Mennonites in the World War. VIII. Post-War Mirations and Relief. IX. Mennonites and the Second Vorld War. X. Nonresistance and the State in Modern Life. XI. Biblical Nonresistance and Moern Pacifism. XII. Biblical Nonresistance and Moern Pacifism (Concluded). XIII. Nonresistance and ndustrial Conflict. XIV. The Service of Nonreistance to Society. XV. Keeping the Faith. The ook also has a valuable appendix. We hope to preent an extensive review of this book in a forthcoming ssue of this paper. The price of the book is $2.50. t may be ordered from either the Mennonite Pubcation Office, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, or rom the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana.

New Series

In this issue we are beginning the new series "Meditations on the Mennonites" by J. Winfield Fretz. We eceived many appreciative comments on his first eries, and we feel that his new series will help us o know what our heritage is. Only as we know what is, can we preserve it or propagate it. We also eed to be aware, as Dr. Fretz suggests, of the probms which sneak up on the Mennonite Church.

Although Dr. J. H. Langenwalter as Minister-atarge for the Boards of Education and Publication, as contributed several articles, these did not appear nder a regular head. Beginning with this issue he ill present a series of articles under the head of "Our Ministry of Education." These articles should do much to inform us of the work that these two boards are doing. We are happy to present to you these two new series. According to present plans four brethren of our conference will each present during the month of February an article on the subject "What Is the Church?"

Englargement of The "Mennonite"

Recently a friend suggested to us that The Mennonite be enlarged. He had looked at the paper of another Mennonite conference and had observed that this paper had larger pages and many more of them than our own. We could well use more space to present the work of our conference and such material as nurtures Christian growth. We are very frequently crowded for space now. Furthermore we need a larger paper to present additional material and a greater variety of it. Right now we could not, perhaps, get enough paper to enlarge it much. More important still the Publication Board would hardly have the necessary funds. When paper is again obtainable and when more of our churches hold regular and substantial offerings for publication work, then we may see an enlarged church paper with more reading matter and a greater variety of it.

Generalities and the Truth

Generalities frequently fail to satisfy us because they fail to tell us the truth, which we so much need. What daughter isn't puzzled when mother tells her to use a little flour instead of specifying one tablespoonful? The statement "The girl is getting breakfast ready" does not mean as much to us as "Nora is frying the bacon and eggs and preparing the coffee." Definite, concrete words strike sharp, clear impressions on our minds, while general statements brush against the mind like a vague, hazy mist. The practice of the scientific method calls for generalizations, but definite, concrete statements of fact precede them. Effective public speaking and writing use generalizations with words that taste and tell. Preaching or religious talk is not excepted from the need for concreteness. Many sermonic statements swish in one ear and out the other because they are not definite enough for the mind to catch. Religious terms need to be broken down into definite, meaningful items if they are to make truth seem real. When religious statements fit over the facts like tight gloves over a hand, then we come face to face with truth.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

NEWBIRTH EFFECTS!

One day we were sitting close to the brink of the flooded rivers on one side and the beauty of vegetation on the other side, we talked about the exceedingly heavy week behind us. It seemed we had accomplished nothing but correcting, admonishing, reproving, disciplining, comforting, etc. A physical fatigue overtook us. Suddenly my husband remarked, "But there is much to be thankful for," then he named a good many lives who had visibly grown in grace. As a flash came to my mind. Brother Samaisingh (Horn of time) and Sister Dhulmotti (Earthdust). Only a year ago we saw him walking in our mission compound at Mauhadei almost naked, half-starved, the hair wild around his head, begging almost daily pitifully. Soon he started for baptism as a second issue. Our anxiety was that he might be only another dependent on the mission with his five family members. This condition made our ears quite deaf. By and by our conscience struck us. Then we questioned, "Have we a right to deny him the baptism?" We are able to see his heart. The Lord had wrought outstanding miracles with other members of the very same type. His power has not weakened! The Lord could also dislodge this man's laziness. The church council was summoned for suggestions. The outcome was that the husband, wife, and daughter should be baptized the next Sunday morning. This happened.

That afternoon during pouring rain we left on a buffalo cart for one of the small churches seven miles away, then proceeding to Champa. Before leaving the family came running, asking, "Where shall we live? Our house is falling together!" In the meanwhile he had pulled the piece of wood down, thus the rain in the next night crumbled the rest together. We left them standing on the veranda crying. After some weeks we heard that one of our poor widows had surrenreded to them a tiny corner during the rains. Even on the floor they could impossibly stretch out. This way they lived at least six months. They attended church, started working regularly; after some time their bodies increased in strength continually. If the reader could behold them this Sunday, July 23, 1944, they were dressed, fleshy, his wavy hair most attractively combed, his mustache gave him a general-like appearance; they attend regularly the services drinking in God's Word. The grown-up daughter - a picture of health - in whom lately six young men have been interested. The son nine years old, whom people thought not all there on account of poverty and starvation, now sits in school in the second grade, heads his class and is so promising in every which way. His name is Mohit. For the last three Sundays he has been singing in the chosen children's choir. His voice rings all over the village about Jesus whom he loves dearly. Only yesterday he came to my adult annual Bible Course class, seating himself on the church-floor before by feltograph and took in the explanations. Afterwards he begged me to take the pictures home. The reader should have seen how tender and carefully he held them. Mohit needs our prayers much! He has all the stuff within to become some day a teacher-preacher in the surrounding needy villages. A week ago we dedicated their mud-wall house having two large rooms with a straw-thatched roof. The neighbor, our evangelist, said, "The change coming over this family seems impossible to behold. Before they quarreled between husband and wife, bad language ensued, etc. Now we never hear that any longer; only happiness and songs depict themselves!" Poor they are still, earning when all three work only sixteen cents a day. 'But, oh, the change almost unbelievably!" "Are we discouraged?" No by no means. Are we thankful to the Lord Who sent us here? How much are we grateful.

"We hear and see villages, full of sorrow and strife
Of minds deep in darkness,
And hearts full of woe;
But we hear the command of our Lord Who says "Go":
For His power, mercy and promise divine,
A life is only a small payment!
Oh, Master, take mine!"

YOUR PEN—HIS PEN

By O. A. Waltner

It is hard to see a leper suffer when you know that a stroke of your pen will provide for him a hospital bed, nourishing food, proper medicines, and Christian fellowship.

That's all it is—just a slip of paper with his name on it and yours that opens a new world to a real sufferer. It's the password for the formal admittance in the office register or hospital record. It's a blank slip of paper made to speak when you put his and your name on it side by side. His name and yours—that's when for you he ceases to be an individual and becomes a personality.

Tear-stained faces glow with joy when your hand reaches for the pen in your pocket. The pen in your hand is the sign that love and compassion have won. And both of you are glad that they do win as you write the names on the slip and thus give love its greater chance.

And so it continues. You use your pen on many slips. For each leper it means a new lease on life. and for you it bcomes a hope—a prayer—a symbol that someday the finger of the living God will write the name of your patient into the Book of Life and following hard on that name will be the signature of your Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. For Jesus finds it hard to see the leper suffer when He knows that a stroke of His pen dipped in His shed blood saves from eternal death.—May, 1944

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

Appreciation

Before beginning a new series of articles, I wish to express my sincere appreciation for those individuals who took the time to write letters of comment and criticism on the previous series of articles. Such comments and criticisms are exceedingly valuable to a person who writes. They are to him what facial expressions in an audience are to a public speaker. They reflect the interests and the thinking, as well as the prejudices of the reader, but they contribute the the balance and the maturity of the person who writes.

Purpose of this Series

In the coming series of articles I shall have two general aims. The first is to try to interpret what seems to me is the genius of the Mennonite Church. I write on the assumption that the Mennonite Church has unique Christian insights into God's Will and Word. He has permitted this church to be created and has preserved it for a purpose. It is up to us who are members of this church to discover that purpose and discharge His divine will. It is my conviction that our church has a contribution to make to society. It is not the only church that has a contribution to make. Other churches, too, have valuable insights, but that is no reason for thinking that one's own is barren. It seems to me that just as God has given individuals different capacities and talents so, too, He has given different churches a diversity of gifts. It is my feeling, however, that the unique insights of our forefathers have in many cases been lost sight of, and one purpose of this series of articles is to attempt to recall to the attention of the readers of The Mennonite some of these insights.

Presenting Problems

A second aim in this series of articles is to present to the readers problems that periodically face the Mennonite Church, to show what the world is doing to the church. Changes take place so slowly and so subtly that we often do not discover these changes until after the change has taken place. It is necessary to keep constantly alert and aware of the changes, so that we may judge between the good and the bad. Churches, as individuals, must not grow negligent, haughty, proud, formal, or cold toward the will of God. In this weekly column it will be our hope that as a Church we may heed Jesus's admonition to His disciples, "Watch, therefore, and pray."

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

EBEN—EZER, Girls Home in Winnipeg

By Rev. J. H. Enns, Winnipeg, Manitoba

Translated by A. J. Neuenschwander. Sec.

In the years 1923-30 many Mennonites left Russia because of the Revolution and came to Canada. The experiences in and as a result of the terrible Revoluion, caused us to leave our former beloved homeland the Russian steppes and came to Canada where a haven of security was promised us. We were poor as beggars, and, in addition, every family, with very few exceptions, was loaded down with a large transportation debt. At first everyone went to live on farms and help the kind Mennonites that were willing to give us an opportunity to live with them. Later on many went on their own farms. Grown up sons and daughters went out to work wherever an opportunity presented itself.

It was a venture of faith on the part of a number of girls in 1923 to come to Winnipeg to do house work in a city where there was hardly a handful of Mennonites. It was not long until many in the city learned that Mennonite girls were able to render very efficient service in the kitchen and home generally, and so inquiries began to come in for more girls. The parents saw in this situation an opportunity for help in their stringent, financial situation.

Every Thursday afternoon and every second Sunday afternoon were given free time for the girls. This was a standing rule. This situation constituted a need. Where shall the girls spend all this free time? The T. Eaton Department Store was very interesting, but the store closed at 6:00 P. M. The large and convenient C. P. R. and C. N. R. Depots were other places that invited the girls, and very often the girls went to the immigration Building of the C. P. R. where immigrants came in frequently, while other girls regularly visited the few Mennonite families that already lived in the city. This condition could not continue.

Plans Laid for a Girls Home.

Rev. Gerhard A. Peters, who lived in Winnipeg at that time, came to the conclusion to start a home for these girls where they could spend their leisure time. At about the same time a number of families began to gather in the church at the corner of Ellen and Alexander Streets, and with the coming of more families the group grew. In due time the house and the church building that had been rented were bought. Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Peters moved into the house and invited the girls to come here in their leisure time. Rev. G. A. Peters got in touch with the Home Mission Board about this needy phase of work, and in due time a home on 438 McDermot Avenue was rented for this purpose of establishing a separate home for the girls.

In November, 1926, the girls started to gather regularly for Thursday meetings, first on Alexander and later on in the home on McDermot Avenue. The girls' home has been a vital factor in the life of Mennonites in Winnipeg for eighteen years.

The Home Mission Board appointed Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Peters as superintendent and matron of the home. The Board also paid the rent and other obligations from time to time. We are still deeply indebted to the brethren of the Board for their warm interest in his work and for their much appreciated support. In 1936 the tenth anniversary of the Home was duly observed with Rev. J. M. Regier, Chairman of the Board, as main speaker. This recognition was greatly appreciated.

Development of the Home

In due time the girls began to make regular, if only small, gifts toward the support of the home. In a short time a system was worked out that each girl regularly contributed a nominal part of her salary to the Home, depending on her salary. In addition to this, some girls that worked by the day and who needed rooms for lodging rented some of the rooms in the Home, thus adding to the income.

In 1929 the Home was moved from McDermot Avenue to 412 Bannatyne Avenue. In this year Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Peters moved to the East, and in their place Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Fasten were appointed as leaders of the Home. For four years the Fasten's remained as Superintendent and Matron of the home when in 1933 they moved to British Columbia. In 1933 Sister Helena Epp was appointed as Matron of the Home. She and her sister Aganetha have held the leadership now eleven years and have labored faithfully to make the Home a place of help and comfort to the girls. The spiritual leadership was placed into the hands of Rev. J. H. Enns, present Elder of the Schoenwiser Congregation in the city.

Fifteen Hundred Girls Enjoyed the Home

A large number of servant girls have in the course of the years enjoyed the help and comfort of the Home. It is estimated that about 1,500 made use of the Home during these years. The highest number that were in the city at one time was 200.

The new girls' home, 605 Bamatyne Avenue, Winnipeg, Manitoba. It was purchased in the fall of 1943.

"Eben-Ezer"

In connection with the tenth Anniversary Celebration, the Home was given the name "Eben-Ezer," "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us" I Sam. 7:12. Eben-Ezer means much in the lives of the girls. It in their home; here they feel at home; here friendships are formed that endure for years to come; here the Thursday evening Bible study is held from 6:00-7:00 p.m. The Home serves as employment agent and many positions come to the girls through the home. The Matron, Miss Epp, has helped scores of girls to get employment in desirable places and homes, and she is always ready to give counsel in many problems.

At the present time the number that serve as domestics in homes is greatly reduced—between 25-30 find employment in homes. The declining number of servant girls is an indication that many of our Mennonite families have been able to establish themselves financially after years of great diligence and economy. The girls study and apply themselves, and for this reason an increasing number are getting employment in factories and other places of employment where the remuneration is higher than in the homes. Such positions are also desired, because it gives the girls a little more free time. Whether this is for the good of the girls is an open question, and an extra responsibility rests on the Home and the Church to keep these girls unders the influence of the church and all the things that are best for them.

The girls have so conducted themselves in the city that they have brought honor to our people. They have been diligent, honest, and trustworthy in their tasks. Thus they have also been witnesses for Christ.

REPORT FROM JACOB H. JANZEN

It seems I have so much work to do, that I cannot find time to report on it. At present I am finishing my Calendar stpries about Plainfield Township and its people. The third book is on the market, the fourth is in the making. In these stories which are all relating actual happenings, except the December stories, I try to show our life as it is, with all its ups and downs, its blessings and its curses,—and how Jesus Christ saves us from the curse of sin and leads us to the mount of blessings.

The December stories are prophecy as I see it according to the indications found in God's Word. The same characters appear in them as in the other stories which are written from experience in the light of the Word of God. In this way I am trying to show in what way the blessed future is connected to the personal life of every believing Christian.

My "BRIEFE AN UNSER VOLK" have died of starvation. There were too few subscribers to them while the "Predigtbuch," compiled of them, sells nicely. So instead of the "BRIEFE" I am now issuing a new "Predigtbuch" under the title "DA IST EUER GOTT." The manuscript is now with the printer who is doing his best to find someone to finance the undertaking, as we both, the printer and I, are not blessed with worldly goods to publish the book on our own account.

Our church here in Waterloo is steadily growing, the attendance at the Sunday meetings is good, and we believe the Lord has always been with us to bless us, if only we were prepared to receive His blessings.

Th doctor insists that my good wife and I take a complete rest for a while, and we, perhaps, will have to obey his orders. We have asked the church for leave of absence from January 1, 1945 to, God alone knows when. We do not know yet where we will go to spend our vacation. Maybe we will have to stay right here in Waterloo, draw a magic line around us, and thus be far away from every worry and care. I wonder what success we will have in doing so. We entrust ourselves to the Lord. He will take care of us.

The Lord willing, I shall, even in my exile, continue to write and to publish articles, as much as the Grace of God will permit me too.

Pray for us.

Yours in the Lord,
Jacob H. Janzen

Diary Of An Ypsilanti C. O. G.

By Alice Buckwalter

(The author was a member of the Mennonite women's summer service unit at Ypsilanti, Michigan. This unit and the one at Howard, Rhode Island, were composed of young women who volunteered to serve in mental hospitals throughout the summer months.—Editor)

June 2—Judging from the yelling I can hear coming from the buildings which house patients, this might be a dubious place to work for three whole months. The knowledge that there are over thirty other girls in the same predicament helps to bolster my waning morale.

To think that it would take an entire morning to sign up for the job! It was almost as bad as registering in school.

Tomorrow we report to Mrs. Rudland at eight o'clock a.m. and then will be assigned our places of work. Already we carry keys. Jingle, jingle! That's all that distinguishes us from patients!

June 3—It's all so new, so strange, so—so—weird my poor brain is a heterogeous jumble.

We are indeed favored. We have 'key' positions.

Oh, the smell! It's a very peculiar, indescribable odor which is more obvious on some wards than others. Mercifully, the ward I'm on is comparatively free from that smell—in the long day room. The noisy day room at the end of the short hall isn't quite so pleasant.

Typical conversation when we girls meet each other:

"Do you think you'll like it?"

"Sure. It's so different."

"What ward are you on? Are they violent or untidy?"

"I think they are disturbed. Something's wrong with them anyhow!"

And then we begin tales of how this one talked, the mess that one got into, and the fight another one had.

June 6—I'm still tagging another attendant part of the time. Most of the work is done by patients. It has therapeutic value for them. The difficulty is, which are workers? If only I could remember the names and to which faces they belong.

June 11—Sunday isn't very Sabbath-like when spent watching the mentally ill. Attending church tonight made the day take on more of a "Sunday nature." The Girls' Relief Unit was in charge. Our church singing here is wonderful; so a musical program with lots of it was "super."

June 16—My day off! Every sixth day comes around fast. Last night one of the girls asked if I would like to go fishing.

Tonight when anyone asks, "Did you catch any fish?" the cryptic answer is, "We had plenty to eat!" At least I saw them nibble, which reminds me—worms are dirty, crawly things, Ugh!

Incidentally some of us are the color of boiled beets. It feels awful.

June 21—To think that eventually one could become so hardened as not to be conscious of the ward smell. Thelma put it this way: "Fresh air smelled like perfume at first."

It seems rather odd to leave the ward in the midst of work to attend class. Wednesday, at one-thirty, Miss Gunden teaches the class in International Relief. Our text book is made up of case histories on all the different phases of relief work. I had no idea the subject was so broad. Feeding the hungry is just the beginning. Add to that clothing distribution, housing, health and sanitation, providing aid by employment, projects for the handicapped, relocating displaced people, and aid to prisoners of war. The more we study, the larger the field becomes. We are obviously only scratching the surface this summer.

And the problems! Each type of relief involves all manner of difficulties. What is the most efficient organization? Which people need to be helped first with the amount of funds available? Should many be helped insufficiently or a few be given the amount of aid they really need. What officials need to be contacted? Where is it best to locate? Will transportation facilities be adequate? And so the list goes on and on.

July 4—Rumors had it that today everyone would get chicken and ice cream. This Thomas doubted. It takes too many chickens to supply several thousand people. Dinner time came. The patients got chicken! I went to the employees' cafeteria and—ate chicken. Still, the ice cream hadn't materialized. We surely couldn't get that. But we did!

This afternoon the patients had a track meet. Several attendants from our ward took the more comfortable patients.

When they returned they were full of candy and talk.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

by D. J. Unruh, Newton, Kansas

DEC. 1—"I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called." Eph. 4:1.

Three chapters of the epistle to the Ephesians are devoted to setting forth the possessions and privileges of the person who is "in Christ." "Blessed with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ." Eph. 1:3. "Ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; —therefore, walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called." First, God places us in His family and then challenges us to live and walk accordingly. Practical Christian living is to walk worthy of our calling as children of God, to be faithful friends to all Christians and resolute enemies to all sin.

DEC. 2—"One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism, One God, and Father of all." Eph. 4:5-6.

The Unity of the Christian Church does not lie in organized unions. Oftimes organized unions are but tragic confessions of the absence of the unity of the Spirit. How God must be grieved at our lack of comprehending the unity which is in Christ, and substituting a thinly veiled coercive union that consists primarily in organizationel loyalty. One Lord;—Jesus Christ the head of the church, and as such our sole leader. One faith, — basic faith "For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified." I Cor. 2:2. One baptism the introduction into this unity; "by one spirit were ye all baptized into one body." I Cor. 12:13. One God and Father — In Christ, the creator of the universe is our father. This divine genealogy makes us partakers of the divine nature.

DEC.—"When he ascended upon high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men." Eph. 4:8. In I Cor. 12, we are told of diversities of gifts, diversities of administrations, the Holy Spirit dividing to every man severally as he will. Christ must needs ascend into heaven in triumph, (i.e. reascend) from earth and the grave, to which he descended in humility, in order to impart the gift of the Holy Spirit. John 16:7 through whom He dispenses His gifts. In I Cor. 12 we have the Holy Spirit enduing men with gifts; here we have Christ the head of the church giving to the church men who are qualified by the gifts of the Holy Spirit. Definite offices and definite graces are the gift of Christ that we may be established in unity and that the hope of the believer, be confirmed.

DEC. 4—"And He gave some—For the perfecting of the saints." Eph. 4:11-12. The saints need perfecting. A saint is not a person of perfection but a person in a divinely favored position, who is to be perfected. The Church functions through divinely called men endued by the Holy Spirit. Men whose duty it is to properly set forth "the faith once delivered to the saints" till we all come in the unity of the faith. Men who instruct the church in the "thus saith the Lord" thus edifying the church. Men who recognize and assert the dogmatism of God's Word which is "given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine" so that we be not "carried about with every wind of doctrine." Perfected saints, an edified body of Christ, united in the faith, established in doctrine, ministering in love, this is the picture that the Spirit of God paints of the ideal church. See Eph. 4:11-16.

DEC. 5—"That ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Eph. 4:24. Who is this new man? How is he to be put on? Notice first of all that he is the creation of God. Not created in innocency but in righteousness and true holiness. Innocence is merely the absence of guilt, although the root of sin may be present. Thus we were born by nature the root of sin being present and developed into sinners by choice. The new man is a new creature by a new, a divine, birth. John 1:13. The old man gives us conflict and is to be put off, to be denied, to be crucified. The new man, a new creature, II Cor. 5:17, is to be put on and enthroned, then anger, untruthfulness, theft, unwholesome speech and every impurity will find it's master in the expulsive power of a new affection."

DEC. 6—"Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed, unto the day of redemption." Eph. 4:30. Twice in this epistle we are told that we are sealed by the Holy Spirit. This seal is the earnest and the sign of our redemption. So near and so precious is the Holy Spirit to the child of God that any lack of recognition of His presence must grieve Him. He who dwells in you and makes your body His temple is grieved when you disobey His pleading with you. Grieved when you allow an unkind unforgiving spirit to influence your conduct and giving way to anger, bitterness, and malice. "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, but walk in love." Every act of the child of God that fails to recognize the Holy Spirit's presence and guidance grieves Him, and when we grieve Him we deprive ourselves of His best for us.

DEC. 7—"Let no man deceive you." Eph. 5:6. Deception, not the suggestion to do evil, is the master stroke of Satan. Therefore, the repeated warnings of the Lord Jesus and of the Scriptures "Beware of false prophets." "Take heed that no man deceive you." Matt. 7:15, 24:4,5. Every one of the writers of the New Testament epistles warns against deceptions. We must take heed lest in spiritual pride we say "I am rich and have need of nothing." while the Lord sees us as "wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked."

We Are Losing Our Young People

By Christine Miller

The Need

We are losing our young people. What can we do about it? was one of the questions raised at a recent meeting of ministers and church workers.

The discussion that followed showed a woeful lack of understanding of youth problems, and the need for recognizing that our experience in Jesus Chirst is not something to be tucked away in a tight little compartment of our lives but must shine through all our relationships.

One of the primary instincts of mankind is the desire for fellowship with other human beings. To deny this and say that Christian young people should be satisfied with church and prayer meeting attendance is to lose the young people. They demand, and should have, activities of their own.

Practical Suggestions

Some good suggestions were offered. One was that a week night Bible Study Hour be conducted especially for young people.

Another was that various young people's musical groups be taken on pastoral calls to the sick and aged—this not to be overdone, of course.

The question was asked, "What shall we do when the young people will not pray and otherwise take part in meetings?"

Home influence in this is most important. The part of the church is to start with them when they are in the nursery class in Sunday School and coninue all through their formative years to encourage and expect from them spontaneous and purposeful prayers.

The necessity for their own Christian Endeavors or comparable organizations is felt in this realm. These are training grounds for the future leaders of he church. Few Juniors or Intermediates will voluntarily pray or take part in a C. E. society which includes their adult relatives, but will eagerly partiipate within their own age group. In these groups ur young people learn to pray, lead singing, preare, and give topics, work out programs, and lead meetings. These organizations also provide an outet for the social instincts of the young people. These re the groups to sponsor parties and other social ctivities for the church youth.

I hope that in the future large churches will have arish houses which will provide social and recretional facilities for their youth, and that the parsonages of the smaller churches will have large recreation rooms to which the young people are always welcome and where they will find a fireplace, equipment for "feeds," wholesome games, hobby books and materials, and a piano for "singspirations." This, of course, presupposes that the minister and his wife have a deep love and understanding of young people and that they are young in spirit if not in years.

In any case, the minister must gain the confidence of his young people if he would keep them. They must feel that he is interested in them personally. He must be able to rejoice with them as well as weep with them. He must fill such a place in their lives that they will consider no social affair complete without his presence. He must remember that our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, attended weddings, feasts, and other social occasions, and made them happier and more wholesome for His presence.

Let us realize that we, as ministers and Christian workers, have a great responsibility to our young people and that this responsibility does not end when we have led them to Christ, but goes on to express itself in love, understanding, and in helping them to cultivate well-rounded, happy, Christ-centered personalities.

MAY WE INTRODUCE

Christine Miller, who is the editor of the Workers' Exchange of the Pacific District, claims Rochester, New York, as the place of her family home. Greenville College, from which she graduated in 1933, is her alma mater. In 1936-37 she attended Biblical Seminary, New York City, and completed a major in Christian education. Here she met Edmund Miller, to whom she was married on August 28, 1937. After serving the Alberta Community Church in Portland, Oregon, for two and one-half years, they accepted the pastorate of the Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington. They are now completing their fifth year of service here. Mrs. Miller, who is particulary interested in children's work, serves as director of religious education. She likes to write original units, worship programs, and stories. Visual education is used effectively by her. She has been studying piano and voice at Whitworth College in Spokane for the past four years, and is at present a pupil of Dr. Felix Sharton, composer and educator from the University of Vienna. For six years Mrs. Miller has been connected with the Workers' Exchange, the last two years as editor and publisher. In addition to this she has held various offices connected with children's and young people's work. Mrs. Miller says that her hobbies have a way of turning into jobs. Her music hobby turned into a piano class, and her artistic hobby turned into making weekly church bulletins, and engrossing and illuminating testimonial plaques for the American Society of Automotive Engineers and a Portland Commercial club, illustrating and writing advertising copy for a duplicating machine company. However, not all hobbies have turned into work, for she likes to belong to book clubs and to embroider picture maps of interesting places to which she has been. Someday, Mrs. Miller says, she is going to write a book of stories for children of Mennonite pioneer experiences in the United States. All these will have to take a back seat for a while because the Millers are adopting a baby in the near future. Mrs. Miller has convictions. She wants to see Mennonites have parochial grade and high schools of high scholastic standing to permit religious education in school and to combat serious moral conditions in the public schools of today. She is an enthusiastic Mennonite, though only once by marriage. She believes: that after a person is converted through the saving blood of Jesus Christ he can reach his highest usefulness only through entire consecration to the will of God, that Christians should be the happiest and most satisfied people in the world, and that the way to mental health and vigor is to take a great interest in things and people around you, to be as useful as possible to others so you don't have time to think about yourself, and to maintain a good sense of humor so that you can laugh with others and at yourself.

A Five Foot Book Shelf On Peace

By C. Henry Smith

II

The following books discuss the war and peace question from various angles, political, ethical, and economic as well as religious; and while most of them do not take the complete non-resistant view, yet all are thoroughly opposed to the war system, and uncompromisingly committed to its complete abolition from our civilization. The writer does not always agree with all the political theories and religious opinions expressed by these authors, but, nevertheless, believes that all are worth reading by the lover of peace, who wishes to be thoroughly informed on all phases of the war and peace problem. War is not only the world's greatest collective sin, but also the world's greatest economic mistake and political folly. The fact that the war system is unscriptural does not keep it at the same time from being unsound economically and harmful socially. Not included in the following list are the countless recent schemes for political unions and regional affiliations which would base the hope of a future peaceful world on political organization, rather than on a complete revolutionary change of heart and mind in our sense of obligation to people of other races and nations.

These books may be ordered from the publishers, or through the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana.

I. The Great Illusion. Norman Angel. Putnams, 1933.

This book was first published in 1913, and is perhaps the most revolutionary and influential book on the subject to be written within the past fifty years. The subject is treated largely from the economic point of view, the authors main contention being that wars never pay either the victor or the vanquished.

II. Peace and the Plain Man. Norman Angel. Harpers, 1935.

As the title suggests, written in untechnical language,

III. From Victory to Peace. Paul Hutchinson. Willett and Clark, 1943.

One of the best among recent books on the present world situation and the problems of peace.

IV. Religion Renounces War. Walter W. Van Kirk. Willett and Clark, 1943.

Official statements of various church bodies regarding their position on the war question, passed after the First World War.

V. Merchants of Death. H. C. Engelbrecht and F. C. Hanginghen, Dodd Mead, 1934.

The part played by the munition makers in fomenting war.

VI. Wars, No Profit, No Glory, No Need. Norman Thomas. Frederick Stokes, 1935.

VII. The Future of War. H. S. Block. Ginn and Co., 1903.

Mennonite History Library

Dr. C. Henry Smith, author of six books on Men-onite history, is here shown in the Mennonite Hisory Library of Bluffton College. Dr. Smith is much nterested in this library which contains "some rare nd highly prized documents, as well as copies of ost of the printed papers and books dealing with e Mennonite church and its development. The lk of this library is comprised of the Grubb and mith collections, both of which were donated to e school. The library is an excellent source of in-rmation concerning the history of the church and ntains the basic documents useful in research
ork. In fact, practically all of the research done Dr. Pannabecker for his doctorate was done in is library. An attempt is being made to constant-add to this library any materials which are sign-cant to the history of the church, past as well contemporary. Without doubt there are many cuments in the hands of individuals, or stored ay in trunks in attics, which would be valuable ditions."

"What Prejudice Can Do To A Man's Thinking"

"What prejudice can do to a man's thinking!" These were the words of a lawyer when the bus stopped. He carried a magazine on Virginia Law. Soon after he had entered, he was in conversation with the travelers around him about politics and other general topics. He knew Brickner and other influential people personally. At the same time my attention was directed to the conversation behind me. A man and a woman were speaking about the wonderful fall weather, the beautiful color of the leaves, and then politics and the election. Cautiously the lady entered this dangerous labyrinth without knowing on which side of the fence her partner was. Soon she became bolder and bolder, denouncing the fourth term, new deal, communism, and other isms. A return to God and Bible and to Republican Party principles was, according to her, the remedy for our society. Noncommittally the man followed her denunciations with casual remarks. He was a perfect business man accustomed to hearing much and saying little. From what he said, one could infer that he was an idealist who had not given up his faith in the goodness of humanity. Then they began speaking about the war and the international situation. The Chinese were the finest people in the world (next to ourselves, of course). They were almost as good as the Finns had been some years ago—if you remember. The "Japs", of course, were no human beings, but merely copying machines. Russia was discussed, and no matter how vigorously Communism had been denounced for home consumption, it was all right for the "Russian bear." They concluded that "there must be more to it than we had been lead to believe." Then it was Germany's turn. "You know," said the lady, "we have a teacher of German in our high school whose parents were German Mennoites from Russia. And he says that all those atrocities of the Germans of which we read so much in the papers now, are true. If he, being of German background says so, they certainly must be true."

Meanwhile the cautious gentleman told a long story that was to have happened to his son's buddy now at an airbase at "N." He had been taken prisoner by the Germans in France. He escaped and hid for a while in a basement in a French town. In his attempt to reach the Spanish border he was captured by the Germans. "And what do you think they did?" concluded the man. "They shot everyone in the entire block where he had hidden. I think I got that straight." "Why, of course, you did! Those 'Nazis' will do anything!" said the woman excitedly.

First I asked myself, "Would an American boy betray his French benefactors in this way?" Secondly, I doubted very much that the Germans would have taken him back to witness the punishment he reported and then sent him back to continue his training at the air base of "N." At this point the bus stopped, and the lawyer, whose deliberation I had not been able to follow, concluded with the words, "You see what prejudice can do to a man's thinking."

Diary Of An Ypsilanti C. O. G.

July 18—Dr. Yoder's classes in Mental Hygiene are extremely interesting. He usually interviews a patient and then gives us some explanation of the type of mental illness that particular individual represents. We are usually startled at the number of symptoms we have. After all, when you consider that insanity is simply "a prolonged departure from the normal way of thinking and acting" one begins to wonder if we aren't all a bit "mental" at times.

July 29—The C.O.G.'s (C.O. girls) were in charge of our regular three-weeks outing. We congregated as usual behind a building in hopes that enough cars would appear to transport us to the Lincoln school. Twice before we had been to Saline Valley Farms where there is a pleasant picnicking spot. The Lincoln School grounds were spacious enough to make it ideal for our group.

After working up an appetite playing running games, ice cream and cup cakes tasted ideal. A fitting close to the evening was the reading of several devotional poems and the singing of special songs.

Members of the unit attending patients who have been taken on the lawn for sunshine and fresh air.

August 2—Prayer meeting tonight was inspirational. It's the best we have had this summer. After the helpful suggestions given for getting the most good from our daily devotions, I doubt if there was anyone who did not vow in his heart to be more faithful in that most important part of life. The promise is "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you." We must make the effort.

I have thoroughly appreciated Miss Gunden's provisions for our spiritual well-being. She gave us Upper Room booklets which have been a daily source of strength. Besides that, each Tuesday night those who could, met in her room for a brief prayer service. Friday night we had Sunday School. It was for those who would have to be on duty Sunday morning.

August 11—I ought to describe a typical day on the ward. That's really impossible though, because no two days are alike, nor are any two wards run alike. Here's a sample anyhow.

Six o'clock. I step off the elevator on C-5-3, report to the night girl and go over to C-3-3. Most of the patients are dressed and sitting in the quiet day room which sounds like a mad house (!) I make the rounds of dormitories and single rooms rousing stragglers.

"Mary B—, come right back here to the clothes room!" I yell as she strolls out into the day room stark naked.

"Everybody out. I'm locking the dormitory." That gets them out; either that or dumping them, in very obstinate cases.

The breakfast bell.

"Kathie, Donna Majuka, Annie Mons!" The slowest must walk at the head of the line else they'd never arrive. With a patient on each arm and another patient bringing the third one I unlock the front stair door and we clatter down to the patients' cafeteria.

I park in the doorway to regulate the flow of pushing, shoving women.

"Annie Mons, get your tray."

"Can't I just wait here?"

"Get your tray!"

"I don't need any breakfast. I'll just________"

"Annie Mons!!"

She gets her tray and goes down the line.

When they have almost finished eating I begin gathering up the spoons which are carefully counted before the patients leave the Cafeteria. When all are found we go back to the ward.

I pace the halls locking and unlocking utility room, trash room, linen room, clothes room, janitor closets, and dormitories. Eventually everyone has her materials for work and then I wait in the office for the supervisor, who sends me to breakfast.

After breakfast we see that the work is finished and all dormitories and single rooms locked. I'll probably take ten or fifteen girls to O.T. (Occupational therapy) to work in the vegetable room where patients prepare vegetables for cooking.)

Several hours a day may be spent watching, changing socks, mopping up the messes, changing dresses, combing hair or just sitting.

A skinny little old lady comes nimbly to my side. "Do your teeth come out at night like the stars?" she trots away but is soon back. Leaning over, with hand to the mouth, she announces, "Cromwell," and is on her way again.

If the day is nice we spend an hour or two on the lawn after dinner.

Since I came on at six I'm through at four, the hour the patients go to their supper. I either eat then or go to my room for a snooze and eat later, provided that I awake in time.

August 18—Everybody's leaving! It seems strange to think that I've worked an entire summer in a mental hospital, of all places. A few girls are staying. Several are joining the regular relief unit and will be taking relief courses. The rest of us are either going home or on to school.

Tonight Brother Paul Erb was here and preached for us. He gave us soul food.

I believe that during a summer here one gets the feel of C.P.S. Its problems and opportunities become more real. One thing you miss after so long a time is regular Sunday morning sermons.

I'm sleepy. We've been up until almost twelve every night this week. It's a part of bidding the place good bye.

August 22—No keys, no clothes, no room, no job—guess I'll leave. Good bye, Ypsi. All of this has certainly been a horizon-broadening experience!

VISIT C.P.S. CAMPS

NEW YORK—Ninety-eight Protestant ministers and laymen representing fourteen different denominations are currently engaged in a program of visitation to Civilian Public Service Camps and special units. Sponsored by the Committee on the Conscientious Objector of the Federal Council of Churches, the visitation provides a continuing ministry of counseling and fellowship to the 7,300 men carrying on civilian wartime service in 120 projects in all parts of the country, in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

According to Dr. Walter W. Van Kirk, Executive Secretary of the Committee, it is expected that the closer fellowship fostered by the visitation program will facilitate the assimilation of demobilized C.O.'s into the life and service of the communities of which they are members.

The emphasis is not on preaching, Dr. Van Kirk said, but on living and working with the men and understanding their basic problems. Visitors work with the men on projects, lead informal group discussions, counsel with individuals, and occasionally address the entire group in a formal session. The length of the visits varies from one to four days. Kits of materials prepared by the various departments and commissions of the Federal Council are provided for each visitor.

Since the beginning of the campaign in July, Dr. Van Kirk reported, thirty-five visitors have been in touch with forty units, and report many expressions of appreciation for this practical evidence of interest on the part of the churches in their men in C.P.S.

IN MEMORIAM

MISS ELIZABETH KINSINGER of Collinsville, Ohio, was born September 1, 1864, and died October 17, 1944. An invalid for many years she was always cheerful and patient. She leaves to mourn her loss, a brother Samuel and a sister Johanna, with whom she made her home, and another sister, Mrs. Unzicker of Collinsville, Ohio.

KATHARINE REGIER, daughter of Peter and Sara Schroeder Unruh, was born November 5, 1864, in Nickolaidorf, South Russia. In 1874 she migrated with her parents to McPherson County, Kansas. Here she enjoyed a few more years of Christian schooling under her brother-in-law, Peter Balzer. She was baptized by Elder Jacob Buller and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. Later she joined the West Zion Church, Moundridge, and then later the Tabor Church. In 1885 she married David J. Regier, with whom she lived for thirty-six years. She is mourned by the following children: John D. and Paul G. of Moundridge, Herbert of Hillsboro, Mrs. J. A. Heidebrecht, Watova, Oklahoma, Mrs. C. D. Epp, York, Nebraska, and Mrs. W. V. Lehrman, Newton.

ELISABETH M. REUSSER, daughter of Daniel and Elisabeth Krehbiel, was born at Franklin, Lee County, Iowa, November 5, 1873. In 1876 the family moved to a farm near Moundridge, Kansas. In 1889 she was baptized and received into the First Mennonite Church of Christian. She was united in wedlock to Samuel Reusser in 1896. They made their home on a farm near Moundridge. With the exception of four years in Oklahoma, this was her home until death. She passed away on November 13, 1944, and is mourned by her husband, four daughters, three sons, nine grandchildren, and two sisters.

MARIA KREHBIEL, daughter of Rev. Peter M. and Fannie Preheim Krehbiel, was born on March 25, 1864, in Russia. She with her parents migrated to Kansas in 1874. In 1878 she was baptized by Rev. Jacob Stucky in the Hopefield Mennonite Church, near Moundridge. In 1885 she was united in marriage to Joseph Krehbiel. They made their home on a farm near Moundridge. Her husband died in 1936, and she passed away October 31, 1944. She is mourned by one son, Edward, two brothers Jacob and Solomon, one sister Anna, seven grandchildren, and five great grandchildren.

GERMAN BOOKS FOR PARAGUAY

The Mennonite Central Committee is planning to send another shipment of German books to Paraguay. Friends are invited to contribute those German books which they are no longer using. The books should be in our hands before December 15, and may be brought or sent to The Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, The Herald Book Store, Newton Kansas, The Mennonite Historical Library, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas, and The Mennonite Brethren Publishing House, Hillsboro, Kansas. We would greatly appreciate receiving large numbers of Gesangbuch mit Noten from churches that are no longer using it. Most appreciated would be financial contributions in order to buy a few hundred copies of the newly published Canadian Gesangbuch mit Noten. The special price of this book is $1.50 per copy. Financial contributions should be made to The Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, designating the purpose of the contribution. Thank you for your cooperation.

RELIEF

Two Workers Reach Destination in Middle East

Two additional Mennonite relief workers, S. Floyd Pannabecker and Henry Detwiler, have arrived in the Egypt area. According to the cable received they arrived in Cairo on November 10. They left the Akron Headquarters the first week in October.

New Appointees for Middle East

Marie Brunk, Washington, D. C., who has been engaged in research and writing, and Barbara Zuercher, Dalton, Ohio, a graduate in religious education, have been appointed to serve as Mennonite relief workers in the Middle East.

Educational Program at Refugee Camp

Samuel Yoder, directing the educational program at the El Shatt camp in Egypt, relates his experiences in a recent letter:

"Just now I am pushing the making of desks for the school tents. They are greatly needed. Our work shops make them out of 2 x 4's (what we can get) and orange crating. I am also introducing table tennis and horseshoe pitching . . . We are in great need of nature magazines and pictures; we get mostly war propaganda materials. Jugoslav printed matter is very scarce, and what we do get is not of good content, I fear. Just today, I got a shipment of gospels and a few New Testaments in Jugoslav from the British and Foreign Bible Society. But they are to be distributed through the padre, and I doubt that he will welcome them. I shall see what I can do about it in the morning. These folks are very nearly 100 per cent Roman Catholic."

Arrival of Relief Clothing in Egypt Heartening

Nancy Hernley writes that the arrival of the ten tons of clothing from the Akron Collection Center not only resulted in relieving the needs for clothing among the refugees but also boosted the morale of the relief workers. In the Tolumbat camp hospital, where Sister Hernley and Dr. Richard Yoder are working, the shipment supplied much needed gowns, dresses, baby clothing and other items. Dr. Yoder, according to this letter, has now taken over the baby clinic and milk station when the Yugoslav doctor was suddenly granted permission to leave for America.

Unit in Mississippi to Open

Authorization has been received for the opening of a camp under Mennonite administration at Biloxi, Mississippi. The project will be in public health service consisting of sanitary measures for the eradication of hookworm. Mennonite men have been serving for a bit over a year in a similar project t Mulberry, Florida. The unit at Biloxi will begin with a strength of twenty-five men.

Academic Credit in CPS

An arrangement whereby CPS men might secure college and high school credit for pursuing educa-onal work while in camp has been proposed for uite some time and has finally been completed. ourses will be offered and evaluated through a entral committee composed of faculty members rom Mennonite and Brethren in Christ schools. oy Umble, educational director at Denison camp, as been appointed to act as liaison between this ommittee and the men in camps and units. While his plan will make academic credit possible for CPS en, it will also establish a closer connection be-ween the church schools and camps.

PS Briefs

The men at the Mulberry, Florida Unit celebrated cently the installation by CPS of the one-thou-nth sanitory privy in Polk County. This nount of work was done in approximately a 13-onth period of time. It provided sanitary sewage sposal for about 5,000 people and eliminated con-lerable hookworm contamination.

Small relief-training classes have been organized the Farnhurst, Delaware, and Staunton, Virginia, spital units and at the Hill City, South Dakota mp. Courses and work are planned by the Relief search Section at the Akron Office. M. C. C. adquarters, Akron, Pennsylvania.

JOTTINGS

Winton, California: Rev. P. K. Regier was the est speaker at our Annual Harvest and Mission stival, October 22. We served a potluck dinner the hall. The offering amounted to $114. Bro-r Cor. C. Siemens died October 28. Miss Agan-a Fast, who is visiting the camps in California, s with us November 12. In the morning she told about our mission work in China for the past ty years, and in the evening she showed pictures. evening offering for China was $50.

nmanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles: This rch is participating in religious education classes nsored by the Evangelical Released-Time Educa-, Inc. Some classes are held in the Immanuel rch Building.

irst Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, sas: On Sunday evening October 15, Rev. J. N. Hoeppner of Altoona, Manitoba, gave an address to our Christian Endeavor Society on the subject, "Running the Heavenly Race," using as the basis of the discussion, I Cor. 9:24-26. It was a very good message. Rev. Hoeppner and two other fellow ministers came from Manitoba to consult with the Executive Committee of our Board of Foreign Missions concerning their mission project in Mexico. They would like to have our Conference take part in that work. So far the work is small and is being carried on by the large Bergtal Mennonite Church of southern Manitoba of which those brethren are pastors.—Rev. P. P. Wedel in a letter to the men in service.

—The address of Brother and Sister George Neufeld when they reach their destination in Africa will be Charlesville, Kasai District, Congo Belge, Africa.

—The First Mennonite Church, Pretty Prairie, Kans. The union revival meetings held at Pretty Prairie, conducted by Rev. John R. Dick of the Grace Bible Institute of Omaha, Nebraska came to a close October 22. These meetings were sponsored by the First Mennonite, the Presbyterian, and the Methodist churches. Dr. G. P. Schultz, missionary and evangelist, of Chicago conducted evangelistic meetings at the First Mennonite Church from October 29 to November 12. These Bible studies and services conducted in the church and community have been a source of the greatest blessings for those who know the Lord and Saviour. To those that know him not this certainly has been a challenge to accept Him and try Him and experience for themselves the sufficiency of His Grace for time and eternity. Rev. P. P. Tschetter officiated at the ordination of John W. Boehr into the ministry at the Ransom Mennonite Church, Ransom, Kansas, November 5. The church canning committe reported that 1,317 quarts of fruit and vegetables were canned for C.P.S. this fall. Missionary-elect to South America, Gerald Stucky, is scheduled to be in our midst Sunday, November 26.—Sam Schrag, Corr.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

The Second Quarterly Conference was well attended in the Upper Milford Church, November 6th. Rev. Freeman H. Swartz gave a paper on "William Penn and William Rittenhouse." The evening devotions were in charge of the Rev. Walter Gering of Moundridge, Kansas, who had just returned from Puerto Rico. The evening message was given by the Rev. M. C. Lehman, of the Mennonite Central Committee.

Bethany, Quakertown—We had the rich experience of having Rev. H. E. Nunemaker, pastor of Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa, speak to us Tuesday evening, November 7. He has visited C. P. S. camps and hospital units in the East and is visiting the churches of the Swamp Charge. After giving some experiences he had at the camps and units he had a real good Bible study in Acts, chapters one and two. We observed the tenth anniversary of our pastor's service in the charge with a series of meetings November 12 to 24, at which time the Rev. Delbert Welty of the Altoona Mennonite Church was the speaker. The General

Topic for the meetings was, "O Lord Revive Thy Work."—Martin S. Stoneback, Corr.

Grace, Lansdale—The Ladies Aid Society sponsored a trip to Akron, Pa., delivering some clothing for relief abroad and doing some sewing before they returned.

Second Church, Phila.—The Rev. H. E. Nunemaker delivered the messages Sunday evening, November 8. This was a joint service with the First Church of Philadelphia. Mrs. Henry Buller, a Hebrew Christian, will speak on Mennonite Relief work in Europe, Sunday, December 3.

Springfield—The Women's Missionary Society will have charge of the Annual Thank-Offering Service, Sunday morning, November 26. Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, Missionary to China and at present with the Mennonite Central Committee, will give the message.

East Swamp—Dorothy Landis, is circulation manager of Grace Gleanings, the student paper at at Grace Bible Institute. Rev. Walter Gering, pastor of the Eden Mennonite Church of Moundridge, Kansas, spoke in the church Wednesday evening, November 8.

Fairfield—A dedication service for the Mennonite Hymnary was held October 29. The Rev. J. N. Smucker, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio, was the speaker at the special meetings, October 30 and 31. Recently 386 quarts of fruits canned by the ladies of the church and the ladies of the Bethel Church, were taken to Akron. The church also contributed 216 pounds of used clothing for War Suffers' Relief.

Hereford Bally—The members of the Hereford Mennonite Church donated $46.00 to the M.C.C. to purchase single sheets to be sent to the La Plata Hospital in Puerto Rico where Mr. and Mrs. Richard Weaver are workers. Mrs. Weaver is better known as Margaret Shelly, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Elwood Shelly, and a member of our church.

—Mae Latshaw, Corr.

Zion, Souderton—The congregation extends sympathy to the Warren Zeigler family in the death of their son, Robert, who was killed in France on October 19. (The Conference also extends sympathy) N. The Rev. Harvey E. Nunnemaker delivered the message November 12.

Phila., First—Rev. Nunnemaker delivered the message Sunday, November 5. The needle Work Guild for the three Mennonite Churches reported having rceived twenty-seven garments and $160.25.

First, Allentown—The Rev. Walter Gering delivered the mesage on Sunday evening, November 5. Sunday evening November 12, Mr. J. Herbert Fretz, student at Westminister Seminary, Philadelphia, delivered the message in the absence of the pastor who was the speaker at the Missionary Day services at Kitchner, Ontario.

Upper Milford, Zionsville—The Rev. Walter Gering delivered the message on Sunday afternoon, November 5. During the Sunday School period, Mr. James Downing (colored) of Green Lane, in charge of the University of Pennsylvania boys camp, spoke on the Race Problem. He was accompanied by another friend who sang several selections which were greatly appreciated. November 12, Dr. Harvey R. Bauman, preached in the absence of the pastor who was at Kitchner, Ontario.

How Shall My Soul Receive Thee?

By Joanna S. Andres

Sunday, December the third, marked the beginning of the Advent season. Four Sundays are included in this season that leads to holy Christmas day. These weeks were once set aside by Christendom as a time of preparation for the worship of the Christ who once emptied Himself and became poor for our sakes that we through His poverty, might become rich. Many customs have through the years, woven themselves into these Advent weeks. We that have not inherited these customs by birth, but have adopted them by choice, would retain them, for our hearts have been richly blessed by them and, above all, blessed through the keeping of the Advent. It is apparent, however, that the keeping of the Advent is not stressed in our homes as once it was. The rush of our present-day living, which is able to rob us of so much that is of soul value, seems to be stretching out its hand to rob us of the joys that the Advent can bring. Instead of allowing these joys to be taken from us, why not, rather, become promoters of these joys. If in our homes we would return to old customs surrounding these days, if in these days we would allow our hearts to be prepared in quietness for the commemoration of the holy Gift on Christmas day, certainly our worship at the manger would come much nearer to the worship of the humble shepherds around the new-born Babe of Bethlehem.

The Advent season, like the Lenten period, should be set aside for the spirit-life. If it is to be for this, then it is certain that these days must become days of quietness for our homes and hearts. To gain a stillness is a problem in our modern mode of living. How strange that we should put forth so little effort to attain a quietness for our life when we know how rich the soul becomes if it is allowed to feast at the laden table of the riches of love in Christ.

It is only that I wish some other heart the joys of an Advent, that I draw back the curtain from the window of our home. As I do so, will you remember that what we want to do is not always accomplished, that children often change the patterned plans within a home and that life in its daily living weaves, at times, its unexpected threads upon our looms.

* *

It is Advent Eve the Saturday night before the first Advent Sunday. The other members of the family have gone to rest. Perhaps the children will dream of the joys that the morning will bring. It will not bring them gifts—it will bring the joyous notes of the first Christmas carols and hymns. From that morning they shall echo and re-echo through our home until, at last, we sing them at His manger bed. It shall bring the children the thrill of the first Christmas decorations: the transparency of the Nativity lighted in its place; candles glowing from among cedar branches, and angels in adoration. It shall bring them also the first Christmas cookies at the breakfast table, in the center of which shall be once more, the little Advent house with its shutters tightly closed. O what joy to open a window each day and to find in its lighted pane an Advent verse—a thought for the heart through the day. And then, the supreme joy to open, at last, its double door on Christmas morning and find there the Babe, soft bedded in the manger. How little it takes, at times, to set our hearts aglow with love for Him and, at times . . .? Even the Son of God!—The manger and—The Cross!

It is Advent Eve. A quietness descends upon our home—a delicious quietness for which the heart had longed through past busy days. I walk through the rooms. The smell of freshly starched curtains, of cookies just baked, and floors newly waxed, is with me everywhere. A strange happiness stirs in me—the happiness of satisfaction in work completed. I wonder, having been made in His image, whether a bit of that same satisfaction is now mine which, in a fuller measure, once moved the Heart of God to say "it is good" as He viewed His day's work. My eyes lift. Simply, so simply my heart says to Him, "Here am I!" How precious are those moments, so rare in our lives, when the heart and mind, yea, even the hands grow still in a pause—when we arrive, at last, at the feet of the One who waits so long for our coming! I am reminded of that day when, feeling the absence of a friend keenly, I called our small son to me, seeking in him a bit of companionship. "Shall I make a picture for you?" was his answer to my call. Is this not the very same answer we give our Lord when He nears Himself to us? Our Christian service to Him takes on, too readily, the form of activity instead of companionship and worship.

It was a joy to set with care the few items that would constantly remind us that it was Advent time. This completed, I paused at the table where lay the Christmas gift's for other hearts, wrapped and ready for the postman. There also lay the cards that would go out to scatter warmth and gladness. These also were ready for the mail. Once more, in thought, I checked over the gifts for our own family—some lay waiting upstairs and some, for safer keeping were stored in the home of a relative. "We are ready." The words drifted into stillness. A peace descended to the heart. I knelt to thank the Giver and plead that through the days till Christmas and always, always, His presence would remain to keep the peace within, to "bless us everyone."

Grace Crowell has so beautifully said:

"I shall attend to my errands of love
Early this year,
So that the brief days before Christmas
May be unhampered and clear
Of the fever of hurry.
The breathless rushing that I
Have known in the past
Shall not possess me.
I shall be calm in my soul
And ready at last for Christmas."

May we, too, accomplish our errands of love for one another early this year, that through Advent days our love may center in Him, that through loving we may present to the Christ, the gift of our heart's true worship on Christmas day.

Our Ministry of Education

Thoughtful and Devoted Teachers

It is an encouraging privilege to visit schools in which one finds thoughtful and devoted teachers. They give information to their students, and they do more. They inspire devoted search for the Truth.

Schools, like human beings, have individual characteristics. On the other hand, they are alike in the things that really matter. Two things that really matter are thoughtfulness and devotion. These are needed in all walks of life and should be revealed as such needs in the home, the school, and the church. Whether and how they are revealed depends on the kind of teaching which is found in the home, the school, and the church.

As one visits schools—not merely looks at them in passing—one is gratified to find individual men and women who go the "second mile" in preparing the young people, entrusted to them, for life. Whether they teach in one department or division of the school or another is a matter of secondary concern. The thing that matters is that they do such a wonderful job of preparing youth to meet life in a forthright and wholesome way. They do something to young people which will help these to meet their opportunity-responsibilities in life greatly.

"As a man thinketh in his heart so is he becoming" is true. It is also true that he influences others to become like him. This fact is of much importance in selecting a school for further preparation. You will forget most of the things your teachers say to you but you will retain what they do to you. For that reason it is important that one work with, as well as under, the kind of people who are worth following. It is more important that one has teachers who help one to become the kind of man or woman that God wants one to be than it is to have teachers who lead one to express one's self in certain ways.

It is interesting to find men and women who definitely influence their students toward a deeper understanding of the principles of Jesus, although the names of the courses they teach would not suggest that they were necessarily interested in religion. Their approach is not that of subtle propaganda. It is a case of really good teaching.

It is a pleasure to find teachers in the department or division of Science commending teachers of subjects in the field of Christian Religion for sending them such dependable students. It is equally gratifying to find teachers in the field of Christian Religion expressing their appreciation about the work of teachers in other fields for leading young men and women into a deeper and clearer understanding of true devotion and of clear thinking.

Do not expect all schools to have only teachers of that kind. That is expecting too much of the world today. Every Christian school, however, may rightfully be expected to have a growing number of such teachers. They are invaluable to the students who go to such schools and the public can never repay them for the good they do. Too often the public is not trying to fulfill even a responsible part of its duty to such teachers, let alone trying to repay them for valuable contributions made to youth. That leads to wrong attitudes. Whom we neglect we chide!

We are told repeatedly that Jesus "prayed." Once it was all night. The "leaders" of His day neglected Him to the point of crucifixion. Nevertheless He taught the world thoughtfulness and devotion for every walk of life.

Peacetime Conscription

Although large and important groups in America re opposed to the adoption of peacetime conscription ow, there is a subtle movement for its adoption in he near future. When the President touched upon his matter in a recent press conference the Chicago un reported on it as follows: "The President, review-ng the subject at a news conference, carefully re-rained from using the word 'military' in connection ith the year's service he advocates for all young en after peace. But there was no doubt in the inds of any of his listeners that what he was talk-ng about was military training." When reminded ow strongly the people reacted against proposed onscription after the last war, the President made lear that he intended to push for conscription now.
rguments that will eventually, perhaps, convince any are being offered by other strong voices. General eorge C. Marshall states that "A large standing rmy has no place among the institutions of a modern emocratic state," and advocates in its place the con-cription of youth. Secretary Stimson argues, "We ust not accept the philosophy that this war will d all wars and that there will never again be a ed to resort to arms. I strongly urge that this untry adopt universal military service as a certain eans of preparing for war and a very good means of oiding war." The idea of more war and more pre-ration for war has been loosed. We are again eing a repitition of those slow-moving steps that d us into this war. Opposed to this movement are ch groups as: the railroad brotherhoods, the Ameri-n Federation of Labor, the National Congress of rents and Teachers, The National Commission of ristian Higher Education of the Association of nerican Colleges, The United States Student Asmbly, The Presbyterian General Assembly, The ited Council of Church Women, The Northern ptist Convention, The Annual Conference of the urch of the Brethren, The General Conference of Methodist Church, The United Lutheran Church America, The International Convention of the sciples of Christ, Catholic groups, the Federal uncil of Churches, The Illinois State Federation of bor, The Board of Trustees of the National Child bor Committee, The Fellowship of Reconciliation, Y.W.C.A. Public Affairs Committee, and The neral Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed urch. All of the foregoing bodies are opposed to adoption of peacetime conscription now, and a dly number of them are against conscription at any
e. It seems that hearings on peacetime conscriphave already been postponed because of the opition to conscription. But that does not at all mean that the proponents of conscription are giving up. They are probably repolishing their technique for a persistent push. What if conscription comes? Will Mennonite youth be stronger or weaker in regard to it than to the conscription for this war? What special strain will be put upon Mennonite youth by the public schools and the chances for a livelihood? Has the Mennonite Church any plans for helping its youth in the face of peacetime conscription? It is expected that the M.C.C. will continue the C.P.S. set-up if peace-time conscription comes. But will that be enough? Will not the Mennonite Church have to launch out on a very strong program of Mennonite schooling and mutual aid? Are there among us certain weaknesses which would become glaringly obvious under peacetime conscription and which ought to be faced and overcome now? If so, what are they? In times past conscription set Mennonites to migrating. How should and can they meet conscription if it comes in our day?

An Emphasis upon Compassion and Guidance

Clinical psychologists of today are stressing the importance of compassion in the healing of wrecked lives. They do not denounce, criticize, blame, or shame. They are not shocked. They seek to understand and guide. Those who are sick of mind, whose emotions are all tangled up, and whose lives are full of unlovely traits can go to such a psychologist and pour out their whole story without the least fear of any expression of blame or shame. These men of spiritual gentleness seek to understand the cause of the wrong conduct and then free the individual from that which possesses him. In their emphasis upon compassion, they follow the method of Jesus, for He is the most compassionate figure of all time. "But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd." It was not the sheep's choice to be faint with hunger and thirst and devoid of guidance. It was not their desire to be in this distressing condition. They needed someone to care for them, to lead them out of their misery. Jesus cared. He came to them as The Way. He came not to condemn and judge, but to save. People were lost in the darkness; they did not know which way to go to reach their goal. Christ did not censure them for being lost. He was sorry for them and came to them as the Light of the World. Many people today are lost in darkness and in need. They are troubled. They do not have the answer to their inner turmoil. They want some way out to abundant living. They do not want threatenings and tirades

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

and denunciation. They long to have someone care for them and guide them out of their darkness of thought and feeling. Not infrequently is there a lack of this compassion among Christians. Non-Christians yearn for it and are disappointed. Christians look for it in fellow-Christians and find it missing. As in days of long ago it can be said today "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few." But those lacking compassion can't be blamed. They too hunger and suffer frustration. Verily there is a great need for more people with the compassion of Christ. "Pray ye therfore the Lord of the harvest, that he wil send forth labourers into his harvest." How imperative it is that those who have The Light share it and live so that others will feel welcome to seek it.

Christmas Programs

By Christine Miller

So you are hard at work on the Christmas program for your church and Sunday School? Is it to be Christ-centered or child centered?

The way of least resistance is to use a cut and dried program with a series of unrelated recitations, songs, dialogues etc. Such a program is gratifying to the parents if their children do well, but does it draw our attention to the Christ? And what does it do for the children?

The worthwhile program is one in which performers and audience participate together in the worship of Jesus Christ, with the emphasis upon Him and the real meaning of Christmas, not upon the so-called cuteness, ability or talent of individual children.

Unless the child experiences the awe and wonder and nearness of Jesus, and realizes that He came into the world as God's greatest gift that we might be saved and have eternal life, the program has missed the mark and we have missed a great opportunity to reach the hearts of young and old alike at a time when they are peculiarly tender.

One of the ways to accomplish this is to have a central theme around which to build the whole program, an abundance of material easily obtainable from the many religious publishing houses, a prayerful heart, and a willing mind. Lots of material is necessary in order to cull out that which meets the needs of your particular theme and group. Sometimes a story lends itself admirably to dramatization and the weaving in of the Christmas story. Prepare the program with the thought of its taking a minimum of practice, and simplicity in staging. Frayed nerves in teachers and children are not conducive to the Christmas spirit. And a program does not have to be lengthy to be good.

These suggestions are drawn from the writer's experience with small groups but the principles may be applied to larger groups and to departmental programs as well.

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

We are told that European church men are surprised about two things when they come to America. One surprise is the large number of religious denominations they find here, and the other is the discovery that we in America are not at all woried about these many religious divisions. There are over 250 separate denominations according to the 1936 Federal Government Census. Mennonites are not the only divided group. Methodists, Baptists, and Lutherans all have twenty or more separate divisions.

Mennonite Divisions

The Mennonites with their seventeen branches seem to be more divided than other groups because of thei small total number. The size of the smallest group i about 200 and the largest group has a membership o less than 50,000. The differences are acounted fo by a variety of causes: different places of settlement different periods of migration, outside influences caus ing splits, the desire of ambitious men for places o leadership, and sharp difference of opinion on custom and religious beliefs. Our concern here is not with discussion of the causes of our church differences no with an evaluation of whether the divisions have bee justified. The concern here is with our attitude towar the church divisions as they now exist.

Attitudes

What is needed today is an attitude of respec toward those groups which differ from our own wheth er within or without the Mennonite fold. Many peopl think it is a tragedy that Mennonites are divided Perhaps, that is unfortunate, but the still greate tragedy is the attitudes of disrespect and suspicio that have characterized the various groups in th past. Let us hope that the work of the Mennonit Central Committee points toward a new day. It ha demonstrated that it is possible for various Menno nite groups to respect religious beliefs and practice without necessarily agreeing with them or approvin them. The various groups are working harmoniousl together without giving up any of their own belief or practices. Mennonites, of all people, have suffere greatly at the hands of those who could not tolerat differences. They ought, therefore, to appreciate an practice the Christian virtue of toleration, kindnes and respect for those who hold views different fro their own.

Whence Camest Thou? Whither Wilt Thou Go?

Coming to the Prairies

By Cornelius Krahn

"Whence camest thou? Whither wilt thou go?", the ngel of the Lord asked Hagar, Sarah's hand maid. hese are the words which we would like to ask ourlves after having lived in the prairie states for venty years. "Whence camest thou?" We may nswer, "From the Molotschna, the Old Colony, ussia, etc." We may continue by asking, "Why did r grandparents leave those places?" Again various nswers may be given. Some may say because of ligious freedom, peace principles, or economic presre. These and other answers are correct. But let s see whether we cannot find a deeper and all incluse answer to this question. Which is the one chief ason that made and makes our people migrate from untry to country.

I.

This is the concept of the ideal Christian church held by the Mennonites. Christ, the founder of s church, called her out of a world of sin and doom. his had a different implication for Menno Simons d other leaders than for the state churches of that y. For them the mere factor of birth and automatic fant batism made each person a member of society d church. Not so among the Anabaptists. They ined the congregation of regenerated persons volunrily after they had shone forth fruits of the new rth. This kind of a congregation, unknown to that e, became very dear to our forefathers. Because this Scriptural concept of the congregation, and the nsequent persecution of the Anabaptists, they develed a peculiar attitude toward the religious, social, onomic, political, and other functions of the world ound them. They were in, but not of, the world.

This congregation of "called out" believers was ghly active and aggressive. They preached and ved the Gospel of Christ wherever they were. Each e was a full time evangelist even though he probly broadcasted the seed on the fields of the swampy istula Delta, the steepes of the Ukraine, and the airies of America. It was this compact totality and tegrated way of life flowing out of the concept of e New Testament congregation that was the impet to migrate from country to country whenever the urch was endangered.

II.

In Russia the church tried to fulfill its mission by tablishing Christian comunities to serve as examples the surrounding world. Outstanding spiritual, edutional, and agricultural leaders prevented the isoted settlements from becoming stagnant. But when e Russian government attempted to make them an tegral part of its nation, their cultural and religious dependence seemed to be in danger. Again world d state interfered with the development of the congregation of Christ. As in previous times, a Moses pointed with his staff to foreign countries offering possibilities which seemed to be lost in the home country. Such a man was Cornelius Jansen of Berdyansk, a German consul with wide experience and contacts, and a faithful member of the local Mennonite Church. Bernhard Warkentin, a young and enthusiastic pioneer, came to this country in 1872 and reported favorable findings. Twelve delegates followed and traveled extensively along the frontier from Manitoba to Mexico to investigate the possibilities for the establishment of new congregations and communities. They also went to the capitals of the countries and asked for permission to settle in large compact homogeneous communities consisting of a number of villages with their own parochial schools and for exemption from military service. This they thought necessary to establish a Christian community which could be a witness to the world. The Canadian government granted the requests. President Grant assured the delegates that the United States would not be involved in a war for at least fifty years, and that definite commitments could not be given without action by Congress. The matters were debated in Congress but no bill was passed. Hamilton Fish, Secretary of State, gave some delegates a signed and sealed copy of the Public Laws of previous sessions of Congress which exempted conscientious objectors from military service, granting them an alternative service.

III.

At this time the situation was as follows: Canada granted the Mennonites all the rights which they had been enjoying in Russia up to that time. In Russia they had had their own communities and schools but were expected to do alternative service even in peace time. The United States gave little hope for large compact communities but alternative service was not required except in time of war. One-third of the Mennonites of Russia chose to migrate to Canada and the United States. The most "progressive" element remained in Russia, the most conservative went to Canada, and the moderate groups came to the United States. Letters preserved from those days reveal that the pioneers of the prairies often longed for their well-established homes on the steppes. But considering their achievements here, with the help of the Lord, and the complete destruction of their communities in the Ukraine, we, after seventy years in the prairies, wholeheartedly join the Psalmist in his prayer: "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy; And gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the south. They wandered in the wilderness in a solitary way; they found no city to dwell in. Hungry and thirsty their soul fainted in them. Then they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses. And he led them forth by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation. Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" (Psalm 107)

INDIA-GRAMS

We awaited the arrival of the one mail train which crosses this web-continent at a station almost mid-way betwen the two coasts. Anxious were we to find a seat during these difficult times. Fortunately, Inter-Class between Third and Second, was relatively not jammed, and passengers graciously and cordially provided sitting space.

There sat a most cordial young man, fair of skin. He was a Pharisee, an engineer of a sub-marine destroyer that was scheduled to leave port, somewhere. Next to me sat two shrewd-looking, middle-aged business men, Hindoos, who operated ginning and cotton mills. Beyond them sat two Chinese, young business men from a great city of the land. A railway ticket inspector, a Sikh, tall, bearded, commanding, entered our compartment to examine our tickets. A few Maharastras were also in this compartment,—and two Mennonite missionaries, from Drug and Janjgir. This is a sample of India today—Pharisee, Hindoo, Sikh, Chinese, Moslem, military, commercial, civilian, all rubbing shoulders as never before.

"When He saw the multitudes, He was moved with compassion" Matt. 9:36. What are the multitudes that Jesus sees from His throne in glory? Eight hundred million pagans in the entire world, including so-called Christian lands; two hundred Moslems, two hundred and sixty million Hindoos, etc."

D. L. Moody.

For years the missionaries in India have been paying high rents for their meager suites in the Himalaya Mountains during the weeks of the intense tropical hot season . . . Therefore, when opportunity presented itself to buy a Missionary Rest Home, they acted unitedly and agreed to purchase it. They considered that it would be better to put their rent into the purchase price than into some one else's pocket. Lo, and behold, some very kind friends from America have come forward and have supplied the price.

The result of all this is that we now have a house with seven suites, known as Ellengowan, in Landour, Mussoori U. P. India. Although it is not all that is to be desired, it will serve as

(a) a home where missionaries with children may nurture for a few weeks each year the precious life of their children in the atmosphere of a home;

(b) a home for all missionaries, young and old, needing rest and change;

(c) a home for new missionary language school students, during part of their language study days.

Landour is famous as a place of spiritual, physical, mental refreshing. The Kellogg Memorial Church is a refreshing center of Christian worship. Its Adult Bible Class is widely known over North India for its power. Those who desire seats for worship. or Bible Class, must be present BEFORE the appointed hour, or be shut out, or stand. The North India Language School, providing arrangements for private and class study of Hindi, Urdu, and the Gujerati Languages, is also housed in the same building. Nearby is another school for the study of the Christian approach to the Moslem faith. The Community Hospital, always filled to overflowing, abundantly serves the missionaries of all over North India. Finally, there is the Woodstock School for Missionary Children, one of the very best in Southeastern Asia.

Ellengowan is directly across the mountain path from the Kellogg Church. Thus it makes a most excellently situated rest home. Elderly missionaries will not find hill climbing too strenuous, as the church, post office, and shops are all on its level.

We praise God that finally we have this Missionary Rest Home in the Himalaya Mountains. While African missionaries normally have to return to the home land every three or four years at the most, and American soldiers are said to be able to stand India only two years, some of us feel assured that the grace of God through the physical, mental, and spiritual and psychical refreshing of the few weeks every year in this and similar hill stations enables us to stay from six to eight years amidst most unfavorable climatic circumstances for those born in the North Temperate Zone.

BROTHER AND SISTER GEORGE NEUFELD WRITE

Dear friends:

"Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in in him, and He shall bring it to pass." Psalm 37:5. Again we come to the realization that the hand of the Lord is mighty and that He rules all our actions.

It was our plan to sail for Africa during the middle of the year but the Lord saw fit to detain us until His own time was ripe for such a journey. Now rather suddenly the doors are opening, and He is bringing to pass what we committed to Him.

It is with mingled feelings that we leave our country and loved ones but we are conscious that we are in God's hands and we feel His nearness as we look forward to the time when we shall be able to serve Him in Africa. We pray that we might be found worthy of the work to which He has called us. We trust Him to bring us safely to the field, and we covet your prayers for the long journey and the work that He has entrusted to us.

Yours for the lost in Africa,
Mr. and Mrs. George B. Neufeld

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

On July 23rd we observed our fourteenth anniver-ary. On this date we paused for a moment, look-d back, praised God for His kindness to us in the ast, confessed our shortcomings and rededicated urselves to this noble work.

It would be too lengthy to describe in detail the evelopment of our work here, but we would like repeat once more that the Lord has been very ind to us, blessing the development of our work. his does not imply that disappointments and fail-res have been spared us, but "We know that to em that love God all things work together for ood."

It has always been our deepest desire to see the piritual needs around us, to find the open doors, nd to plan our work rationally so as to accomplish ith our limited strength a maximum of work. his was necessitated by the fact that the different anches of our work—girls' home, congregation, and ission—were all coordinated and supervised by e worker.

The Girls' Home was opened January 28, 1931, an apartment house, where we stayed for about ven months till we were able to rent a more ap-opriate house yet which was too small to accom-odate our family and the Home. The number grew pidly until we reached the peak of 110 girls during e depression. The Church cooperated with the rls' Home paying the rent of $45.00 while the Con-rence paid the minister, who also served the con-egation. In 1941 the present Home was purchased the Conference. It is a very suitable house. With e war the number of girls has declined and they e, instead of doing domestic work, employed in ferent industries. Their hours are different from at they used to be, but we still have the Thurs-y (Bible Study) meetings regularly. What the uation will be after the war we cannot tell, but is possible that there will be another influx and Home will have its proper place and share in city mission work.

Congregation Organized

he congregation was organized on January 26, 2. It was a small nucleus of fifteen families l some single members. We saw the importance having an organized congregation for the achieve-nt of our aims. This nucleus took the initiative and the work progressed favorably. It became responsible for the financial up-keep of the work. Had our aim been to win and organize just the members of the churches of the General Conference it would have been a comparatively easy task, but we aimed higher. In this city live dozens of poor, destitute families coming from the Old Colony and Bergtal Churches, also from churches of our Conference who have lost their touch with their respective congregations entirely. We considered it our duty not to neglect these people, but to give them the right leadership. This was achieved through house-visitations, personal work, Sunday School, regular Sunday services, and special services at the Pleasant Hill Mission Hall, and in private homes. At present I am in contact with over one hundred families. Some of them joined our church, others became good church-goers, and some remained undecided. It will be our endeavor to continue the winning of these people and others for Christ and His church. The growth of our congregation to a membership of one hundred eighty-five and the Sunday School to 193 children, is due to the success we had among the parents and children. If it would not sound like boasting we could say, that we have the door to the hearts of many. Yes, "Not unto us, O LORD, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory."

Though the congregation increases in number it does not grow much richer for these new members are either too poor to contribute or else have never learned to support the Church. Our budget of about $1200.00 is paid by a comparatively small number. It is only because of the generosity of the Home Mission Board and the energetic support of the congregation that our Church and Mission work has been carried on extensively.

The difficulties encountered in this branch of our work includes: poorness, indifference, illiteracy, the tendency to move from place to place, and the fact that they are scattered on the outskirts of the city. Our work lacks a proper meeting place badly. The Mission Hall being rented at present belongs to the Anglican Church, and we are thus always at their mercy, meeting at 1:30, 2:30, or 3:30 p.m. depending on when they wish to meet. A proper place, with the necessary furniture would add to the success of the work. We pray and look out for a more suitable meetinghouse.

Vacation and Work

During the summer we (Mrs. Thiessen and I) were absent from Saskatoon for a few days in June and July. We consider these our holidays. During this time I spoke in Fiske, Herschel, Springwater, Glidden, Herbert, Glen Herr, Hanley, Calvet, Waldheim, Dundurn and Sonningdale. On our way to the conference in Winnipeg I had the privilege to speak in Whitewater, Lena, La-Salle, Winkler, and Springstein. It was a pleasure to meet so many good old friends and to make new acquaintances. It was a real rest and refreshment in spite of the different engagements during our visits and the Conference days.

In our absence men and women started the annual church cleaning, varnishing, and painting and now

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By D. J. Unruh, Newton, Kansas

DECEMBER 8—Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift. II Corinthians 9:15.

God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son. In the eternal counsel of God this gift was planned and provided for before the foundation of the world. This gift became visible and perceptible when God the Son took upon himself the form of a babe born of a woman. It was completed on the cross of Calvary. The gift of God is appropriated when we accept the Lord Jesus Christ as our Saviour from sin, then, and not until then, do we receive the gift of eternal life.

DECEMBER 9—"And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people." Luke 2:10. Fear is the natural consequence of sin and the antithesis of happiness. Fear not, in the coming of the Son of God there is the revelation of God's love. God so loved that He gave His son. We love him because He first loved us, and perfect love casteth out fear. The acceptance of God's gift of love is the only successful antidote to fear.

DECEMBER 10—"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given." Isaiah 9:6. The gift of God's love was the gift of His Son. (John 3:16) He took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men. (Philippians 2:7) Isaiah tells us in this same verse "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace.".

"Christ by highest heav'n adored;
Christ, the everlasting Lord;
Late in time behold Him come,
Offspring of the Virgin's womb:
Veil'd in flesh the Godhead see;
Hail the Incarnate Deity,
Pleased as man with man to dwell
Jesus, Our Emmanuel."

DECEMBER 11—"And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save His people from their sins." Matthew 1:21. What's in a name? Some people name their children in anticipation of what they are to achieve. Others name their children because the name is popular and has a nice sound. Jesus was named by the angel of the Lord, in keeping with the mission for which He came into the world. "Thou shalt call His name Jesus: for He shall save His people from"—the guilt, the burden, and the oppressing, degrading, deranging destructive power of sin. He is the great liberator. John 8:36.

DECEMBER 12—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Luke 2:14 Hark! the Herald Angels sing. Earth has but a humble manger to receive the King of Glory, but heaven delegates the choir of heaven to herald His birth. How often our eyes are blind to the great gifts of heaven; blinded by our greed, and measuring with materialistic eyes, we fail to see the limitless scope and grandeur of God's visits to earth. The Christmas story discloses the greatness of humility, the beauty of simplicity, and the power of purity. How simple is the gospel, bringing peace to all through our Lord Jesus Christ. It is the greatest Good-will agency in all the world.

Hark the Herald angels sing,
"Glory to the newborn King;
Peace on earth, and mercy mild,
God and sinners reconciled."

DECEMBER 13—"And the Lord God said unto the serpent, because thou hast done this thou art cursed—and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed." Genesis 3:14-15. Cursed, what a devastating word. It hangs like a pall over the Old Testament, for sin is there. Sin is in the world and what horrors it brings. Repeatedly man has unsheathed the sword and slain his fellow man. The curse of civilization is this social and economic monstrosity called war. Yet war is only an effect, the cause lies deeper; it is in the perversity of the human heart, the depravity of man, and the deception of Satan. Alone in the redemption of the cross is there hope for the world.

"No more let sin and sorrow grow
Nor thorns infest the ground
He comes to make His blessings flow
Far as the Curse is found."

DECEMBER 14—"And she brought forth her first born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes and laid him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn." Luke 2:7. He who created the world and all that therein is, left the glories of heaven and found that there was no room for Him in the inn. Is it enough to acknowledge Him as a great teacher, a champion of the underprivileged, exposer of greed and a prince of peace. No, we must make room for the one who was conceived of the Holy Ghost (Matt: 1:20) born of the virgin Mary, the 'Lamb of God' that taketh away the sin of the world, who rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, and "shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven." "But as many as received Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God even to them that believe on His name." John 1:2.

Canadian Church Features Unique Project

Missionary Day, November 12, 1944, was a day long to be remembered in the Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church of Kitchiner, Ontario. Howard G. Nyce, Allentown, Pa., brought four challenging messages. The themes of the three major services were: "I Am The Light Of The World," "Ye Are The Light Of The World," and "Let Your Light Shine."

The special feature of the day was the dedication of the proceeds of the Stirling Crusader summer relief and missionary projects. The following were the projects with the results:

1. Busy Bees. This consisted of giving part of allowances, carrying papers, running errands, minding babies, etc. Twenty-five, mostly children, contributed $62.06.

2. Garden Project. Eighteen children had various types of vegetable and flower gardens, proceeds of which amounted to $80.15.

3. Livestock Project. Ten young people participated in the raising of pigs. This netted, $178.00. (The pigs seemed to know what they were growing for, and did unusually well.)

4. Poultry Project. Only five were in this group, but they brought $70.00 for relief and missions.

5. Group Potato and Corn Project. About twenty young people took charge of raising one acre of potatoes and one-quarter acre of corn. Groups planted, weeded, picked, bagged and delivered the products. The proceeds were $232.07.

The total of the Crusader Projects was $622.28. The afternoon and evening offering being added to the total, brought the grand total to $778.96. This was divided equally between relief work through M.C.C. and Central Province Mission work.

The organizational set-up of the Stirling Crusaders is very simple. The grand-captain is Mr. Earle S. Snyder, chairman of the Mission Committee of the Church. Under him are the group captains: Busy Bees, Ruby Cressman; Gardens, Robert Cressman and Pearl Eby; Livestock, Clarence Eby; Poultry, Frank Shantz; Group, Ervine Manske. These captains have direct charge of their respective groups. Children and young people "sign up" during March and April in the group of their choice. Approximately seventy-five participated this year.

The dedication service was held at 2:45 p.m. The children and young people entered the auditorium in groups. The grand-captain called each group captain to the front of the Church, who in turn read the names of the members of the group, each person standing as the name was called. He then gave the grand totals and presented the total gift to the pastor who offered the dedicatory prayer. Responding for their groups, were Mr. C. J. Rempel, chairman of the Canadian MCC, and Rev. H. G. Nyce, of the General Conference Foreign Mission Board. The large Crusader Banner was displayed during the service.

STIRLING CRUSADERS
WE SERVE BY SHARING

A group of young people took charge of the first part of the evening service which was in the form of a pictorial-musical Crusader Worship Service. Snap-shots of actual Crusader projects were made into slides, and shown as part of the service. The service was opened with the stirring singing of "Jesus Saves," and "All The World For Jesus." The frst series of slides dealt with the roots and background of our Church—Jesus, the Open Bible, early leaders, Menno Simons, early church, etc.

After the singing of "Faith Of Our Fathers," the next series were shown dealing with the missionary task of our Church. Actual photos from fields were made into slides, and shown to illustrate the missionary challenge. With these were also shown groups from the local church, illustrating the personal challenge to each members.

The final series of slides showed the Crusader Projects. Amounts of income were given in terms of what can be accomplished with the money in certain relief and mission areas. After this final series, closing with the thought of the "regions beyond," two sisters sang the duet. During the singing the "regions beyond" were flashed on the screen, inter-changed with the painting of Christ.

The expressions of joy on the faces of the Crusaders and members of the audience betokened the real satisfaction they were receiving in this "sharing" enterprise. Needless to say all are looking forward to the projects for next year.

Ralph Kaufman Writes From Somewhere Enroute

(Herewith we present excerpts from a letter written by Ralph Kauffman on November 7th to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kauffman, North Newton, Kansas.)

"No, we haven't gotten there yet. . .we have been on the waters for a whole month now, and it may be almost as long again before we get there... about all I can tell you now is that so far nothing has threatened our safety. I'm feeling just fine, am having some interesting experiences.... There are only the four of us passengers on the ship. The rest (about 70 or 80) are crew members, navy gunners, etc.... We have quite a few books with us. which help a lot....We have Sunday services every Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock, at which each of us takes his turn at bringing the message....We eat with the officers of the ship, and the food is excellent. For the first two weeks we didn't see land. Now for a while we have been able to do so, off and on—sometimes at quite close range so that buildings and fields could be plainly discerned. If you take a map of the world and trace the most direct water route from the point of our departure to our destination, you will know about where we have gone and what places we've seen. There have been some detours, it seems for purposes of safety from submarines.

At present we have passed the mid-point of our journey by several days....We will have a new appreciation of Thanksgiving Day this year—of why the Pilgrims fell on their faces and offered thanks upon reaching land. We may be arriving about that time, too—though it may be nearer to December 1. It is interesting to listen to radio broadcasts from different countries along the way....The sailors and crewmen are a friendly lot and we spend quite a bit of time talking with them. Some have had....as many as four ships shot out from under them. They seem to make it a point to come into our bunk about bedtime and start rehearsing their experiences. It makes a wonderful bedtime story. By the time they are through, we're practically snoring—only it isn't snoring; it's our teeth rattling. Then when, as the other night, a couple of depth charges go off in the vicinity, rocking the ship, it adds a touch of realism to the whole thing....Rough as they may be, these sailors, however, seem to be more democratically-minded and sympathetic with respect to our position than most civilians would be. Having been around various parts of the world, they are not easily duped by propaganda and it is enlightening to talk with them. But they can't understand why we would go to a. . .place like. . .to do relief work at $10 a month. At least they seem to be impressed by that. I saw a whale playing in the water the other day — right near our ship...The ship is throwing around this morning so I can hardly hit the typewriter keys anyhow and stay on my chair at the same time.. You can expect to hear from the M. C. C. (whom we'll cable) of our arrival in about three or four more weeks...

Education With or Without Religion

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," says the wise man. In our dull, impersonal way we would express the same truth by saying that a knowledge and due regard for the laws of the universe are the beginning of wisdom. That seems quite obvious to the modern mind. But it should seem still more obvious that a living consciousness of the great and holy Personality who made and enforces these laws is the beginning of wisdom. But alas, some educators do not realize this at all.

Furthermore, it ought to be doubly obvious that it is the beginning of wisdom to realize that this mighty Personality is best represented by Him who went to the cross for our sins, for that makes it possible to love Him to the last limit. It gives all of our high endeavors a motive power that arouses our faculties to the fullest degree. But in many of our schools to speak of the cross of Christ would be regarded as an ultra pious intrusion into the proper proceeding. Men do not seem to realize that it is fuel for our mental engine that we lack these days, quite as much as fuel for our automobiles. A road map is useless without gasoline.

In fact, we need the religious motive in everything. To think of the flowers and the birds, and the sun and the stars, as expressions of the thought of our Great Friend, adds a romance to nature study. And a desire to carry out the plans of God and to benefit our fellow men gives the study of the dry, technical details of science meaning and interest, because at some crisis the knowledge of these details may be of the highest usefulness.

But everyone meets obstacles in study that seem insurmountable; he comes to a high wall that appears to stop all progress. How important to be able to say with the psalmist, "By my God I will leap over a wall." A firm faith in prayer is indispensible if we overcome the difficulties and temptations that beset us in the pursuit of education. This is especially true if we are after a mowing-machine education that can cut down tall grass, rather than a lawn-mower education that can only do the conventional things. The annals of earnest students working their way through college are as full of exciting episodes as a wild west magazine, and their victories are constantly wrought through prayer. Then too, to study as in the sight of God keeps us from that miserable Pharisaism that is epidemic in schools where many students study to be seen of the professor rather than for real love of the truth. The religious motive is also important to keep us studying eagerly after we have been graduated. A diploma seems to act as an embalming fluid to some people. On the other hand, the writer knows old men of eighty who, by living a life of constant communion with God, have retained the intellectual enthusiasm of college freshmen.

It may seem strange that they have made Jesus' warning against undue anxiety about the mote in our brother's eye a part of our lesson in religious education, but they were quite right. To get rid of narrowminded prejudices, and to cease harping on other people's follies, is a primary condition of intellectual advancement.

Jesus says that religious instruction that comes from a man whose heart is not right with God always does harm, rather than good. I may have a fine lecture on the prevention and cure of smallpox, but if I am beginning to break out with the disease my class will be exposed to the germs while they take notes on my lecture.

False propaganda besets our children on every side. It blares from the signboards, the radio and the newspapers. The only way to counteract this day and night false teaching is to obey Moses and talk to our children about God and his laws as we sit in our houses, as we walk by the way, as we rise up, and as we lie down. And the only way to keep this constant religious talk from being a bore to our children is continually to make new discoveries in those commandments which are exceeding broad (Psalm 19:96), and in those riches of Christ which are unsearchable (Ephesians 3:8).

To inspire our children to go and "fish" in the lake of learning, we must constantly come to them with a fine string of new-caught fish.

RELIEF

London Office Requests Clothing for Europe

The representative of our Mennonite relief workers in England has requested that M.C.C. Headquarters negotiate to ship a rather large quantity of warm clothing to London for distribution in Holland and France. The cable stated an urgent need for rubbers, knee boots, and overshoes for Holland, blankets and shoes for France.

Nurses Aid Class Started in Puerto Rico Unit

The November, 1944, issue of the Rio La Plata escribes the method of instruction offered to sever- l community girls so as to prepare them to assume esponsibility in the new Mennonite hospital at La Plata:

"On October ninth our first class of nurses aids tarted their training at the hospital. This class s composed of three selected Puerto Rican girls ho live within walking distance of the hospital.

Their training period lasts three months during hich time they will have an hour of class and four ours of practice daily. During this time they will eceive one meal per day at the hospital as well as heir blue and white striped uniforms.

After this three-month training period is com- leted, if their work has been satisfactory, they will be employed by the hospital as full time workers, thus leaving the nurses free for other more difficult tasks.

The course is being taught by Miss Grace Kauffman, Superintendent of Nurses. It is a somewhat more advanced course than that being used by the Red Cross Nurses Aid classes in the states."

Health and Physical Fitness Program for La Plata Area

With the arrival of a fifth nurse in Puerto Rico, Miss Salome Fast, R.N., has been relinquished from the hospital to direct a new health service program inaugurated in the schools within the radius of influence of the La Plata Unit. Five C.P.S. men are each assigned two or more schools wherein each carries on a full time physical fitness and health education program. They give special emphasis to safety consciousness, proper habits of disease prevention, personal and community hygiene. Dr. and Mrs. Stover are devoting time to develop a school dental program. Dr. Amstutz gives several days a week to examination of school children and general medical supervision of the health service. Dr. Amstutz is also opening a child clinic at the La Plata Hospital, where he will care for children referred to him.

C. P. S.

opulation of C.P.S.

The number of men in C.P.S. camps and units as been slowly going higher. In May of this year e 7,000 mark was reached, and since that time 24 more men have been inducted. According to resent indications the inductions will continue teadly especially among the 18-year-old age group f the 7724 men in C.P.S., as of November 14, 1944, 141 were under Mennonite administration.

.P.S. Men as "Guinea Pigs"

In the July, 1944 issue of Selective Service, the onthly organ of the Washington Headquarters of elective Service System, the following item concern- g conscientious objectors was carried:

"As of June 30, 1944, there were 164 conscientious objectors serving as 'guinea pigs' for the Office of Scientific Research and Development and the Office of the Surgeon General of the United States Army. The experiments require these men to fast, live on restricted diets, drink salt water, float on life rafts, walk for days on treadmills, spend hours in low pressure chambers, and live for days in rooms with temperatures varying from twenty degrees below zero to the high temperature and humidity of the topics. They are placed on various diets to determine the effects of diet upon altitude tolerance, the best diets for cold and tropical climates.

C.P.S. Briefs

In the month of October for the past three years the church agencies have met with Selective Service officials to consider the operation of C.P.S. for another year. The agencies—Friends, Brethren, and Mennonites— are now planning to continue operation of C.P.S. for the duration.

United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA) has officially decided to accept conscientious objectors as candidates for foreign relief service.

Assistant Appointed for Peace Section

Howard Charles, Lititz, Pennsylvania, has been appointed to serve as an assistant in the Peace Section at the Akron, Office. Brother Charles will spend considerable time in research and writing in regard to the implications of our peace witness in the times in which we are living, and will also be responsible for the routine work of the Peace Section. With the issue of peacetime conscription facing us and the need for further literature in this area of our faith, it was thought expedient to secure another worker.

CORRESPONDENCE

SICHAR MENNONITE CHURCH
Cordell,Oklahoma

It was our privilege to have Rev. A. W. Friesen of Henderson, Nebraska, in our midst on October 31. He told of his observations and experiences visiting the Civilian Public Service Camps and mental hospitals. His message stimulated interest and a better understanding of the entire C.P.S. program.

On November 10 the Ladies Mission Circle had their annual mission sale. The proceeds amounted to $437.00 Preceding the sale the ladies presented a hour and refreshments after the sale were enjoyed by by all.

Rev. Clyde H. Dirks from Hutchinson, Kansas, conducted revival meetings November 13 to 19. During the week Rev. Dirks together with the pastor, Rev. Menno Kliever, visited in the homes of all the members of the congregation. On November 19, we had ordination services for Rev. Menno Kliewer, he being ordained as Elder of the church. Rev. Albert Schmidt from Medford, Oklahoma, gave a message. Rev. Clyde Dirks also gave a message and performed the ordination ceremony. The entire service was very impressive, and all felt the nearness of the Holy Spirit and the sacredness of the occasion. The Herold Church was invited, and consequently the church was filled to capacity.

In the afternoon the congregation observed the Harvest-Mission Festival. Special musical numbers were rendered and inspiring messages given by Rev. Dirks and Rev. Albert Claassen of the Clinton Indian Mission after which an offering was taken which amounted to $177.58.

Rev. Dirks closed the revival meetings Sunday night with a stirring (12 or 13 souls indicated their willingness to live closer to the Lord) that we should be certain that we are on God's side rather than ask God to be on our side.

Rev. Albert Schmidt is making a tour of the churches in this vicinity in the interest of O. B. A. He gave a message in Sichar on November 21. —Walter H. Foth, Church Sec.

IMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH
Los Angeles, California

November 12, Rev. Walter Dyck of Beatrice Nebraska gave very inspiring messages, both morning and evening. The Ladies Missionary Society had charge of the evening service at which time they distributed mite boxes. After the evening service, Rev. Dyck showed moving pictures of the C.P.S. Camps, which was very interesting.

The Young People's Banquet took place November 17 in honor of Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Regier. Instead of doing the work themselves, they had every one take part in that they paid a good price for a chicken dinner at Scully's. Everyone had plenty to eat, including the pastor. Several musical numbers were given and Prof. Ramm gave an inspiring message.

November 19 was the farewell for the Regier famil. A potluck dinner was served to a large number of people, and a short program followed. We certainl will miss them, but we do wish them God's richest blessings upon their new work in Pratum, Oregon. The evening service was in charge of the church choir. A very appreciative musical program was given with Mr. E. E. Yoder as director. The new choir robes were dedicated at this time. After the evening service, retreat pictures were shown, which was of special interest to every one present.

We are very grateful to Dr. Paul Bauman, who has consented to fill the pastorate vacancy until someone can be secured permanently.—Mrs. Elizabeth Rempel, Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
Hillsboro Kansas

November 23 was truly a day of thanksgiving for the Hillsboro Mennonite Church. The day was one of Kansas' most beautiful fall days. It was a spespecial day, for the church observed its sixtieth anniversary at an all-day service.

In the morning the children brought their "Bee Hive" thank-offering, and Rev. J. H. Epp of Kingman, Kansas, brought the Thanksgiving message. At noon a bounteous dinner was served to about 350 guests and church members.

The anniversary observance was carried out in the afternoon program. Rev. Unruh, our pastor, led the audience in a brief memorial service and a period of meditation and prayer for our boys in service, which number forty-three. J. H. Franzen gave the high lights of the church's history. The anniversary address was given by Rev. J. H. Epp, who served this church for twenty-seven years. Visiting ministers brought greetings and best wishes and music was given by the local church. The offerings for the day totaled $450.

After a fellowship period and lunch the church filled to capacity for the evening program. Rev. Unruh gave a brief sermon on "If I Forget My Church Let My Hand Lose Its Cunning." Then four choirs from the surrounding churches and a quartet from Moundridge took over. The audience was lifted to wonderful heights by their music. Especially when they in a mass chorus sang "Praise the Lord," "Send Forth Thy Spirit," and "My God and I". It left one wondering, "What must it be like when the ransomed Church will sing its praise before the Lamb?"—Corr.

The Bethel College Corporation Meeting

We had a beautiful day and a large attendance at our Corporation meeting. For the opening, Rev. Arnold Funk, the secretary of the Board, read Luke 19:11-18. The president of the corporation, Rev. David C. Wedel of Halstead, made the poening address, appointed the various committees, and the business for the day was under way. The president of the school made his report short so as to make room for other items that were to come up. Dr. H. A. Fast briefly reported on the religiuos life and Mr. Moyer gave the financial report. During the year the debt was reduced from $73,000 to $33,000 or a total of $40,000. It is hoped that the debt can be completely wiped out before too long. The Corporation adopted the report with a deep sense of gratitude to our Heavenly Father and the many friends of the school.

There were a few visitors present from the Pacific District Conference and Oklahoma; also Brother Cornelius Toews, head of the Rosthern Academy in Canada. Out of the possible total of 8,200 votes, there were present 5,715,which shows a very good representation. The charter was ammended as per proposed statement by ballot vote showing 5,031 for it and 50 against it. The Corporation voted to encourage our people to continue with gifts and civilian government bonds not only to cover the current budget and help wipe out the debt, but also to substantially increase the needed fund for the library and the dormitory. The result of the election was that Dr. A. M. Lohrentz, McPherson, Kansas, continues on the Board as conference representative and Rev. Henry Hege of Corn, Oklahoma, and Rev. J. M. Regier of Hillsboro, Kansas, were elected on the board as corporation members. The Research Committee of the faculty made a very brief report on the proposed revision of the statement of aims of the school, the curriculum, the extra-curricular activities and the work program. It was a full day, a good meeting, and a fine spirit prevailed throughout. The meeting was adjourned around 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon with Rev. P. K. Regier of Reedley, California, leading in the closing prayer.

The following resolutions were adopted:

1. "That the Corporation expresses sincere gratitude to all donors of the many gifts, large and small, made to Bethel College during the last year, and approve the financial aim for this school year to cover the needs of the current budget and debt liquidation; and whereas a plan has been worked out whereby Civilian Government Bonds, as well as cash, can be used for that purpose, we encourage our people to avail themselves of this opportunity to make their gifts to Bethel College by purchasing Civilian Bonds and registering them in the name of the College, as well as making cash donations, as it is important that the school, in view of the present uncertain conditions, become debt free as soon as possible. Special and sincere encouragement is to be given to our people to do this in connection with the Government Bond Drive planned for November, 1944, and thereafter.

2. "Whereas the Board of Directors of Bethel College in session September 1, 1944, have authorized the college administration to take steps looking toward the construction of the library and men's dormtory as soon as possible with the understanding that no debt be incurred, the Board recommends that this Corporation, recognizing this great need herewith by resolution encourages this move.

3. "Resolved, that we express our trbute to the blessed memory of Brother J. C. Regier of Buhler, Kansas, Brother Adam Ratzlaff of Orienta, Oklahoma, Rev. Paul Mouttet, Hillsboro, Kansas, Sister Frieda Kaufman of Newton, Kansas, and of all other faithful friends of Bethel College who have gone to their eternal home this past year. May we, as we stand in prayer, dedicate ourselves anew to the great cause of Christian education which they supported so well.

Beloved Educator to Speak

Dr. Willis A. Sutton, who has often been characterized as "the most beloved public school man in America", will lecture in Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, at 8 p. m., December 7.

Deeply impressed by the able and powerfully constructive education work of Dr. Willis A. Sutton in his lectures to American educators, the Educational Department of The Reader's Digest has engaged him as its Guest Lecturer to speak at meetings of teachers throughout the United States on the subject, "The Battle for America."

From a Georgia plantation and early education in a one-teacher country school and in a high school that he reached by riding every day sixteen miles on horseback, Dr. Sutton made his way to college and to university, studied law, became a teacher and for twenty-three years served as a highly able and extremely original Superintendent of Schools in Atlanta, Georgia. For his educational work, colleges and universities gave him a number of degrees and for his wise, inspiring and humorous advice, teachers throughout the Nation called upon him to speak year after year in their assemblies and made him President of the National Education Association.

In all probability, Dr. Sutton, who has addressed audiences many times in every state, has spoken to more teachers and students in the United States than has any other living man.

Speaker for Founders' Day

Rev. Donovan E. Smucker

Rev. Donovan E. Smucker, radio speaker and pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, will be the Founders' Day Speaker at Freeman Junior College on December 14 of this year. Rev. Smucker is a dynamic speaker and has given very serious thought to the importance of Christian education. At the 1943 Annual Conference on Mennonite Cultural Problems, he read a paper on "The Influence of Public Schools on Mennonite Ideals and Its Implications for the Future." Brother Smucker will come to Freeman just after having completed a week of meetings at the Mulberry, Florida, C.P.S. Camp.

DR. BENDER SPEAKS TO NEW YORK FELLOWSHIP

Dr. Harold S. Bender, dean of Goshen College, spoke to a recent meeting of the New York Mennonite Fellowship on the subject, "The Anabaptist Vision."

He characterized that vision under three headings: 1. A new conception of the essence of Christianity—A Christian is one whose practical as well as inner life has been transformed by Christ after New Testament patterns. 2. A new concept of the church—The church is a brotherhood composed of those who have consciously and voluntarily committed themselves to Christ. Baptism is the symbol of this commitment. 3. A new ethic—The Christian way of life is one of love toward all men, and of nonresistance to force.

Miss Martha Burkhalter, returned General Conference Missionary from India, led in a brief period of devotions before Dr. Bender's talk. After the talk Dr. Bender answered questions which were asked him from the group.

shortage it is hard to get a janitor. To simplify this work the congregation has installed a stoker for the price of $415. We hope that this extra improvement will add to the proper upkeep of our church and, perhaps, decrease the fuel consumption. The money was borrowed from the bank and is to be repaid in monthly installments for which we are relying on our church members and friends.

We are grateful to God and men that our congregation has been able to repay our church loan of $1000. We thank the Home Mission Board for its patience.

Visitation Work

The visitations at the City and St. Paul's Hospital and the Sanitorium for the tubercular cases belong to my weekly routine work. The number, at present, varies from twenty to twenty-five patients. The sick appreciate these visits very much and I ave always enjoyed their confidence. The Lord as been my strength and counsel.

With great interest I read Miss Mary Becker's imely article "Life Up Your Eyes and Look" in vhich she quotes Ezekiel 8:17: "Do you see that, son of man?" To learn to observe and to see hings properly is an art, and a teacher pays much ttention to develop it. We Christians must learn o see the things around us in the right light. Then ve find our duties and our opportunities. May the ord grant to us all the power to look and to see! Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, that they re white already unto the harvest."

Yours in His service,
—J. J. and Katherine Thiessen

JOTTINGS

The messges are centered around the Lord's Prayer. Specl Thanksgiving services on Thanksgiving morning ere conducted by the pastor, Rev. Howard Raid.

Dr. R. C. Kauffman has written a letter from mewhere enroute. Excerpts of it are given in the uth Section of this issue.

The Herold Mennonite Church, Bessie, Oklahoma, served its first Harvest Thanksgiving Festival November 30, with Rev. Henry Hege as guest eaker. The Ladies' Mission Society held its sale the following evening.

Rev. P. P. Tschetter is conducting evangelistic etings in the Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, nsas.

—Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Brown are now serving the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho.

—Marred: Marjorie Sargent to William Jaehde Jr. Both are members of the First Mennonite Church, Ransom, Kansas. Rev. Abraham Albrecht officiated at the marriage which was held in his home in Newton, Kansas.

—Brother Orie Miller spoke in the Auditorium of Freeman Junior College on November 26. His two talks were on the subjects: "Our Peace Position, It's Implications Past, Present, Future" and "Mennonite Relief and Its Place in the Church's Program."

—"Rev. Edmund Miller, of Lind, Washington, but a native of this community preached an impressive, spiritual sermon to a large appreciative audience at the South church last Sunday mornng, Mrs. Miller gave an interesting message to the Junior children during S.S." The Freeman Courier, Freeman, South Dakota. Rev. and Mrs. Miller went on to North Newton, Kansas, for the Bethel College Study Conference, held on November 21 and 22, and the Bethel College Corporation Meeting, held on November 24. On Sunday morning, November 26, Rev. Miller brought the message to the Bethel College Church, and in the evening he spoke in the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge.

—Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church, Kitchener, Ontario: Rev. Erland Waltner was the speaker for our evangelistic campaign. His simple, direct explanations of Biblical truths, very aptly illustrated, were very much appreciated. His general theme was "The Power of God."

—Mennonites, Schwenkfelders, Brethren, and Friends met for their sixteenth joint conference in the Lansdale Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., on December 2. Vital questions discussed were: "Conscription," "Relief," "Rehabilitation of Service Men" (This by J. Winfield Fretz), and "The Church and the Peace.".

—Dr. Wliams, Superintendent of the Hawthornden State Hospital for mental diseases, recently brought the evening message to the First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio.

—Goltry, Oklahoma: Rev. A. W. Friesen was with us in October. He told of his experiences in C.P.S. camps and mental hospitals. We enjoyed his talk. We had our annual mission sale on November 21. We plan to have Dr. Suckau with us on December 3.—Zoar Mennonite Church.

—The Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas, recently dedicated its new copies of the Mennonite Hymnary.

—The sewing societies of the Hebron Church held their mission sale November 18. Results were gratifying. Half of the proceeds are to be used for foreign missions, one-fourth for home missions and one-fourth for C.P.S. Speakers were Miss Eva Pauls and Rev. Gerald Stucky. Miss Pauls told us about the need of aid for the Lepers in India. Rev. Stucky spoke interestingly about South America. Rev. Stucky also delivered the sermon and spoke to the young folks during the S.S. hour on November 19.

—On Sunday, November 19, Rev. B. S. Graybill, pastor of the Richfield Church, received into the church, eight members, by baptism.

Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, pastor of the Quakertown Church, held a very interesting and spiritual evangelistic meeting here during late October. While he was still with us, six applicants were received, four by baptism and two by letter. —Ursula Shelly —One-half truckload of canned fruit and vegetables were taken from Hillsboro, Kansas, to the Colorado Springs C.P.S. camp on November 27. The F. D. Vogt Produce and Grocer Company did this work gratis and planned to bring back apples for their business.—F. N. Funk

TO INSTALL ELDER AND ORDAIN DEACON

The Lord willing, our newly elected deacon, Clarence Schmidt, is to be ordained on Sunday, December 10th to succeed the outgoing deacon, H. B. Schmidt, who has been unanimously called as Junior Elder by our Tabor church. His installation is to take place on the same day. He is to serve on half time, like myself, so that in this way our church will at last receive as much as a full-time service, thank the Lord. We invite a prayerful participation.

In the name of the Tabor Church,
P. H. Richert

VOLUME LIX NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, DECEMBER 12, 1944 NUMBER 49

A Review of "War, Peace, and Nonresistance"

Reviewed by Donovan E. Smucker

War, Peace, and Nonresistance By Guy Franklin Hershberger, The Herald Press, Scottdale, Pa., 415 pages, $2.50.

Today the Mennonite peace testimony is caught between the withering cross-fire of modernist pacifism and fundamental militarism. This monumental book rescues Biblical non-resistance from that unhappy situation. Without any question, it is destined to be the authoritative volume in this field; comprehensive, scholarly, and frank, the book is saturated with doctrinal understanding, historical perspective and, what is most important, a systematic, evangelical loyalty to Scripture.

For one thing it reveals that a genuine Christian scholarship is coming-of-age in the Mennonite church. The bibliography is simply amazing! Guy Hershberger has read virtually every book and pamphlet relevant to this study; at the end of every chapter there is a superb list of books carefully listed and evaluated. No one can read this magnum opus and then charge its writer with failure to read or to face mportant criticisms or attacks on Biblical non-resistance. Modernism, fundamentalism, Catholicism, humanism, Marxism,—in fact, all the "isms"—have been weighed in the balances of Biblical theology and found wanting. Indeed, it is a book which may honestly take ts place on the shelves of leading libraries, regardless of the size or prestige. For this reason one might add the word realistic to the many adjectives already used to describe War, Peace, and Non-resistance.

Moreover, in some respects, this volume is more than the product of its writer who is the professor of history and sociology of Goshen College. For, it was originally conceived by the Peace Problems Committee of the (Old) Mennonite Church. In effect, Guy Hershberger was commissioned to write this treatise, subject to the criticism and approval of other committee members. Goshen College cooperated by grantng a semester's leave of absence to carry on the painsaking research which it represents. Many individuals read it in manuscript form, including P. H. Richert and myself of the General Conference. While its origin came in one branch of the Mennonite church with the special emphasis which this inevitably brings, yet it is fully aware of leadership in all the branches. A glance at the index gives references to H. A. Fast, Delvin Kirchofer, P. A. Penner, Henry Buller, P. C. Hiebert, Herbert Schmidt, C. E. Krehbiel, J. W. Kliewer, P. H. Unruh, and a host of others from this eneration and the last, who have figured in confernces other than Elkhart and Lancaster. C. Henry Smith, pre-eminent General Conference historian, is quoted twenty-two times, as is always the case in any Mennonite study calling for the lessons of history.

A final preliminary comment may be made. It is the attractive appearance of the book which is carefully arranged, attractively bound, containing only a tiny number of typographical errors in a clear readable type. (This cannot always be said of Mennonite publications!)

What, then, is revealed in this epoch-making book?

The very core of the whole approach comes in chapters two and three which deal with the Old and New Testaments, respectively, in relation to nonresistance. Regardless of previous outlook, every Mennonite owes it to himself and his God to prayerfully study these chapters as a check on his own position. They may not be accepted 100 per cent, but these studies cannot be ignored. Here is no simple proof-text argument (though all the proof texts are listed in the Appendix); rather it is a careful and honest attempt to discover the whole message, the basic framework of the Bible. A lengthy quotation is in order here to give the author's own words on what will be the most controversial part of the study for most Mennonites: "The Mennonite view has always emphasized a covenant theology which recognizes a permission for war under the covenant of the Old Testament, and a prohibition for war under that of the New Testament. Mennonites are generally agreed on the fact of the two covenants, but there is not a complete agreement as to the reason for them. Some Mennonites hold that it was God's original plan that His people should engage in war in the Old Testament time, and that they should refrain from doing so under the covenant of the New Testament. It is the author's view, however, that God has provided one fundamental moral law which has been and is valid for all time. This view holds that the Ten Commandments embody the essence of the moral law, and that the life and teachings of Jesus are its authoritative interpretation and fulfillment. This view begins with the premise that the commandment of love, and the injunction, 'Thou shalt not kill,' are part and parcel of God's fundamental moral law; and that the life and teachings of Christ are an authoritative endorsement, interpretation and fulfillment of that command. It assumes that the lower standards of the Mosaic civil code represent a temporary concession on the part of God to the lowered moral state and spiritual immaturity of that time; a concession made necessary by the sin of man, and not by the will of God." In other words, this is a fresh re-interpretation of the old theological conception of "permissive will."

As an illustration of this view Guy Hershberger cites Matthew 19:4-8 where Jesus discusses divorce. Our Lord told the Pharisees, "He which made them at the beginning made them male and female . . . For this cause shall a man . . . cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh . . . What therefore God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." The Pharisees replied by asking Jesus: "Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away?" To this Jesus replied: "Moses because of the hardness of your heart suffered you to put away your wives but from the beginning it was not so." Comments the writer: "Here Jesus says that under God's basic and absolute moral law divorce is forbidden, and in the beginning, that is before the fall, this was the rule. But when men sinned and descended to the 'sub-Christian' level of life, divorce was permitted It was because of the hardness of their hearts that God, through Moses, permitted it."

This is only a tiny sample of the Old Testament material which is given in a careful, fair and complete manner. Criticisms could be made. (I once wrote a lengthy criticism for Guy Hershberger's consideration.) But, it is important for every Mennonite to consider the solution which the writer has found in his study of the Old Testament Three alternatives are ruled out for the Biblical Christian: (1) ignoring the whole problem; (2) discarding the Old Testament war narratives in Joshua, Judges, the books of Samuel, Kings, and Chronicles as the modernist does; (3) accept a military position of the conventional Bible institute type. Indeed, the Biblical nonresistant must squarely face the issue as he avoids the foregoing false reactions.

The next chapter on the New Testament is also a highly original yet excellent summary of Biblical truth. Very few Mennonites, whatever their background, will have occasion to differ with this convincing presentation. Jesus Christ is seen in strictly evangelical terms as the incarnate God inaugurating a new covenant in which the moral law is fulfilled and all human relations restored to their rightful place. His is not a kingdom of earthly power, nor is the wrath of God manifest within it. (The holiness of God demands punishment of sin, but punishment is the prerogative of God alone: Romans 12:29). Thus, Christ brings a kingdom of love, characterized by the spirit of meekness. From regeneration, however, must come the fruits of righteousness since our Lord delivered us both from the guilt and the power of sin.

Personally, I have found a brilliant insight in Guy Hershberger's rendering of I Corinthians 6, where he shows that love and not justice is the primary Christian virtue: "But the New Testament way is to aim at love, not justice. In aiming at justice, the result is frequently a selfish struggle for power, position or wealth. In aiming at love, however, the result is often justice as well as love. But even if this result does not follow, the Christian must continue to love anyway, for according to the teaching of Christ His disciples should be willing to suffer injustice rather than to forsake the way of love." The failure to see this Biblical truth is what causes well-intentioned idealists to embrace violence in the social and political struggle. They cannot wait on the slow process of love in their nervous cries for justice. Back of healthy Mennonite caution in relation to the social struggle (as over against complacency and alliance with injustice) is precisely this correct analysis of the New Testament ethic.

There is a keen survey of the Christian relation to the state, particularlv as the problem is posed in Roman 13 or I Peter 2. It is submission without blind obedience to commands which violate Christian moral laws. There is a compelling attack on all attempts (as in Scofield) to postpone the Sermon on the Mount for the future. There is a much needed emphasis on the seriousness of disregarding Truth, especially in the case of those who have a knowledge of the new covenant and then deliberately reject it. See Hebrews 10:26-31. In summary, it is clearly shown that nonresistance is in accord with the whole tenor of the Bible, especially the New Testament. For those troubled by isolated texts there is a superb compilation of answers in the Appendix covering everything from the beating of plowshares into swords in Joel to Jesus cleansing the temple in John 2:15. Hence, whether you approach the problem by way of isolated texts or systematic Biblical theology, these two chapters can give any Mennonite a workable system of nonresistant Scriptural truth while maintaining a conservative view of the Bible's inspiration, unity, authority and infallibility. And that is a real accomplishment!

The chapter on church history is extremely well written but does not suggest anything particularly new. Nonresistance was the conviction of the apostolic church; the church, like mankind, "fell." Mennonitism has a distinctive proposal on its relattion to the state as over against the Catholic, Calvinist, Lutheran, or liberal moralistic positions.

Likewise, the section on Mennonite history contains no now insights, though it is a splendid presentation containing all the basic truths which our people ought to know in a definitive book. It is worth pointing out the three factors which led to the original compromises of the Dutch Mennonites, the first Mennonites to lose their testimony of non-resistance. First came theological liberalism in the form of Socinianism. (This sort of thing usually starts as a "reform" movement and ends with compromise because the "offence of the Cross" is removed.) Second, came wealth and worldly prestige. Third, was the growth of religious toleration leading to a toleration of non-Mennonite principles . . . This section also reveals another great historical yeardstick of Mennonite compromise in these words: " . . . once a nonresistant people compromise their faith to the extent of accepting noncombatant military service, it is only a matter of time until they lose their faith altogether."

For the General Conference one of the most difficult chapters will be number ten dealing with nonresistance and the state. Most of our people vote, most enter into rather partisan political squabbles and arguments, some are petty office holders, a few are actually in high positions of power. Can all this

The Vanishing Mennonite?

The picture of a bowed and dejected Indian on a horse is entitled "The Vanishing American." The Indian is losing his distinctiveness. General Conference Mennonites have now been in the Prairie States for seventy years. Perhaps, there still is considerable about them that is distinctive. Will they in the next seventy years retain, refine, and enlarge that distinctiveness or will they become vanishing Mennonites? Many Mennonite groups have lost much or most of their distinctiveness. Consider the Mennonites of Holland and of Germany. Even in our conference in the United States there are some churches that have little about them that is distinctively Mennonite. True, many or most of the members may have Mennonite names, the word Mennonite may appear on the church building, and the group is Mennonite by affiliation. But their doctrine and way of life are little different from that of some other Protestant churches. Nonconformity to the world has little depth of meaning, for members freely join the societies they please and enter the armed forces in large numbers. Brotherly love and mutual aid is not more pronounced than in many other groups. Christian home and family life is not much or any different from that of other churches. Members in these churches may find it hard to answer the question "Why be a Mennonite?" In fact, how many of us can give a good answer to that question? If there is no good reason for being a Mennonite, then the Mennonite Church might as well disappear. If there are good reasons, then it should not. If there are good reasons, then we ought to know what they are. What is it that the Mennonites in the Prairie States should uphold in the next seventy years?

Conference Paper for Every Home

The Central Conference of Mennonites sends its church paper to every home in the conference, Brother Raymond L. Hartzler, secretary of that conference and editor of its paper, told us recently. The churches submit lists of all the homes represented in them, and the conference sends the Christian Evangel to them free of charge. The cost of the paper is paid out of the conference treasury. This treasury is supplied by contributions from all the churches. This conference has put the church paper matter on a mission basis. All homes in a church need a church paper. Undoubtedly, many individuals in our churches would show greater enthusiasm for the program of our conference, if they knew what that program was. The minister is limited in time and otherwise as to the information that he can give. It has not been made clear to some of our church people that we have church papers; others know of them but have not been informed as to what they are like. Just as churches provide Sunday School material for all, so they ought to provide the Christian reading material of a church paper for all. This the Central Conference has done for its church members. Perhaps, our General Conference could not do it in the same way, but the individual churches certainly can. And an increasing number are doing so. Twenty-nine churches, including the third and fourth largest, have put the 100 Per Cent Subscription Plan into effect. Two other churches, the First Mennonite Church, Halstead, Kansas, and the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, have also voted for this plan but have not yet sent in the lists of homes represented in them. They are now working on this. A goodly number of other churches have expressed interest in the 100 Per Cent Plan and many, if not all, of them will undoubtedly adopt the plan at their coming annual meetings. It is a mission matter to provide a church paper for every family in the church. That is the attitude taken by these churches.

Emphasis and Interpretation

A letter from a noted Bible school states, "Lt. Gen. Sir William G. S. Dobbie will top the list of speakers for the thrity-ninth annual Founder's Week Conference, Feb. 5 to 11 . . . . Gen. Dobbie is a world-famous military figure and an outstanding Christian, ..." A world-famous military figure—an outstanding Christian. It is not for us to judge, but we certainly question whether the Bible teaches such a yoking together as is here exalted. Christ said, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." This incident suggests that though Bible schools put much emphasis upon Bible study their interpretations of it are not to be accepted uncritically.

Preparation for Annual Meeting

The Bethel Mennonite Church of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, recently gave its members a chance to prepare themselves for the annual meeting by passing out the printed annual reports, the ballots, and the recommendations of the church council the Sunday before the meeting. In this way the members could give concentrated and extended study to the reports and recommendations, and the procedure probably saved considerable time at the annual meeting. The reports of this church take up thirty pages. The booklet is about twice as large as the average church yearbook, and the print is very small. Such a report can give much useful information for intelligent participation in the annual meeting.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

To China and Around the World

Editor, The Mennonite

North Newton, Kansas

I received your note of September 11th and another reminder quite recently, asking me to share some of my experiences in China with the readers of The Mennonite.

Many times during my stay in China, as well as during the time I was on my way to and from China, I have expressed the wish that many more people, especially our young people, might be able to have a similar experience. Now, as I sit in front of a good typewriter, in a cozy home, with my wife at my side, and look back on those two years they do not seem real, and at times I actually wonder if they have been a dream. No money could buy those experiences from me, if by selling them they should be blotted out of my life. To share them with those readers of The Mennonite who might have enough interest in China to read this article, I am more than glad.

At this time I will give only a very brief outline of my voyage and work but will be glad to supplement later with short detailed articles of particular experiences, should there be a demand for that among the readers. During a time when China is so prominent in our daily press, when we read that our foremost General in the China theatre has been recalled, and that the Cabinet of the Central Government has been reshuffled, interest in China has found a new awakening, and American friends of China among the readers of The Mennonite may welcome more about China.

My trip took me completely around the world and around the long way. Leaving from New York, I crossed the equator four times before I landed on the west coast of the United States. Each time our ship sailed from the northern hemisphere deep into the southern hemisphere before it turned north again. Aftr we had been on the ocean a few days, information leaked out that our ship was loaded with dynamite. We had 5,000 tons of explosives on board. We sailed far south around the tip of South Africa, where the sea was rough and where it was bitterly cold. This was during the month of August. Then we turned north again, sailed around Madagascar, up the Indian Ocean, into the Red Sea and finally into the Suez Canal. About half-way up the canal, our ship docked, and our explosive cargo was respectfully unloaded. American trucks took the passengers 100 miles across the desert into the cosmopolitan city of Cairo This city has a thousand smells and millions of flies, but it is an extremely interesting city One may see, all at one time, silver colored planes soaring through the air, modern trains on the rails, beautiful automobiles on the streets, as well as long camel, oxen, and donkey caravans and dust laden pedestrians who have come from distant places, carrying their cargos on their backs. In Cairo the modern has made up with the ancient, and the two live together as brothers.

I stayed eight days in Cairo. During this time, through the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. I had the opportunity of making three interesting trips, one through and by the pyramids, one through the ancient city of Memphis, and one through the important mosques in Cairo.

After eight days I was again taken over the desert back to Suez, where I secured passage on one of our Liberty ships. We sailed back through the Red Sea, through the Arabian Sea to Bombay, India. In Bombay I quickly passed through the customs, then boarded an express train which took me all the way across India, from Bombay to Calcutta, in forty-eight hours. In Calcutta I met the Indian members of the Friends Ambulance Unit, the organization which sponsored my trip as well as my work in China.

Through the efforts of the Friends Ambulance Unit I obtained passage by plane to Kunming, China, within eight days. The trip over the Hump was pleasant and smooth and would have been uneventful, had it not been for the fact that our plane had to find a landing place on the edge of a forest where we hid for seven hours, because Japanese fighter planes were pursuing us. In the evening, when everything had quieted down, our plane took off again and rose into dizzy heights. Later that night we landed on the airfield in Kunming, China.

I have not space in this article to write about my work in China; that has to be left for another time. Through the kindness of the Friends Ambulance Unit, I was loaned to the International Relief Committee and spent eighteen months helping out in surgical relief work, mostly in mission hospitals. During the last four months I was close behind the front lines. I would very much have liked to stay longer, but it was impossible for Mrs. Wiebe to join me, so both of us felt that I should return home, knowing that before I would reach the home land, it would be a two year separation for us.

I left Shaoyang, where I was working, on March seventh, and exerted all the pressure at my command to speed my trip, but it was not until July second that I set foot on the west coast of the United States. It took me twenty days to make the trip from Shaoyang to Chungking, a distance of about seven hundred miles. Early on Easter morning I boarded a plane in Chungking which landed me that evening in Calcutta. So my last Easter day I spent high up in the sky among the clouds, crossing the Himalayan mountains on this part of the trip. In Bombay I was able to obtain passage home on a new Navy transport which took us quickly around the southern tip of Australia, and then back north to the west coast of our beloved United States.

On the entire trip I had been on the ocean one hundred days, sixty-five days going from New York to Bombay via the Red Sea and Suez. Through it all our loving Father held His protective hand over me. How great must be His desire to spread His protective hands over this suffering world, the work of His creation. If only this world would accept such protection.

Sincerely,

D. V. Wiebe

The Hundred Per Cent Church Subscription Plan

At various times during the past few years articles bearing on the one hundred per cent church subscription plan have appeared in The Mennonite. However, since a number of conference churches are considering the adoption of this plan for the coming year, it will be appreciated by many readers if the main points in connection with this plan are published again.

The purpose of this plan is to place at least one of our conference papers into as many conference homes as possible. Briefly stated, the main points in connection with this plan are the following:

1. Any church affiliated with the General Conference may adopt and share the benefits of this plan.

2. The plan may be put in operation at any time of the year, but it is most convenient to have the church subscriptions begin at the first of the year.

3. Churches adopting this plan receive the church paper (or papers) at fifty cents less per year than the regular renewal price. At present the renewal price is $1.75. The price to churches on the 100 Per Cent Plan basis is $1.25 per year.

4. In order to obtain the benefit of this reduced rate, the following requirements must be met:

a. The plan must be officially adopted by the church, and at least one conference paper must be provided for every family on the church roll, including families living away from the home communitiy. Exceptions may be made in cases where the address of a family is unknown or where the member (or members) are no longer regarded as in full standing in the church.

b. The church must make itself responsible for the payment of the church subscriptions each year, and payment of the amount due should be made as early in the year as possible.

c. Due to the low price at which the papers are Kalender or the Year Book are not included in the offered on the basis of the 100 Per Cent Plan, the subscription price. However, anyone desiring to have either the Kalender or the Year Book can obtain a copy by paying 25 cents extra.

5. In case advance payments have been made by former subscribers to the papers, the full amount of these advance payments will be credited to the church and deducted from the total amount due. If any former subscribers are in arrears, they will be expected to pay these arrears. Delinquents will be reported to the church.

6. Each church is placed on its honor as to whether the number of subscriptions reported represents 100 Per Cent of the families on the church roll, due allowance having been made for such exceptions as are mentioned in paragraph four.

To date twenty-nine churches have adopted the 100 Per Cent Plan, and the total church subscriptions now number 2,846. Of these 1,378 are new subscriptions, which means that a copy of one of the conference papers now goes to that many home which, in all probability,would not be receiving one if these churches had not adopted the 100 Per Cent Plan. And this number will be greatly increased as more and more churches adopt this plan. Surely a worthwhile result! And this result will be reflected in a greater interest in our conference activities and in more prayers for and increased gifts in support of these activities.

All inquiries regarding the 100 Per Cent Plan, as well as payments for the church subscriptions, should be directed to the MENNONITE PUBLICATION OFFICE, Newton, Kansas.

Whence Camest Thou? Whither Wilt Thou Go?

After Seventy Years

By Cornelius Krahn

In the previous article it was pointed out that in the peculiar concept of what constitues a Christian church we find the clue as to why the Mennonites have migrated from country to country throughout the ages. Did those Mennonites who feared to lose the true character of the church and Christian community in the steppes find the necessary prerequisites for their maintenance in the prairies? They continued to plow, sow, and harvest in fairly compact communities and immediately they organized churches and started their own schools. The attempts to settle in villages next to each other were not very successful. The communities, by far not as compact and self-sufficient as those they had left in Russia, maintained for a while their own culture and language. In comparing the Mennonites of this country with those of pre-revolutionary Russia we can say that the latter had retained more of their religious, cultural, and economic integrity than those of America.

In the American melting pot the previously described concept of the church and Christian community as upheld by the Mennonites for centuries has been changed. The strict separation from the world (including other churches) has been challenged like that of the Dutch brethren during the seventeenth century and the Prussian brethren during the eighteenth. Freer contact with other Christians, churches, denominations, and the world has been an eye-opener for many. For them majority of our churches this has, no doubt, been beneficial. There is hardly a small religious or social group which can be long isolated without becoming stagnant. It is not surprising, therefore, that after having been long isolated, individuals and groups coming in contact with spiritual and cultural values outside of their own group receive unforgettable impressions. The Bible, Christianity, their entire life becomes more meaningful.

It is at this crucial point where trouble sometimes arises. Some fear every new influence and close all doors and windows. They may succeed for a while to maintain their former status, but lack of adjustment and wholesome influence will cause their downfall eventually. All this has happened in some of our churches during the seventy years. Another result of undergoing influences of Christianity at large is to act as though we have been deceived throughout the centuries. It is not surprising that there are some who, after having enriched their spiritual lives through fellowship with other denominations, feel that the Mennonite heritage has been a hindrance rather than a help in their Christian lives. Instead of being Mennonites they would rather be just Christians. In lieu of being guided by the Bible and the Mennonite heritage they would be satisfied with the former only. They seem to overlook that all true Christians have the same Bible and the same Christ and yet not quite alike. Luther and Calvin differed slightly in their Biblical interpretations. Wesley, Moody, and other men of God did not arrive at identical conclusions in all points. And that is not surprising for even Paul says, "For now we see through a glass darkly." It is therefore not a choice between reading the Bible through glasses or without them, but rather what glasses we will use. If we have been reading the Bible through the glasses of Menno Simons, a fact which we could not help because of our heritage, it is all right also to use occasionally the glasses of other men of God. But in all humbleness let us realize that we are reading our Bibles always with some preconceived ideas. The Spirit of God revealed the eternal truth in the Scriptures, but human vessels are grasping it. When religious tradition becomes a hindrance rather than a help it is time to re-examine the sources. But let us not forget that that is exactly what Menno Simons and the Mennonites at their best did, are doing, and will be doing.

It is not surprising that through the above mentioned influences Mennonitism, during its seventy years in the prairies, has undergone some changes. This does, however, not indicate a change of the foundation of the church. In fact, the surest signs of life are change, development, and growth. A church which is concerned merely with the maintenance of its achieved status is decaying. The foundation of the church, Christ, does however, not change. He is the Savior today just as he always has been. And the world in sin is still in desperate need of the Savior of mankind.

That the outward appearance of our churches has changed may be of significance. But of greater significance is the extent to which the church has changed the world around it. Have we fully realized and fulfilled our mission? Perhaps God did not grant the prayers of our grandparents to give them entirely isolated communities in order to make us aware of our mission. Christ did not promise to keep his followers out of trouble, but to keep them in spite of it. We may thank God even for the fact that our government drafted us in order that we may "express our love" to our fellowmen because we were so slow to do so before. And what an opportunity "for a second mile" we will have through peace-time conscription. May God help us through united action and cooperation with the government to find the proper channels for Christian sacrificial service in a world of sin and darkness.

What does the future hold for the Mennonite Church as a whole? There are certain trends we can observe. A self-centered isolation seems to belong to the past. "Go ye out into the world" and "Where there is no vision the people perish" are favored topics among us. And it is true, we have the command to go out into all parts of he world for service and mission. But let us remember also that Jesus told his disciples to "stay in Jerusalem" to be filled with the spirit from on high. In order to go out we need a strong home base. Let us compare the church of Christ in world with a ship on the sea. It is only there that it can fulfill its mission, but too much water in the ship would end the mission. Likewise a church can fulfill its purpose only in contact with the world but a church which loses its divine identity in the world loses its mission. Christianity is full of examples which illustrate this point. It is a part of our heritage to keep the church of Christ founded on the Rock of Ages without spot and wrinkle.

Let us briefly mention another characteristic of our heritage through which we have made contributions during the seventy years on the prairies. The Mennonites of Russia are credited with introducing the hard winter wheat into Kansas. This and other contributions were possible only because they settled and lived in fairly compact communities. Space does not permit a lengthy discussion of the merits of this characteristic. The harder it becomes to establish and maintain communities of that type the more we realize their significance. If we have any mission in the field of agriculture and wholesome community life to carry out in the future as we did during the past seventy years it will depend to a large degree on whether we are able to maintain our communities. Moreover will we, for example, help the boys now in service to resume their places in the communities they have left and to establish new ones. With vision and united action by the help of God we should be able to fulfill our mission as in times past.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Missionary Pannabecker on the Way to China, via India

Now that Missionary Pannabecker is on the way to China for relief work, and others may soon follow, it is perhaps in order to publish the findings agreed upon by the Conference of the China Missionaries held August 17, 1944, in Newton, Kansas.

Findings

1. We recommend that brother S. F. Pannabecker establish contact with our field in North China as soon as possible after his arrival in Free China and that we suggest to the Mission Board that he serve as a connecting link between the field and the home base. That $1000, be allowed to cover the expenses for any undertaking begun in the name of the mission.
2. If the Mission Board is willing to undertake work in Free China, we suggest that the following steps be taken:
    a. That Brother Pannabecker ascertain as far as possible how many church members from the Hopei field there are in Free China, what they are doing, what their need is, and their qualifications for doing Christian work.
    b. That he pay particular attention to students from our field who are now in Free China, investigate their status and their needs; and if feasible, replace funds already advanced by individuals and organizations for their education, and grant funds for continuing the education of those who are needy and deserving. That $1000 be allowed for student help in 1944 and more later as the need arises.
3. In view of the fact that candidates for the China mission field cannot begin their study of the Chinese language in China, we recommend that they be sent to the College of Chinese Studies in Berkeley, California, to study Mandarin.
4. We recommend that this group continue the study of Mandarin.
5. We recommend that the Mission Chairman appoint a committee of two to supervise the collection of material and writing of a history of our mission.
6. We recommend that every Wednesday evening this group pray for missions, with special emphasis on our work in China.
7. We recommend that the secretary write letters to those unable to be present, expressing regret that they could not be with us.
8. We recommend that special thanks be extended to the Foreign Mission Board for paying the travelling expenses of the members of this group coming from a distance.
9. We recommend that this group extend hearty thanks for the hospitality received in the homes on the campus, with special thanks to the Goerings for opening their home to hold the conference.

Findings Committee: August Ewert, Aganetha Fast, Sylvia Pannabecker

The above findings were presented to the missionary conference and the Executive Committee of our Board, and accepted by formal vote.

Consequently, the Board has sent $2000 to Brother Pannabecker to take along to China to help especially such students, that had to flee from our mission field to West China and need financial help.

Through a misunderstanding these findings were not published sooner. The secretary had understood that one of the missionaries would write an article, including as much of them as seemed desirable.

The Board has laid aside a China fund of some $12,000, besides about $5000 for relief, which was so designated by the donors. The $12,000 are to be used for rehabilatation after the war.

May we remember the new relief work in our prayers, as well as the interned missionaries in China and the Philippines.

We also need prayers for an open door to Columbia, South America.

P. H. Richert, Secretary.

ADVENT

By J. F. Sawatzky

Again we have entered the season which Christendom has denoted as the advent season. It is a time of preparation for the proper keeping of the birthday of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Look at Isa. 40:6-11 and set forth some of the outstanding truths therein.

The prophet has seen a vision of the saviour being sent for the redemption of the sin of the world. He has also looked beyond and has seen the coming again of the Lord as king and ruler. The time from Christ's ascension to the time when He will establish His Kingdom is not included in the prophet's vision. This is the time of the gentiles and not of Israel. We must therefore remember that the prophesy in our text was given to the people of Israel. But let us also realize what the hope of the Jewish people is. And that the final stage of this prophesy, the establishing of Christ's Kingdom upon this earth, is of great importance for us. They are looking for the Messiah, who has already come, and redeemed the world. He will come again with His saints and establish His Kingdom with Israel on this earth.

The prophet here pictures to us first of all man in his weakness. As the grass and the flower, they wither away and fade if the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon them. That truth prevails in our day. Today we are well and confident in ourselves; tomorrow we may be gone to our rest.

As man's weakness is outstanding so also is God's greatness outstanding. Zion is asked to get up into the high mountain and from there declare the good tidings. This the angel fulfilled when he appeared to the shepherds at Bethlehem. Jerusalem is asked to lift up its voice in proclaiming the good tidings of great joy. They shall lift up their voices unafraid and ask all Judea to behold their God. That is who He really was, our God. Oh, that at this Christmas season we could truly behold our God in the child in the manger of whom we will sing and speak. Look at Him as our God on Calvary's cross. Remember Him as our God who has ascended into heaven.

Again the prophet sees the Lord coming with strength. His arm ruling for Him, His reward with Him, and His work before Him. This is still an unfulfilled prophesy. It is the very event we are looking for. It is the hope of the church. Today we are preparing for this event. Let us therefore be up and doing that we may also share in this joy.

1. He shall feed His flock as a shepherd. The remnant of Israel that has come through the tribulation will need tender care. The gentiles will have to be carefully fed and watered. 2. He shall gather the lambs with His arms and carry them in His bosom. The little ones, those who have just become His own will he care for with a mother's care. 3. Gently leading those who cannot do serious labor. So mindful He is of our infirmities that He will not allow any unrighteousness to befall us.

This picture portrays the future to us, and what a glorious future it is. For us to have a share in the government of that reign of peace on this earth. Such a privilege have we who are heirs of God and co-heirs with Christ.

The hope of attaining to these things sustains us in our everyday life. And even if this life has many burdens for us to bear we always receive new strength in the hope of the glory that is to come.

In this world ye have tribulations, but be of good cheer I have over-come this world, Jesus says. Some of us, perhaps, pass through life without much trouble, others again have to carry a heavy load all the time. We may ask ourselves why should it be so. God's word tells us that no one is asked to carry a greater burden than he can bear. God lays a burden upon us and helps us to carry it. We cannot state the reason why this is so, but we are satisfied, by faith in Him, that He will lead it all to a glorious end. Let us therefore continually ask His guidance and patiently serve Him. The harder the testing, the better the reward. The servant who gained ten pounds became governor over ten cities and besides he received the extra pound of him who had done nothing with his pound.

Let us then in this advent season keep these truths in remembrance so that we will be able to rejoice in the fact that Christ's first advent is our redemption, and His second coming will be our glorification when we shall appear at His judgment seat and receive our reward.

Guinea Pigs

By Ray N. Funk

Last August forty-five typical conscientious objectors volunteered to do our work of national importance—college professors, farmers, school teachers, artists and students. We were "guinea pigs," who ventured to Pinehurst, North Carolina, in the urgent desire to give ourselves to science in an experiment designed to help combat a typical pneumonia. Even so, most of us probably had a timid hope that the two months of complete isolation would provide a wonderful chance to reflect upon the problems of life, to wander the intricate paths of self-examination, to meditate on the eternal questions, and perhaps to glean from this experience some hints as to answers.

A typical pneumonia is a disease that has in the last eight years become very prevalent. Even though it does not have a high death rate, it is nevertheless powerful while it lasts, attacking the lung tissues. very little is known of this type of pneumonia, and nether sulfa drugs, nor anything else yet discovered constitute a cure.

Before going through with this experiment a thorough medical examination was given to each of us volunteers. This included history and physical examinations, x-rays, blood tests, and urinalysis. Any volunteer giving a history or showing signs of chronic lung disease or chronic heart disease was rejected. In this experiment we were kept a period of three week, during which time preliminary studies were made. At the end of this period, inoculations were given by means of sprays, using throat garglings from patients who have had the disease. Observation of each volunteer was extended over a period of five weeks during which time clinical and laboratory studies were continued. Those of us becoming ill were given the best of care and attention, since rest and good food is at present the only cure available.

Adequate facilities were provided for the comfort of each volunteer. The rooms were of moderate size and were equipped with a private bath and telephone. The Red Cross was also of great help in passing time. They furnished the volunteers with games, basket weaving, and ship models. A liason with the Duke University Library was established whereby books on general as well as specialized subjects were supplied. A a whole the morale was high, and everyone was keenly interested in the results of the experiment.

Results of these studies will be submitted to a Board under which this Commission of Acute Respiratory Diseases functions and will be published in recognized medical journals for civilian consumption.

Ray Funk is a member of the Bruderthal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas. Ray got so sick during the experiment described here that the doctors were much concerned about the outcome. Robert Goering of Moundridge also participated in this experiment.

To "The Mennonite Youth"

"A United Mennonite Youth in Christ." Does that include our Chinese Mennonite Youth? The Following is a letter from Miss Esther Pauline Wang, a Chinese Mennonite youth, one who was brought up in our Mennonite mission schools in North China. Later she joined our Mennonite church at Kaichow. These youth feel very much a part of us General Conference Mennonites. How much have we taken them into our hearts and lives?

Miss Wang is one who fled and trekked hundreds of miles before the advancing army until she reached Chengtu in Szechuan. Here she graduated from the West China Union Theological College. And this year she is teaching in a Baptist school. She with many others need your sympathetic appreciation of their situation, and they plead for your prayers. The letter reads:

August 27, 1944

My dear Miss Fast:

I cannot express how happy I was when I received your letter and lovely picture. When I read your letter, I felt that you were in my presence. Praise our Lord for His abundant grace upon you. I pray that our Lord will guide you safely to China after this war. The news of Europe of these days is very good and it leads us to think that the war may be stopped next summer. Dear Miss Fast, will you come to your lovely land—China—then?

I graduated from the Theological College last June. Here I inclose a picture of me just taken a few days ago. Though I am thinner than before, yet I am well. I hope I shall gain some weight in the coming year.

The bearer of this letter is Miss Argetsinger, whom I told you of in my last letter. For three years she helped me with all my school fees, board and some extra money. She is so kind to me that I cannot express my gratitude. I thank our dear Lord for this great friend in need. She is going home on furlough for one year and will return to China next year if possible. I hope you can meet her in America and she will tell you all about me more in detail.

I have not yet received the gift you sent me. I think I shall get it some time later. When I receive it I shall write to my elder brother and ask him to send my sister the ten golden dollars (U.S. money) in Chinese money. If possible I shall send her the little picture of you. I must thank you again for the gifts and picture which you sent me and my dear sister.

I am sorry that I do not know the name of the small baby of my sister. When I write her I shall ask her to tell me the name of the baby. My second brother is now in Chen Hsien (Honan), where the war is now fighting. I don't know where they have gone. I pray that our dear Lord will be their protection and refuge. I have not received any letter from my brothers in Hopei for several months. My nephew planned to come to Chengtu to study, but the Honan war prevented him from coming.

Peter Shih is still in the Theological College. He is ill right now. He was in danger for several times because of illness. I pray that he will be wholly recovered.

I shall begin my work in the Baptist Church in September 1st. This is the first time which I work independently. I feel that my ability is not enough to take such a great responsibility. I shall be responsible for the women evangelistic work and the children's work. Dear Miss Fast, pray for me that I may have greater strength and faith.

This letter may reach you after Christmas. I shall write another letter within September and tell you the progress of my work. I shall send it to you through mail. Probably you will get that letter before this one.

Dear Miss Fast, here I wish you a happy Christmas in this year.

Sincerely yours,
Esther Pauline

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Harley Stucky, who was ordained as minister this past summer, is now pastor of the McKinley Park Methodist Church at 38th Street and Washtenaw Avenue, Chicago, 32, Illinois. His address is 3524 South Washtenaw Avenue, and his telephone number is Lafayette 8341.

—Wilma Balzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Balzer, and Willis Harms, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Harms, were married on October 22 in the Gnadenberg Church by Rev. J. J. Voth. The couple will reside on a farm near the home of the home of the groom's parents north of Whitewater.

—Youth Conference: The young people of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, met for their second annual youth conference on November 24, 1944. Rev. Lando Hiebert of Enid, Oklahoma, was the guest speaker for the conference. The conference theme was "Certainties in a Time of Uncertainty."

At the afternoon meeting Rev. Hiebert spoke on "Permanent Securities." Short talks were given by three young people of the church on the general theme "Joyous Christianity," and there was special music by a girls' trio and by a young men's quartet. Rev. D. J. Unruh led an interesting discussion of problems, plans, and projects.

Following the afternoon meeting, the young people gathered in the church basement for a short period of recreation which was followed by the banquet. The banquet theme was "Armor for Victory," and the talks were centered upon the scripture passage in Ephesians 6:16 and 17.

Doland Unruh, YPCE president, presided at the evening meeting to which young people of surrounding churches were invited. Rev. Hiebert's challenging message of the evening was on the topic, "Eternal Investments" and was based on the passage found in Matthew 6:20.

"War, Peace, and Nonresistance"

plus nonresistance be yoked together? Guy Hershberger believes the answer of the Bible is an unquestioned negative: "The Sermon on the Mount," he declares, "is not a piece of legislation for a secular state in a sinful society; it is a set of principles to govern the conduct of members of the kingdom of God, and Jesus said this kingdom is not of this world, and that its members do not fight." What, then, is the State? It is "an organization for the maintenance of law and order, by coercive means, in a sinful society while the true Christian is to have a wholesome effect on the society in which he lives, he cannot wield these instruments of coercion. The author marshals a number of brilliant writers, ancient and modern, to show that a non-political mission has a thrilling potentiality for prophetic Christianity. This section was much too brief since this is a really moot point, particularly for the more sensitive young people of our churches. But, at the moment this reviewer cannot see any effective way to combine political responsibility and the Sermon on the Mount.

Another "hot-spot"of the book, bound to cause widespread discussion is "Biblical Nonresistance and Modern Pacifism." This article originally appeared in the Mennonite Quarterly Review and made a tremendous contribution to my own thought as a former leader in the American peace movement These thirty pages show the many contrasts between most pacifist viewpoints and Biblical nonresistance. The writer insists that modern pacifism, on the whole, is a compound of theological liberalism, the social gospel, and Gandhi's Satygraha. This compound he rejects because of a wrong conception of sin, of Christianity itself and the kingdom of God. He scores a very impressive point by quoting chapter and verse from the interpreters of Gandhi to show that at the heart of non-violent direct action is force, non-violent to be sure, but still compulsive force which is antithetical to the New Testament. Christians, he insists, should do justice but should not demand or force justice. Here, again, is a thirty-page agenda for a long overdue discussion in Mennonite peace circles.

One of the most original contributions of the whole books is a history of Civilian Public Service. Digesting hundreds of C.P.S. camp newspapers, giving the opinions of the men, surveying all the important documents released by the agencies, Guy Hershberger attempts to give an unofficial Mennonite evaluation. It is clear he feels unsympathetic to the more secular, activist camps of the Quakers and Brethren. While I profited from this section, I think it may prove to be the most ill-advised in the book since history can hardly be written in the very midst of the situations being evaluated. The perspective of time is needed to get the proper sense of values. I am quite sure, for example, that he has underrated the radical and often ruthless attacks which a small minority of Mennonite C.P.S. activities has made on "official" Mennonite policy. I have heard it too often to deny it. Yet, on the other hand, since our philosophy of camp life rests on honest differences with many of its critics, it may have been important to put down on black and white just what this position is. (I say all this as a sincere supporter of C.P.S. from the very start.)

Another pillar of old-fashioned, social gospelism is destroyed in the chapter discussing nonresistance and industrial conflict. Both organized labor and organized capital are rejected because of the class war to which both are parties. But this critique is not just and negative. From it, as well as from the sections dealing with Mennonite service and relief, there emerges a new Biblical social gospel. A social gospel freed from the fallacies and illusions of the Rauschenbusch-Fosdick school; a social gospel which is first an individual gospel of regeneration through Christ; but a Gospel which finds in the Great Commission and the Parable of the Good Samaritan an Divine urgency to bind up the spiritual and physical wounds of the world. A Gospel built on the grace of God and the blood of Christ which goes on to reveal the realities of brotherhood in the Christian community. (See pp. 288-293 for a glorious picture of what a Mennonite community could be.) A proclaiming of the Word through preaching; an explaining of the Word through teaching; an illustration of the Word through healing. Here, indeed, Guy Hershberger has given us a systematic source-book and compendium of the "Anabaptist Vision" in relation to the great teaching of nonresistance.

If every Mennonite could read this book in one hand while studying the Holy Bible in the other, our church, through the grace of God, might reexperience the evangelical triumphs of four hundred years ago!

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN

Among true Christians there is no disagreement with the basic condition of salvation as demanded by Jesus of Nicodemus. All agree that spiritual rebirth is the beginning point in the Christian life. There is, however, a noticeable difference of opinion among sincere Christians as to what should happen after the beginning has been made. Two points of view predominate: One contends that the reborn man should go about telling the world that he has been reborn; he insists that the converted one should go forth showing the world he has been reborn.

Telling and Showing

The two key words in these two points of view are "telling" and "showing." Both showing and telling that one has been reborn are ways of witnessing and giving personal testimony to a personal religious experience. In telling, the emphasis is on the use of words, arguments and a direct appeal for a similar commitment to Christ on the part of others; in showing, the emphasis is on a quality of living and working in such a way as to impress the unredeemed and to attract them to Christ. It is a more indirect appeal than the method of telling. No one would admit that one method of testifying should be used to the exclusion of the other. It is more a matter of emphasis on one form or the other. Both forms are necessary and both Scriptural.

Among Mennonites

Among Mennonites the Christian testimony has always been more on the side of quiet demonstration than on much talking and emotional display. Our fathers were known as the "quiet in the land," "the plain people," those who seriously and literally practiced what instructions they read in the New Testament. They were not strong with their jaws; not given to much shouting and talking, but rather relied on the power of the Holy Spirit to transform the lives of those unredeemed with whom they lived and with whom they came into contact. They sought literally to heed the pastoral advice of Titus when he urged the Christians to "be sober, grave temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience, that they be in behaviour as becometh holiness . . . to be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, . . . in all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works; in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned, that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed having no evil thing to say of you . . .Not purloining, but shewing all good fidelity; that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things."

IN MEMORIAM

SUSIE TIESZEN JANKE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter K. Tieszen, was born November 13, 1901. at Marion S. Dak. and died November 14, 1944. She lived in Montana since 1913. In 1917 she was baptized by Rev. John M. Franz and taken into the Bethlehem Mennonite Church of Bloomfield. She and Ernest Janke were united in marriage in 1921. She now leaves to mourn her husband and four children.

GERHARD J. VOTH, son of Johann and Anna Martens Voth, was born in Waldheim, South Russia, November 21, 1878, and died November 5, 1944. In 1899 he was baptized by Elder Peter Balzer and accepted into the Alexanderwohl Church. He and Anna Richert were married in 1903. After living near Syracuse, Kansas, for a while, the family moved to Mayes County, Oklahoma. Here he was active in church as treasurer, superintendent, and teacher. He is mourned by his wife and the following children: John J. and Ernest S. of Orienta, Willie R. and Anna Voth Pankratz of Inola, and Esther Margaret of Siloam Springs, Arkansas.

MRS. AGNES K. SCHMITT, daughter of Jacob and Helene Foth Dirks, was born on July 17, 1865, in Michelin, Russia. She departed this life on November 12, 1944. With her parents and sisters she migrated to Kansas in 1873. She was baptized by the Elder Balzer and remained a member of the Alexanderwohl Church until her marriage to Henry S. Schmitt in 1889. The following children mourn her: John D., Wichita; Mrs. Agnes Dyck, Newton; Waldo, Joliet, Ill.; Helen, Wichita; Marguerite, of the home in Moundridge; Dannie, McPherson; and Ruben, Dallas, Texas. Three sisters survive her: Mrs. D. J. Unruh, Newton; Mrs. J. R. Thierstein and Mrs. P. R Voth, North Newton.

Our Ministry of Education

(The following letter was recently sent out to ministers and a few others in the General Conference. To give it a wider reading we present it in this column. —Ed.)

Dear Friends:

We address you as friends in the Name and the Spirit of Him who said to His followers, "I call you friends." Jesus spoke these words in a day of severe testing for Himself and for the human race as a whole, because of men who were selfish instead of being helpful to many who were caught in the meshes of tyranny.

May this Christmas Season bring to you and yours, in the home and in the work, such strength of body, mind, and spirit as will be necessary to meet the opportunity-responsibilities of these days. Your faithfulness and your helpfulness will be needed in many ways, and you may be in need of helpful and faithful friends.

The undersigned will appreciate a list of the names and addresses of those of our Church who are in the "service" and of their parents, or those nearest in relationship of blood or friendship. We feel that both those in camp or unit and those at home need helpful information and encouragement during these days. It is our purpose to serve your friends in need, both in their present condition and in the face of the possibilities of the future.

The work of your Board of Education has always been done with little demonstration. This is natural in the work of guidance from a lower to a higher level and of leadership on the way to greater living. Helping to educate the public in the value of the work which our Conference has been trying to do, encouraging the establishing and supporting of retreats for the good of our youth, promoting more helpful cooperation between our colleges and other schools, and rendering ther services of similar nature has in no sense been a parade, and was not intended to be.

The responsibilities before us in this time of emergency will make it necessary for the Board of Education to become more vocal in some ways If the educational problems of the future are to be met in a worthy way, we will be compelled to move with promptness at times, and we will need to be able to pay our way We appealed for funds twenty years ago when the retreats were being brought to life. Now we appeal for funds to meet great educational opportunity-responsibilities in trying times. Will you lend us both hearts and hands as we try to meet what is before our youth? Thank you!

Sincerely yours,
J. H. Langenwalter

WHAT THE MENNONITE BIBLE MISSION MEANS TO ME

It was there that I found new life, new light, new vision, it was there that I found my Lord and Saviour, it was there I received the grace of Salvation from my Creator through Jesus Christ, it was there I found Jesus, and learned to love him, it was there I learned my real purpose in this life by serving my God, my Creator, by taking the torch of light and truth to others who are living in darkness, that they too may see the way to everlasting life and happiness through our Redeemer Jesus. It was there I learned to help those that are down and oppressed by helping to lift them up. It was there in the Bible Mission that I learned to pray, it was here that I found and learned of the Holy Spirit of God who leads me to our Heavenly Father's throne of Grace and helps me to pray, Yes, my dear friend, whoever you are, and wherever you are, I want you to know that it was in this Bible Mission that I found faith, hope, love, and happiness.

I feel very deeply indebted to my many friends I have found there, including our pastor, Rev. John T. Neufeld, and many other Mennonite ministers who came to speak there. It was through them all that I became to hate sin and to resist temptation. They have shown me the way. —Mr. Alfred J. Levreau Member of the Mennonite Bible Mission, 4221 So. Rockwell St. Chicago 32, Illinois.

WHAT MY CHURCH HAS MEANT TO ME

"I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life" John 8:12

I would like to give three main reasons. The first reason my Church has meant much to me is that it was the means of my salvation. Before I became a member of our church, I had had a general knowledge of Jesus, but it was not until I learned about the saving power of Christ and knew that His Plan included me, that I was able to accept Him as my own personal Savior. I am now happy in the Lord, because I am His and He is mine.

The second reason why my church means much to me is that I am now an active member. Teaching Primary boys and girls and watching them grow in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior is a real joy and privilege.

It is wonderful to be able to serve the Lord while singing in our Gospel Girl's Choir and also taking active part in our Young People's Meetings.

The third and last reason my church has meant much to me, is that active participation in our church functions has given me confidence in myself and understanding of others. It has helped me to know and love the Bible and what it stands for. A church that is as sincere as ours cannot fail in its efforts to bring many to a saving knowledge of Christ.

"And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." Rom. 12:2.—Marguerite Belair from the Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago, Illinois.

RELIEF

Additional Clothing for France Shipped from England

The staff on the Mennonite relief center in London was given the opportunity to ship five tons of clothing to France, November 14, through the Entr'-Aide Francaise, the identical organization through which the Akron Office shipped six and one-half tons in September. The clothing was selected from a reserve stock which is accumulating at the Center for such opportunities.

Women Appointees Leave for Middle East

Four girls—Bertha Fast, Esther Detweiler, Marie Brunk, and Barbara Zuercher—left Akron Headquarters to do relief work in the Middle East area, following a farewell service on November 23. They were booked to sail on the neutral Portuguese liner, the Sorpa Pinta, along with many missionaries returning to their areas of service.

India-Bound Workers Report of Trip

Upon reaching a port about midway voyage to India, R. C. Kauffman, traveling with Lawrence Burkholder and Clayton Beyler, reported on the progress of their trip. Sometime in early November they were passing ports near our Middle East relief area.

Robot Bombing Accelerated Relief Work in England

In a summary of the May, June, and July relief work that our Mennonite organization carried on in England, our representative reports that the hazards of the flying bombs brought increased demands for clothing, and particularly bedding. Forty quilts were distributed in the Children's Hospital at Yorkshire. This hostel gave accommodations to cases of 'difficult' evacuated children. Nineteen quilts, clothing, and financial assistance has been given to an organization to aid its welfare work in the very poor and much bombed sections of London, Liverpool, and Manchester.

C. P. S.

Book on Smokejumpers Published

The C. P. S. men at Huson, Montana, have written and published an interesting book about their dangerous but fascinating work—fighting fires in unaccessible areas of the Rocky Mountains by parachuting from the air. The book is titled "Smoke Jumper" and tells the story of their work, training, and camp life mostly by large clear pictures. It may be obtained by ordering from Arthur J. Wiebe, C. P. S. Camp No. 103, Huson Montana, for seventy-five cents.

Agencies Administering C. P. S.

While most of the camps and units are administered by the service agencies of peace churches, and Selective Service, a number of other church agencies have also assumed responsibility for a few units. The Disciples of Christ Department of Social Welfare administer a mental hospital unit at Logansport, Indiana; American Baptist Home Mission Society, mental hospital unit at Cambridge, Md., and a training school at Skillman, New Jersey; Commission on Christian Social Action of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, a mental hospital unit at Independence, Iowa; The Association of Catholic C. O.' a general hospital unit at Chicago, Ill., and a training school at Owing Mills, Md.; Methodist Commission on World Peace, a general hospital unit at Durham, N. C., and a mental hospital unit at Cherokee, Iowa.

Peace Section Notes

Legislation on peacetime conscription has been temporarily postponed. Senator Reynolds, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, had announced that his committee would begin hearings on conscription on November 14. An increasing amount of opposition against permanent conscription may be one reason for delayed action. It will probably be introduced when the new Congress convenes in January.

On November 17; President Roosevelt declared that sometime this winter he would press for Congressional adoption of compulsory universal service for the country's youth. How much of this training would be military is still indefinite.

CORRESPONDENCE

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH PANDORA, OHIO

In accordance with the plan that one Sunday School class be responsible for a Sunday evening service each month, a ladies class sponsored in October a program arranged by the C. P. S. unit at Lima, Ohio, State Hospital, who interestingly told of their aims and their work In November a girls' class held a candlelight service for the boys in service. As each boy's name was called, a candle was lit by a parent or near relative of the boy. Forty-four candles were lit and a bouquet of white chrysanthemums had been placed at the altar for the one boy, Andrew Steffen, killed in action. Excerpts from letters from the boys and our two girls in M. C. C. work, Miss Ruth Hilty of Akron, Pa.,and Miss Cave Diller, R. N. of Puerto Rico, were read by the pastor.

For our weekly prayer service, our pastor is conducting a study of the Early Christian Church from the book of Acts.

Rev. J. H Langenwalter was in our midst for a series of meetings. His inspirational messages from the Book of Acts were a real blessing.

Five young people from our church participated in the twentieth annual Prince of Peace essay contest The winner, Miss Marilyn Stuner, will compete in the county contest.

A large group of women and girls met at the church recently for the annual mother-daughter banquet. Mrs. Floyd Pannabecker spoke to the group on "Race Relations."

The Men's Fellowship entertained the men of the St. John's Mennonite Church at a dinner recently. A group of 150 men were gathered for the dinner and heard Rev. Arthur Ronig, a Presbyterian missionary from China, speak.

A donation of vegetables, canned food and fruit placed at the altar for Bluffton College lent an air of gratitude and thanksgiving to the Thanksgiving morning service. The ladies of the church had previously donated about seven hundred quarts of food to the C. P S. camps and to Bluffton College.

At the annual missionary sale approximately $475 was realized by the sale of food and needle work. The total amount raised in six days for missions by the missionary sale and the Thanksgiving offering was $1,257.00.

The choir, under the direction of Prof. Russell A. Lantz of Bluffton College, will present a Christmas program, including favorite selections from Handel's Missiah, Christmas carols, and Christmas anthems.

Mennonite Women's Conference

Bluffton Ohio, November 15, 16

Eighty-four women from five states and representing the Middle and Eastern Districts, the Central Conference, and the Defenseless Mennonite church met for the first Mennonite Women's Conference in connection with the annual Bible lectures and the ministers' conference. The idea was inspired by Miss Edna Ramseyer of Bluffton College and met with the immediate approval of all those who were privileged to attend. Definite steps were taken for another women's conference next year in connection with the Bible lectures on the campus.

A missionary from Africa, Mrs. Henry A. Toews, and a former M.C.C. relief worker in France, Miss Lois Gunden, told of their experiences. Missionary society projects and plans were discussed by members of the various societies, a fellowship dinner was held, and visits were made to the campus buildings, to Professor Klaasen's art studio and the Ohio Cutting Room of the M.C.C. located in the Science Hall. Besides learning of the work of other missionary societies, it was also a period of refreshment and fellowship, and brought friends to the campus who had helped but had never before seen Bluffton College.

Mrs. Edwin Amstutz of Bluffton, Ohio, was elected president of the organization and Mrs. Sidney Steiner of Pandora, Ohio, secretary, for the coming year. —Mrs. Sidney Steiner

JOTTINGS

—Ralph C. Kauffman has arrived safely and well in Calcutta, India, according to a telegram received December 8 by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kauffman. The telegram was sent by Orie Miller at M.C.C. headquarters. Brother Kauffman will do relief work in India. He is on leave of absence from his teaching duties at Bethel College.

—Rev. C. H. Dirks, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas, has resigned this pastorate, the resignation to take effect May, 1945. After prayerful consideration of the matter, the church accepted the resignation. Rev. and Mrs. Dirks served the Hutchinson congregation for almost nine years. They have accepted a call to the Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon.

—Miss Aganetha Fast, Matron-at-Large for the Mennonite C.P.S. camps, writes from North Fork, California: "I am leaving for Three Rivers, (C.P.S. No. 107) California, December 5, and will stay there till Christmas.

—Moundridge, Kansas: Rev. and Mrs. Unruh and Wesley spent the weekend in Pawnee Rock with Mrs. Unruh's father, Rev. Schmidt, who is pastor of the Bergthal church there. Verney Unruh, a Bethel College student, has charge of the services at West Zion during Rev. W. F. Unruh's absence.

—The Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, had a mission program on December 10. The church served a noon meal in the church basement for all present. The following appeared on the afternoon program: Rev. J. B. Ediger, Rev. Wm. C. Voth, Rev. Walter Gering, Sister Eva Pauls, and Dr. E. G. Kaufman. In the evening the choir, under the direction of Alvin J. Reimer, gave a short program, and Rev. P. A. Penner showed pictures of the mission work in India. On November 11 the mission societies had their annual sale. The sale brought the sum of $1621.00. The collection for C.P.S. on November 19 was $407.00. On Thanksgiving Day we observed our Harvest Thanksgiving, and the offering amounted to $1,250.00. Rev. P. K. Regier from Reedley, California, brought the message on this day.

—Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas: During November the Primary Class learned about the Hebrews' and Pilgrims' Thanksgiving offerings and festivals of harvest time. They also learned about what they could do to share God's bounty with others and how they could thank God. As a result the boys and girls filled a basket of vegetables, fruits, etc., for the grandfathers and grandmothers of "The Bethel Home for the Aged" in Newton.

—Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago: For several weeks our Monday evenings have been devoted to the program of Leadership Training. I think most of us realize that our teaching technique can be improved. We realize that there is a vast field of knowledge which we can know. The Leadership Training Program recognizes these facts and seeks to fill the need. We are glad to take part in this phase of the educational program of the General Conference of Mennonites. —Esther Wiens —The Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa, is adding to its building fund for additional Sunday Schools and auditorium room. The ladies recently sent two hundred pounds of clothing to the M.C.C. depot in Newton, Kansas.

—Henderson, Nebraska: A truck load of about 1800 quarts of fruit, vegetables, and lard was taken to the C.P.S. unit No. 2, Malcom, Nebraska, on November 14. This is a new unit. Rev. and Mrs. Elmer Dick of Frazer, Montana, visited recently. They are candidates for the African mission field.

—Many of the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, recently made contributions so that the C.P.S. men in the three California camps could have a "turkey Thanksgiving Day dinner."

—The Grace Mennonite Church, Dallas, Oregon, has decided to have a Sunday bulletin from now on. The women of the church recently gave $500 to the Church Building Fund, which now totals $1,711.71.

—First Mennonite Church, Nappanee, Indiana: On the evening of "Men and Missions Sunday" the men of the church gave a program entitled "The Stewardship of Life." This church has a monthly workers' conference. The young people, fourteen and above, participate in a union C.E. The women prepared 117 pounds of soap for relief. They also made eighty pieces of clothing.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: Ward Hofstetter is being transferred from the State Hospital at Staunton, Virginia, to the C.P.S. camp at Terry, Montana, where he will serve as instructor for a Farm and Community Study Course. Barbara Zuercher has sailed for the Middle East, where she is to do relief work.

—The film "The Book for the World of Tomorrow," produced by the American Bible Society, was recently shown by the First Mennonite Church, Nappanee, Indiana. The rental cost was $10.00.

—The Christian Endeavor of the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, recently celebrated its golden jubilee.

—The Wayland (Iowa) Mennonite Church canned 503 quarts this summer for C.P.S. and an orphans home.

—Rev. Walter Gering recently showed some colored moving pictures of Puerto Rico in the Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas.

—Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher, Chief Justice of the United States District Court of the District of Columbia, died recently. He was born at Noble, Iowa, a son of Benjamin and Lydia Sommer Eicher. More than a page is devoted to Mr. Eicher in the new Who's Who Among the Mennonites. According to this volume he was still a member of a General Conference Church.

—Donovan Smucker, Jesse Hoover, and Harold Bender have been appointed by the M.C.C. to visit as "observers" the second meeting of Protestant church leaders of this country to discuss the bases of a just and durable peace. This meeting which succeeds the notable session held at Delaware, Ohio, in March, 1942 will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, January 16-19, 1945, according to present plans. The meeting is called by the Commission on a Just and Durable Peace. Mennonite representation at this conference will in no way imply an official relationship to the Commission.

—Adopt 100 Per Cent Subscription Plan. The Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, at its recent annual business meeting, voted to adopt the 100 Per Cent Subscirption Plan for The Mennonite and the Bundesbote.

—Eden Mennonite Church, Inola, Oklahoma: We were again privileged to have Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Eck in our midst. Rev. Eck based his message on the last thought of Romans 6:4, "Walk in newness of life." Sunday night they gave a report of their work in the "Go-Ye Mission." They are offering themselves for service in the great ripe harvest field into which the sickle has never been thrust. The Lord truly has blest their labors. His final challenge to everyone was, shall we let the harvest go to waste.

—It has been brought to our attention that Brother H. A. Fast was not the main or guest speaker at the Oklahoma Convention this fall, as erroneously stated in this paper.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

Fairfield — Robert Kreider of Akron, Pa., was the speaker at the union service in the Mennonite Church, Sunday evening, November 26.

Allentown—At a special congregational meeting held after the morning service, November 19th, a unanimous vote gave the Parsonage Committee the power to purchase the house at 1528 Chew Street. The pastor and family will move into the parsonage December 12. Mrs. Henry Buller spoke at both services November 19th, and her messages were greatly appreciated.

Zionsville — On November 25, Mr. Harrison S. Schantz was laid to rest in the adjoining cemetery. Mr. Schantz was received into the Church by baptism, by the Rev. C. H. A. van der Smissen, May 12, 1883, Mrs. Henry Buller spoke at the afternoon service, November 19. Her visit has greatly increased the interest of our people in the Mennonite Central Committee's work, especially that of relief.

Perkasie—The pastor, the Rev. Ward W. Shelly, attended the Ministers' Conference held at Bluffton College recently. Miss Huldah Myers delivered the message Sunday morning, November 19, in the absence of the pastor.

Souderton — Mrs. Henry Buller delivered the Missionary Address during the Sunday School session, November 26th and conducted an informal discussion during the evening worship service. The missionary offering for the third quarter amounted to $163.00. In the afternoon of the 26th of November, a regular worship service was conducted at the Home for the Aged at Frederick. Both choirs and the pastor participated in the service.

First Philadelphia—Mrs. Mary Hauck, a guest at the Home for the Aged for a number of years, was removed to the Allentown Hospital recently. She had the misfortune of falling and breaking a limb at the age of eighty-nine.

DELAYED ACTION

By John Thiessen

In these days of war we read quite often of delayed action bombs, which have wrought so much havoc in many cities in Europe already. When I walk around daily among our school children and observe their work inside the school room and out, and when I daily try to supervise the needed physical work, this new word, "delayed action" has come to me with some new force. A task is assigned; it is made clear in how long a time it can be finished. It is far from finished when the appointed time comes to deliver the goods. A lesson is being assigned to students in such a careful way that no one can misunderstand, and the time to complete the work is very clearly given. The time comes when the finished work is called for, and it is not done. Somewhere action was delayed. Just now I am building a little more strawshed room that we can keep cattle fodder in better condition when the rains come. Seven people are at work building brick pillars on which the roof is to be placed. One layer of bricks on the pillar requires eight bricks. I cannot stay with the seven workers to direct every step they must make. I am busy teaching school. At the end of a full half day, I go to look what headways have been made, and seven people have laid nine layers of bricks in a full half day, each layer only eight bricks. That a man with Kansas blood in him almost goes to pieces that I think my readers will understand. But these seven are my Christian brothers and sisters, and they do not mean especially evil. It is just delayed action which laid only seventy-two bricks in a full half day. "In your patience you will win your souls."

OUR HOPE

THE HOPE OF THE WORLD is in Christ. It is a trite saying, but the truth of it is being recognized more and more. Secular writers are saying that peace treaties have failed to keep the peace, because of hatred and rivalry, selfishness, the love of power, and the haughty attitude towards peoples of other nations and races. Where the spirit of Christ prevails, there is the forgiveness of wrongs, the willingness to serve others, and the recognition that all men are made in the image of God, entitled to freedom and equality of opportunity. Nothing else gives hope for the future. That hope is slow in fulfillment so far as the nations are concerned. But in our own individual lives it may be realized here and now. As members of His church, we are committed to loyalty to Christ. We have promised to love and serve Him. There at least need be no hesitancy in saying that the Kingdom of God is here so far as our own personal lives and commitments are concerned. —....Rev. Lester Hostetler

Habit Can Be a Servant

Goehe said, "Habit is the most imperious of all masters." Yes, without the saving power of Christ it, perhaps, is. Considered in the light of the changes that come when an indivilual is born spiritually through the saving power of Christ, habit is one of the most glorious servants. The set ways, which compose habit, then become ways of righteousness and whole, integrated living.

Immaunel -- God With Us

Matthew 1:23

By J. N. Smucker

What a variety of thoughts Christmas brings to different people: from Santa Claus to Christ, from disgust to enthusiasm, from loneliness to homecomings, rom selfish pleasure to a divine happiness. But this s a time to put Christ back into Christmas, and to keep Bethlehem from becoming bedlam.

We are told there are two-hundred fifty-six words and titles used in the Bible to refer to Christ. From this list we select the title "Immanuel," which being nterpreted means, "God with Us." Do not these three words bring us close to the true meaning of Christmas?

Consider the first of these words, "God," Surely our minds should turn this Christmas season to "God," who so loved the world that He gave us that first great Christmas gift. We should lift our eyes above the mall gifts and tinsel and trimmings and lights and see God.

We think of the might and power of God, the Creator and ruler of the universe. We consider His holines, so high and lofty that our minds cannot attain into it. We think of His righteousness and justice that puts our own poor morals to shame. We think of His mercy and patience with all our rebellions and blunderings. We consider His great goodness that covers us all. We give thought to His love that knows no bounds and pursues us and will not let us go.

In one instance we think of Him as so great and wonderful and majestic and holy that He seems far away from us and almost unattainable. Then again when we think of His care and mercy and forgiving love, He seems so very near. God the majestic and all-powerful supreme Ruler, and yet also God the all-loving Father. Surely this Christmas we will take the time to turn our eyes and hearts heaven-ward and see God.

"God-with-Us;" but as we turn our attention upon the first of those three words, we cannot help but soon turn to the last. Our thoughts turn to Us. The contrast and gap between the two words seems so great that it is really painful. What a relapse from the greatness of God to the smallness of man. What a terrible span between the holiness and righteousness and love of God, and our own sin and unholiness and selfishness! Individual and national sins are weighing us down, crushing us beneath the cruel load that we cannot rise. If there were but some way of being released from the crushing weight! Then, too we are troubled and anxious and confussed with the uncertainty of life and events all about us. If there were but some clear path that we might follow. Torn from our old moorings, adrift and distracted, if only we had some dependable guide who knows the way! There are temptations and difficulties that are too much for us; if only we had some stay and strength to sustain us!

Then we think of some of our nobler inpulses and ideals. There are visions and aspirations that disturb and haunt us, hungers and thirsts after righteousness that consume us. If only there were some way of connecting with the great God Himself! If only my futility could be joined with His stability; my sin blotted out by His righteousness; my weakness lost in His strength! If somehow I could make connections with the great God of hope and assurance and security! But He is so great and I am so small, and the gap between us is so wide—"O wretched man that I am, who can deliver me from this death."

Christmas is our answer; "God with Us." Christ is the great With that binds us and God together and unites us. Man's longing for spiritual fellowship is met in Christ. Our cry for forgiveness is met in the Saviour. Our need for a guide and helper is met in the divine Lord. God the infinite, man the finite, and Christ the great With, binding us together. Truly Christmas is wonderful.

"God With Us." Now I can walk down the uncertain years in company with Him. Now I can find life victorious because I am on the overcoming side. Now I can be released from the hard galling yoke of sin for He is my Saviour. Now suffering and hardship can be shared with Him who makes me strong. Through Him, the great "With," comes the peace that passeth all understanding and quiets our vain strivings; doubt is dispelled by faith; anxiety gives way to certainty; the darkness of midnight is dispelled by the brightness of the Light of Life.

This is Christmas: that God so loved us that He gave His only Son to unite us to Himself. It is too wonderful for us to grasp. But as we ponder this great truth our hearts are strangely warmed and Christmas becomes for us not a season of shallow merriment but a deep and abiding undercurrent of supreme joy that transforms all our days, for God is With Us.

Christmas 1944!

By Dorothy Tweet

Peace and goodwill! Are not these strange words of greeting for a world at war? Yet, this year, too, through God's grace, comes the dear old Christmas message of gladness to every heart which hears and believes it. The Prince of Peace came down to our sinful world to take upon Himself our transgressions. Jesus the Saviour is born! What joy it brings to our children! What memories it stirs among our older people! We'll be hearing again of the heavenly choir of angels, of the vigil of the shepherds, of the star pointing the way to Bethlehem, of the virgin Mother and Holy Child.

The first Christmas dawned upon a hard, old Roman world under the dictator Caesar Augustus, among a subject people in an occupied country, under iron military rule. Conditions among nations today are hardly more ghastly than when Jesus first lay in the manger. But the Christian Christmas does not depend upon outward cirumstances for its blessedness. Let the story of Bethlehem take precedence over hatred and greed. Let the song of angels drown out the whine of shells and the sound of shrapnel! Let the vision of the Holy Child blot out the sight of ruined cities and broken bodies!

What comfort can we find in this Christmas 1944, in a world filled with grief, darkness, discouragement, suffering, tragedy, and heartbreak? The answer may be found in the faith of the Bethlehem shepherds who watched their flock that night on the Judean hills. Without doubt or questioning they said one to another, "Let us go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass." They took God at His word. They were confident even before they saw the Child and His Mother.

The thought of Christmas in a troubled world was shared by Longfellow, who, after hearing the Christmas bells ring out, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," said, "There is no peace on earth, for hate is strong and mocks the song . . ." The bells then seemed to peal out a blessed assurance:

"God is not dead, nor doth He sleep;
The wrong shall fail, the right prevail,
With peace on earth good will toward men."

Farewell To You

God willing, I shall be sailing the Atlantic Ocean by the time these lines appear in print. I am leaving the homeland feeling that once more God is calling me into foreign service and that He will make His promise true when He says in Genesis 25:15 "I am with thee and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest."

The following, taken from a letter received today from a friend, expresses what many of you who will read this have been saying and writing to me during the last two months: "We are praying that you may have a safe trip on your errand of mercy and that the Lord may give you much joy in His service and then a safe return to your home and loved ones." I cannot put into words how much I appreciate this. It gives me added courage to go forth at this time even before the war in Europe is over. Many of you have sons and daughters in England or Europe and have expressed the hope that I would get to meet them. That will be a privilege to which I am looking forward eagerly. When you write them, enclose my London address so they know where they can get in touch with me. My phone number is Mountview 2179, and now may God bless and keep you all.

GOOD TIDINGS OF GREAT JOY

“And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which hall be to all people. For unto you is born this day n the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.”

It was God’s intention that the “good tidings of great joy” should be to all people. These good tidings have been the trust of millions for over two thousand years, yet there are millions of people on the globe who have never heard them. These good tidings have been formally claimed by millions in “Christian” America and “Christian” Europe. But this Christmas he hearts of millions of Christians will be wrung by he sorrow and horror of war. Christian upon Chrisian who has proclaimed the Prince of Peace as his Saviour and Lord has not found freedom from war but s today enmeshed in it with soul and body. Churches lot our cities, but the liquor stores out-number them. Somehow those with the “abundant life” in Christ have not succeeded in making clear to their fellow citizens that drink is not the way to deep satisfaction. Quakers, Brethren, and Mennonites have been referred o as the “Peace Churches,” but two-thirds of the Mennonite men—and the Mennonites have the best ecord of the three groups—are in the armed forces. Ministers are usually well-known in their respective communities, but they are to a great extent passed by n favor of secular psychologists and even astrologers by those who are confused in mind and feeling, and great masses of men and women do not turn to them or help and inspiration in living, but rather to the glaring personalities of radio, screen, and press. Many who belong to church seldom attend, and many of hose who attend find that their life is far from being adiant with “good tidings of great joy.” As we look at this dark side of life, we may ask “Why?” Why do not these good tidings have more effect in the world? Undoubtedly, part of the answer is the elf-willed, prodigal-son attitude of many who ignore he good tidings. But another part is the fact that many who possess these good tidings fail to present hem to others in such a way as to persuade their hinking, willing, and feeling until they experience alvation through Jesus Christ. How important it is hat those who possess abundant life in Christ make lear its good tidings to others. These tidings are for ll people. How sad when the messenger-bearers ungle their task!

GOD WITH US

In our homes we may have photos of loved ones who re far away. How ardently we may sometimes wish hat these pictures would become real persons in our midst. In much the same way human hearts longed o see God. Then in the fullness of time, He broke hrough the picture that men had of God and revealed imself in a person. “And the Word was made flesh, nd dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the lory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth.” Jesus is Immanuel—God with us. n Jesus we are introduced to God. “. . .he that hath seen me hath seen the Father.” Jesus has revealed to us what God is like. He is a Christ-like God. What a privilege to know God through Christ. That is the privilege and meaning of Christmas for us. Today the Christmas word would express itself through us as real, living persons, express itself through us so clearly and gloriously until others can see the living Christ in us. When the Christmas spirit fills our beings, then we reveal Christ to others, for then he abides in us. God is with us in Jesus Christ. That is reason for a “Joyous Christmas.”

WHY SOME ARE WITHOUT A CHURCH PAPER

Frequently one finds families which are very active in the local church but which do not subscribe to either the Bundesbote or The Mennonite, the official papers of our General Conference. It seems that in the vast majority of cases this is not due to a deliberate rejection of the paper but rather to a general lack of knowledge about these papers and what they seek to accomplish. Such people are busy and interested in the local work, but they have not been lead to a similar intense and intimate concern for the larger work, which our General Conference represents. Such families or members have simply not been given an adequate opportunity to widen their interests. All of this is suggested in a letter written by a reader in Pennsylvania.

He writes in part: “My membership dates back ten years. Yet, in spite of this time, I actually did not subscribe to The Mennonite until a year ago. My church interests have been concentrated on the operation and activities of my own congregation. I am and always have been active in the work of the church, choir, young people, Sunday School, ushers’ league, dramatics, etc. In doing this, I, like many others, have not taken a real personal interest in many activities of General Conference or various district conferences outside of my own Eastern District Conference. I believe that every Mennonite should receive The Mennonite. However, I doubt that more than 50 per cent of the general membership actually receives or has access to the paper. (In churches without the 100 Per Cent Plan, the percentage of homes receiving a church paper is seldom above 35 per cent. —Editor) This, I am sure, is not deliberate, but is in most cases sheer neglect.”

We believe our friend has stated the situation very well. It is one of neglect. Unless those who subscribe introduce the idea of a church paper to the non-subscribers, the latter will hardly subscribe of their own accord. It is here that the 100 Per Cent Plan is very helpful. As the idea of a church paper in every home is presented under this plan, many non-subscribers welcome the idea for they have no reason not to do so. The importance of the matter had just simply not been brought to their attention before. So as our friend suggests in an unquoted part of his letter, there has to be an organized way of presenting the idea of a church paper in every home. Over thirty churches in our Conference, including some of the largest, have found the 100 Per Cent Plan the best means of accomplishing this.

AND A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM"

The man who wrote the foregoing words had many opportunities to become one of the leaders of his day in his country. His name was Isaiah. This is an abbreviation of a longer name meaning, Jehovah is salvation. The meaning of this name is what he believed and lived. The more he saw of the corruption which was brought to his beloved country by men of power who resorted to clever politics and to force, the more he realized that there must be a better way. His people were not awake to the way they were being led. At first Isaiah hoped that they might be led to see the better way. They did not understand. Then he felt that there was hope that a minority might see and understand. This also failed. Then he awoke to the fact that great achievements come from small beginnings. He saw that God's way of meeting the confusion which selfish men had wrought, was to begin again, and with a child!

Men laughed at Isaiah and his dreams, including the one about a little child who was the only hope in a world which was as dangerous as animals who devour and poison each other. Read Isaiah 11.1-9. However, Isaiah had seen too clearly what might become of a child who would grow up to be the kind of man whom God had in mind. "Wonderful Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace!" These names show the great end which Isaiah saw in the small beginning for the good of his people and of the world. Isaiah 9:1-7 shows the hope of a better day which inspired this man to great native ability, clear thinking, and sincere service. The events which followed have led to the conclusion that Isaiah's message found its fulfillment in the Child, Jesus, whose coming we celebrate at this season. "Jesus" is another abbreviation of the same longer name which means Jehovah is Salvation!

When Jesus began His work He called Himself "Son of Man." He evidently meant that His life was to be a revelation of what God had in mind if man lived as He had created him to live.

It is interesting to note that Jesus also emphasized the worth of a child. Mark 10:13-16, and similarly Matthew 19:13-15 and Luke 18:15-17, shows how deeply concerned Jesus was about children. They are to be permitted to come to Him without hindrance. What a charge against men whom He had trained for a long time! "Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the Kingdom of God as a little child, shall in no wise enter therein!" The violation of the truth of these words has been responsible for most of the world's sins.

Reuben's admonition to the other nine older brothers of Joseph, "Do not sin against the child," ran true to the instinct which God has given to man. When man "comes right" there is no violation of the rights of childhood. May we think on this truth at this Christmas season as never before. There never have been so many ways of violating the rights of childhood as are facing the rising generation of children today. It is time that we cease to follow the reasoning of those who consider it their privilege to violate the rights of children and follow Him who pled the cause of little children so earnestly and so greatly. If that were done, even by those who call themselves Christians, Christmas wishes would find their fulfillment in happy, peaceful lives.

Mebitations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A MENNONITE

Paul Erb, formerly teacher of English at Hesston and Goshen Colleges and now editor of the Gospel Herald, has written a splendid little pamphlet entitled, What It Means To Be a Mennonite. It was primarily written for teen-age young people. Erb points out six main characteristics of Mennonite life and faith.

1. It means a definite Christian experience. This is summed up in Jesus' words "Ye must be born again," and it means that the church member must undergo a definite change of heart. It need not be an exciting occurrence but it must be clear to ourselves and eventually to others that we have become "new creatures in Christ."

2. It means a noble heritage. High birth has always been considered a privilege. To be the son of a king, or duke or lord may be considered by some as fortunate, but there is a nobility which is far more desirable. It is being born into a noble faith, noble traditions, and ideals. Mennonites have a noble origin, have had noble occupations and habits, and above all lofty spiritual ideals and sound Christian doctrine.

3. It means a simple life. First of all a recognition that true simplicity is a matter of the heart. It is basically dishonest to keep the life simple when every motive of life tends to the oppisite course. This simplicity of heart must find expression in our church buildings, our homes, our dress, and our behavior.

4. It means separation from the world. This is a reasonable teaching and one that adherents to Bible teaching will find necessary. Non-conformity is basically a matter of the spirit.

5. It means close adherence to God's Word. There are wrong views of the Bible as well as right views. Mennonites have interpreted Scripture according to its nature. Above all, it must be accepted as absolute authority for the Christian's guide in life. The ideals of the Scriptures must become the ideals of the Christian.

6. It means being a living witness. The witness may be through the way we live, through personal testimony, or through support of missionary work and other church activity.

One can read this pamphlet in ten minutes, but the serious-minded Christian will not be through thinking of its contents in that short at time. It is worth many times its cost which is five cents. It can be secured at the Mennonite Publicating House at Scottdale, Pennsylvania.

Lest Joy Within Their Hearts Should Cease

By Joanna S. Andres

There shall be hearts
Throughout the world today
That shall stand still in thought
Upon their lonely way.
They shall recall the throbbing bliss
Of Christmases passed by—
They shall remember this
And. . . .cry.

When they remember,
Somewhere all alone,
A lighted tree with silver tinsel strung,
Or stockings small
From some loved fireside hung;
When they remember faces radiant bright
Around the glow of quiet candle light,
Or bells that chime across the snow
And carols ringing loud, "God loved us so!"
When they remember home
And hearts away so far,
O God, then send to them once more a guiding star—
A star bright shining in the night!
And traveling let them go Through space and time
Till hearts grow light—
Until with loved ones once again they've knelt
Around the manger bed!
Until their hearts have felt
The warmth of home and love and peace.
And God,
Lest joy within their hearts should cease,
Make them to hear again the song
That angels sang:
"Peace be to earth! Good will to every man!"
And, somehow, with the shepherds let them go
E'en unto Bethlehem, and let them know
The Gift once sent from Thee in holy birth
Shall still become the gift of Peace
To men on earth.
O let them go rejoicing on their way—
Within their hearts the Gift
Of that first Christmas day!

And we, who miss them in our homes this year,
And sometimes trembling wait, yea trembling fear
Lest war should keep them always from our sight—
Great God in Heav'n,
To us give Peace in heart this Christmas night.

FAITH

When Dalsai came to Christ, his father with threats and cursings refused him shelter in his home and drove him away. Dalsai no doubt knew this would happen before he asked for baptism. He had heard the call to follow Christ when he was a boy of about ten years of age when he was in Mission Primary School at Janjgir. That call would not down. All those years until he was old enough to earn his own bread and butter—rice and pulse—he had kept saying in his heart, "Lord Jesus, I too am going to be Thy disciple." He kept his promse, but in so doing lost his earthly home.

Dalsai's brother, a cripple, had previously come to Christ. So after Dalsai had tried for some months to live alone and cook his own food, he went to live with his brother. This brother was an amateur tailor. He was very poor, for certain proportion of his earnings he never gets. India has no scruples in not paying debts. So Dalsai has been sharing his own meager earnings with his crippled brother in these difficult times. Could a real Christian do less?

What has it cost Dalsai to follow Christ? (1) His home, and (2) his earnings. I wonder, as they stand before the great white throne, whose faith will rate highest,—that of the humble Dalsai, working as a day laborer in a garden, who helps his crippled brother in need or perchance Christians earning three or four times as much, who have much to say in church business meetings, who withhold earnings from the cripple, and pay not honest debts.

FORTITUDE

On the very frontier of the advancing Kingdom of Christ was Dadduram sent with his young wife, Barbara. They had two Christian co-workers, but they, man and wife, had taken their little son who was deathly sick with typhoid to the Champa Mission Hospital. So Dadduram and his wife were alone when the great event came. Their first born baby born alive came one Monday morning at 8 a.m.

We had tried hard to get word across the flooded fields and raging swollen streams to have them come in for this great occasion. But this proved most difficult in the height of the August monsoon. Suddenly came this baby girl, weeping before them. They too wept, mingled their joy with their sorrow, for the tiny thing had arrived two months early.

But by three p.m. their sorrow was turned to bitter grief. The little life had flickered and gone out. Caste of course has stringent rules for birth and death. So Dadduram with his weak, sick wife on hand now had his firstborn, a corpse in his house—cut off and alone. He had to be nurse, doctor, cook, housekeeper, undertaker all in one. Tears flowed copiously as he dug the grave and before some villagers standing by committed the firstborn to mother earth. What else could he do? In a hot country like India, the dead cannot be kept longer than twelve hours, and to get word of help to Janjgir over monsoon flooded territory was utterly impossible.

FOG

It was a great joy to have as our guest the distinguished Dr. Mukiya, let us call him. He was a member of one of the Royal learned Societies, a Ph.D., a scion of a famous family, and one interested in education and economics. Talk flowed freely. He appeared to be the keenest brain we had met in a long time. Everything was said with spice and mirth.

Then my wife asked when India could hope to be rid of caste. His reply was as mirthful as his previous talk: "When we cut off the heads of all the priests and ujaries, and get rid of all religions. Of course we will also have to decapitate the missionaries as well," he replied.

"You see" he explained, "the human race passes through four stages: (1) animism, (2) superstition, (3) religion, (4) science." From the conversation there was no doubt that animism was represented by the aboriginals of the land, superstition by Hinduism, religion by Christianity, and science as the crown of perfected, released Humanity. The scientific alone have really become enlightened. I did not tell him that my own college degree was a bachelors in science.

It was not surprising to find that as the hours of the evening passed that his mirth turned to cynicism. For one basic factor in cynicism is disappointment in the things considered supreme and satisfactory.

I am surprised to find that a number of the educated of India are described by the attitude of this friend. They have hitched their wagon to a star. But this was not the Bright and Morning Star. As life passes, the thing let them down, and cynicism results. Many of us are increasingly convinced that as one after another of these props crumble, and as these false gods go crashing down, they, in the near future, will turn their ears increasingly to Him, Whom the wise men from the East sought. S. T. Moyer

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS FROM INDIA

The flying hours remind us again that the year draws toward the end. Mixed remembrances engage our thinking. When shadows of death threatened to approach, the assurances came unprecedented: "Fear not, be not dismayed; for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of righteousness!" The name of the neverfailing Lord be blessed!

The sincerest "Merry Christmas" and "Happy and Blessed New Year" are herewith expressed, looking forward into the New Year by thinking and meditating on "My grace is sufficient for thee!"

Indeed, we have reason for "giving thanks always or all things unto God." The Lord has richly lessed us in both spiritual and material matters. o as to acknowledge the Lord for His mercies our ission gathered on October 15 for a Thanksgiving and Mission Festival. In the morning service e were reminded especially of God's material essing. The ladies of the Mission decorated two rge tables of fine fruits and vegetables. For the fternoon service a special speaker representing e "Mission to Lepers" reminded us of our responbility to spread the Good News to others. An ofring was taken at the close of the services which as to be divided between Home and Foreign Missns. Recently one of our young men has left our oup for Christian training in a Bible Institute in e West. We praise God that he has heard the ll: "Go ye." He is training for foreign missiony service.

It was in May that we had Miss Aganetha Fast, issionary from China, with us. It was with great terest that we listened to her experiences in the rient. Rev. J. J. Thiessen of Saskatoon, Saskatewan, was also our special visitor and speaker cently. Mr. Thiessen represented the Rosthern ble School, and an opportunity was given to give ward the possible enlargement of that school. Also ring the summer we had a rich treat of listening a well trained forty-voice choir from the Niagara-the-Lake Mennonite Church. Rev. Dirks, a minter from that church, gave a short message, havg as his theme the value of song as found in the ble.

The Lord has also blessed the work among the ennonite men in the restricted Medical Corps vision. Since July the pastor has had the privige to meet with these men every second Thursy for a time of Christian fellowship. Many of ese men have already left for overseas. Recently monthly mimeographed letter has been sent to ch one of them in which a short message from e Scripture is given to them to encourage them Christian living. Other particulars regarding r services among these men as well as our Missn services are given for their benefit.

A BEAUTIFUL BOOK

Take Heart is the name of a beautiful book which s just come from the Elgin Press, Elgin, Illinois. nest G. Hoff, the author of the book, is the editor the Sunday School publications of the Church of e Brethren. He calls this unusual book "a modest tempt to open eyes and hearts to the richness of e." To accomplish this purpose the author presents nety-five pages of beautiful pictures and appropriate editorial comment. A page is devoted to each picture and comment. The pictures are all beautiful but of a wide variety—a dogwood blossoming profusely, a field under irrigation, a blue lake in the Rockies, a massive oak, multi-colored foliage in autumn, a close-up of dandelion seeds, a husband and wife engaged in Bible study, a rocky mesa, El Capitan in Yosemite, a little boy's shoes, a wet pavement, a wooden fence, the source of the Mississippi, a slave auction block, a horse at a water trough. Each picture has a telling, one-word caption. The horse drinking out of the trough suggests the word "Volition." With each picture is given a 100 to 200 word editorial comment. These are not preachy but invite meditation on the deeper things of life. Truly "by pictures and words the author shows how much in the world of the every-day encourages one to keep faith and to take heart!" The book "began with the childhood interests of the author-photographer—interests which were encouraged be a father who rightly sensed the power of pictures as a means of presenting truth. Through the years the son took pictures, beginning with views of such familiar scenes as a neighbor's house under construction, friendly animals, and boys playing ball. Then through college, seminary and university the maturing student of life took more and more pictures. When he became editor of the Sunday School publications of his church further incentives were added. Then there same the suggestion from an editor friend that the editor with the camera should write interpretations to be used with his pictures." Such a series proved so popular that suggestions came that "the series be brought out in adequate and permanent form." Take Heart is the result. This is the most carefully prepared picture-meditation book that the reviewer has discovered. It is a book of beauty and inspiration for the home. The price is $2.00. It can be secured from the Elgin Press, or the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, will be glad to procure a copy for you.

"Dear Lord, the world has known so many wars,
It bears such bitter, deep and lasting scars,
Reach out Thy hand, O Maker of us all;
Bend down Thy listening ear and hear our call
In this and every other threatening hour.
Only Thy might, dear Lord, only Thy power
Can change the hearts of men—can bid them cease
Their avarice and greed—and bring us peace.

Lord of the nations, let no nation reign
To crush another. Free us from the stain
Of blood and slaughter—let us not forget
The living, kind example Thou hast set.
God help us lift the Golden Rule so high
That its bright words will flame against the sky:
'Do Unto Others As Ye Would That They Do Unto You,' and then will come the day,—
The crushed will rise, the bound will find release,
And we shall know the blessedness of peace.

Avoiding The Party Spirit

By Arthur F. Ortmann

Christ prayed that his followers might be one, John chapter 17. A visitor at an insane hospital, seeing that a single guard was left in charge of several hundred patients, said to him, "I should think it would be dangerous for you to be left alone with so many crazy people Why, if they'd get together they could soon make short work of you."

"Yes, that's true," answered the guard, "but you see crazy people don't get together. They don't know how."

Is that the reason why some towns of 600 have eight or ten churches?

Is it the reason why some cities, with 75 per cent of the population decent, can't vote dry? Is that the reason why a city of 30,000 cannot support a playground or a Y.M.C.A., and yet is honeycombed with cheap pool rooms, cheap dance halls, and cheap "movies"?

CERTAINLY NOT! But why don't we get together?

There are subjects which disturb, distract, and divide even the people of God. But the name of Jesus Christ, His blameless character, His self-denying death, the home He has gone to prepare: these subjects melt all hearts together. Let us make the most of them. "The nearer to Christ—the center—the nearer to one another."

I believe only as we realize and understand that God has given to the branches of His church a special, peculiar task to each, according to its distinctive ability and fitness and place it is to fill in, in the great program of God. The Lutherans can do what the Presbyterians are unable to do. The Mennonites can accomplish what Methodists can not, etc. May God bless them all and keep them all busily at work each over against his own place.

The world hungers for the living bread. Jesus says, give ye them to eat. Is it possible that we might mistake friends in Christ for enemies? And thereby do great damage to the cause of Christ on earth by the party spirit?

WHEN CHRISTMAS COMES

When Christmas comes the peace the angels promised
Will be no longer but a prophet's dream;
When touched by Him, war's blood-soaked, death-filled ocean
Will be transferred into a living stream.

When Christmas comes good-will will bind the nations
Into an understanding, perfect whole;
And never will distrust or racial hatred
Slink from their darkened haunts to wrest control.

When Christmas comes its Christ will find a welcome
In business, government, and human heart;
And greed, injustice, fraud, and destitution
The fruits of Christless living, will depart.

Relief Needs In France

By Lois M. Gunden

A real thrill came over me when I heard the recent good news that clothing shipments to France were being authorized. At last—before another winter shall have set in—we shall be able to re-open relief work in France by distributing warm clothes to some of the needy families in Normandy.

Already another winter has gone by since the one of 1942-43 when I last lived among the French people. With vivid memories of the suffering evident at that time because of food and clothing scarcities, I wonder how they could have managed to get along since then. As months have followed one after another with clothing supplies continually decreasing and food rations remaining startlingly inadequate, these people must have begun to wonder how much longer they would be able to survive under such conditions.

What is one to do when Pierre has outgrown his clothes and there is little to be bought with his few clothing points? How difficult to send little Marie off to school every day without sweater and stockings to protect her from the cold outside and the chilliness of the schoolroom where she will sit quietly most of the day! And then there is the new baby, whom kind friends and neighbors have done their best to outfit with little garments made from odds and ends of woolen yarns unraveled from their own sweaters. Hard, rough, weak woolen yarns in very limited quantities are the best that can be found in the shops in exchange for the woolen points allowed the mother.

Need for Footwear

With winter approaching, providing adequate shoes for the whole family is another distressing problem. Even the old-fashioned Dutch wooden shoes can no longer be bought freely. Suppose such wooden shoes are finally found for some of the children. They are not very practical unless one has some felt inner-shoes or heavy woolen stockings to wear with them. And just where is one to find these articles? If only in their homes the warmth of a crackling fireplace could "thaw out" their chilled bones, they would suffer less from being inadequately clothed. But no, the precious pounds of coal allowed each month reach no further than for cooking meals. It is small wonder that for many of the French people the pains of chilblains have become a vivid reality during the winter months.

"A familiar scene in present-day Europe—children lost and in need amid the confusion of evacuation."

The following two examples will indicate graphically this need for clothing. At Christmas time in 1942 we were granted a special bon for the purchase of about two dozen pairs of sabots (wooden shoes). Then came the task of choosing which of the hundred boys in our Boys' Home at Lyons were to get wooden shoes as a Christmas gift from us. We very carefully considered the shoe needs of each boy and chose the twenty-five whose one pair of worn-out shoes qualified them above the others. In making this selection we became convinced that the minimum need was seventy-five—rather than twenty-five—pairs. When we began measuring the feet of the twenty-five, the secret was out, and all the other boys came and pled that we give them sabots too. It was hard not to be able to grant these reasonable requests, but we had been favored in having even the twenty-five pairs.

During our trip out of Germany in February of this year, we were detained in a hotel in Biarritz, France (close to the Spanish border on the Atlantic coast) for several days before being put into the trains that were to take us across Spain and Portugal. To keep my feet warm during the trip across France in poorly-heated trains, a pair of men's woolen socks had been loaned to me. Since they were very much darned from continual use during the year at Baden Baden, I was to discard them when I no longer needed them. Thus it was that on the morning of our departure, my hotel maid found this pair of stockings in the wastebasket. She asked me whether I meant to leave them. When I saw that she considered them good enough to keep, I offered them to her. She accepted gratefully, saying that from them she could at least get some wool for darning.

These examples are only two out of the many specific instances of need that remain in my memory. Perhaps they will help you to understand why the news of the Normandy clothing shipment could give one a real thrill. It is the beginning of what will undoubtedly continue to develop in scope during the coming months.

Need for Food

However large the clothing need looms for the French population, that is only a part of their total need. Empty shelves and windows in food stores, people waiting in long lines wherever food is to be obtained, the search for food as the topic of conversation whenever and wherever women meet, and the thin arms and legs and the pale face of a typical French child are inevitable signs that the food supply is much below the needs. Fats, proteins, milk, bread, and cereals, sugar, vitamins are the foods that are particularly low in the diet.

Added to this is the fact that the household and farm equipment and livestock have been very greatly depleted and reduced during the years that have passed since France's entrance into World War II. In addition, many of the French people, as well as the refugees within the borders of the country, are without homes. A rehabilitation program will be necessary to re-establish them.

These tangible and evident needs in France are far-reaching, in the scope of their possibilities for a relief program. However, when these physical needs have been met, there remains another more intangible need to care for. These people have suffered from the war in other ways besides the physical. They have been hurt, bruised, and even crushed by the hatreds and the cruelties of the war. In them must be built a new trust in their fellowmen. They need a new confidence and hope in order to rebuild their world of tomorrow. As the relief worker ministers to the physical needs, his life must manifest the love-way of living as taught by Christ. His witness as he gives "the cup of cold water in the name of Jesus Christ" will point out the "more excellent way." What vision but that could arouse new hope and confidence where faith has been lost!

The Little Children on the Streets

One can but pity the little ragged children on the streets here. There are so many of them—the little beggars! At nights they sleep in any little niche that they can find. This morning as I was walking into one of the many Catholic churches, a little bit of a fellow, very raggedly dressed asked me for an alm. I paid no attention to him, but he, knowing good methods—followed me into the church. I walked about three-fourths of the way down the aisle and then stood still, observing the altar, etc. The child beggar followed. He carried his little ragged cap in his hand in an attiude of reverence. He walked in front of me, put his cap on the floor, and knelt on it, facing the altar. He crossed himself in good Catholic fashion, and took an attitude of devotion. I don't know what he prayed for, but judging from the occasional glance that he cast in my direction (to make sure that I was observing), I gathered that he was praying that he might receive an alm from me! By and by I walked out of the church, followed soon thereafter by my little beggar friend. He accosted me once more for an alm—I gave him a coin, and he went happily on his way and I went on mine. Once more his method had been successful! One can't but pity and love them.

The Grave Yard at Bogota

On All Saints Day we took a walk into the Catholic cemeteries here. I've never in my life seen a cemetery like this one. They do not as a rule bury their dead—they put them in vaults. I think in this cemetery there must be thousands of such vaults, and Monday being All Saints Day, there were multitudes of people in the cemetery putting flowers by the vault of their loved one. The hearses are hideous things—made almost entirely of glass. The people must continue to pay for the use of the vault, else their dead one will be taken out and cast into the pauper's grave (so I'm told).

Monseratte

On one side of the city of Bogata (don't ask me which direction) there is located on a high mountain (about 2000 feet above the city) a Catholic shrine. In it is a most hideous form of Christ, in the posture that he might have had when he fell under the burden of the cross. This form is encased in glass above and behind the altar—in fact, I suppose it constitutes part of the altar. This form is called, the Christ of Monserrate (the name of the mountain). If one prays here in faith—healing powers are said to be given. In the back of the church there are posted on the walls a great number of testimonials. I wish you could have been with me to see this. The approach to the cathedral was by means of a cog railway up the very steep mountain side, Bogota, Noo.

THE SERVANT CLASS

I pity the servant class in Latin America. They don't have a very nice existance, not very much joy—a lot of work, and a lot of sadness. Soyla, the servant mentioned above, is a servant now—and will probably be one all of her life. Though I don't think her lot is a very desirable, still it is far better than a multitude of others. To see scores of mothers and children on the streets, in the shabbiest of clothes, living in the filthiest of conditions, is not very pleasant—and is touching. They walk down the street, infant in arms, or tagging along side—trying to do enough to keep body and soul together. Sometimes if it were not so pathetic, it would be amusing.

LEARNING SPANISH

We're still working on our Spanish, but it is slow work. I was amused at one of Reifsneider's stories. I think it was when he was in Mexico, that there was being held a kind of a conference. Anyway, one of the English people who knew practically no Spanish—but wanted to learn, asked for a drink of water. Reif brought him a glass of water, and the neophyte with much gusto said, "Buenos Aires," and Reif replied with equal gusto, "Montevideo."

Our Clothing Relief Program

A new folder, CLOTHING FOR RELIEF, has recently come off the press and has been mailed to the pastors of all the churches. Sufficient copies have been mailed for each family to receive at least one. If you have not received a copy ask your pastor for one or send your request to the Mennonite Central Committee at Akron. The folder briefly presents the needs for clothing and makes a number of suggestions about contributing clothing.

A very large amount of excellent work in the clothing program has been performed by the sisters in our churches. For the Greek War Relief Association, 51,253 cut garments for children were contracted. Most of this work has been completed by this time and many of the garments are already on their way to Greece. In the past several months ten tons of relief colthing were sent to the Middle East for the refugees in Egypt, and six tons were sent to France. At the time of this writing the clothing collection center at Newton, Kansas, is preparing on the average of a ton per week, and the Akron center baled five tons for the month of October. All these efforts represent a tremendous amount of work on the part of the sisters of our church and great appreciation is due to them and the Lord for this service and these contributions.

Throughout the winter months an effort will be made to collect and process large amounts of clothing against the day when the call will come from Europe for unlimited amounts of relief clothing. Already, at the twenty tons for Holland and ten tons for France are to be sent immediately. As the doors in France, Belgium, Germany, and Poland open the need will be very great. Even the most we can do will be but a drop in the bucket. No doubt special appeals will be sent to the churches at the time of greatest need, but now is the time to build up a stockpile and to have the clothing ready for shipment when the day of need arrives. The clothing collection centers at Akron, Pennsylvania, Newton, Kansas, and Kitchener, Ontario, will be operating with full-time workers and will be able to process all the clothing our constituency will donate. May the Lord bless us together as we labor together in this time of great need and help us to give an effective witness..

CHURCH BUILDING FUND OF THE W. D. C.

Information that is coming in regarding the collection of funds for the Revolving Church Building Fund is encouraging. The time in which to make the contribution has been short because at the regular session of the Western District Conference which met October 18 and 19 the resolution was passed with the request that the funds be collected by January 1, 1945.

Letters from individuals carry such words of encouragement as the following.

"Kindly accept the enclosed check for our part in the membership assessment for the Church Building Fund.

We're gladly sharing in the burden laid on the members of our Conference and pray the Lord would graciously awaken the members of our congregations to the blessings and responsibilities that are ours in Christ."

"I think this is a wonderful plan . . . I'm sending you $5.00 for my mother, two of my sisters and myself. We felt it a necessary thing, and know it will be used in a good cause."

We are glad to report such immediate and encouraging response from individuals to our letter which was sent to all ministers of our Western District Conference and which was also published in our church papers. The contributions given through the church treasurers may not, in all cases, be in the hands of our Western District Conference treasurer by January 1, but send it as soon as possible.

Send your contribution through your church treasurer, or send it direct to Mr. Ferd Neufeld, Burrton, Kansas, treasurer of the Western District Conference.

—A. Theodore Mueller, Secretary

RESOLUTIONS OF THE MEN'S BROTHERHOOD OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT, AS ADOPTED AT THE ANNUAL CONVENTION ON OCTOBER 28, 1944.

1. Resolved, that we praise and thank Our Almighty Father in Heaven for His Grace and Love in all spiritual and temporal blessings, even unto the sending of His own Son to bear our sins, once for all. For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things, to whom be glory forever. Amen.

2. Resolved, that we extend our thanks to the Lansdale Congregation for their hospitality and especially the local ladies for their refreshments.

3. Resolved, that we as Mennonite Christians encourage and participate in our distinctive Christian Doctrines of simple living, carnal non-resistance, and mutual aid, rearing our children in the fear and admonition of God's Holy Word.

4. Resolved, that we as Mennonite Christians in these days of abounding sin and warfare, humbly thank God for our country, rendering unto it our civil allegiance even as God's Word commands us, praying fervantly for the care and protection of our sons, and for the coming day of peace.

5. Resolved, that we pray much for the further spread of the gospel and for our missionaries, especially those in the besieged Philippine Islands.

6. Resolved, that the recommendations of the Field Secretary be adopted in whole and earnestly applied.

7. Resolved, that our organizational paper, "Brotherhood Briefs," be continued and expression of gratitude be given Brothers John Fretz and John Moser for their unfaltering service.

8. Resolved, that we remember our Brother John Moser suffering bodily infirmity, in our prayers.

9. Resolved, that the Conference Brotherhood establish and maintain relations with the local Brotherhood of our Smith Corner Congregation.

10. Resolved, that we thank Brother Winfield Fretz for his pertinent message and timely information regarding Mennonite Mutual Aid.

Sincerely submitted by the Resolution Committee,
Henry R. Bauman, I. F. Gehman, J. Herbert Fretz.

RELIEF

China Appointee Arrives in Egypt for Tentative

P. P. Baltzer, who sailed for the Middle East the latter part of October, informed Akron Headquarters of his arrival in Cairo. He will give assistance to the Middle East relief program until such time as China is open for appointees to enter.

Additional Workers Appointed for Paraguay

Mrs .Elvin Souder, and daughter Jane, will leave for Paraguay when passage arrangements are completed. Mrs. Souder will assist the work of the Asuncion Mennonite Center, where her husband has already been serving since September.

Miss Elizabeth Keeney, Home Economics teacher from East Millsboro, Pennsylvania, has been designated to go to Paraguay as a nutritionist for a child feeding program.

Camp in Egypt for Convalescent Children

Dr. Richard Yoder describes the proportions of the Tolumbat camp, set up for children who are victims of malnutrition, hunger, and disease where he is acting as medical administrator:

"As a camp, ours is small, with only about 2250 refugees. It has been formed, however, primarily as a convalescent children's camp. So we have over 1200 children thirteen years and under, about 434 of which are under three years of age. All but a handful are Jugoslavs, the remaining few are Italian and Greek. Most of these children have been sent here so as to receive special medical attention and special feeding. Our aim is therefore twofold, namely, curative and preventive."

CORRESPONDENCE

ZION MENNONITE CHURCH

ELBING, KANSAS

With grateful hearts we came to the close of the year. Sorrow and joy has drawn our pastor and us closer together and closer to God. Since my last writing, Mrs. Wm. Regier has gone to be with the Lord. When such a young, active member is taken from us, we must confess our Heavenly Father is so much wiser then we; therefore it is impossible for us sometimes to understand His ways.

Vacation Bible School was again taught at two places. We should realize more then ever before, how necessary it is, to teach the Word of God to the children.

Nine young people joined the church through baptism. Also seven other members joined the church by letter. May the love of God live in us that we can all work together in unity for the great cause for which God has put us here.

Quite a few of our young men are in camps, mental hospitals, and on farms. We others that are at home should be more faithful in upholding them with our prayers and encouraging them in different ways to keep faith and witness for Christ whereever they are.

November 30 was the fortieth wedding anniversary of our pastor, H. J. Dyck and his wife. A program was given. After refreshments were served in the church basement, Rev. Walter Dyck showed films of the family, where the father of H. J. Dyck was also seen. He also showed pictures of sceneries and C.P.S. Camps. We pray that God may grant, that Rev. Dycks may be with us for many more years.

When we come to the last days of this year, we as church members ask ourselves, have we always done our part to further the Kingdom of God? Have we been loving and kind to those that probably have not thought just as we have? Have we had a forgiving spirit? Have we stood by in prayer when others were in special need? Have we prayed for our minister daily that God may give him strength, wisdom, and courage to get up boldly and bring us the truth? Are not these little things that really count, it we are found faithful, that will make our church what it should be? Not to become great in men's eyes should be our aim, but to be faithful even if it is only in a small corner, a hidden place, just so it is known to our Heavenly Father. Agathe C. Andres, Corr.

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Wolf Point, Montana

Again we are nearing the time when we will be reminded of the birthday of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. As we look back over the past months, we have many reasons for which to be thankful.

Even though it seems that we are too far away among the hills and valleys for missionaries of our Conference to come through here and give us first hand information of the work carried on in the foreign field and thereby receive a greater missionary vision, yet the Lord has not forgotten us and has heard our heart's cry to send us missionaries that are on fire for the Lord. He has sent us Rev. George Knutson of South America, Dr. Strohm, who worked in the Philippines, yes, he also sent us Z. P. Carles, a native of Spain, who brought the great need of his own country before us, and then to make missions impressive he sent us two missionaries from the heart of Dark Africa, who had labored under the Sudan Interior Mission for a week of missionary conference. As these co-laborers with Christ presented the great need and the fruit of the gospel, the people responded liberally with their gifts.

In spring we organized "The Christ Ambassadors Missionary Band." It is still young as to its age but strong as to its size. In September they took on a project of supporting two orphan boys in Africa. A few weeks later they decided to support a student in Grace Bible Institute. Last Sunday they launched out on faith and decided to support fully a missionary in Africa under the Sudan Interior Mission. Christ said "go" and this is their aim. We hope that in the future one of their own number will go to the region beyond.—Albert Ewert

Family Night Service with Variety

Moundridge, Kansas, December 13: The varied family night service of the West Zion Mennonite Church this Wednesday included the orchestra, choir practice, and an open forum on "The Implications of a Christ-Controlled Educational Program." A number of the high school teachers participated in the forum discussion. The children worked at some special projects during the service.

Introduces Books through Church Bulletin

The Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas, uses its church bulletin to introduce books in its library. For example one issue contained this item: "Did you know that Wesley, the founder of Methodism, said he was not converted until after he had been preaching the gospel for a number of years? You will find an interesting biography of him in our church library. It is so easy reading that even intermediate-age children will enjoy it."

Send Christmas Gifts to C.P.S. Men

Buhler, Kansas, Dec. 10: The Buhler Mennonite Church is again like last year receiving voluntary financial contributions for the boys serving in C.P.S. camps. The money will be sent as a Christmas gift. Last year each man received $10. C.P.S. men now receive $5.00 a month from the M.C.C., but this is not enough to supply all their personal needs, as they must buy their clothes out of this. The church has ten of its members in C.P.S.

No "Mennonite" during Christmas Week

Protestant Giving and Ours

"Protestant giving in the United States and Canada is shown by United Stewardship Council statistics to have made its fourth consecutive year of gain. Contributions for benevolences went up 21.7 per cent, and gifts for local congregational expenses soared 10.4 per cent according to the secretary of the council. The average gift per capita according to this report was $16.69. Last year it was $15.81. Twenty-three denominations were represented in this survey. The Mennonite Church was not a part of this report." The average gift per capita of the General Conference churches in the U.S. during 1943 for the treasuries of foreign and home missions, peace, relief, education, and publication was $9.92. This does not include money given for Mennonite schools, other benevolent purposes, and other conference treasuries. Neither does it include local church expenses. In some of our churches these are as much or more than the contributions for benevolent purposes. In others they are much less. In 1942 the per capita gift of the same churches for the same six treasuries was $6.53. These figures include the money given through church channels and not that which was sent directly by individuals to the various treasuries.

Fourth Largest Church in Conference Reviews Past Year's Program and Plans for Coming Year

The Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, held its annual business meeting on November 14 with approximately 125 voting members present. Total contributions to church organizations during the past year amounted to $27,820. The average per member giving was therefore $34.77, an increase of fifty-one cents over last year. The congregation adopted a budget of $4,800 for local expenses in 1945. "This is to be levied as follows: $4.26 per voting member, $4.50 per family and 60 cents per thousand assessed valuation plus other securities and grain." The Ladies Aid and Mission Society reported 572 pounds of relief sewing, 1,465 quarts of canned goods and 665 pounds of lard donated to C.P.S., and 16 quilts made. The Fellowship Committee reported that contributions for Bethel Colelge averaged $26.67 per donor and $6.02 per church member. The ushers reported an average church attendance of 653 at the Sunday morning worship services. This is a decrease of 11 from last year's average. P. W. Goering. Orlo Kaufman, and Roland Goering were ordained into the ministry in the past year. C.P.S. contributions by this church for the past three years total $12,134. The meeting this year passed a resolution to the effect that, "This meeting go on record requesting that all church members, except draftees in service, pay all assessments of their C.P.S. dues by January 1, 1945." Another resolution provides that the Church celebrate its golden anniversary in 1945 and that special recognition be given to Elder emeritus Rev. C. J. Goering for his faithful ministry during these years. The church also plans to raise $1.00 per member for the Church Building Fund of the Western District. The large parking space of this church is to be oiled. A committee has been appointed "to look for a suitable organ for the church and to install the same as soon as they can get enough funds by canvassing the church membership for voluntary contributions." This committee shall refer the matter of purchasing an organ to the church before final action." Resolution no. 7 reads, 1: "Resolved that we give our Church Board full support in dealing with our church members who attend disreputable places and who indulge in strong drink." Resolution on 8 reads, "Resolved that we continue the Hundred Per Cent Subscription Plan indefinitely." Rev. Walter E. Gering, Pastor of the Church, was made Chairman of the Church Board for 1945.

Vice-President of Bible Institute Serves Los Angeles Church

Dr. Paul Bauman, Vice-President of the Los Angeles Bible Institute, is temporarily serving the Immanuel Mennonite Church of Los Angeles until such time when the church shall again have a regular pastor. Rev. Wilbert A. Regier, who is now pastor of the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon, served the Los Angeles church from 1938 until recently.

Rev. Walter Gering Gives Illustrated Lecture

Moundridge, Kansas: Rev. Walter Gering gave an illustrated lecture of his visit to Puerto Rico at the Christian Endeavor program of the First Church of Christian Mennonite held December 10. He told about the Puerto Ricans and the life they live. They are very poverty stricken. The young Mennonite men and women there are carrying on a medical and educational program. Rev. Gering stated that there is also a great need for religious work.—Corr.

Active Sewing Society

Madrid, Nebraska: The Senior Mission Sewing Society of the First Mennonite Church has sent ninety-two pounds of new and used clothing and shoes to the M.C.C. One package of new clothes was sent to Tuba City, Arizona. The annual mission sale held on November 30 yielded $183.40.—Mrs. P. A. Regier

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

Flatland—We observed the tenth anniversary of pastor's services in the Charge by having a series of meetings with Rev. Delbert Welty, pastor of the Altoona Mission. —Corr.

Vol. 2 No. 7 of the Brotherhood Briefs made its papearance recently. This little bulletin is very newsy and interestingly prepared by Mr. John E. Fretz, member of the Lansdale Church.

The C. E. Witness published by Miss Grace Binder of the Lansdale Church has also recently been sent to the various societies of the Conference. Copies of the C. E. Witness are sent to all the young people in the armed forces as well as to those in C.P.S. camps or doing relief work.

First, Philadelphia—Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Plenert visited with the Rev. and Mrs. George Neufeld at the Whittier Hotel, November 23. Rev. and Mrs. Neufeld are enroute to the mission field in Africa. Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf has been apponted to become a member of the Chna Unit, but enroute will do relief work in India.

Perkasie—The C.E. sponsored a covered-dish fellowship supper in the church on December 2. Dr. Winfield Fretz delivered the message.

Saucon—Brother John Unruh resigned as pastor November 26. In the future Sunday School will be held every Sunday morning, and Brother Herbert Fretz will preach every other Sunday morning.

Lansdale—The congregation mourns the death of S|Sgt. Clyde L. Binder, killed in an airplane in England on September 21 and Lt. Reginald H. Gehman, killed in an airplane accident in England on October 18.

Allentown—The Bible Club held in the church every Tuesday afternoon is well attended, and the children are enthusiastic about the weekly lesson taught by Miss Grace Moyer. Mr. Brooke Reichenbach, Mrs. Nyce, and the pastor assist Miss Moyer. —Conf. Corr

"IN JAPANESE HANDS"

A book by the above title has just come off the press. The author is Rev. H. J. Brown, a General Conference missionary who has spent many years in China. The book records many interesting experiences through which the Browns and other Mennonite missionaries passed during their stay in China. In particular the author describes the dangers which the missionaries faced as a result of the Japanese invasion, and how they were miraculously delivered from these dangers.

In the preface to the book, the author makes this statement: "In sending this little volume to press, I have a double objective in view; first, to honor and extol our God and Savior Jesus Christ and, secondly, to help others who have so earnestly prayed for our deliverance to thank and praise the Lord for bringing us out of that horrible pit and setting our feet upon a rock, for even bringing us back to our blessed America."

This is a book of valuable information, and it deserves a place in every General Conference Mennonite home. It contains 254 pages, is printed on good book paper, and is nicely bound in durable tan cloth. Price $1.50 prepaid; Canada $1.60 prepaid.

Can be obtained from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas or the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana.

A NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

If a new correspondent is elected at the annual church meeting, then the old correspondent should send us the name of the new one. We would like to have the names of all the correspondents and their addresses. We hope that not too many correspondents will suffer pangs of conscience around this time for neglecting to send in frequent short reports and seek to make up for this by submitting lengthy correspondences. Readers prefer news that is up-to-the-minute. Correspondents render a great service by reporting interesting news as it happens. They can determine what is news by asking themselves what they would like to read. A hearty thanks to all the faithful correspondents of the past year, and may you have a very joyous Christmas and a Happy New Year.
